SMITH COLLEGE UNIT OF RED CROSS KNOW ALL ABOUT SKEEL FIRE AND BOMBS—PROUD RECORD

A CITY IN FRANCE—Sixteen American girls of the Smith college unit attached to the Red Cross are the heroes of the recent fighting along the front.

They are now attending refugees and wounded in a certain town behind the French lines, under the leadership of Mrs. Barrett Andrews of New York. The girls have been under attack several times. They have saved the lives of numerous aged French women and children, remained in towns of the evacuated areas as long as possible to assist the helpless (several words deleted by censor) numerous French women and girls also.

Good Ambulance Drivers They are driving ambulances and of officers' cars, giving one of the most impressive demonstrations of women's work in the war. The Smith college unit was stationed at Orcourt (French southwest of Paris) on March 20. The following day the windows rattled and the houses were they were shaken by the opening of the German bombardment. The next day the civilians began evacuating the town. The girls were ordered to leave but instead they went two automobiles to nearby towns with food and milk. They were prepared to leave in the evening when British officers, who had been without food for two days, came in.

Cook Under Fire They stopped to serve these officers. As they began pouring in in the midst of the enemy shelling, the girls continued cooking and serving food. The next day the girls went to Boye (18 miles southwest of Ham), which also was being attacked. They continued on to Montillerie (11 miles southwest of Boye) where they established a temporary baby hospital.

They cared for children and blind, aged and infirm persons. They brought the supplies being sent in by a hotel. From since in the courtyard they served hundreds of refugees for two days and nights practically without rest.

Forced Out of Camps Five girls went to Amiens (twenty miles northwest of Montillerie) at the request of the British army and artillery bombardment compelled them to leave that place. There they gathered in this French town, where they are busy visiting hospitals, meeting wounded at the station, and serving food and cigarettes. They have fed more than 8000 men, women and children in the past ten days.

Your heart is a very busy organ. While you breathe once it beats four times. At each beat it sends four pounds of blood through your veins and arteries. ### WHEAT HAS EMBARKED FOR FOREIGN SERVICE; POTATOES THE HOME GUARD

COUNTY HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT DISCUSSES RELATIVE VALUES OF FOOD AND URGES PATRIOTIC NECESSITY FOR ADVISED CONSERVATION

We have not forgotten wheat for our allies and ourselves, says Miss Gertrude Denekoe, county home demonstration agent, outlining the relative food values of potatoes and wheat, and urging the patriotic necessity for increased use of potatoes in order that the necessary saving of wheat may result.

The situation, in brief, is this, Miss Denekoe says: We have not wheat for our allies and ourselves. We have an abundance of potatoes—an excess of 90,000,000 bushels over normal times.

If we are to win this war the allies must have wheat. The potato cannot quite come up to wheat in food value but it does come about as close to wheat in the place of wheat as any other food can stand for the allies.

Energy Value of Potatoes

One medium sized potato (3 1/2 oz.) equals one ounce of Victory bread (oz.).

Mineral Value of Potatoes

For two cents you can get more mineral matter in potatoes than in bread.

Potatoes Cannot Be Stuffed

One pound of wheat equals ten cans of potatoes in the matter of energy.

Consumption of Potatoes

Germany consumes per capita weekly 16 quarts, Austria 12 3/4 quarts, and the United States 2 3/4 quarts. Our enemy is fighting us on potatoes. Let us fight back on potatoes.

Food Question Box

Ques. In making potato bread, I find my bread is too moist. Is there any way in which one can gauge the moisture of potatoes?
Ans. The only gauge one may have for the moisture content of the cooked potato is one of judgment. Experience is the only teacher. By the second or third time the recipe is tried, the amount of moisture added may be gauged.

The applications will be in the form of a letter addressed to the county chairman, setting forth the experience and qualifications of the applicant for the position sought after, and should be supported by several letters from past and present employers.

How Much Wheat Can We Eat?

It is very true that we are allowed to purchase fifty pounds of wheat with fifty pounds of substitute. However, even that is not all that is required of us. The food administration regulates that for a man doing heavy labor three pounds a week is the limit, and for the man doing sedentary work one and a half pounds per week is the weekly allowance.

GERMAN EFFORT IS EXPENDED ON FRENCH FRONT

BALANCE OF LINES PRACTICALLY UNGUARDED—ALLIED ACTION MAY RESULT IN ITALY

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, May 1.—Determined allied assistance is piling up German losses to an extent that is alarming the foe's military leaders, military officers here believe. Reports that Austria is being called on to send reinforcements to the western front were regarded here as very significant.

Pinning their hopes on ultimate, decisive victory in France, the Germans are disregarding the other war fronts. American officers say the situation is opening up for an Allied offensive in Italy.

Bulgaria's position is particularly vulnerable, it is said here. The allied armies in Macedonia have been aided by the reorganized Greek army, which can be counted on for valuable assistance in offensive operation.

Austrian Call Significant
German officers here say, would not call on Austria unless the need was great. That need has been brought about by the huge German losses in the Tusten drive.

The aspects of the great struggle have been changed within the last two or three days. The channel ports are no longer in imminent danger, American experts believe. There is a chance that Tynes can be held.

SIMMONS WRITES OF VISIT TO BELGIAN FRONT

George W. Simmons, manager of the southwestern division of the American Red Cross, had written to the Post-Dispatch telling of his visit to "Free Belgium," the small part of that country which remain in the hands of its own people. He visited the Belgian front, in company with a party of American officers, in the latter part of February. Simmons' visit to the Belgian front was made before his visit to the American front, which was described in a letter from him, printed in Friday's Post-Dispatch. The letter describing the Belgian visit is dated "Remembered in France, March 9," and is as follows:

High Praise for "Yanks"
"I have been moving so rapidly, I have not had a moment to write you of my impressions. It is so hard to know where to begin, but as the one thing uppermost in the minds of all of us boys in France, I can say, without fear of contradiction, they are magnificent. On all sides I hear the highest praise of our "Yanks"—their conduct, their morale and especially their fighting qualities. I am going to the American front this week and will write you some first-hand impressions.

"What! A Whole Egg for Me?"
"In one place I visited, a girl I had come in the night before, and when offered food, said she wasn't hungry. The good sister knew that it was fear and timidity that concealed the pangs of hunger; so she poached an egg and offered it. "What," said the child, "is a whole egg all for me—all at once?" And after devouring it, she related that once a week in occupied Belgium, the mother could provide one egg, which had to be divided between three small children.

"It is in many such homes as these that the American Red Cross is rendering immense help. Her work is done through the excellently managed Belgian organizations, and by financial assistance, under the skilled direction of our American Red Cross Commissioner for Belgium, Col. Ernest Kitchell, and his assistant, Dr. John Van Schickel of New York, that the American people are doing this grand work. Belgium, though stricken almost unto death as a nation, asks no charity—but rather a friendly hand of financial help until the Hun gets off her throat. Then she is confident of her ability to rise again out of her distress and take her place among the nations of the world. For notwithstanding the fact that Germany has stolen from Belgium in Belgium every piece of machinery, every piece of copper, brass, lead from plumbing fixtures, and from every bed has taken the wool and cotton mattresses which were so plentiful, still the Belgian spirit which is a country, not a thoroughfare," is undaunted by cruelties, atrocities, murders, pillage and destruction.

Belgium Saved Paris
"It is the judgment of the world that but for the fight put up by little Belgium in the opening days of the war Paris would have fallen. Also that England and America, both unprepared for war, would soon have felt the power of Prussian autocracy in their own fair lands—perhaps even as innocent Belgium did. Her fall would have been particularly fitting that the American people should assist in every practical way to keep this wonderful nation going—to supply the needs of the young and the old—to help maintain the morale of the Belgian army which is today holding such an important sector of the allied line."

BRAZIL NOW FACES A COAL SHORTAGE

APPOINTMENT OF GOVERNMENT FUEL COMMISSION—DETERMINED TO HELP A GOOD DEAL

By H. D. ROBERTSON
(United Press Correspondent)
RIO DE JANEIRO.—The appointment of a federal fuel commission, whose duty it is to conserve the ever dwindling stocks of coal, and to provide new supplies and substitutes when those stocks are gone, is Brazil's latest attempt to overcome a desperate coal shortage situation. (It is now the fall of the year here.)

The commission consists of a representative of the navy, one from the Lloyd Brasiliario, the government owned shipping line, and another from the Central railroad, also government owned. It is believed that the members of the commission were wisely chosen as the interests represented are the largest coal users in the country, and judging from the steps already taken the commission's purpose will be successfully carried out.

Brazil consumes annually about a million tons of coal, practically all of which has been imported. Until the war broke out in Europe this million-ton a year was mined in Wales and exported to Brazil in British ships, but Great Britain's war necessities cut off his source of supply and Brazil turned to the United States for assistance. The fact that American coal exports to Brazil increased from 35,000 tons in 1911 to nearly 700,000 tons in 1917 shows how this assistance was rendered.

Ship Shortage Is Reason
But the steady increase of the German submarines on the world's ships supply brought now and increasing difficulties to the Brazilian coal consumer. There was not only a shortage of ships to transport the coal obtainable, but freight rates steadily mounted until they became all but prohibitive. Coal that costs about four dollars a ton in the United States is being sold for more than thirty dollars a ton in this city—and the difference is the freight.

Now that the United States is suffering a severe shortage and is unable to supply even her friends with constantly decreasing quantities, Brazilian industries will be in a desperate situation if the commission is unable to solve the problem.

Various relief measures have been considered but those offering the brightest prospects of success are the use of substitutes for coal, and the development of the country's own coal lands, hitherto neglected because of lack of capital and transportation. Already several mines have been opened and new rail lines are bringing their products to market. The high price and the nation's desperate needs will doubtlessly develop these new mines and others in the near future. The federal government and the governments of several states are giving this development the greatest encouragement not only financially but also by facilitating transportation and by favorable legislation.

YESTERDAY'S WAR NEWS
It is quite likely that the war for some time to come will consist in a series of tactical changes, changes rung at by one side and then by the other, changes which will be paid for in a million human lives, misery, and suffering unparelleled.

Another soldier was sentenced to serve 14 days at hard labor. He was bringing bread to a woman and had six small loaves in his arms, which he had gathered from among the soldiers. The same lieutenant met him, accompanied by several noncommissioned officers.

CHAPTER IV
The scene of the slaughter could now be surveyed at leisure. Dead and wounded were strewn all around, and other remnants of smoke and flame made the air thick. But we were already too horrified to notice anything.

CHAPTER V
Not far from Soumepey, the French rear guard stopped again. Four batteries of our artillery were brought into position and our company, along with machine guns, was ordered to protect the artillery.

The Confessions of a German Deserter

Written by a Prussian Officer Who Participated in the Ravaging and Pillaging of Belgium.

The sergeant paused a half minute and then ordered us to fire. I did not know to this day whether our victims died at once, nor was there ever an opportunity to learn how many of the six bullets found their mark. All day I went around like a man in a trance, reproaching myself bitterly for having acted the part of executioner.

In the evening we went into camp in an open field, pitching tents, and the manner continued. The country through which we passed had long been abandoned, and the population had mostly been destroyed. Long trains of fugitives passed us continually. These people were as a rule those who had escaped when the French army retreated and were returning now to find their homes destroyed by the rough hand of war.

After a long march, interrupted only by halts and short bivouacs, we approached the large Belgian-French border town of Signy, located on the Belgian side of the Meuse, early in the afternoon, and as the sound of cannon constantly grew stronger, which indicated that a new battle was developing, we hoped to be able to remain in the town overnight.

Several soldiers now arrived with barrels of wine and also many bottles, which were instantly opened and emptied. The obvious result, and soon made manifest to all officers and men, were helplessly drunk. The owner of one of the best possessed three large hogs. One of the drunken noncommissioned officers tried to kill one of the hogs, but was rebuffed by the owner. He had tortured the poor beast almost to death when the animal was mercifully killed by a bullet.

CHAPTER VI
Our leader, lieutenant of Reserve Elm, declared that such a thing as pity was ignominious. He said if the woman had six children that was her business. Then from the next day on he began to speak with great emphasis: "In war every body looks out for themselves, even if everything around him perishes."

the bullet struck our boat they made only a tiny hole, but as it emerged on the bottom, it tore an opening as large as a plate. As a result our pontoon settled rapidly and there was nothing else for us to do except to jump into the icy water and swim. Hardly had we left the boat when it sank, but we all reached the other bank safe for the moment.

When the bugles sounded in Donchery, it was disclosed that our company had lost 28 men in battle. A position was taken behind the dragon company and our company, which was reduced to 50 men, was ordered to attempt the building of a pontoon bridge over the Meuse.

After all preparations were made and the main advance work such as setting up the bridge spans and building the platform had been done, the single ponton wagons drove up. They were quickly but silently unloaded. We completed four pontons, though the enemy discovered nothing.

to assemble and soon we pursued the fleeing enemy. It was our duty to repair roads which had been destroyed so that they would be passable for our armies, a task that was harder in the spring than in the fall.

The dead bodies were strewn by two men, one at the head and the other at the feet, and thrown into the ditch. Corpses were handled exactly as was to be done in building a bridge.
