CRISIS MAY MEAN A NEW GOVERNMENT

POLITICAL SITUATION IN LONDON THREATENING LIFE OF LLOYD GEORGE REGIME—PRESS IS DIVIDED—NORTHOLIFFE FOR PREMIER

By ED L. KEENE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, May 8.—The most serious political crisis in the life of the Lloyd George government exists today.

The situation, engendered by General Maurice's letter charging the premier with lack of veracity, which was brought to a head by Herbert Asquith's motion in favor of the house of commons investigating the charges, instead of allowing the government to appoint two judges for that purpose. Asquith's motion amounts to a direct declaration of a lack of confidence in the government.

Lloyd George is likely to reply to Maurice. Political students generally believe the premier will be able to explain satisfactorily. Nevertheless, the incident tends to shake public confidence until it is straitened out.

Government Moves Act.

Although divided along lines for and against the government, the cabinet press agreed on the seriousness of such a charge coming from Maurice, a former member of the general staff. They held the opinion it is a challenge which the government must meet immediately or face the peril of weakened public confidence.

The Northcliffe press supports the government, refusing to believe the ministers deliberately deceived the people. The Times and the Mail favor the government's methods of investigation. The Mail believes Asquith thinks he has found a weapon with which to destroy the present government and return the old government's power which was his head-to-power.

Supports Voice of Gesture

The Daily News "hopes commons will not allow the issue to pass from its hands." It understands the government will not accept the Asquith motion, but will treat it as a vote of censure. "Therefore, parliament will make a decision which will involve the life of the government."

The Post is bitterly opposed to the government.

The Telegraph says: "The opposition, led by Asquith, regards the time as ripe, and is ready to accept the responsibility of office."

The Express, pro-government, declares Maurice may be punished for a grave infraction of military regulations in writing the letter.

TO DETERMINE PLAN FOR SAVING STEEL

COMMITTEE NAMED BY AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS AND WAR BOARD

WASHINGTON, May 8.—To determine on a plan for saving steel—ever if production of pleasure vehicles is to be further sharply curtailed—a committee representing the automobile industry and the war board has been named.

It includes: John F. Dodge, Walter E. Flinders, John M. Willys, W. C. Durant, all representing the automobile concern, and George N. Peck, Jr., 28, and Alexander Legg and Hugh Boylston, representing the war industry board.

At a conference today, the government outlined its needs, as to steel. Automobile representatives took exception to reports that the government would ask a drastic curtailment of pleasure car manufacturing.

ENTIRE WOOD TORN UP BY EXPLOSIVES

AMERICAN ARTILLERY PLAYS HAVOC WITH GERMAN POSITIONS AT MANY POINTS—FRENCH AIRPLANES OPERATING IN FLOCKS—SEA OF MUD

By FRED A. FERGOUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICANS IN PICARDY, May 8.—The American artillery throughout the night was pounding the German positions at Cantigny, Courtenanche, Fontaine-Sous-Montdidier, Mesnil-St. Georges and Allreud and woods in the vicinity.

Under the extremely heavy fire the Cantigny-Francmont wood has been torn up by high explosives. Enemy supply trains were subjected to a deluge of shells. The sky was ablaze with the light of the American artillery fire. The boche guns replied against our rear organizations.

The clearing weather has enabled excellent observation. French airplanes hover over the German lines in flocks.

Front Is Sea of Mud

The front is now a sea of mud and conditions are similar to the early stages of the war, when there was no shell and gas, there was living in mud holes.

Courtenanche is a village about a mile and a quarter northwest of Montdidier, on the railway connecting that city with Amiens. Mesnil-St. Georges is a mile and a half west of Montdidier, on the main highway connecting Montdidier with Breteuil. Fontaine-Sous-Montdidier is a mile north of Mesnil-St. Georges. Cantigny is a mile west and slightly north of Fontaine-Sous-Montdidier. Francmont is a small village a mile and a half east of Cantigny and about midway between Cantigny and Courtenanche.

AUSTRALIANS ARE ACTIVE

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 8.—Australian troops have advanced again north of the Somme.

One advance, west of Molesmeourt (midway between Albert and the Somme) was to the depth of 300 yards, on a 600-yard front. The other was northeast of Sully-le-Sac (on the north bank of the Somme, three miles south and west of Valenciennes) 650 yards deep, on a front of 600 yards.

RUNS ARE TRYING

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LOBBARNE, May 8.—The American aviators are keen fighters and to a successful have led the boches in trying aerial flyers to the front. So far, the Americans have not been able to catch the Germans are using new tricks to deceive the American flyers, sending out one or two German planes to cause an alarm and following them up with reinforcements, greatly outnumbering the Americans who answer the alarm.

Another maneuver is to send over a low-flying German plane to lure American planes far into Germany, where a German squadron drops on them from the clouds.

BRITISH ADVANCE LINES

(By United Press.)

LONDON, May 8.—British troops again advanced their lines between the Somme and Ancre, taking several prisoners, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. Hostile cannonading occurred in Flanders during the night.

Enemy artillery fire increased this morning in the northern portion of the Flanders front.

"As the result of successful minor operations, we advanced our line a little between the Somme and the Ancre, taking several prisoners," the statement said.

"(It was on this front that the Australians advanced their lines on more than a mile front Sunday night and Monday morning.)"

Between Locon and Bobocq (on the southern portion of the Flanders front) and in the neighborhood of St. Julienne (northeast of Ypres) hostile artillery was active last night.

"The enemy artillery increased his up."

AMERICAN TROOPS PASSING THROUGH LONDON ON WAY TO FRONT

It is a common sight nowadays to see the brave and hardened veterans of American training camps passing through London on their way to the French front. Many of our units are headed at an English port, and the men are given a hike through England to stretch their legs after the long sea voyage. The photograph shows the system of pack carrying adopted by our troops on the march.

CIVIL ORDERS ARE NOT APPRECIATED BY THE MILITARY

ISSUE IN BRITAIN MAY BE DUE TO JEALOUSY BETWEEN OFFICIALS AND ARMY HEADS

By J. W. T. MASON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 8.—The issue of military recruitment against the orders of the British civil government has been realized by Major General Maurice's public accusation of lying brought against Lloyd George's ministry.

No democratic government that deliberately misleads public opinion can continue to exist; but General Maurice has not yet proven that the civilian authorities have deceived the British people concerning the true facts of the army. This is General Maurice's second recent adventure in impudent tricks.

His first was his attack on General Foch during the German offensive for not ordering French reserves northward as rapidly as General Maurice believed should have been done. If General Maurice had not been removed from his post because of this offense, it is highly improbable that he would now be attempting to overthrow the Lloyd George ministry to justify the right of military to challenge the power of the civil government.

Took a Long Time

The charge of the mis-statement of fact which General Maurice brings against the prime minister relates to a declaration in the house of commons made a month ago. If the matter were as serious as General Maurice pretends to make out, his own silence during this period is difficult to explain on any other basis.

GERMANS READY TO RECOMMENCE

Hun Army Cocked and Primed and Well Prepared for Resumption of Action on West Front—Allies Await Quietly Confident.

(By United Press.)

THE Germans are all primed for a resumption of their west front offensive on a large scale, it was intimated today in a British press dispatch from the front.

The dispatch described the completion of enemy preparations, including the reconstruction of roads, railways and bridges, the concentration of artillery, and the massing of refitted and rested troops, including many new divisions.

The dispatch said that about 180 enemy divisions or 3,000,000 men are in the line with 76 divisions, or 918,000 men, in reserve.

Artillery Active at Kemmel

Field Marshal Haig reported great activity by the German artillery in the Meuse and Kemmel sectors early this morning. Kemmel, which was taken by the Germans several days ago at a distance of 17 miles, is about 20 miles south and slightly west of Ypres. Meuse is six miles southwest of Kemmel. The only infantry action mentioned by Haig was another slight British advance between the Somme and the Ancre.

A United Press dispatch from the American front in Picardy reports a terrific bombardment of several towns and roads west of Montdidier, held by the Germans, last night. In retaliation the Germans were shelling the American rear areas. The Americans are following in mud as the result of several days' rainfall, but the weather had cleared again, rendering artillery and aerial activity easier.

Sergeant Joseph Stonina, previously reported missing, is now known to be a prisoner in Germany. His home is in Webster, Mass.

CRYPTIC KEY TO CODE IS DISCOVERED

MEANS OF SECRET COMMUNICATION BETWEEN VON BERNSTORFF AND BERLIN LAID BARE BY WORK OF NEW YORK OFFICIAL

(By United Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., May 8.—The Von Bernstorff code, the cryptic means of communication employed by the German foreign office to keep in touch with Count von Bernstorff while the latter was directing submarines and other German activities in this country, has been deciphered, reconstructed and turned over to the federal government by Attorney General Lewis. This was the code which Hugo Schmidt, the paymaster, in the German embassy in New York, attempted to destroy by burning in the furnace of the German club in New York City.

Code Reconstructed

Schmidt, who was in constant touch with Bernstorff, extensively used this code in attempts to deliver to Germany, by circuitous routes, large stores of copper, wool and other war necessities. The fragmentary evidence of the code discovered in Schmidt's office enabled Deputy Attorney General Albert L. Becker to reconstruct what was probably the most significant means of communication devised by the German foreign office.

"Thousands of wireless messages in Schmidt's possession contained the body and key to this code."

Schmidt's files had been entrusted to him by General Haig during the activities of Paul Bolo Paska, who was recently arrested by the French government for treason, he immediately made his way to the German club, destroyed the papers containing the code and the fragments. At this juncture the attorney general drew from Schmidt this fact and enough other information about the code to facilitate its reconstruction from wireless and other messages found in Schmidt's files.

CIVILIAN HEAD IS SUGGESTED

WORK OF ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT LARGELY A DISTRIBUTION MATTER

By CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Appointment of a civilian head of the ordnance department is being strongly urged in quarters here.

Coinciding with a thorough investigation Secretary Baker is making into the ordnance situation, the demand for "a Schwab" to "pop up" ordnance production is increasing.

General Williams, rated high as an ordnance expert, has taken hold of the department, while General Wheeler, former head, is now in Europe. The situation confronting Williams is admittedly none too good.

"The urgent appointment of a civilian chief says there is a big function for the military man in the ordnance situation, but that it lies in distribution to the forces in the field rather than in getting war production quickly and efficiently."

At present it is difficult to chart in definite figures just where the ordnance situation stands. Secretary Baker, however, does not know where the missing gun matter stands. The policy of allowing covering many phases of war work has kept ordnance—like airplanes—from public notice most of the time, until now, when investigation is becoming a popular watchword.

NEW OFFICIALS FOR FUEL ADMINISTRATION

(By United Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Appointments of Thomas E. Brown, Pittsburgh as "administrative engineer" for the fuel administration was announced today. C. P. Billings was appointed special staff assistant. The appointments were in connection with the program for nation-wide conservation of fuel power plants through economic in operations methods.

GETTING THE NEWS

Some months ago the Hearst International Service made the statement that the Times makes now, that the privileges of the British and Allied cables for news purposes had been restored to the International.

The statement was promptly denied by the chief censor of Canada.

There are but two great news distributing agencies in the country with recognized and established foreign connections, the United Press for afternoon papers and the Associated Press for morning papers, and no one has ever yet had to explain or apologize for either.

Sure the International has a news service—who can doubt it! and it provides its readers with frequent "scops" as witness the astounding tale of a few days ago of the possible purchase of the British liquor industry by the British government, a subject second only in importance to the prevalence of the festive jackrabbits in the Idaho sagebrush and of such deep concern to all other newspapers that not one of them paid the slightest attention to it!

Probably the Times would have us believe that the international service never was in court at all in the matter of the charges of acquiring and selling the other fellow's news!

HEAVY CRIST OF BUSINESS KEEPS COUNCIL BUSY

CITY ADMINISTRATION TAKES ACTION IN REGARD TO WATERWORKS OPERATION

Action in respect to various details of the construction of Twin Falls' new waterworks system and its operation occupied the time of the city council until a late hour at its meeting Monday night. The council adjourned until Thursday evening, May 9, when it will convene to consider the proposition of increasing salaries in practically all of the departments of the city administration.

Adopt Postoffice Rates

Recommendation of the water committee as to the rates to be charged for water delivered to the larger consumers through meters was adopted by the council. The rates adopted were recommended after the committee had taken into consideration the rates for similar water deliveries in more than 20 cities of the intermountain region, and are identical with those charged in Postoffice territory where charge of eight cents per thousand gallons is made in Postoffice against consumers of more than 100,000 and less than 200,000 gallons per month, charge of seven cents per 100,000 will be made against Twin Falls consumers of this class.

Under the new meter rates consumers of less than 20,000 gallons of water per month will pay 20 cents per thousand gallons; those using up to 20,000 gallons will pay 15 cents per thousand gallons; those using up to 50,000 gallons will pay 10 cents per thousand gallons; those using up to 100,000 gallons will pay 7 cents per thousand gallons, and those using over 200,000 gallons will pay 5 cents per thousand gallons.

Will Enforce Penalty

The council also concurred in the recommendation of the water committee that a penalty of $100 be assessed for the monthly charge should be added to the account of those consumers who are delinquent in their payment for water after the tenth day of the month.

The city clerk was authorized to acquire the water works system by deed through meters back the time the city took possession of the water works system on April 1, 1917.

Inspection at the foundry in Birmingham, Alabama, of four tensile cast iron pipes to be used in the new Twin Falls water works system was authorized by the council to Hunt & Company of Chicago, from among several applicants for the duty.

Buy Filter Plant Site

The city clerk was authorized, upon receipt of deed and abstract to draw a warrant in payment at the rate of $500 per acre for 200 acres of land to be used as the site for the filtration plant to be installed. The land in question is situated adjoining and immediately to the west of the present reservoir site. Walter Hanson is the owner of the property to be purchased by the city.

A petition of property owners for the opening of Adams street through the Moorman addition was referred to the street committee; with the recommendation that the petition be granted.

Authorize Spur Crossings

Under suspension of the rule requiring three readings, the council passed an ordinance permitting of the extension of a railway spur track across Fifth, Fourth and Fifth streets south in the block between Third and Fourth streets. Action was taken in this matter upon request of G. D. Thomas and T. J. Woods who are the owners of property contiguous to the proposed extension of the tracks which will be improved as warehouse sites.

To Improve Addition

H. E. Freeland of the Postoffice Security Trust company, sales agent for the Blue Lakes addition, received the assurance of the council that sewer pipes which it is proposed to install in that addition will conform to requirements if laid at a depth of six feet.

Wanted: A Wife

By OSBORN JONES

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Paul Bolton glanced at the dozen or so freshly typed letters on his desk toward five in the afternoon on New Year's eve he reflected that they were the last letters dated 1917 that he would ever sign. Therefore the mechanical act of affixing his signature would be somewhat more momentous than that performance usually was. It would be in some slight measure epochal, because it registered the passage of another year. Therefore he took the pen from the pen tray with rather more than usual care and dipped it in the heavy glass ink bottle that lay before him on his monster mahogany desk. Drawing the top letter on the pile to him he started to sign, but the pen made no mark. Irritation immediately supplied any interest that he might have felt in the situation. It was intensely conspiring. The ink bottle had been allowed to go dry and only a gummy mass of metallic black showed in the bottom of the inkwell. It was not unusual, perhaps, he reflected, that the president of the great concern of Blank & Bridges—his whose time was worth to that concern some twenty thousand dollars a year—should have to waste that precious money for a pen that was empty. Every modern conference of efficiency in business methods had been installed in his office—there were silent typewriters and automatic letter openers and a girls' lunch room and employees' insurance and summer bouses—all the result of his desire to slow consideration for his employees—and yet he—Paul Bolton—had to fret himself dry after day about such things as empty ink bottles, unworked desks and chairs, unshined drinking glasses and unlit cigar bottles. He was tired from an extremely trying week and so instead of rising in wrath and storming at office boys, secretaries, stenographers and every one else who came to his voice—Paul Bolton was quite capable of having expressed his feelings in that way—he was filled with self-pity. No one really cared enough for him to spare him those annoyances. He went to the photograph cabinet that no one noticed that happened to be filled and signed the letters dejectedly.

Then he went to his nearby apartment where he regaled in bachelor supremacy—and his experience there showed him again that no one really cared. And there no fresh flowers. Bolton especially liked to have yellow daffodils and jonquils in his rooms on cold, raw winter nights and he had told his Jap so on more than one occasion. The lights in his room were not lighted. The Jap explained that no coal could be got. Well, the Jap ought to have got a skatful somewhere. If he had cared for him as much as he seemed he would have got a skatful of some kind. And dinner wasn't exactly what he wanted, and his slippers hadn't been warmed and the water was too cold. The Jap ought to have known by that time that he didn't like ice water.

So it was that the next day when Bolton began to think about New Year's resolutions, he registered two resolves, better yet important. To get a really efficient private secretary—a young woman who would care enough to get his letters warmed, filled, and to get a wife. A wife would see to the joggals and the slippers he was sure.

Before a month had passed Bolton had achieved one of his resolutions. He had had exclusive of his own agency a young woman of unusual merit—Alice Blair—who had proved herself to be worth considerably more than the forty dollars a week that she had demanded. So Bolton's days were peaceful with an absence of confusion and irritation. Miss Blair seemed to get inside his mind and find out just what he wanted done before he had time to formulate it even in his own head. He said she always did things with perfect ease. She didn't have to fill the inkwells or dust the desk, but—what showed her forty-dollars-a-week value—she saw to it that the office boys did. It was always that way with her. She never seemed to be especially busy and yet everything was done.

But Bolton still had no wife and the Jap did not improve. Another Jap would have been better. Bolton said it to get a wife who could make his cup of happiness complete. And yet there were wives and wives. The wife he wanted was not like those of any of his men friends. In the first place, would have to be companionable and sympathetic and stimulating when he was weary from the office grind and then she would have to regard her task of being his wife and home maker as seriously as he regarded his business of being president of Blank & Bridges. Bolton began accepting invitations to dinners and dances in the hope of finding his purgation but he was always unsuccessful. It was discouraged in the accomplishment of his second resolution, so, availing in the achievement of the first, he got into the habit of spending more and more time in his office, going home to his apartment and his Jap only for hurried meals and short sleep. He first went on he sometimes imagined he was completely happy, so rejected was he in Alice Blair. But in time the extra hours at the office began to tell on his health. He really needed the home life if he was to keep up his mental vigor and good health. He sometimes wondered whether the extra hours that Miss Blair had to work—for she always stayed at her post whenever he was at the office—were not telling on her, too. But she never complained and she seemed always in the pink of condition.

One day Bolton began wondering about Alice Blair. He wondered why she did all this for him—whether it was just the result of her training plus a keen conscience or if he had been attracted by the forty dollars a week that she had demanded? Perhaps it was. But the effect it produced was the same—it really did seem as if some one cared now and that, after all, Bolton concluded, was what made the big difference. Still he kept asking himself, did Miss Blair care? How did she keep up her strength and courage for the long hours? There were a 'hundred' petty home and social duties that usually distracted his own employees—had Miss Blair none of those?

Mr. Bolton's last question was answered one day when he chanced to look through the cartons for the outgoing mail of the week when he had returned unknown to her, after dinner at night. He came upon the duplicate of a letter of a personal nature, yet before he had realized what he was doing he read it. It was simply an order to one of the morning papers for the insertion of a "help wanted" advertisement. This was the advertisement:

"Wanted: A young business woman wants to get in touch with a young woman whose duties will be similar to those of a wife to a busy man. That is, she must be—dressed, agreeable, young business with the willingness to take seriously the task of making a small apartment a real home. She must not be a good housewife, but she must see that it is done without confusion—and without complaint. She must have the instinctive knack of attending to the little things, combined with the ability to be interested in the really big things. For such a young woman a good home and a fair remuneration will be given."

Mr. Bolton read then re-read the paragraph. What occurred to him first was that he contained a perfect description of his own ideal of a wife who should be—and it was Alice Blair's ideal. Only it was Alice Blair's idea of the companion she wanted, not the companion she wanted to be. Still, she understood. So that he realized that with such an ideal woman at home it would be possible to endure the strain of business worries that would otherwise be unendurable. Apparently the letter advertising for such a companion had gone out. Bolton wondered what results would come of it. He must wished that the Jap, might reach the wife he was looking for in some such quick-courtesy manner. Then he decided to speak to Alice about it—perhaps, perhaps, she cared enough.

Bolton came to the point rather abruptly.

"I had thought the most important thing in the world was to have a perfect secretary," he told her the next day when he had called her to his office. "Now I have decided that a perfect wife is much more important. Fardon me for reading your advertisement—I see you understand part of my own ideal for such a companion—she must be a real companion, Alice, and I don't want a girl who'll put on business manner to a boyish, pleading tone that Alice had never observed before.

Alice blushed and the blush seemed to tell Bolton that she really did care for something beside the forty dollars a week.

"If it only because I would be a congenial companion, and a good housewife—only because I'd keep the wheels running smoothly in your home as I have in your office, is that all?"

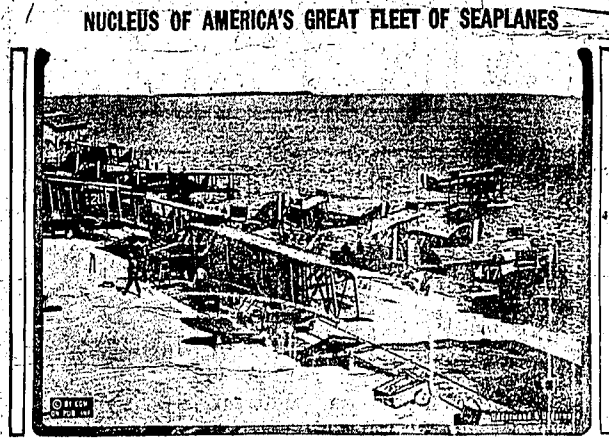

Then suddenly Bolton wondered how it had ever seemed as though those things could really have been paraded. All he could see was the shadow that hung beneath Alice's downcast eyes, the drooping corners of her lips and the graceful lines of the small, determined little chin.

"Alice," he said a little huskily, "I'd want you to marry me if you were the world's housewife in the world. Somehow I see now why so many men do marry the women; they do—I suppose they love them as I love you."

And so in spite of the first developments of the year Bolton filed the second half of his resolution instead of the first.

Males Have Proud Record

The records of the marine corps show that it took part in practically all the operations of the Mexican war; and in the great assault at Chapultepec the storming party was led by Major Twigg and Reynolds of the marine corps. Later we find these same marines which fought in Mexico marching through the capital of Japan under Commodore Perry who had opened up that ancient empire to modern civilization.

WATCH HORSES ATTACKED BY RABID DOGS

GOVERNMENT TRAPPER IN HOUSE CREEK REGION HAS EXCITING EXPERIENCE

Two horses, known to have been bitten by rabid dogs, are isolated on the farm of the owner, L. C. Wagge, three miles west and one mile north of Castleford, where they are being kept under surveillance of inspectors of the bureau of animal industry. The horses were bitten Wednesday last week. The owner immediately contacted with Dr. W. A. Sullivan, inpector in charge of the bureau of animal industry investigations in Idaho, at Twin Falls.

Symptoms May Be Delayed
Dr. Sullivan, with G. D. Blahop, another inspector, investigated the case and viewed the animals Saturday and then they established none of the symptoms of rabies. Such symptoms may be delayed after 14 days from the day of exposure or may be delayed for as long as six months, Dr. Sullivan states.

Dogs Attack Master
Wagge's two year old pair has been in the employ of the federal government trapping coyotes and other prairie animals in the region of Devil creek and Salmon river in the southwestern section of Twin Falls county. The attack upon the horses which were isolated was made by three dogs owned by Wagge while he was on a trapping excursion in the region of House creek. The dogs first attacked their master, springing at him from the rear and springing a lankish rear which he wore. Wagge jumped into his wagon. Wages killed two of the dogs. The third dog escaped, and wandered about probably for not more than 24 hours before death ended its sufferings. One of the horses was bitten on the hind foot and the other on the shoulder, deep lacerations being inflicted in each instance.

Two weeks ago, another horse owned by Wagge developed symptoms of rabies and died within three days.

Coyotes Spread Diseases
Wagge is of the opinion that his dogs contracted the mauling from rabid coyotes. It was his habit to attack and kill coyotes which had been caught in traps set by their master and rabies among coyotes in this region is reported to be prevalent this spring.

Government bulletins say regarding the symptoms of rabies in horses that in general there is a stage of melancholia lasting two or three days, followed by a period of excitement which lasts two or three days more, followed by paralysis. Death usually occurs within ten days after the first symptoms occur. Horses afflicted with rabies are often more violent than cattle suffering from the malady, and they are prone to bite their handlers or to devour anything that may be within reach.

Known to Ancients
Rabies is one of the oldest diseases known. In the fourth century B. C., it was described by Aristotle, who wrote: "Dogs suffer from a madness which renders them in a state of frenzy, and in this condition become also attacked by rabies."

Experiences of Twin Falls Engineer in Foreign Service

One of the most complete and interesting accounts of experiences of members of the American expeditious forces in France that has yet come to Twin Falls, is that written by Lieutenant E. J. Ahern of the Twenty-fifth Infantry of engineers, a brother of J. P. Ahern of this city, and formerly employed here as a civil engineer associated with Captain J. M. Burkett. The letter, which was written as the writer explains, in odd moments on the spot of greater and what it shall be forwarded to the other persons to whom he had to write six days, by the light of a candle plus a battered and smoky railroad lantern, is addressed to 20 or more relatives and friends. It has been received by Mr. Ahern, with instructions as to how it shall be forwarded to the other persons to whom it is addressed. The second installment follows:

Strength of Discipline
As I write this there is one of those terrific German drives against the English and as usual the Hunns are following men in mass and are being moved down like grass before a reaper. No doubt you wonder how they can get men to do this, you think that it is love for the Kaiser, just as I did, perhaps you think it is pure valor. Not for all the honors that could be piled upon me would I detract one syllable of honor from those heroic defenders of Verdun, Ypres, Somme and the Marne, but there is something more than bravery behind it all. It is in something that is the very heart of the matter. It is the fact that most of the soldiers of it in either side of an American dollar, a French franc, an English sovereign and a German Mark) is discipline and during my short training I began to understand why Germany has such a vast machine.

Perhaps those of you who have not been fortunate enough to be a soldier (I am continually apologizing to General Pershing and his regulars for calling myself one) can quite comprehend how men can be sent over a shell swept front with such a firm and steady front in formation with 500 men. There you stand—a nothing—absolutely nothing. You are not even an individual, you are nothing but an organism with a name in place of a number. You are permitted to have a name not as a mark of individuality but as a military necessity. In common every day language a man who is a good soldier is nothing less than a "nut"—this remember is not said with one thought of detestation to the man or the name but is merely my definition of what becomes of you in the army and here is how it comes about.

Foundation of Wars
In reality all military manuals will find that continuous drills are the main and the simplest and the most SUBSTANTIOUS mark that would well and do a little thinking over it) SUBMISSION (also ponder for hours over that word) to MILITARY CONTROL. Friends those four words when you fully comprehend them will throw you into the sea and you will be able to see the thousands on a battlefield, how they face machine guns and French 75's, seemingly without a whimper. These four words are the foundation of all wars and if you will bear with me a moment I will prove it to you.

The reason Germany has such a wonderful war machine IS NOT, love of the fatherland, patriotism or the Kaiser. I do not mean to offend any who have strains of German blood coursing through their veins but did any of you ever know a soldier who is quick thinking, quick acting, high strength, automatically or rapid acting German? Possibly one or two. What you have heard and know of Germany is that they are ponderous, heavy thinkers, slow in action and thought. Listen to Wagner's music for two minutes and you will hear the heavy thunder. German poetry is written with a sledge hammer, her sculpturing with a broadaxe, her painting with a broom and her books with a crow-bar. All this means heavy strypp (excess the world) mindless people. Take the French, they are brilliant, individualists, self thinkers, independent, their strategy is spectacular because we are used to playing safe with men, all business. Germany today is proving this by letting up on the drive on the French and are trying out the English. Now who is the one who will give way to submission first, the individualist or the fellow who always wants to get the job of the other fellow's elbow as he goes into war, the German. That's submission and don't forget it. Who submits to control first the ravine, mighty western canyon, the high string race horse or the big plodding truck comes out of the farm. We all know the rule out of this as he has a personality all of his own.

On Road to Submission
They start you off in the American camps by giving you that uniform the women go wild over and you yourself feel proud of and try your darndest to keep clean. Poor fool, it is nothing more than the first coat of paint on so many sticks in a picket fence—that uniform puts the millifan on a basis with the bobo, it matches the helmet with the entrenchment, it makes her want to get the job of the other fellow's elbow as he goes into war, the German. That's submission and don't forget it. Who submits to control first the ravine, mighty western canyon, the high string race horse or the big plodding truck comes out of the farm. We all know the rule out of this as he has a personality all of his own.

EVERY WOMAN CAN HELP NEXT LIBERTY LOAN

Woman's Committee for Twelfth Federal Reserve District to Form an Organization

By MRS. A. S. BALDWIN
(Chairman Women's Liberty Loan Committee, Twelfth Federal Reserve District)

Now that we are actively in the war and our men are in the front line trenches; are being killed; are being gassed; are being maimed for life, it would seem that every woman in the land should be in the front ranks of the civilian workers to help the men in the war.

Each of us has her part to play, however small it may be, and whether it be great or small is of importance that each shall perform her part to the utmost of her ability.

Some can buy Liberty Bonds, some can influence others to buy. Perhaps some can only help by conserving the use of food and clothing and by economizing in household expenditures, thus liberating and augmenting the essentials which must be sent "over there" for the use of our army and for the destitute civilian population of our allies.

In whatever way each woman of this Twelfth Federal Reserve District can help, let her do her utmost that we who are farthest from the front may sustain our part of the struggle, and keep for ourselves and our children the blessings and privileges we have inherited, and thus make it possible to win like blessings for the millions who are now in actual bondage. We should not only save to help, but the great lesson to be learned also is to do so without non-essential and to make sacrifices so that the labor which produces what we consider to be luxuries may be made available to produce those things which are actually essential for the support and safety of those who are carrying the burden of this unprecedented struggle for freedom and democracy.

The aim of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee is to form an organization which shall make the woman in every home in the land realize these conditions and her responsibility that the messages shall not each her only from one direction, but from many, so that she shall be brought to a full realization of her responsibility.

KILLED AS AUTO LANDS IN CREEK

are absolutely tearing away whatever sense of independence you ever had from yourself. You stand in long lines with heavy packs on your backs, the colonel is coming to inspect you. He comes along, looks at your shoes, your hat, your leggings and then last place a colonel ever looks to find anything in your face. As he comes close to you you are supposed to smile, you grin up with a click, he will squirt at it, if it is clean he will say, "very good, but if it is dirty a fellow behind him with a book and a pencil will write, "poor potatoes for a week." Right here comes in the city police of yourself when you make a mistake and you are delighted if you can whip through it perfect. Gradually you begin to talk of the mistakes you made, you do it mechanically, and the funny part of it is that you get into it and so on and all this time those little "books" you used to have for home, business, your ambitions and your friends grow shorter every day; they are giving away to talk of guns, bayonets, bayonets, revolvers, etc. You are taking on the form of a cog in a machine. The next process is to line you up and it beats the devil how eager a fellow is to look clean, have his shoes polished and his guns just right. You

The Confessions of a German Deserter

Written by a Prussian Officer Who Participated in the Ravaging and Pillaging of Belgium.

CHAPTER XIII

The inhabitants of Cornay who had remained, mostly old people, were all gathered in a barn because of the fear of shells. Here they were guarded by soldiers. At the moment when the attack always occurred at a certain hour, our commander thought that somebody in the village was in communication with the enemy by means of a concealed telephone...

When we returned from our promenade, as we called the nightly excursion, we were sent to our places in the trenches. There we were used for every kind of duty. One evening we were called up to the front at a certain point from the French the previous day. We had to build machine guns and place them.

Our camp at Cornay-en-Dermeols was continually under heavy bombardment. Finally rest became impossible. The German soldiers had started the roofs of the houses and penetrated to the cellars. The civilians were taken away after several had been killed by shells. After about ten weeks in this country we were sent another part of the front. Our destination was kept from us.

At the depot at Challenge we entered a train waiting for us. It consisted of second and third class coaches. The train rolled slowly through the beautiful country...

to a Red Cross establishment, where we were banqueted and given water. The headquarters of the Hohenzollerns here were located at Dun-sur-Meuse. The ladies of the Red Cross treated us cordially. We asked them if all passing troops were as well treated as we had been.

"Oh, yes," a young woman answered, "but only a few come here. The crown prince, however, has an special attachment for the prisoners."

After a hard march we arrived at the front positions. In a veritable labyrinth of trenches, filled with water, we had the utmost difficulty finding our way about. Finally we arrived at the front. The French were only ten meters away and before we had been there two days we took part in a hand grenade encounter.

Some distance back we established a pioneer depot. Twenty-five of our men did nothing but assemble hand grenades. We were soon settled and ready for an emergency.

In camp we were divided among various troops. They showed us how the warfare waged at this front differed from the warfare we had learned. There was nothing except hand grenades being thrown, mines throwing and light patrol battles. This went on day after day and night after night, with 40 hours in the trench and a 2-hour rest.

The entire forest of Argonne was blown to pieces when we arrived. Everywhere was artillery, which maintained a fire on the villages behind the enemy's positions.

CHAPTER XIV The entire forest of Argonne was blown to pieces when we arrived. Everywhere was artillery, which maintained a fire on the villages behind the enemy's positions.

only he was not as well supplied as we were. A substitute first lieutenant, in charge of the battery, stood nearby. One of my comrades ordered him to go before the war, was considered a human fiend. These three called Moore Leaf by the soldiers, were far more despised by most of the men than were the French civilians, which sought our miserable lives.

"This day was designated for a storming attack and we were obliged to be in our positions at seven o'clock in the morning. Promptly at 8:30 the order was given to attack. Pioneers led the way. They were supplied with hand grenades. These weekly attacks were opened half an hour before the infantry went over by a storm of artillery fire.

Promptly at eight o'clock the artillery started. The first three shells struck a ditch, but the following ones hit fairly, that is, right in the French trenches. Once the artillery had the proper range whole masses of batteries descended upon them with admirable exactness. The cries of the wounded were heard once more, a sign that many had been killed.

An artillery officer stood as observer in the foreground and directed the fire by phone. Promptly at 8:30 o'clock the artillery fire stopped and we attacked. The eleventh company of the Sixty-seventh regiment, of which I spoke before, came under the fire of its own machine guns and 15 of its men were killed after they had only proceeded a few steps outside the trench.

Dead and wounded men lay among the branches and the trees everywhere on the front. Every man was able to run sped forward to reach the enemy trench as quickly as possible. A part of the enemy defended itself desperately in a trench filled with water and mud. A terrible hand-to-hand fight resulted. We stood in water up to our knees.

Men, severely wounded, lay in the mud, holding their mouths and noses above the water. During the fighting they were trampled more deeply into the mud and their feet for long could not see where they were going; we could only "roll up" the entire trench.

The section was fortified with all possible haste. Once more we had acquired at a heavy cost in human life the most important position of the French mountain artillery. They were so named because they were drawn by mules. They are guns of flat trajectory, kept from 50 to 100 meters behind the enemy lines. The shells fell very far from the target.

Presently the "jackknives" went into action. These were the guns of the French mountain artillery. They were so named because they were drawn by mules. They are guns of flat trajectory, kept from 50 to 100 meters behind the enemy lines.

It was winter and very cold. The trenches had been filled with water and were now nothing except deep ditches of mud. Under these conditions, through the ice-cold nights, our routine consisted of 48 hours duty in the trenches. Every week a storming attack was made though the losses which were suffered were of proportion to the enormous losses. In all of the four months I was in the Argonne forests we gained 400 meters. The following day we were ordered to leave a price was paid in lives for this little piece of France.

Each regiment had its own cemetery. There was the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Infantry regular, the Sixty-third Infantry, the Fifty-third Infantry, the One Hundred and Fifth Infantry regular, and the One Hundred and Fifty Hirschberg battalion. On the day we were relieved from duty in the Argonne forests there were more dead in these cemeteries than there were survivors of the several regiments. The Sixty-seventh regiment had more than 2,000 dead. All the victims were members of that unit except a few pioneers, which had been assigned to duty with it. There was no day without some loss of life, and on the days when the storming attacks were made, death had an extremely large harvest.

Each day in the Argonne levied its toll of victims, sometimes many, sometimes only a few. It is only natural that the morale of the soldiers should have been affected by these circumstances. With the same difference that the men had once gone to their work to support their wives and children they now went into action. This business of killing had become daily routine and we regarded our present situation, the crown prince and the commander of the Sixteenth army corps, Lieutenant General von Mudra, favored more.

The troops in the Argonne forest belonged to the Sixteenth corps, the Thirty-third army corps, and the Fifty-third army corps. Neither the crown prince nor von Mudra had ever been in the trenches. One of the members on the crown prince's staff was the old field mar-

Each Day Levied Its Toll of Victims was especially enough water for drinking purposes and very nothing of water for washing their clothes. Our hair and beards were long and when we were given some hours of rest the lice would not let us sleep. While we were in the trenches the bullets did not do much damage but daily men were killed by indirect fire. The thousands which whizzed through the air every minute flew over our heads.

Whether or not dum-dum bullets were made in the munition factories I cannot say. I suspect they were. However, I did see many dum-dum bullets which were used by the soldiers. The points were filed off from German market shells so that the nickel covering was perforated, barring the lead filling. The bullet flattened when it struck its object. If, for instance, it entered a man's arm, the explosive charge in it would so shatter the arm as to blow it entirely off and leave it hanging by the skin.

German soldiers were frequently seen supplying themselves with dum-dum bullets in the trenches, preparing to inflict terrible wounds. On January 5, 1918, the Germans attacked on their entire front of the Argonne forest sector and several hundred prisoners were taken. The hand-to-hand fight continued until six o'clock in the evening. A few prisoners and myself found ourselves in a bit of trench held by eight Frenchmen. It was impossible to retire so we accepted the unequal fight. Fortunately we were well supplied with hand grenades. We cut the fuses short so that they would explode as quickly as possible. I threw one among the eight soldiers. Before the men could get out of the way of the first, the second bullet was shot in the mouth. That left three. They turned and tried to flee. In such moments as these one is in a great rage and foregoes danger entirely. We were very close to our enemies now, still in the trench when the last man snuffed and fell.

SOLDIERS IN FRANCE WON'T VOTE THIS YEAR

(By United Press) WASHINGTON, May 8.—American soldiers in France will not be permitted to vote in the coming election, the war department has definitely decided. Men in training in this country will be allowed to vote if their states wish to collect the ballots.

Proposition Impracticable "The matter has been thoroughly canvassed on the ground in France, and in the light of the effort made to collect the soldier vote in the fall of 1917," Crowl wrote. "These men are entitled to have a voice in the affairs of the country, of course. But I also believe they would be the last ones to insist on exercising the franchise because I am certain they must clearly see such a course constitutes an impediment to military efficiency."

POLYGAMY IS CHARGE AGAINST BURLEY MAN

PODAGELLO OFFICERS NAB OREAR. C. FARR, ACCUSED OF HAVING TWO MAINTENANCE WIVES

Charles C. Farr, alias Charles E. Smith, was brought here from Burley Sunday night by Guy Nelson, a deputy from Sheriff Mabey's office, and will be held to answer to the charge of polygamy, says the Post-Register Tribune. It is stated that Farr, who secured a marriage license at the county clerk's office June 22, and who was married by Justice of the Peace Felix Van Benth on that day to Virginia Wayne, has a wife and four children living in North Ogden and it was upon the advice of the Ogden authorities that he was arrested.

It is stated that Farr, alias Smith, and Miss Wayne came here from Logan, Utah, last Monday and upon making application for the marriage license, the latter stated their residence as Twin Falls. They were granted the license, and after being married by Judge Van Routh left for Burley. It is also stated that Miss Wayne's true name is Dursford and she was brought back to Burley with Farr and will be held as the principal witness in the case. Farr will have his hearing on the above charge some time Tuesday.

The New York American's critic said: "George Bronson Howard's melodramas a veritable deluge of events." The New York Sun on the occasion of first showing said: "The main virtue of 'Come Through,' aside from its exploits manifestly devoid of its technical photographic side, lies in its originality."

GAS CAMPAIGN RAGING BOTH SIDES USING IT

American and German Forces in Fierce Bombardment—"Mustard" Shells Used Freely by Enemy with High Explosives from Both Sides—Taking of Boche Prisoners of Frequent Occurrence.

(United Press Staff Correspondent) CORPS heroically stuck to his post in a shell hole, rendering first aid until he was exhausted. He threw off his gas mask in an effort to work faster, as mustard gas principally affects the eyes temporarily. The American patrols are bringing in German prisoners every night. They also are developing the deep hatred for the treachery of the boche. The Americans took one prisoner who was loaded down with hand grenades. He tried to escape but was overpowered. The German infantry is displaying signs of nervousness, increasing its fire and sending up numerous rockets at night.

(United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FLOARBY.—The rear German organizations have been bathed in gas, in retaliation for the gassing of the American areas. The guns roared all night, says a dispatch of May 6. The boches threw over more than 15,000 "ypelite" mustard gas shells Saturday night, gassing one village and all roads in the vicinity. Subsequently, there was a three-hour bombardment with high explosives, the American troops keeping under cover in their newly constructed dugouts. The concentrated German gas attack was like a rain of gigantic bad eggs.

Lieutenant Morgan of the medical corps heroically stuck to his post in a shell hole, rendering first aid until he was exhausted. He threw off his gas mask in an effort to work faster, as mustard gas principally affects the eyes temporarily. The American patrols are bringing in German prisoners every night. They also are developing the deep hatred for the treachery of the boche. The Americans took one prisoner who was loaded down with hand grenades. He tried to escape but was overpowered. The German infantry is displaying signs of nervousness, increasing its fire and sending up numerous rockets at night.

CAPT. ARCHIE ROOSEVELT WON'T BE LAME; THANKS TO SURGEON

By FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE—Unheralded save by its accomplishments, and unused save by those who have come to it unaimed or ill had have been healed, the army medical corps is adding every day to the fighting force of America which must ultimately crush German militarism.

From the field hospitals immediately back of the front lines, in the evacuation hospitals, and on to the rear in the best hospitals, you will find army medical corps officers and men.

It was an army medical corps surgeon, a major from New York, who operated on Capt. Archie Roosevelt, after the former president's son was wounded. Capt. Roosevelt's arm was badly shattered. A piece of shrapnel went through his knee. Ferguson said the captain would have a stiff knee the rest of his life.

But he won't.

Applying all his professional skill, this surgeon, working in an operating room as completely equipped as any in a hospital at home, cut away the crushed and torn tissues in the captain's arm and leg. An operation on the knee is always delicate.

Upon the success of this operation depended Roosevelt's physical fitness for the future. It was a triumph for this major, who must remain unnamed. A few minutes after it was completed Capt. Roosevelt looked up into the eyes of a French general, heard him tell of the pride of France in having such an American fighting with her sons, and received the Croix de Guerre. He now is on the road to recovery.

The United Press correspondent saw this major-surgeon shortly after the operation was completed. He stepped from the side of a patient whose wounds were being dressed under his supervision, smiling and affable.

"The captain's wounds are rather serious," he said "but not fatal. It is too early to tell just what the outcome will be."

A few days later the major's smile was even brighter. Captain Roosevelt could not be doing better, he said. Progress was fine. But it was not until some time later, through another medical officer, that it was learned that the major had performed successfully—an operation that would rouse the envy of any surgeon working under conditions of peace.

To the major it was all in the day's work. He merely was doing his duty. Any other soldier brought to the hospital would receive the same expert attention. The story of the wounding of Capt. Archie has been sent "round the world." This is the first time the story of the major who saved him from being a cripple has been told.

To preserve eggs when cheap for winter use.

Production of infertile eggs as soon as the breeding season is over.

Disposing of surplus cockerels as broilers to conserve grain.

To discourage the marketing of all profitable hens of the general-purpose class until the end of their second year and of the Mediterranean class until the end of their third laying year.

To discourage the marketing of all thrifty pullets as broilers.

To encourage backyard poultry keeping, especially among city and suburban dwellers, thereby utilizing table scraps for the production of fowls and eggs for home use.

POINTS OUT WAR AIMS

That the ideal which brought victory to the American colonies in the War of the Revolution, and which stamped out slavery in the Civil war, are again at stake, not only in this country but throughout the world, was the theme of an address by Gov. Charles S. Whitman of New York at the Washington birthday banquet of the Croire Coeur club at Peoria, Ill.

"This is not a war on the German people," he said, "nor is Germany merely making war on the people of other lands. This is a combat between ideals of government... Backing, broken, but unconquered; England, struggling as she has never struggled before; the sons of France, slaying as they bleed and smiling as they die, are just as truly fighting for an ideal as were the ragged Continentals at Saratoga or at Yorktown, or the men whose bloody feet left their impress in the snow at Valley Forge. I know that there was a Germany in the past that her sons and daughters have had every reason to love—a Germany of poetry and song, of literature, art, science and education, of folk song and folk lore and folk love—but that Germany is no more. It has given place to a Germany of the iron heel and the clanking saber, to a mighty nation dedicated to the proposition that 'might makes right'—that there is no such thing as freedom of thought, freedom of heart or freedom of life; that its power to slaughter is the final test of a nation's greatness; that slavery is the natural and proper condition of the human race."

The Maker of Bandages Red Cross Workers Solve in One Minute the Mystery of the Stony Hearted Mrs. Britt.

By MAXIMILIAN FOSTER Of the Vigilantes.

A diamond is not the hardest thing in the world. A diamond will cut glass and bore through case hardened, tempered chrome steel, but glass and steel—the diamond itself too—are soft compared to some things. The hardest thing in the world is a hard woman. Mrs. Britt was such a woman. I have seen hard women in my time, but never one who was harder. She smiled seldom, and when she smiled it was like the glitter of ice. She spoke infrequently, and when she spoke her speech was the rattle of hail on steel roofing. She did not look as if she had ever wept in her life. Every morning Mrs. Britt appeared at the Red Cross auxiliary in upper Broadway. She was the first to arrive in the morning, the last to leave at night. No one knew much about her, though she was not the sort that makes confidences. But that she was a worker—a hard worker—no one would dispute. Efficiency, as you'd suppose, was a trait of Mrs. Britt's.

His picture was in the locker she wore. Every half hour she would stop her work to look at it. Sometimes, her face white, she would show it to the other workers, winking the anguish that with every waking breath she drew twined hollowly in her mother's heart. One afternoon Mrs. Farlow's oldest daughter came hurrying in. Her face was white. She had just learned that the Mainboiv division had been ordered overca.

Farlow back on her chair; with the other she thrust at her the half-faded bandage. Her tone as grim as her face, she spoke, and again the sound of it was like hail pattering on steel. "You're not thinking of your mother?" There was a murmur of protest. Mrs. Britt heard it, and she flashed a look about her. But when she spoke again it was to Mrs. Farlow she spoke. "Think of your son." "You're not the only mother in this war," she said. "If you thought a little more about them and a little less about yourself you'd be doing something. You'd be helping your son, for one thing!" "Why, what do you mean?" gasped Mrs. Farlow. Mrs. Britt smiled another adamant, icy smile. "Your son wouldn't die for want of care. Any one of those bandages I've seen you ruin might save his life. Any one of them might save the life of some other mother's son!" Mrs. Farlow shrank as if she had been struck. She'd never thought of it that way before. The shame, the grim reserve, which had clanked Mrs. Britt seemed for a moment to quit her. "I have no son," she said, her flinty voice biting out the words. "I had one, but he died at Quantico. It was in the Spanish war," snapped Mrs. Britt, "and there were no bandages—nothing. That's why he died. That's why I'm here now. It's to keep other women—mothers—from becoming the sort of woman I am." A harsh, brittle laugh escaped her. "Oh, I know what you think of me. I've heard what you said. Well, said Mrs. Britt, "my son wouldn't have died like that maybe if I hadn't sat around stitching and mending, never doing a thing."

CALENDAR IN HEAD

Good Method Now That So Few Are Being Printed.

Little Mental Arithmetic Required by System Which is Explained Here—Little Rhyme to Be Committed to Memory. Calculators for 1918 are going to be scarce, partly on account of the paper shortage and partly because advertisers are cutting down expenses. This led to the invention of the "calendar in head" method, having made it a rule that their agents will have to print their own calendars. It used to be that one was flooded with calendars of all sorts and sizes, but now the market is so tight that the majority of them require an amount of mental arithmetic that is beyond the powers of the man in a hurry. Why buy a calendar if one can get the whole thing in one's head? There are several ways in which one can figure out the day of the week upon which any day of the month will fall, but the majority of them require an amount of mental arithmetic that is beyond the powers of the man in a hurry. Here is a simple calendar arranged by a memory expert. It consists of twelve words arranged as a rhyme. These twelve words are indexes for the twelve months; and they are three in a line, so as to make it easier to get at the month by taking them three at a time.

Time Files Fast, always ready to hand; see Time Think, Always! Time's Fooled Away. The initials of these words give us the day of the week upon which the first of the months will fall in 1918, taking them in order. T stands for Tuesday, Th for Thursday, S is for Saturday and A for Sunday. M and W are for Monday and Wednesday respectively. It is obvious that if one knows upon what day of the week the first day of any month will fall, one has only to add seven to it to discover the dates of all similar days of the week in that month. If the 1st of August falls on a Thursday, the 8th, 15th, 22nd and 29th must all be Thursdays. Now suppose you have committed this little rhyme to memory and wish to know upon what day of the week the Fourth of July will fall in 1918. It is the seventh month and the seventh word in our couplet, beginning with the third line, is Men. As M stands for Monday, the 1st of July must be a Monday, so the 4th will be a Thursday. Let us suppose your birthday is March 23. As March is the third month the word is at the end of the first line, and the initial P shows that the 1st of March will be a Friday, if the following Fridays are the 8th, 15th and 22nd your birthday will be on a Saturday in 1918. Suppose it is Christmas day you are looking forward to. December is the last of the twelve months and the Yellow Gasoline as Good as White. If motorists realized that their preference against yellowish gasoline was unwarranted the gasoline supply might be increased considerably. In the early days of the oil industry poor refining methods were responsible for the production of yellowish kerosenes and gasolines, which were sometimes dangerous. This led to the public demand that gasoline be "water white". A woman appeared on a balcony wearing a heavy dress on her head. She thought the raid was over, but took that precaution against shrapnel. Bull Associations Valuable. Bull associations should be a potent factor in the control of contagious diseases, according to the annual report of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture. One of the associations, of which 130,000, there were 20 actively operating in 11 states, has disseminated all cattle that reacted to the tuberculin test, which is a test for tuberculosis. It was successful in avoiding contagious and infectious diseases of all kinds.

Literary Critic. Little six-year-old Allan, son of a bookish family, had mastered reading so efficiently that his first glimpse of storyland were growing hay in his mother's "Mittred" was showing her her new book today, and it's the queerest thing you ever saw! Why, it just says: "Is it a cat? It is a cat. Can the cat print? And a lot of stuff like that." "Where I was too little to say so, but it didn't seem to me the style was a bit jumpy." FLIER BELIEVED IN ENEMY HANDS

CAPTAIN JAMES N. HALL OF AMERICAN FORCES CAPTURED IN FIGHT

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LOBBARNE, May 6.—Captain James Norman Hall, of Colfax, Iowa, has been missing since an aerial combat yesterday morning, between three American and four German airplanes.

The American was 10 miles inside the German frontier, north of Troy, when they spotted the enemy planes and attacked them. Hall was flying at the lowest altitude when the fight started.

All the planes began diving and turning for the advantage of position. A comrade who last saw Hall believed he landed safely inside the German lines and is now a prisoner.

The other two Americans returned safely to their lines. Their last glimpse of their opponents showed the latter still nosediving downward, evidently out of control.

Said Best Men The Americans report that the Germans have sent a new aviation "circus" to this front, composed of the best German stunt fliers, because of the American aerial successes.

This morning Arthur Cunningham, of Boston, attacked a German plane and two others suddenly dropped out of the sky and engaged him. His machine gun stuck but he out-manoeuvred them and got into the position of advantage.

Had Splendid Record Captain J. Norman Hall, who is just past 30, enlisted with the British army at the beginning of the war and served fifteen months in the trenches. He was well known and respected in America, where he wrote a successful book entitled "Kitchener's Mob."

He went to France and joined the Lafayette escadrille, June 23, 1917. Five days later he engaged in a fight with seven German planes and shot down a great height. He was decorated by the French government with the Legation medal and war cross with palms, June 3, 1917.

CIVIL ORDERS NOT APPLICABLE

General Maurice's work as director of military operations formed the link connecting the British government at home with the army commanders in the field. It was General Maurice's duty before his recall to have brought before the prime minister privately any misstatements about the army in the house of commons and not to use the newspapers now for that purpose after his responsibility has ceased.

Much Criticism Here General Maurice's retirement from his post in London was undoubtedly due to a large extent to instantaneous criticism in the United States of his equivocal attitude toward General Foch.

Bennet, a motorcycle courier, drove through five enemy barages to carry out a mission. Connel and McDonough, members of the signal corps, maintained communications with the rear during a gas attack, despite a heavy bombardment. The others were cited for gallantry and efficiency in patrolling.

Inactivity on West Front Proof of Disorganization

German Forces Palpably Nervous with Patching Up Process Taking More Time Than Can Well Be Spared—Many Divisions Wiped Out Entirely, Nearly All Badly Shattered.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE.—The strange quiet reigning on the west front daily furnishes fresh proof of the disorganization of the German armies. The assaults on the Somme and in Flanders have resulted in the necessity of a complete patching-up process attempted to no avail.

Of the total of 206 German divisions (2,472,000 men) in the west, more than 140 have been used in battle without achieving any of the definite results promised the German people. But so many divisions have been wiped out entirely that some have not been completely wiped out. Some have been badly cut up, but others only slightly, so a short rest and a few recruits will make them as good as ever.

For instance, in the 1917 Franco-British west front campaign, the Germans used the equivalent of 200 divisions (2,672,000 men)—exactly 100 divisions more than now on the west front—showing that many divisions are able to appear several times in different parts of the line by a process of rotation and reorganization.

Hindenburg has been hit hard, but by now his reorganization should be about complete. When the weather and other conditions are favorable, there can be no doubt but that he will hit again and hard—though not necessarily on the Somme or the Lys.

FINAL DETAILS SMOOTHED OUT

HINDENBURG MACHINES DECLARED AGAIN IN RUNNING ORDER

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 6.—Hindenburg appears about ready to strike again, unless the signs of the times are wholly deceitful. From various sources it is known the vast machinery composed of roads, railways, bridges, airships, airplanes and military concentrations stand ready while great armies of troops, refitted and refueled, await the pull of the trigger to the catapult which will hurl them into the fray.

My personal computation shows that of 206 enemy infantry divisions (2,472,000 men) on the west front, about 130 are now in the line. Of the remainder, which is in reserve, about 60 were drawn out of recent battles. Of these, about 40 are rested and refitted sufficiently to be ready for action elsewhere in the line.

Eighty Fresh Divisions Twenty-five divisions have taken no part in the offensive. Adding to the above between 16 and 20 divisions in reserve, one arrives at the probable total of more than 80 fully fresh divisions which are now preparing to strike.

Of these, 60 are presently in the line on the same point now as on March 21, with two important qualifications—his troops then were wholly fresh and doped with the infallibility of the German plans, and had the advantage of a long winter oppression of machinery; whereas the new divisions must be undertaken with men doubling their own ability.

ALL RAILROADS INCREASE RATES

PLAN ACTION TO OVERCOME POSSIBLE DEFICIT OF $800,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Increase in freight and passenger rates are being planned by the railroad administration to meet a deficit which threatens to reach $800,000,000 for the year.

While the increase to be asked of the interstate commerce commission has not yet been determined upon, passenger officials here forecast a uniform 2 1/2 cent cut for the bulk of the traffic. Freight rates, it is believed, will be boosted approximately 7 1/2 per cent.

Rate increases are made necessary, it is said, by the vastly greater fuel bill—estimated at from $20,000,000 to $75,000,000 annually—and an increase in the payroll of over $20,000,000 a year.

Added to this has been added a heavy decline in net revenues since January 1, as compared with last year. The terrific weather of January and February is held responsible for the losses.

It was stated authoritatively today that Director General Meadood would turn his attention to the rate and revenue problem immediately after disposing of the Lane wage commission's report and fuel contracts.

Serving in a World at War. We are doing our utmost to serve the public as satisfactorily today as we did before the war upset the commercial world. In the face of greatly increased costs of material we are endeavoring to maintain our plant at the highest point of efficiency. Despite the high cost of labor, we are maintaining full crews that there may be no part of the work slighted or neglected. While the demands of the signal service of our armies have deprived us of many technically trained men, those who remain have spread out to fill the gaps by extra effort. In some places congestion has occurred because we have been unable to secure equipment for relief, but in such cases the traffic is being handled to the full extent of human ability. With the world rocking under the weight of war; with economic conditions unsettled and abnormal, we are striving always to coordinate our efforts to the great problems involved in the winning of the war. We feel that uninterrupted, efficient telephone service is playing a conspicuous part in the forces that will bring ultimate victory. The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co.
