On the Cambrai front, in France, the Germans retreated in front of the British, the latter using the liquid fire, again succeeded in making a gain. The British undertook strong counterattacks and the Germans were quickly hurled back.

Win in Italy and in the Holy Land

The Padua cathedral, the facade of which was blown away by a German bomb, was begun in 1564 and completed in 1577. It was built in the Renaissance style and contains numerous artistic relics. Another relic is the II Santo, the relic of Anthony of Padua, which was accepted between the years 1300 and 1307.

BANKS SHOW GOOD INCREASE IN BUSINESS FOR THE YEAR

Prospects for 1918 Better Than a Year Ago Is Unanimous Opinion—Boise Statesman in Annual Edition Publishes Story of County Which Is Republished on Its Merit.

The Boise Statesman in an excellent annual edition gave a splendid writeup on Twin Falls county, which THE TIMES publishes herewith. The growth and prosperity of Twin Falls during the past year has been unbundled and the business men all express the greatest confidence in the future of the tract and the county. Yesterday a TIMES representative called on the banks to get their views regarding present conditions and future prospects.

"Conditions in this county are excellent at present and I look forward to a good year," said John M. Maxwell, cashier of the First National Bank. "Collections are a little slow on account of the freight congestion which prevented people from shipping out their products and realizing on them promptly, but the deposits of the banks of the county are $1,000,000 greater than last year, and as the products more on hand will be shipped out steadily for months to come, there will be corresponding steady inflow of money to pay for them. Hence, I regard the situation at the opening of the new year as hopeful, notwithstanding the inevitable uncertainty incident to the effect of war on business."

"We cannot be sure of anything, in the very remote future, but conditions locally are good and I am confident will continue good throughout the year, in spite of whatever effect the war may have," said Mayor F. F. Bracken, president of the Idaho State Bank. "In fact prospects are better than they have ever been before since I came to Twin Falls. The deposits have increased in all the banks and I anticipate a good year for the community."

"Although the war makes business depend to some extent on political management and military necessities rather than on normal economic development, conditions in Twin Falls county are better now than a year ago and the prospects for the future are better," was the answer of J. G. Bradley, cashier of the Twin Falls Bank & Trust company. "Of course," he continued, "freight congestion has slowed things up. Part of the apple crop and part of the potato crop were spoiled by frost, and then failure to get cars necessitated the storing of the rest, so that money was tied up which under other circumstances would have been in the hands of the growers, but in spite of this there is a substantial increase in bank deposits in the banks of the county and as the stored crops are sold money will come in to pay for them."

With this statement of the bankers at a preliminary, THE TIMES publishes the story of the county from the Boise paper, which is recording much credit for its satisfactory account.

Since the first call "to arms" came, including a large number of well known young men from Twin Falls, has stood with listening ear, and answered "Aye! Aye!" to every call, with men, money, food, time and labor. And the women have done their share, too.

Twin Falls county, with more than 200,000 irrigated and cultivated acres of land, is yielding every resource at the command of the country in this war-time crisis. In population, the county of Twin Falls is exceeded by a number of other counties (it has only 25,000 people) and other counties exceeded it in actual "cash on hand" but in proportion to population and resources, Twin Falls county stands in the first ranks in the matter of prompt and generous response to all calls.

Two Companies in Guard
In the call for men the county answered generously at the very first, sending into service two companies of National Guard, some 200 of whom were from Twin Falls county, the others from surrounding counties. Although zealous efforts have been made to gather complete data and figures regarding the men called into the various branches of service, the list at best, is decidedly incomplete and only a low and conservative estimate is given.

"The number in the regular army is about 300, and the others are:

- From six to a dozen enlisted for the navy.
- About 60 enlisted with the marines.
- About 25 have enlisted from the county in the aviation corps, four at least, being from Twin Falls.
- Because of the large number who volunteered from the county, the draft took only 15 men. During the early part of December, up to the final date for "enlisting," sections made application for the release of their names from the draft list and enlisted for service.
- One Y. M. C. A. worker from Twin Falls is in France in active Y. M. C. A. work.
- No nurses have gone, as yet, but a number expect to be called.
- Forty-six men from Twin Falls enlisted in the medical corps.
- Eight or 10 enlisted in the engineering corps.
- Five or six enlisted in the quartermaster corps.
- Ten well known men from Twin Falls were accepted in the officers' training camp and a number from over the county were also accepted.
- One man enlisted with the New York National Guard and one enlisted in the Twentieth U. S. Infantry.
- Altogether, Twin Falls county has furnished between 600 and 700 men for service in army, navy and other branches of war service. In the general registration in June, Twin Falls county reported 2200 men. Of these 885 were from Twin Falls; 320 from Buhl; 220 from Filer; 164 from Kimberly; 75 from Hansen; 52 from Mur-laugh; 65 from Rogerson, and 47 from Hollister.

Money
Twin Falls county has led the state in some of the "best" for money. In the first Y. M. C. A. drive $3500 was given, in the second, $12,361.90, or a total of $15,861.90.

In the first Liberty Loan $220,000 was subscribed.

In the second Liberty Loan $678,000 was subscribed, or a total of $836,000.

Probably the most "thrilling" and successful "drive" was the first Red Cross drive in Twin Falls county. At the big meeting in Portland to plan the campaign, this county was asked for $16,000 as its apportionment. The representatives from Twin Falls got together and requested that the amount be changed to $25,000. When this amount was announced in the county upon the return of the representative about here, some people who expressed doubt that it would be raised. "They'll never do it!" said a small group of pessimists.

But the campaign started off with great enthusiasm, after the county had been most thoroughly and completely organized. In a day or two the $25,000 was raised. The success was due to and higher. It kept on going until some marveled, "will it ever stop?" It didn't stop until it reached the sum of $45,672.24—a splendid and a good fellowship characterized the entire campaign.

The sum of $1000 was raised at one time to the Belgian relief fund and a similar amount for the Jewish relief fund.

These sums, with some $580 raised for Company D of Twin Falls and an even larger sum from Buhl for Company E, totals over $1,000,000 that Twin Falls county has given toward since the call "to arms" came.

Red Cross Work
The Twin Falls chapter of the Red Cross has a membership of approximately 400 and has 15 auxiliaries in the following towns and communities: Filer, Berger, Curry, Hollister, Rogerson, Hinson, Rock Creek, Kimberly, Community, Pleasant View, Hazelton, Eden, Castelford and Excelsior.

Surgical dressings classes meet every afternoon and are being worked under certified instructors. More than $2000 worth of yarn has been knitted for the soldiers and sailors and a great many other articles and sewing garments daily in special rooms in the new Methodist church. Christmas packages, numbering 476, were made and sent out. Many boys from Twin Falls boys now in France. Also, 225 fruit cakes were made and included in some of the Christmas packages. The cost of all the Christmas packages was $1000. The Red Cross also sent $75 to the Idaho boys for refreshments when the boys left for their training camp.

Several hundred kits or comfort bags were also made by the Red Cross for the Twin Falls county boys, and these included food, clothing and magazines were gathered and shipped to them.

The Goodwill Century club, Business Women's association and other women's organizations assisted with the packing of the Christmas boxes.

Several hundred boxes of clothing, food, blankets, etc., were gathered and shipped to them.

The Rock Creek auxiliary enclosed a motor kitchen. The Filer auxiliary has a motor kitchen enclosed.

Food
While men and money have been generously given from Twin Falls county, probably the greatest avenue for a real working patriotism in the aid of the country with men, money and food.

Attention has been, and will in the coming year be given this phase of the county part in the great world supply of food, clothing, etc., for the war. The Twin Falls South Side tract cultivation the past year.

75 cars of wheat, 1000 bushels of clover were raised and shipped.

Two million bushels of wheat were raised.

One million five hundred thousand bushels of potatoes.

Two hundred thousand tons of hay.

Six million pounds of wool clip.

One hundred twenty thousand bushels of beans.

Three thousand head of beef cattle.

Eighty thousand head of mutton.

Fifteen thousand head of dairy cattle.

The above with 130,000 sacks of sugar is a conservative estimate of some of the "food ammunition" furnished to Uncle Sam by Twin Falls county to help win the war. Every effort will be made to increase the output and production of each of the above during the coming year.

Larger Sugar Beet Acreage
Seven thousand acres of land were in sugar beets this year, but only 7000 will be put into beets the coming year. Two contracts for payment for beets will be made with the farmers the coming year. One of $10 per ton, or a guarantee of $750 and a share of the profits above $5.50. The factory is under the control of the government and all the sugar is shipped to the government commission in Chicago.

The average tonnage per acre this year was 14 tons, but some fields went as high as 20 and 25 tons. Nearly $400,000 was paid out to the farmers for beets this season. The best sugar factory at Twin Falls was built by the Amalgamated Sugar company last year at a cost of $1,000,000, and is the largest of its kind in the world owned in Idaho by this company.

The home gardening campaign was carried on throughout the county. In nearly every town it was carried on. They were planted to gardens and in Twin Falls some 300 vacant town lots were turned into gardens.

The rural school children were organized into clubs with a total membership of about 600. In Twin Falls were the garden, potato, poultry, corn, calf, pig, lamb, sewing, canning and baking clubs, with a total membership of 1035. The products of their labors were on display at a big school fair in September in which they had 422 exhibits. The approximate value of the combined production of the clubs was $531. The work in these recreational clubs is to be extended throughout the county the coming year and given every encouragement.

Our Appreciation

Is very great, for the kindness and courtesy extended us by the people of the Twin Falls tract, since assuming the management of THE BIG WHITE STORE.

In the four public schools in Twin Falls this year are 1027 boys and 1103 girls, or a total enrollment of 2135. The total school census in the county is 7489. In the Twin Falls school district 55 high school boys who representing 25 high school boys who have gone to serve their country.

Close School at Harvest
More than 300 cars of fruit were shipped from the county this year, and had there been sufficient labor to gather the entire crop there would have been 600 cars of fruit from the project. The high school was closed for three weeks during the harvesting of the fruit crop and students and teachers went into the orchards and packing houses, many of them earning $4 and $5 per day.

In this time of war Twin Falls is also appearing for war training camp, building campaign seems not to have been retarded in any way by war times.

Residence permits to the value of $425,450 were issued by the city clerk from January 1, 1917, to December 31, and the number of homes constructed was 224.

Permits for the construction of 23 business blocks and warehouses were issued to the value of $47,500. There was also constructed 12 miles of cement sidewalks, the contract price for which was $52,000.

A splendid report comes from Buhl showing the part played by the West End section of the county in coming to the aid of the country with men, money and food.

Buhl has 42 men in the Second Idaho Infantry, several in the regular army, one in the navy, four in the officers' reserve corps.

In the matter of subscriptions, Buhl subscribed $15,000 for the first Liberty Loan, and $38,000 for the second; $2500 for the Red Cross; $1985 for the Army Y. M. C. A. Deep Creek school, four miles west of Buhl, gave $275 for the Red Cross—seventy-two kits were given by the Buhl Red Cross.

In food production Buhl stands high—$24,000,000 worth of wheat and pork was raised and shipped this year, 60,000 bushels of wheat at $2 per bushel bringing $120,000; 25,000 tons of sugar beets; 350,000 pounds of cheese; $150,000 worth of milk and Murtaugh at the east end of the project has a most creditable showing. Six volunteers went to the Second Idaho; five to the navy and three to the marines.

Although not a thickly populated district, Murtaugh subscribed $1700 to the first Liberty Loan; $1700 to the second; $1835 to the Red Cross and $500 to the Y. M. C. A. They also made 30 service bags and sent a large number of books and magazines to the soldiers and sailors.

Eight cars of beef, 27 of mutton, 5 of hogs, 25 of wheat, 200 of sugar beets, 2 of fruit, 100 of potatoes, and 3 of wool clip were raised and shipped from Murtaugh district.

Hansen
Hansen subscribed $1500 to the first Liberty Loan, $1800 to the second; $2900 to the Red Cross; $550 to the Y. M. C. A. and made 25 service bags for the soldiers.

There was raised and shipped from the Hansen district; 30 cars of beef, mutton and pork; 200 cars of wheat; 9000 tons of sugar beets; 20 cars of fruit; 75 cars of potatoes. Nearly every vacant building lot in Hansen was utilized this year for war gardening.

The immense potato storage cellar was doubled in capacity this year to accommodate this season's crop.

Hollister

THIS STORY SHOWN AT THE ORPHEUM THEATRE MONDAY AND TUESDAY

AN EXTRAORDINARY PHOTOPLAY
Each chapter is a complete story in itself, and a jump can be made from one to the other without the least destroying the sequence of the story. William Duncan and Carol Holloway in the stellar roles accomplish some death defying stunts. The tale in brief follows the adventures which befall the discoverer of a valuable ingredient for the making of powerful explosives, and the efforts of a foreign enemy to get possession of the secret. The photoplay is unusually beautiful and artistic.

The marvelous adventure story of the great outdoors—written by J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING EPISODE

John Gwyn, an American mining engineer, contracts to furnish the government with the ingredients of a high explosive used in the manufacture of ammunition. In working this mine he is fought by an agent of the Central Powers who hires an outlaw band to get possession of the mine. They killed the owner, but Gwyn married his daughter, and they defy the band. There and again they are near death, trapped in a burning house and locked in the mine. They finally are captured, but escape, and the pursuit leads to a hanging bridge which gives way.

Gwyn manages to hold to the bridge until Nan reaches safely and then drops the bridge into the chasm, but not until the outlaw leaders gain a place of safety by grabbing onto a rope. Then follows a lapse in hostilities in which Gwyn gets the mine in operation.

The outlaws, however, plot to attack the mine and begin by stealing the first pay roll, together with the mine dogs.

A wild race to the recorder's office is made in which the Central Powers agent wins.

CHAPTER 15

The entrance of the main shaft of the mine was all bustle and hurry. Ore cars were traveling in and out with unusual speed, making up for the time that had been lost. Near the entrance Casey and Nan were talking excitedly, trying the first relay in days, now that the excitement had died down. Gwyn with a shift of workmen, was down in the mine. Then with an abruptness that was startling, Nan's voice broke off in the middle of a sentence. There was a rumbling, terrifying sound from within the mine, accompanied by several sharp explosions coming in rapid succession. Both Casey and Nan started in fright. What did this unexpected turn of affairs mean? Was it the work of Black's work? The minecutter was working with lightning quickness. Suddenly the signal for the cage to be sent down immediately.

The five minutes which followed, however, were so much as a man filled with mental agony and suspense for both Casey and Nan. They were nervously trying to imagine the scene when the man from below, who had given the signal, would reach the surface. And then, wrapped in a little film of smoke, the cage appeared at the top of the shaft. The forms of half a score of staggering, weakened men, almost fell forward. Casey and Nan rushed forward to meet them, and were lying prone on the floor of the cage, the forms of a dozen unconscious victims of the catastrophe. To these they went and brought them out, one by one, where miners could work over and revive them. As Casey carried the last man out of the shaft, Nan's eyes were wet with tears.

"Every man here in Gwyn's. The mine came on up the cage."

"We tried to make him come up, one of those who had been rescued answered, but he wouldn't. Said he'd stay down and try to save some others. Better send the cage right down again to him."

"What happened?" Casey demanded. "His explosion," was the reply. "He tried to wreck the mine. I guess most of it was in the old part, where no one was working. The biggest danger's from the smoke. The whole mine is filled with that. That's what got the smoke-heavy, black stuff that'll smother you in a second!"

The words seemed to burn Nan's very soul. The thought of her hand laid in flames below in the suffocating smoke terrified her. She rushed to the cage, but it was already descending for another load of humans. Standing beside the cage where the cage was located, Casey and Nan waited many anxious minutes for it to reach the surface. Gwyn was not to be seen. Only a mass of huddled men, more dead than alive, emerged. One told Nan that Gwyn had saved the majority of them, and when the cage had been lifted, he had gone back for more of the imprisoned miners.

"I'm going down!" she screamed to Casey. "I'll be down there and I'll try to help him! Don't stop me!"

"Don't!" Casey shouted back to her. "Let me go. I can help him more than you can."

But Nan, as she spoke, had already run to the cage and vanished in the smoke that now curled out of the shaft in heavy clouds. Her voice was heard coming from the cage, as Casey rushed forward to check her up but seemingly futile descent.

"All right. Let me down! Quick!" The man in charge of the donkey engine which controlled the cage obeyed the order. Gwyn's dog, attracted by the sound of Nan's voice, rushed into the smoke, and when Casey reached the shaft, he arrived just in time to see it being lowered, enveloped in smoke to the bottom of the mine.

The dense, black smoke rolled through the network of tunnels that wove and interwove under the ground until every subterranean passage of the mine seemed filled. To one imprisoned there escape seemed impossible. But should he escape apophythal, the task of finding the way through the black tunnels, lit only by the burning wood of the shoring, was a practically hopeless one. Yet, for over an hour Gwyn, exhausted almost to insensibility, had struggled along with faltering steps. He had wandered away from the cage and had been unable to return to it. He was lost in the blinding, suffocating curtain of smoke that enveloped him. Now, by an effort that was a permanent and which sapped every ounce of his energy, he braced himself for the effort. He had thought of moment before that he had heard Nan's voice calling for help in one of the passages which fell off from that in which he was trapped. Wondering aloud as quickly as his weak legs would permit, and feeling his way with his hands, more than seeing, he reached the tunnel and halted. The smoke, ere, driven on by the draft which the two tunnels had, was less dense. He was able to breathe. He was again aware of the strength which had left him. As Gwyn stood there, wondering which way to proceed and listening anxiously to every little sound, with the hope of again hearing Nan's voice, another sound, almost as unaccountable, another sound, almost as unaccountable, hollow bark—the bark of a dog and it came from the direction of the tunnel in front of Gwyn.

Without hesitating further, Gwyn made his way about, guided by the barking of the dog. At length, when the barking grew still and closer, Gwyn stopped again. When he resumed his walking, it was to advance slowly and cautiously. It seemed to him now that the dog must be lowering itself in one of the galleries or passages in the same tunnel, but deeper. In another moment, he discovered that this was a bluff, for, directly ahead of him, he could see the glow which led to the lower gallery. He advanced carefully, making sure of his footing, and reached the ledge. The smoke, at this point, was well cleared away, and there remained but a thin veil of it. Below, however, it was dense, and Gwyn's feet were seen distinctly. As he looked, the figure of the dog, moving about and clanking at the wall, in an attempt to get up to the higher level, could plainly be discerned. And, beside the dog, stretched out on the ground, Gwyn could see, as his eyes became accustomed to the darkness, a human form. It was too dark below for recognition, but the sight filled Gwyn with horror.

Gwyn raised himself to his feet—he had been lying flat on the ground as he was peering over the ledge—and made his way around to a point where the floor of the tunnel sloped more gradually to the lower gallery. Here he went down and reached the dog and the body. As he leaned over to look more closely at the form lying on the ground, he started up in surprise. Instead of the body of Nan, he had found that of Sir Scouring Brandy, lying in a little pool of blood. Gwyn reached down and examined the figure. It was certain that the outlaw had been killed by a fall from the upper gallery; there was no sign of a bullet wound anywhere upon him. Just as Gwyn was about to leave and continue his search, which now seemed beyond all hope, the sign of something "clashed" tightly in the dead man's hand attracted his attention. He picked it up, and glancing at it in the light of a smoldering beam, uttered a little cry. It was a bit of cloth which Gwyn recognized having seen torn from Nan's dress. She, struggling, then, must have encountered his wife in the mine! This accounted, also, for the presence of the dog. But what had happened to Nan after that and the outlaw had met? Here was the mystery that confronted Gwyn.

Gwyn, accompanied by the animal, made his way rapidly along the tunnel until he reached the little opening in the wall of the mine through which the light had come. It was a small hole, but sufficiently large for him to crawl through, which he did.

The refreshing air invigorated him greatly, and he felt a new life throbbing in his veins as he breathed it after his long imprisonment in the smoke-filled, musty mine. Rising before Gwyn on a steep incline, was a slope that led to a plateau some fifty feet above. From this plateau, and reaching down to a level, with where he stood, dangled a rope, which was apparently attached to a tree above.

"Someone has gone up here before me," Gwyn murmured. "I don't see how Nan could have done it either. She must have been pretty much all in after her experience in the mine. However, there's no other way she could have gotten on."

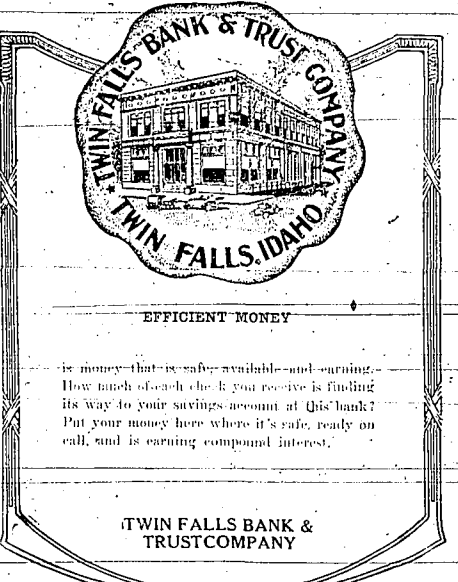

He grasped the rope, tugged at it to make sure that it was secure, and climbed up, hand over hand. At the top he turned around and looked down. He was able to recognize his surroundings. Now, for the first time in hours, he knew where he was. The entrance to the main shaft, where the other tunnel was wanted, he knew, was not far distant, though it was hidden from view by a heavy growth of trees and shrubbery. Behind the screen, he knew, ran the road which led to the town of Lost Mine.

As he emerged from the woods and approached the edge of the forest, he saw Casey rushing madly toward him, shouting and pointing down the road. When Casey caught sight of Gwyn he stopped suddenly.

In adopting the Cash-and-Carry Plan as requested by the Government, we feel that we are only doing our duty and co-operating to that extent by helping the preservation of our country. A nation's structure is composed of the citizen, the home, the community, the state and the government. As a groceryman I am one of the integral parts that go to make up this structure. This is the reason I am co-operating with all governmental suggestions. I appeal to the patriotic people to trade here and co-operate with one of Uncle Sam's patriotic stores. Therefore, on January 1st, 1918, we will adopt the Cash-and-Carry Plan as suggested by the Government. A delivery charge of 10 cents will be made on any purchase up to and including $5.00, and for every additional $3.00 purchase or fraction thereof, an extra 5 cents will be charged.

A NATIONAL RESOLUTION

On this natal day of the new year it behooves the American people as a mass to renew their resolution to push the war to a successful conclusion. A successful conclusion means more than marching through the streets of Berlin. It means more than the surrender of the Kaiser. These things are but incidents and in themselves might be scarcely worth the effort.

cession of Belgium and Serbia and the rehabilitation of Poland; this is a matter of course. But it means more, it means the recognition of the rights of all small peoples to work out their own destiny. It means the union of the whole world in league against war. It means trade relations based on justice and not founded in the interests of special classes in the several nations of the world. It means the elimination of the policy of permanent peace and international intrigue and to the final universal adoption of the Prussian military system with inevitable future wars.

In short it means the inauguration of the policy of international relations and actions advocated with incomparable eloquence and irrefragable logic by President Wilson. This policy is worth while. It is the greatest ideal ever set up by a nation. Moreover, it is following the line of the least resistance. A policy of robbing and of indemnities for punishment rather than for reimbursement, will mean that the peoples of the nations connected with Germany will fight to the death.

Abroad Premier Lloyd-George, who has frequently declared himself for the policy of the president, assures the world that the ideals of England have not changed since war began, but he goes on to state that "the matter of a re-statement of war aims is kept constantly in mind but it could not be done save in agreement with our allies."

The significance of this statement lies in the fact that while England is in favor of the policy which makes for permanent peace and international concord, she has, as yet, been unable to secure a specific repudiation of the ill-starred "pact of Paris" by those nations to which she is tied by alliance.

That she will eventually succeed there can be no doubt, if the United States shall continue to stand unwavering in her course for international justice, and we must do this that we, ourselves may be safe in the future; not again through altruism.

To those on this day, every American should again reaffirm from the heart the pledge to stand by the president in carrying out his great policy of international justice that future generations may arise to bless the memories of those who secure it. The realization of this ideal is the greatest thing in international relations, and should it not be secured, then might come to pass the fear voiced by Lowell's Yankee poet at the close of the civil war when he feared that the ideals of the nation might be thwarted:

"I seem to hear a whisper in the air,
A sigh'n' like, of unconsol'd despair,
That comes from nowhere an' from everywhere,
An' seems to say 'Why died we war'n't it then,
To settle once for all, that MEN WUZ MEN,
Oh, urth's sweet cup, snatched from us barely tasted,
The graves root chill is feelin' life was wasted!"

A WORD WELL SPOKEN

Ex-president William H. Taft, speaking Saturday, to a Springfield, Illinois club, made some reflections that which are more pertinent at the present moment. Referring to the investigations in progress at Washington, Mr. Taft declared that some who use the name of our party in connection with the investigations are traitors to the nation.

"whether they know it or not." Continuing he declared that "There may be injustices which must be cured, but they can wait," he said. "They can wait until we win that which will save us the best in which we are riding on the sea. We are fighting for our lives."

with an adversary which has been preparing for 50 years to conquer the world, and we must not withhold our cooperation, providing they are made in the proper spirit; but when you find men using arguments that are meant to be demagogic appeals, you can mark down the degree of their patriotism."

"JACK AND JILL" WITH LOUISE HUFF AND JACK PICKFORD AT THE IDAHO

HE'S A TOUGH BIRD, IS JACK IN THIS PICTURE—A REGULAR HART FAIRBANKS COMBINATION.

"Jack and Jill" has just a touch of Hart and Fairbanks, and a whole lot of Jack Pickford in a role entirely different from anything he has ever done before. Louise Huff, too, takes a charming part.

Monday evening's audience pronounced it as ranking with some of the best productions that have been seen at the Idaho this fall. The program continues Tuesday and Wednesday, with matinees both days, and Tuesday evening's performance beginning at 6:30.

Distinguished by excellent photography—beautiful locations, the picture shows Jack Pickford, the "strait," in a honest-to-goodness scrap with real pep, then as a tenderfoot on a border ranch, with plenty of rough riding, some more fights and stunts that will surprise even Jack's most ardent admirers. It's a picture you will not want to miss.

SCREEN CHATS

Fred Stone, of the famous Montecarlo-Rome musical comedy combination, will appear in comedies for Paramount.

In "A Little Princess," Mary Pickford plays another charming role from child life, depicting the story of Sara Crews, known to thousands of readers of Mrs. Burnett's novels. Sara Crews is a girl of about the same age as "Rebecca," and those whose hearts were captivated by Miss Pickford's performance in that classic, will see another equally delightful.

Thomas Ince has arranged to build a new $500,000 plant at Culver City.

Here is the tribuna that the New York Tribune said to be the finest son's latest picture. "The Rise of

Rural Community Department

Work Began yesterday morning on the contemplated road improvement from New York where he had been recalled by the fatal illness of his father. Everywhere he found men ready to fight for the country and patriotism at white heat.

New Grade—Mr. L. B. Perrina has been constructing a new grade at the Blue Lakes decent into the canyon from the foot of the hills of the canyon which is probably completed by this time. It is said to be a very considerable improvement over the old one.

Returns—Miss Marie Roberts, who has been at home for the holidays from her musical study in Northwest University, Washington, returned thither yesterday. Miss Roberts sang in Presbyterian church on Sunday.

New Officers W. O. W.—The following are the new officers of the W. O. W. of this city: E. J. Foster, council commander; C. E. Elvartier, advisor; W. A. Dean, banker; J. A. Waters, past council commander; A. E. Hensel, secretary; E. F. Prater, clerk; F. J. Johnson, valchman; L. C. Cress, sentry; George O. Taylor, manager.

The Boy With The Air Gun—One Christmas afternoon in this man's town is a small battalion of boys with bright, new-fangled air guns. There is nothing dumber in the heart of young America, of the male persuasion and about eight to fourteen years of age, than some kid's "shootin' iron," and a lot of fond ladies, uncles or aunts have selected an air gun as the safest thing with which ambition can be satisfied. Begins it is; but while the TIMES would be far from wishing to curtail the pleasure of any youngster it is still compelled to insist the air gun as dangerous, and to urge the inculcation of caution, both on the part of the owners of the guns and of those who find themselves in their vicinity. If a concrete example be needed, let us cite the case of eight-year-old Clarence Smith, whose people live at the northeast limits of the city. One day last week a neighbor boy was playing with his new air gun. He was probably embarking a party of Indians who were on the war path. At all events he slipped into the barn, put his gun out through a knot-hole and let go. He didn't see Clarence Smith at all, but the bullet found him—right between the lip and point of the chin—and perforating the tissues lodged against the jaw bone. Dr. Weaver cut it out, and the lad still doubtless be no worse for the experience; but if it had struck him in the chest, the case would have been very different. Ware of the air gun!

WHAT MAKES A BETTER RURAL COMMUNITY.

(Introductory)

In this day of enlightenment and progress few communities are content to remain the same as always in the past. It is a day in which every community which has found itself wants improvement. And one of the striking signs of the times is that a community which has thus found itself is not content with merely one kind of improvement or advancement. It wants advancement in all of these things which make for human betterment—advancement in economic good, in social welfare, in educational uplift, in the recreational and amusement interests, in the culture of the aesthetic side of life, and of course moral betterment. It is true, some communities have not yet found themselves and are not interested in these things as community matters. Some communities have only partially found themselves and at consequence we are interested only some of these things. But the day is already dawning when the community which will hold its own in the rapid advancement now being made every where in our country must have a program, an aim, a goal. It must be something toward which it will strive. Its program must be a worthy one, one which can command and can forth the pride and co-operation of an entire community. It must be broad enough, democratic enough, sane enough and practical enough to call for the support and co-operation of well nigh every family in the community, else it will not be a community program. Such a program must take things as they are, at least to begin with. We may hope to improve them, and should. We may see defects in our community enough to discourage us, but our own conception of what a community should be—what a community should be—may differ so much from what actually exists that it seems a herculean task before us to get it changed. But let us admit those things, if need be. We must begin with what we have—and where we are if we are to have a better community.

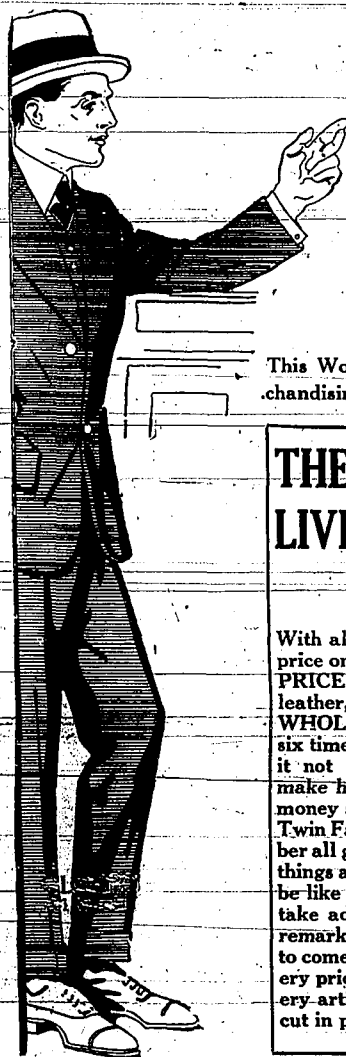

In relatively few communities will be found either men or women who have common sense and enough spare time and some training to enable them to determine upon that course of action which will help in making their own community a better community. It is with the hope of helping some communities find themselves and of helping all communities which have not already done so find the right principles upon which to build their community life that I am undertaking these articles. The writer was himself reared in a rural community. He has had experience in many kinds of rural community uplift. He has studied at first hand and at close range several rural communities. He has worked out the program for the building of one community; or rather for the re-building of it after it had been allowed to go on for years with nothing definite as a program having been worked out. In addition, he has made it his purpose to look up and study the reports of other successful community programs. It is in close touch with the editors of the Twin Falls Times, a paper which we have already come to recognize as community-minded and desirous of contributing to the betterment of the people of this entire tract, that these articles are and will be presented from week to week. Such subjects as "The Relation of Soil to the Making of a Good Community," "The Relation of the Community to the Market," "The Type of People in the Community Life," "The Home," "The School," "The Church," "Men's Organizations," "Women's Organizations," and several others just as interesting and as important will be dealt with in their turn. We invite questions and criticisms, provided they are raised in all seriousness and good faith. For any other kind, we have no time. Next week we shall write on "The Relation of the Soil to the Making of a Good Community."

Jennie Cushing. As Jennie, Elsie Ferguson does one of the best things that ever has been done, either silent or spoken. She was fascinating, elusive, noble and tender and as beautiful as the Madonna. Evidently those who saw the picture in the afternoon sent all of their friends in the evening, for unless you had the password it was impossible to get within a block of the theatre.

Vivian Martin has appeared in many delightful photoplays, but it was her last picture more splendidly adapted to her talents or which embodies a more pleasing story. The scenario of this picture is adapted from the story by Francis Hodgson Burnett. At the time of its publication, it was noted as one of the most charming works of this writer.

Of course, the big stars have their New Year's resolutions just like ordinary mortals. Here they are:

Mary Pickford: I have resolved to be a better person and to try to do something for our brave boys in the ranks, and to assist the aid of every woman and girl in this direction.

Douglas Fairbanks: I have made a firm resolution that if I break my neck in pulling off a stunt for pictures, I will retire permanently from the screen.

Wm. E. Hart: I have resolved to scrutinize every picture, and to endeavor to improve upon it in the succeeding one.

Elsie Ferguson: The warm welcome I have received from the picture public has caused me to resolve to let each picture be a testimonial of my appreciation.

Geraldine Farrar: Another year has rolled by, and I have been greatly impressed by the artistic progress of the motion pictures. I shall continue to devote much of my time during the coming year to photoplays.

George M. Cohan: An usual, my resolution for the new year will be to be a sturdier. I will not work more than twenty-four hours a day, nor write more plays than I can produce. I shall, however, have no objection to directing more motion pictures during 1918.

EAT YOUR WAR BREAD NOW

In the list of energy foods is bread printed in red letters. That means wheat bread. And the red letters mean danger of the supply giving out!

Instead of one loaf of wheat bread, eat a baked potato. We have plenty of potatoes this year. Whenever you do use a loaf of wheat bread, cut the loaf on the table as the slices are needed.

Use the Apple to Vary Your Menu

In "pushing the perishables" our large crop of the healthful and inexpensive apple must not be overlooked by the careful housekeeper. Fortunately, like the potato, they lend themselves to an almost endless variety of delicious dishes. Also, in many instances they may be cooked to advantage with the addition of corn syrup, honey and apple sugar.

Place of white sugar, their use tends to conserve the sugar supply that is so necessary just now.

First, juicy cooking apples should always be selected for all culinary purposes; never the sweet "eating apples," as these are apt to be too soft and dry when cooked.

Baked apples and apple sauce are perhaps the simplest methods of cooking; yet these can be so varied that this useful fruit will answer for the staple course, most in keeping with the home breakfast and luncheon, or may be "dressed up" for quite a "company dinner."

In preparing apple sauce when it is to be strained do not peel the fruit. Simply wash and remove the cores and cut in quarters. This method gives more of the sauce and saves considerable time in preparing the apples. Also, when the fruit is recombined it gives a pleasant pink color to the sauce.

Bits of lemon or orange peel, the strained juice from lemons and oranges, a few cloves, stick cinnamon and grated nutmeg are the best seasoning to use with apples. But the current of their use as the fruit flavor of the apples should always be retained.

Strained apples or small whole apples cooked in a deliciously flavored honey syrup provide an excellent dessert. Place the cooked fruit in a glass dish, pour over the syrup, and top each with a tiny mound of whipped cream mixed with chopped nut meats.

Apple rings fried in a little bacon drippings or clarified beef drippings are just the thing to serve with tiny crisp sausage cakes. An with the addition of the fruit only a very small quantity of sausage will be required.

This will be found an economical as well as a savory dish when a hearty family has to be provided for.

In the following tested recipes will be found some novel formulas for preparing apples to the best advantage:

Old Fashioned Apple Pancakes
Beat together two eggs and one cupful of skimmed milk. Sift together three cupfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Gradually add the liquid to the dry ingredients, mix smooth and add two tablespoonfuls of strained honey, one tablespoonful of melted margarine and two small cupfuls of peeled, chopped apples. The mixture should be of the consistency of a drop batter. Fry in small cakes in a frying pan, browning on both sides, and serve hot with thick, scalded honey flavored with grated cinnamon.

Apple Flaps
Mix together one cupful each of whole wheat and wheat flour and add one teaspoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Then rub in with the finger tips two tablespoonfuls of chicken fat, or any other fat, and mix to a soft dough with cold water. Roll the dough so it can be just cut with a spoon. Grease very deep muffin pans and half fill them with the dough. Pare, core and cut fine half, juicy apples. Put a layer of them in each pan on top of the dough; sprinkle thickly with grated maple sugar and pour over each a quarter of a teaspoonful of melted margarine that had been mixed with a little grated nutmeg. Bake in a quick oven for thirty minutes. Cut in wedge-shaped pieces before serving.

Apple Cornbread (Cornmeal Only)
Scald one and a half cupfuls of skim milk and pour it into one cupful of fine cornmeal. Let cool; add one tablespoonful of melted margarine and a half teaspoonful salt, the yolk of two eggs lightly beaten, half a cupful of finely chopped, peeled apples, two tablespoonfuls of honey and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat well, fold in the stiffly whipped egg whites and spread in a fat, greased pan. Bake in a hot oven for thirty minutes. Cut in wedge-shaped pieces before serving.

Rice and Apple Dumplings
Wash through several waters one and a half cupful of rice; put on in boiling water and boil rapidly for twenty minutes. Drain and place in a bowl with a little salt. Have four pieces of cheesecloth about eight inches square. Place a large spoonful of the rice on each piece; flatten slightly and in the center of the rice put two small halves of steamed, pared and cored apple. Dust the fruit with grated maple sugar, add a pinch of ground cinnamon, a bit of grated lemon rind and a teaspoonful of melted margarine. Work the rice around the apple until it is completely covered. Tie up the cloth so carefully and boil fifteen minutes. Serve with either a hard or liquid sauce—the latter made with "corn syrup."

Lower California Revolt Unconfirmed

Many Rumors but Few Facts Concerning It—Mexicans Are Said to be Starving.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—No hint of the accession of Lower California from Mexico as described in San Francisco dispatches had reached the department until today. Officials had not been advised of the coming visit of F. J. Silliman as governor Cantu's representative to arrange a protectorate by the United States and would not speculate on the possibility of this government taking any action in the matter.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF., Dec. 31.—The report that Esteban Cantu, of Lower California, planned to secede from Mexico and send a "diplomatic representative" to Washington was issued at by American border officials today.

Some weeks ago a report was circulated that a secret convention was being held at Mexicali, where Governor Cantu was laying plans for the secession and establishment of an independent government for Lower California.

Governor Cantu was interviewed on this subject and denied absolutely that any such plan was contemplated. He stated at this time that the circulating of such reports was simply the work of disgruntled politicians who were unfriendly to the government.

DALLAS, TEXAS, Dec. 31.—Notices of six Mexican bandits killed by American cavalry, who allowed riders across the border near San Jose, Mexico, have been counted, and it is believed that at least 25 were killed and wounded during the engagement.

American patrols along the border have been strengthened vs. raids from the state of Nuevo Leon, close to the border. Peons, facing starvation through food shortage, are forming in groups to raid American ranches and towns to procure food, it is reported.

PRESDIO, TEXAS, Dec. 31.—Large groups of Mexicans have been sighted near here today and American patrols are carefully guarding the border. Attempts by the bandits to cross the border to raid American ranches are feared.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Dec. 31.—Hundreds of persons in the mountain country of Durango, Chihuahua and other states of northern Mexico are starving and Carranza soldiers in Chihuahua, Parral and other garrieros are threatening mutiny because they have not been paid and their families are starving, according to Dr. P. R. Molinar, El Paso dentist, who arrived here today from Chihuahua City.

Thousands of persons are out of work, Dr. Molinar said, because no industries are operating. Because of the American embargo on food shipments the Mexicans are unable to obtain food from the United States and their own crops are inadequate to meet the demand. There is also a shortage of clothing, Dr. Molinar said.

Before leaving Chihuahua City Dr. Molinar was arrested by the military authorities on technical charges and held prisoner several days.

"THE BIRD OF PARADISE" AT LAYERING THEATRE

"The Bird of Paradise" Richard Walton Tully's love story of the Hawaiian islands, produced by Oliver Morosco, will be presented at the Layering theatre soon.

Mr. Tully has written the story of the lives of two men and two women; one, a little dark-skinned princess, meets a white man, they fall in love her native religion and gives herself as a human sacrifice to save her people from destruction. On the other hand, the other woman, an American, meets a drunken beachcomber, becomes interested in him, and through her good influence he takes his place among his fellowmen again.

The cast has been carefully selected. Manager Morosco gave the production his personal attention. John Warner, a popular leading man from California, plays the part of Dr. Wilson. Others in the company are Miss Helen Carraw, who makes a most charming Diana, the American girl who finds the right path for the drunken beachcomber, played by John Waller.

One of the attractive features of the play is the quintette of native Hawaiian singers and players, whose weird melodies were brought into vogue through the popularity of this compelling drama. The last act showing the volcanic eruption of Mt. Kilauea is the most thrilling effect attempted in any stage production.

McAdoo and Labor Start Year Well

Will Endeavor to Secure Complete Co-operation.—Enrollments Have Crippled Roads.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Organized labor starts the new year with one of the biggest victories ever scored in the United States. The announcement of Director General McAdoo, now the employer on behalf of the United States to 1,500,000 men working on American railways that he has adopted a friendly attitude toward labor and believes that "twenty-five per cent more efficiency can be obtained from contented men, than from discontented men," opens a new field for organized labor.

The mandate of President Wilson delivered at the recent Buffalo convention of the American Federation of Labor that "if you will stand by me I will stand by you" is to be carried out under the government operation of the railways. The president and Director McAdoo expect unqualified loyalty from the railroad workers of the country and in return intend to give a square deal to all whether organized or not.

It has developed that thousands of experienced railway workers welcomed the draft and refused to apply for industrial exemption. The result has been that nearly every railroad in the country today is short of men and has had to recall all of its older men that had been pensioned who were fit for duty.
