A SATISFIED BOND-BUYER.

Amid the chorus of condemnation on the part of government bond purchasers, it is a relief to find one investor who has nothing to complain of. Though he sold some of his bonds at less than he paid for them, he stoutly refuses to consider himself injured. In a letter to a newspaper, he explains:

"The government never promised to keep the private trading price of the bonds at par. All it did was to promise to pay par for them at maturity, to pay a certain rate of interest until then and to redeem them at that time. And it will do exactly that."

"A man who accepts a promissory note payable in a year, or two, or three, and chooses to have it discounted in order to get the money at once, doesn't consider himself abused by having to pay the discount. Commercial transactions are adjusted in that way every day in vast volume. Does anybody complain? What's the difference when a man chooses to sell his Liberty bonds?"

There may be some question about whether or not the government promised to keep the bonds at par. It appears that there were at least some unofficial promises made to that effect, and the public during the early flotations had an impression that the government assumed that obligation. But certainly there has been altogether too much criticism in this regard. War bonds everywhere have gone below par, and American bonds have fallen less than any country's and less in proportion than any type of American bonds. And the chief reason for their fall is that the American public has persisted in dumping them on the market in such large quantities.

The government, as this investor points out, could not, if it wanted to, "instantly redeem all these billions in bonds, whenever the whim to cash in hits the bondholders, without taking it out of the bondholders in some other way." And the comparison of "cashing in" the bonds before maturity with discounting promissory notes before maturity is illuminating. Most people have not thought of it in that light.

THE BIGGEST WIRELESS PLANT.

The United States is soon to have the biggest wireless station in the world. Six thousand acres of ground have been purchased on Long Island, N. Y., and construction is to begin at once. The estimated cost of the plant is $10,000,000.

The new station is to have a diameter of more than three miles, with 72 towers, each 400 feet high, supporting the antennae, strung from the central power house a mile and a half away. There are to be five units, one for Argentina, one for Germany, one for France, one for Scandinavia, and one for Italy and Poland.

The most powerful station now in operation is that at Nauen, Germany, famous for the misinformation it disseminated as part of the German war propaganda. Near Bordeaux, France, is another station, built by the American forces but taken over by the French and being remodeled. This one is located at Nauen when it begins to operate, but the big American station will be built there.

Nothing inspiring to the imagination, great towers which soar into the air and communicate with each other by connecting medium under that an age which has seen such wonders should be touched with madness to pierce the occult. Who that has seen all this developed in a few short years would pretend to say what is the limit of many's mystery of space, and who would prate of "isolation" when connection without material contact is already a fact?

TIME TO STOP FIGHTING.

It is time for the public to call a halt on this bitter personal and political quarrel at Washington which has so long deferred peace and kept America and the rest of the world unsettled. The senate and the president are still deadlocked. The joint peace resolution on which the senate and house are got together will not make peace, and will not settle anything. The president will veto it, of course. What then?

It is the strategic time for the president to return the Versailles treaty to the senate, and ask once more for its ratification. It is also the strategic time for the president to admit he cannot hope to get that treaty through the senate intact, and that the nation will not uphold him if he persists in trying to do so. It is also time for the senate to recognize that the nation will not support a similarly unyielding attitude on its part.

Neither the Versailles treaty as written nor the Versailles treaty with the Lodge reservations as they stand has a chance of passage, or a chance of public support. Somewhere between these positions is a ground on which the two factions can meet and from a compromise acceptable to the nation and tolerable to the nations by whose side we fought the war.

That compromise, if effected, will clear the national decks at once for action on vital domestic problems—shipping, army, bonus, labor, agricultural development and the rest, and will enable the national campaign to take a natural and logical course.

Will the president and senate stop fighting and settle down with a mutual patriotic purpose to give the country what it wants?

MENTAL TESTS FOR CHILDREN.

Simple mental tests, on the order of those used for applicants for army service, are now used frequently to aid in the classification of orphan children and those brought under the care of various humane societies.

This determination of the child's mentality is a great help in placing him in such surroundings as shall best aid his development. It marks a long stride in the treatment of those unfortunate children whom a less advanced day used to handle in masses with little regard to personal ability or individuality.

Sometimes the tests reveal unsuspected things. For instance, one child was asked what "kidnaped" meant, and he replied "Me." Investigation proved that he was right. He had been stolen by a man with a criminal record and brought to another state. The man is now behind the bars and the child is with his parents.

No thinking person can fail to rejoice at these constantly improving methods for dealing with friendless children. Intelligent and humane treatment means not only a better chance for the child himself, but benefit for society as well, since the probability is that in later years the child will be an asset, not a liability upon the community which has given him a fair chance.

A department of justice report states that the American Woolen company, the largest American manufacturer of woolen cloth, made enough money the first quarter of this year to indicate a total profit for the year of 400 per cent on all the common stock. And only a little while ago the president of the company was bawling out retail merchants for profiteering in the necessities of life!

Experts say that the elimination of unnecessary motions is essential to efficiency. Now we know what is the matter with congress.

OUTBURSTS OF EVERETT TRUE

REPUBLICAN MEET NEAR FAMOUS SCENE

First Organization of Party Was Made 66 Years Ago.

CHICAGO.—In assembling at Chicago in June the republican national convention, the country is reminded of the fact that the republican party was first organized in 1854. The first meeting of the party was held in the city of Chicago, where the first recorded republican meeting was held 66 years ago. The approach of the convention recalls this early history, though with the passing of the years the development of new issues the first steps of the party have passed from common view.

"It will probably not be possible to trace to the earliest date the first positive meeting which led to the formation of the party," says Mr. J. H. Francis, a member of the party. "It is quite likely that there was no considerable gathering of men, nor discussion of plans and policies, until Mr. A. E. Hovey, a banker of Illinois, Wis., together with a group of men, decided to form a party. A free-seller, issued a call for a public meeting to consider the new situation."

The great issue of the hour was the extension of slavery. Of the political situation prevailing the formation of the party was the result. "No political party was able to elect enough members of congress to overcome the united will of the slaveholders, and until the anti-slavery sentiment of the North should be welded together, and its opponents should be so united in one party as to be able to elect Washington enough men to outvote the representatives of the slave power, there was no hope that its advance could be checked."

Reference was made to the Illinois meeting by Henry Wilson, when vice president of the United States, in his book "The Century of the Slave Power," published in 1874. "One of the earliest, if not the earliest, of the movements," he said, "that contemplated definite action and the formation of a new party was made in Illinois. From that day, May 18, 1854, in consequence of a very thorough canvass, conference and general comparison of views in August by A. E. Hovey, a prominent member of the whig party among the whigs, free soilers, and democrats of that town, a call was issued for a public meeting to consider the grave issues which were assuming an aspect of such alarming proportions."

The meeting thus called, wrote Charles M. Harvey in the Chautauquan in September, 1857, "was held in the Congregational church at Ripon, February 23, 1854. A resolution was adopted in the meeting that if the bill then pending in the senate to throw open to slavery the territories of New Mexico and Kansas should pass, the Illinois whigs should form a new party organization in Ripon should be cast off, and a new party, to be called the republican, formed on the sole basis of opposition to slavery extension."

The bill passed the senate, in which body it originated, on March 1, 1854, and on March 26, the second meeting, participated in by men of all parties, was held, this time in a schoolhouse, at which Hovey was the leading spirit.

"By a vote of the assembly, the town committee of the whig and free soil parties were dissolved and a committee of five, three whigs, one democrat and one free soiler was chosen to begin the task of forming a new party."

"At these two meetings were started anywhere in the country, to bring about the coalition of the enemies of slavery extension who were eventually fused into a homogeneous and aggressive party adopting the name republican."

The earliest systematic work began in the city of Chicago. Mr. Harvey quoted a letter Hovey later wrote to him about this meeting, in which he said: "I went from house to house and from shop to shop and called men on the streets to get their names for the meeting of March 20, 1854. At that time there were not more than a hundred of new issues the first steps of the party have passed from common view."

"I went from house to house and from shop to shop and called men on the streets to get their names for the meeting of March 20, 1854. At that time there were not more than a hundred of new issues the first steps of the party have passed from common view."

"The spirit was active in 1854, in every village and city in the free states, which would have created that party even if Hovey and Greeley had never been born. Hovey, however, was the first person who set out in a resolute and practical way to form the party; he was the first to suggest the name, and Greeley, through his paper, which had the largest circulation and influence of any journal in the country at that time, gave him valuable aid in making the party most and known to the country."

The first national republican convention was held in Philadelphia two years later.

GOD, DESPONDENT, SUICIDES.

By the Associated Press. LINCOLN, Neb., May 25.—Itay Taylor, aged 19, of Davenport, Iowa, died here today shortly after drinking poison. The superintendent of the city mission, where he had been living, said he had heard that Taylor failed to return to duty in the navy after securing a furlough, and that this may have had something to do with his act.

NOSE BLEED COVERS MILLIONAIRE $2,000

DENVER, Col.—An attack of nose bleeding cost Morris T. Stroeter, millionaire coal mine owner $2,000 and made necessary the chartering of a special train to carry a Denver special to the hospital. In the meantime, Colorado, where Stroeter was. At the end of the attack, the millionaire in the special train, the specialist had to ride thirty miles in an automobile over the rough roads of Mount St. Helens.

When Stroeter first began to lose blood, and after first aid measures had failed to check the flow, an unsuccessful attempt was made to secure an airplane to carry the specialist the 300 miles from Denver to Stroeter.

Despite the fact that the run was over tracks, weakened by recent storms, record-breaking time was made. The train alone cost Mr. Stroeter $1,700, including war tax, and the physician's fees and other charges brought the total to more than $2,000. But the bleeding was stopped.
