

REGISTRATION HURRIES ALONG ENLISTMENTS

MEN VOLUNTEER AND SELECT BRANCH OF THE SERVICE THEY PREFER—THIRTY FROM HERE

(By United Press)
NEW YORK, June 4.—Declaring to register June 5 all youths between 21 since the last day of military registration, has speeded enlistments in all branches of service all over the nation. Figures obtained from all sections of the United Press vary in the ratios of increase, but in some districts show gains of as high as 600 per cent.

The period allowed for enlistment, under the volunteer system was short, owing to the fact that the training camps are choked with men in some cases, and in all districts are well filled.

New York's enlistments showed a slight gain but do not compare with reports from other parts of the country, particularly the middle west.

Springfield, Ill., reported enlistments have been heavy for six months, but no definite figures were given out. The Chicago district, which is the largest in the country, including most of Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, reported a gain of 33 per cent in army enlistments, with the navy showing no increase of fifty per cent. The increase, it was declared, is growing rapidly in a large percentage.

Both St. Paul and Fargo, N. D., reported increases in navy enlistments.

Men Favor Marine Corps

St. Louis has been setting new records in daily enlistments. The marine corps is favored largely by the new men. Kansas City has speeded its enlistments by 50 per cent. Denver showed only a slight increase.

Lincoln, Nebraska, reported a gain of four hundred per cent in army enlistments, with the navy showing the amazing gain of five hundred per cent.

Eighty to one hundred applicants for enlistments are being received daily by all branches of service in Philadelphia. The majority of these youth are being accepted.

Atlanta reported no perceptible increase.

Navy Popular

The navy's recruiting stations in Seattle have doubled their average, while the army shows a gain of one-third. In Los Angeles the army's gain was 35 per cent, with the marine and navy registering an increase of about 50 per cent. The reason, however, is given as due to enlistment drives.

British and foreign missions in Cleveland report great activity in enlistments as well as American forces. Columbus, Ohio, also reported gains.

Hatting, Pa., has received a volume of 400 per cent and enlistment officers were reported that more time had not been given.

Pittsburg's recruiting was about trebled by the order.

Detroit showed a perceptible gain.

Of the forty-seven enlistments at the local recruiting station during the month of May, thirty were boys who would be affected by the new registration.

TEXT OF NEW ALLIANCE SHOWS GERMAN AIMS

Twenty Year Pact Provides That Austria Answer to Berlin in Military Matters

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, June 4.—Germany is aiming to keep Austria and her oppressed subject states under her yoke in the next generation, this was proven conclusively by diplomat authorities here from the publication of the text of the German-Austrian military pact recently signed at German great headquarters. It provides for a military union, answerable to Germany during the next twenty-five years.

American officials viewed it as meaning largely an intent to keep the Crocho-Slavs and Jugo-Slavs under the Teuton heel. In view of the American repudiation of the cause of these downtrodden folk, it means that even more than before is a victory against Germany and Austria essential.

The state department is already hearing approval of the American expression of sympathy for the peoples under Austro-Hungarian domination.

ENROLLS MEN TO MAN NEW SHIPS

GEORGE C. WILEY IS REPRESENTATIVE HERE FOR MERCHANT MARINE RECRUITING

George C. Wiley, one of the proprietors of the Rexall drug store, corner of Main avenue and Shoshone street, north of here, has been designated by the director of recruiting service as enrolling agent in Twin Falls for the United States shipping board, and is prepared there to enroll young men for training to man the new ships of the merchant marine.

Only young and vigorous American citizens, active born or naturalized, are trained for service in the crews of the new merchant marine. Those who have reached their twenty-first year and have not reached their thirtieth birthday are eligible for training.

Nature of Training

Those accepted are placed on board the training ships as apprentices, and are trained to serve as sailors, firemen, coal-passers, cooks or messmen.

The shipping board recruiting service maintains a squadron of training ships on which men from all parts of the country are trained for service in the new merchant marine. National headquarters are at Boston. Training ships, however, are maintained at other ports, and applicants for training usually are ordered to the port nearest their home, although this rule is not invariably followed.

At the conclusion of their apprenticeship they are shipped on board cargo or passenger vessels, making round-trip voyages between America and foreign ports.

Previous sea-going experience is not necessary to qualify for admission to

MIGHT EMPLOY AIRPLANES ON COAST CITIES

SPECULATION RIFE OVER POSSIBILITIES OF FUTURE GERMAN ACTIVITIES ALONG ATLANTIC

(By United Press)
NEW YORK, June 4.—Announcement of the operation of German submarines, 75 miles off the New Jersey coast, led today to speculation as to a possible attack of New York.

Possibility of any submarine penetrating the ports and other defenses in the lower harbor was immediately discounted.

The authorities, however, considered the possibility of an air raid by airplanes launched from the deck of a submarine. This theory has been widely discussed in the past and its practicability is admitted by some experts on naval matters.

American military officers have so accepted such a possibility, in fact that naval aircraft guns long have been established at strategic points around New York City, and its environs, according to reliable reports.

In case the Huns should attempt to bomb New York, it is agreed that the coast of Massachusetts and Maine, however, could not confirm the rumors.

Not Surprised at Action

Admiral Spencer B. Wood ordered the closing of the port. He is in command of the operations in the first naval district. Admiral Wood said he was not surprised to hear of the Huns being off the coast.

There were many reports in Boston this afternoon of American ships having been destroyed off the Massachusetts coast. Provincetown and other towns on the coast of Massachusetts and Maine, however, could not confirm the rumors.

GRACE LUK WILL ASK NEW TRIAL

(By United Press)
WAUKESHA, Wis., June 4.—Judge Martin W. Luck will hear motions to remove afternoon in the case of Grace Luk, found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts. Miss Luk's defense is expected to move for a new trial on the ground of error that the verdict was not in accordance with the evidence. It is probable Judge Luck will order a lunacy commission to investigate Miss Luk's present state of mind. She has been raising of child hood days for the last two days in her cell.

training service of the United States shipping board.

Service Is Voluntary

This is purely a voluntary service; there is no drafting of men for the merchant marine.

The volunteer for this service signs a contract to serve his country in the merchant marine for the duration of the war.

Owing to the vital importance of the merchant marine in the war, the volunteer who serves on a merchant ship ranks in importance with the men in the army and the navy.

From the time of his acceptance as an apprentice on a training ship he is exempted so long as he continues in the service of the merchant marine.

The pay of an apprentice in the training service of the merchant marine is $20 a month, and he receives also food and quarters, and is furnished with a uniform.

UNION OPERATORS ARE LOOKED OUT

Business of Postal Telegraph Company Proceeding Under Difficulties

(By United Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—Seventy-five telegraph operators, locked out by the Postal Telegraph-Cable company yesterday for declaring their affiliation with the Commercial Telegraphers Union, today casually hampered the handling of messages in the local office of the company.

Every operator appeared at work yesterday, wearing a union button. At 11 p. m., every man and woman wearing the union emblem was told to leave the office. Each operator did so unopposed.

According to the locked-out men, only five operators were left in the Postal office last night. These, with officials of the company and a few clerks who had been operators, were attempting to handle the mass of telegraphable cable business which rapidly piled up. Officials of the company would make no statement except that they would continue to accept business.

THE HIDDEN DEATH

Chief Flynn Reveals Secret History of Plot to Sink the Lusitania The first episode of the serial photo drama, "The Eagle's Eye," presented to the Whistlers, noted as producers of great serials, in which Chief Flynn reveals the unvarnished history of the imperial German government's spy plot in America, is called "The Hidden Death," and will be presented at the Forum theatre today.

This episode shows how the leader of imperial Germany's spy system in America operated, contributing to the plans of the German naval staff, to destroy the Lusitania. Ambassador von Bernstorff was so sure of her destruction that he inserted an advertisement in the New York Times, May 1, 1916, in effect warning Americans not to sail on her.

So certain was some one in Berlin that the Lusitania would be torpedoed a medal commemorating the destruction of this ship was made and distributed two days before this tragedy occurred. She was sunk on May 7, and the medal was dated May 5, 1915.

The German naval staff, it would appear, had an exact date set for the great tragedy of the sea so just, but owing to the fact that the sailing of the vessel was delayed, she did not reach the point where the submarines lay in wait for her till two days later than had been calculated. This was the first blow in a war of frightfulness that was intended to strike terror into the hearts of the world, and especially to warn America of the consequences of war.

THE WHIRLWIND CHORUS

THAT THE PUBLIC MAY KNOW THE TRUTH

In the Twin Falls News and Twin Falls Times of May 24th, the Rev. C. L. Bent, pastor of the First Methodist church of Twin Falls, makes certain statements concerning members of his board who opposed him on certain church matters and who were summoned before the Council of Defense.

I regret that this matter was over taken to the newspapers but inasmuch as Mr. Bent has seen fit to do so, as one of the members who opposed him and who appeared before the Council of Defense, I accept his challenge to come out in the open and state a few facts that the public may know both sides of this most unfortunate affair.

It is true that criticisms were made of Mr. Bent, almost from the beginning of our entry into the war. His seeming apathy toward the American cause and certain definitions and qualifying words he used in sermons caused comment. We criticized him for not observing Prayer Day, as requested by the President; we criticized him for not immediately consenting to preach on the Red Cross, and for the way he treated the minister who was locally responsible for the observance of Red Cross Sunday. We criticized him for withholding the food cards for several weeks; we further criticized him for his now famous Dolobek definition of patriotism on which his four so-called patriotic sermons were based.

It was not discussed at board meetings until the first week in December, when one of our members asked for a more dignified stand from the pulpit and that our church be organized for war activities.

He said he had heard comments concerning the pastor's seeming apathy and the church generally as a body. He spoke of the awfulness of the German atrocities and what as a nation were up against. Mr. Bent strongly objected to the criticism. He defended the Germans and excused the German atrocities by comparing them to the actions of our soldiers during the Civil war.

From that time on it became a matter of public discussion. Being away for two weeks over Christmas I do not know first hand what took place during that time, but at our next meeting on January 1st it was announced that Mr. Bent had been summoned to appear before the Council of Defense that evening and the board took recess to allow Mr. Bent to attend. During speech a free discussion took place between the members of the board, and among the many peculiar turns of the discussion I remember that those who upheld Mr. Bent branded the stories of German atrocities as lies and gave expression in such terms as "I wish they had killed the perpetrators of the Lusitania disaster they will have to begin at home." "I do not believe in hiding bombs under babies' skirts." "They objected to calling the Germans 'kaiser'." "The statement they had made in which they accused the Germans if they 'only dared'."

From that time on, some of us considered it a duty we owed our country and our God to fight against the sinning of those who were our enemies who held such views as these, even at the risk of being condemned and ostracized, by those members of our congregation who either did not know the facts or else knew them and acquiesced in these sentiments. Some of us expressed this of not coming out in the open. I know that at least half a dozen times Mr. Bent was begged by these men to come right out for America on his own sake, for the sake of his church and his country. They went to his home and talked with him, called him to their places of business, met him face to face and took issue with him upon his statements concerning the war.

Mr. Bent speaks of a discussion in the church board over a church matter and of the fact that the same men who opposed him there were also the men who appeared against him before the Council of Defense. Mr. Bent has cases filed up before Council of Defense on January 1 and the said discussion did not occur until February eleventh. The records of both bodies will corroborate this statement. This definitely shows that the criticisms and did not come up until after the matter of the pastor's seeming apathy had been an issue for several weeks.

Regarding the statement that Mr. Bent was not notified when criticized by those here held in the church, Mr. Ashton was appointed more than a year ago to arrange the dates for all meetings held in the church and the regular procedure was gone through in planning for the said meeting that was held there. It might be of interest to state that one of the board called Mr. Bent up and asked him to go with him to hear the lecture given by Sergt. Wells. Mr. Bent agreed to go and a meeting place was arranged. Mr. Bent then failed to show up and he did not attend the lecture. Mr. Bent was especially invited to hear the talk given by Sergt. Wells in the basement of the church to the Baraca boys. Mr. Bent did not accept the invitation. It is interesting to know if Mr. Bent at ended any patriotic service in Twin Falls before his resignation was questioned. It would be still more interesting to know just how enthusiastic he was when he did attend.

Mr. Bent states that of the 60 in the service, whose stars appear upon the Service flag of the Methodist church, only two are from the families of those men who opposed him and who are holding his present patriotic attitude. He might have gone still further and added that only one of the men who he attacks "as accusers" has sons beyond the knee-pants stage. I regret to have to point out what appears to be a deliberate mis-statement of fact as to the number upholding him for in my opinion this statement is open to serious challenge.

Mr. Bent failed to explain why he went to the home of the Rev. Anderson, pastor of the Baptist church, to look him to task for what that gentleman said about the Germans, demanding a retraction and personally insulting him in the presence of his wife. It might be added that he also failed to reveal where he got the information that if the pastor were punished there would be a great uprising in this country.

Last Wednesday, the 29th ult., Mr. Bent made the remark to Mr. Ashton, in discussing the evidence given before the Council of Defense—which Mr. Bent has just challenged Mr. Bent to point out through rumors—"Kingsbury's evidence was as false as hell."

If agreeable to the Council of Defense, I would gladly relinquish all privileges to Mr. Bent to challenge Mr. Bent to point out any statement therein which deviates from the facts.

As late as March, a certain prominent person—not a member of the board, but one who has been the very life of our church for many months—declared, in answer to my suggestion that the church be made the center of all war activities the same as it is the center of religious activities, "You are not going to have fifty per cent of our people do not want it, if you want it, you will have to go somewhere else." I wish to state here, however, that I believe a gross injustice was done the First Methodist church of Twin Falls by any such intemperate and baseless charges, if intensely patriotic and have fully supported the war charities and various other war activities in a way they could not have done had their hearts not been wholly in the cause.

And in justice to some of our members, I wish to say that their words and acts now indicate that they have had a change of heart and are now heartily ashamed of their former stand. I believe that those who have criticized them in the past should take more credit for their change, though they may be slow to admit it. Among the names of those given as supporting Mr. Bent are men whose patriotism is beyond question—they support the plan, right or wrong, to win the war. Mr. Bent ever questioned why his patriotism was questioned and not that of the other preachers of the city. Why not Rev. Frank, or Rev. Harman, or Rev. Anderson, or Dr. Bryant? It is because his men are in power to further the cause of their country. In each one, there was revealed the true combination of preacher and patriot. The patriotism of these men was never questioned because the actions and the public utterances of these men were worthy criticisms. Mr. Bent charges several of us as being responsible for the unfortunate position in which he finds himself today. Only one person is responsible—that person is C. L. Bent.

Several times, since Christmas, Mr. Bent has remarked that he was building a foundation upon which to stand. The foundation upon which most people stand was built months ago. It was laid upon the bloody soil of the Kaiser and consecrated with the life blood of hundreds of innocent women and children.

The men who appeared before the Council of Defense were summoned by subpoena and had no choice in the matter. Every statement put into heretals contained can be corroborated by other members of the board, under oath if necessary.

Mr. Bent calls us "character assassins," "spy agents of the Kaiser," etc., etc. It was not so very long ago that I heard Mr. Bent tell these very same men that they were the finest body of men he had ever worked with and that he had every confidence in them. What caused the change? Is it likely that all these men have changed? Might it be possible that only one has changed and that one Mr. Bent? I ask the reader to go down the list of those men who have supported Mr. Bent: They are men who are known and favorably known over this country. They stand for something. Two of them hold the two highest offices in the gift of the people of Twin Falls county. If they are character assassins and if they are "spy agents of the Kaiser," the sooner the public knows it the better. Had Mr. Bent followed the advice of these men, it would not be necessary for him to buy three columns in the public newspapers to give any publicity he really is not worthy to be necessary to lock the doors of the

CURRENT DEVELOPMENTS

The theory of the present German offensive is described as being similar to that of piercing armor plate...

As to whether or not other similar plans will follow, authorities are agreed that such raids are well within the bounds of possibility.

There is now no further room for question but what the present objective marks the real line of hoped for advance and now that this conclusion has apparently been definitely reached by the Allied leaders...

As matters now stand it is pretty well apparent that the end of the present drive is in sight. The German war machine is too badly battered to proceed further at this time without another stop for repairs.

This latter element is in itself sufficient to turn the tide of victory in the long run, and the developments of the past few days point strongly to the belief that the end, when it does come, will arrive with startling suddenness.

KILL THE BEAST

In addition to their ordinary activities of war, the Germans are engaged in bombing operations, with Red Cross hospitals as their main objectives, on a scale never before attempted.

There are those who would teach that hatred of the German is not a natural or a necessary attribute of the ordinary mind.

With this number removed from participating in future surprise operations, Von Hindenburg's power for developing offensives by sudden shock operations thirty miles into the beginning of the Alsos attack.

The strong resistance now being developed by the French is not to be regarded as a mere tactical expedient but as a normal defensive fighting position as a desperate resort to save vital positions when an allied major counter attack be justified while America is unable fully to participate.

Unswerving, implacable hatred in the case of the German menace is just as left a sentiment as it is to be found in the whole human category of the forces detesting mankind.

There is little ground for the belief that yesterday's submarine activity off the New Jersey Coast is anything more than a mere shot in the dark by Germany.

As to whether or not other similar plans will follow, authorities are agreed that such raids are well within the bounds of possibility.

There is nothing in yesterday's developments which can be regarded as in any way indicating the beginning of an undecisive offensive against America, but there may be further raids, possibly on a larger scale than the present.

THE WAR TODAY

By J. W. T. MASON (United Press War Expert) NEW YORK, June 2.—The failure of Paris is entailing Von Hindenburg into an extravagant extension of his front that will prove far beyond the means of the German army to support.

Each mile by which Von Hindenburg extends the line nearest to Paris finds six thousand more men for its protection.

Heavy Depletion of Reserves

If the German casualties last week be placed at 100,000, the total depletion of Von Hindenburg's reserves must be placed at 280,000.

The advent of a stranger was always hailed with suspicion. The rough element looked for an ex-convict officer or a government spy invading their territory.

"What's the particular danger?" inquired the self-possessed young man rather coolly. "You've got your own gang, that's the particular danger," responded the tavern keeper.

TELLS OF THE SHOOTING OF HIS BROTHER

EARL BUTLER IS FIRST WITNESS CALLED IN TRIAL OF GLENN MATHEWS ON MURDER CASE

Earl Butler, on the witness stand in district court here in the trial of Glenn Mathews, charged with the murder of George Butler in Twin Falls on May 2, 1917, today, Tuesday morning completed his story of the killing of his brother. His testimony was begun at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, when a jury in the case was sworn in. Sheriff F. M. Kendall was the second witness for the state called thereafter.

Considerable Interest Shown A hint that the defense will make its argument on a justifiable homicide in self defense and that the relations of the Butlers with the wife of the defendant will be brought out, has resulted in considerable interest being manifested in the trial, and there are now between 50 and 60 persons present at spectators, about half of whom are women.

Jury in the Case Selection of the jury in the case occupied most of the opening day Monday. The state exercised its right of preemptory challenge in the selection of one prospective juror, and the defense accepted the jury after its interrogations, without removing any member of it. The jury as sworn in is composed of George D. Aiken, C. H. Templeton, Arthur Jarman, D. E. Felt, T. M. Buhl, F. A. Avesa, P. H. Smith, William Pease, Erwin Falls; W. A. Glasgow, George Gould, Bert Schwartz, Buhl; and Joe Hamilton, Hansen.

Tells Story of Tragedy

Under questioning by attorneys for the state, Butler told of the coming of Mathews to the home in Golden Rule addition occupied by the Butler brothers at about midnight on the night of the tragedy, and of the shooting that resulted fatally to his brother. He testified that the Butler brothers were in bed at the time and that George had gone to the door when Mathews knocked. Mathews fired one shot from the rifle he carried in the direction of Earl Butler, and later, in a struggle for possession of the rifle that took place outside the door, he shot and killed George Butler, according to statement of the witness.

Inquire Into Arrangement

Cross examination of attorneys for the defendant was directed toward developing the terms of arrangements whereby Mrs. Mathews was to supply beer and do the laundry for the Butlers.

An audience of between fifty and sixty persons, about one-half of whom were women, was present in the court room when the case of the state of Idaho against Glenn Mathews, accused of murder in Twin Falls, March 22, of George Butler, was called Monday morning and the selection of a jury began. The members of the audience held their places throughout the day's proceedings, and listened, apparently uninterested, to the requested interrogations of attorneys as they were put to one prospective juror after another. Mathews' aged mother sat at the side of her son with her attorneys, Judge James K. Bolwell, W. W. Chapman, and E. L. Larson. Attorneys on the other side of the table, conducting the prosecution of the action, were County Attorney F. L. Stephan and W. P. Guthrie. Mr. Stephan and Mr. Larson first interrogated the prospective juror for the state and defendant, respectively. Two of the jurymen called were excused for cause. A. W. Husted, Twin Falls, in answer to a question, said that he had conscientious objection to the death penalty, which might be imposed if the jury found the defendant guilty. H. Robbins, Twin Falls, said that he had formed definite opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

MR. JAMES WALLACE CELEBRATED HIS BIRTHDAY

Mr. James Wallace celebrated her 62nd birthday June 2 at an informal dinner. Covers were laid for twenty. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Nelson and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hatfield, and Mrs. Burdette G. Howard of Buhl. Several nice presents were given to the hostess.

At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yarber, Miss Lena A. Turner of Portland, Ore., became the bride of Arthur Barker, Rev. G. L. Hunt of the Methodist church officiating. The young couple took their place before a host of friends in the strains of Lohengrin's wedding-march, played by Mrs. Ed Mack of Salt Lake City. The bride was charming in a dress of white georgette and coral pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of Bride Bows. Her only attendant was a sphinx-like lover, a gift of the groom. The matron of honor, Mrs. Henry White, was gowned in silver gray tulle and carried Edith Brunner roses. Henry White, brother-in-law of the groom, acted as best man. Following congratulations, an elaborate luncheon was served the guests. Many toasty presents as well as a profusion of flowers were presented to the young people, who have a host of friends to wish them joy.

A most delightful party of last week was the one given at the home of Miss Louise Weidman Friday evening. A dainty color-scheme of pink and white with a profusion of tiny hearts, cupid and pink rosettes forming a centerpiece made a lovely setting for the two course luncheon. The announcement of the coming marriage of one of the guests created a stir of amusement among her friends. The guests at this pleasant affair were the Misses Lenora Bybee, Blanche Frontis, Lila Yarnes, Doryl Elver, Clara Johnson, Bertha Alvord, Jennie Larson, Nellie Case and Ruth Silver.

Mystery In Shelling of American Position Solved

GENERAL HAD SUPPLY WAGONS MOVED, THINKING THEY WERE TARGET OF ENEMY'S BOMBARDMENT—INVESTIGATION REVEALED OTHERWISE

By Fred S. Ferguson
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LOBBIAINE, May 15. (By Mail)—This is the story of the bombardment of the American position.

It was a sunny afternoon following days of rain when General—passed along a road leading into town, and found a long line of supply wagons standing there. As he reached the wagons there was a terrific explosion in the middle of a group some 200 yards away. Mud and water flew into the air and a heavy cloud of smoke then drifted across the field.

In his headquarters the General summoned an aide.

"How long has this shelling been going on?" he opened up.

"About two hours, sir."

"What are those wagons doing out on the road?"

"I don't know, sir."

Wanted Wagons Moved

"Well find out, and have them moved. That's what the damned Boche is firing at. If this keeps up, we won't be able to stay here twenty-four hours."

In the meantime the sound of heavy explosions continued to come to the ears of the general.

"Enter, another aide."

"I understand that you want a report on the bombardment, General," he began. "The French officers stationed here are shooting at us with a long range gun about a nine point two. They have been registering on that point out there for some time.

"The wagons you asked about are being moved. We have moved our artillery, and when the enemy gets in-located it will start counter-battery work."

"Will you see me at work on it," snapped the General.

"I have located the source of the bombardment, sir."

"Will you see me at work on it," snapped the General.

"No, sir. You see, sir, it is a trench mortar battery out here in the field having a little practice."

The General turned purple, then pink, then purple again. He exploded into a louder report than the trench mortar.

"Who in hell—" and then words failed him.

"Those were busy again and the haul for the long range Boche gun was cut off. The answer to the bombardment was simple after you know it."

Far out in the big field and in a valley behind headquarters and alongside the road was a little wood shack. It wouldn't be noticed under ordinary circumstances, but the shack was a trench mortar company. The pond was some 400 yards beyond the shack. The trench mortar men were practicing—lobbing the shells into the pond. No one could see or hear the mortar, and the explosion and bursting of water and mud into the air when a shell hit the pond was that of a long distance bombardment.

Just what happened to this trench mortar company isn't on record, but it has not practiced in the field near lately.

After that this German officer and I became rather chummy; that is, as far as I could be chummy with an enemy, and we whiled away a good many long hours talking about the days we had spent in San Francisco, and frequently in the conversation one of us would mention some prominent Californian, or some little incident occurring there, with which we were both familiar.

He told me when war was declared he was, of course, intensely patriotic and thought the only thing for him to do was to go back and aid in the defense of his country. He found that he could not go directly from San Francisco, because the English was too well guarded by the English, so he boarded a boat for South America. There he obtained a forged passport and in the guise of a Montevideo travel agent for New York and from there to England.

He passed through England without any difficulty of the forged passport, but concluded not to risk going to Ireland for fear of exciting too much suspicion, so went down through the Strait of Gibraltar to Italy, which was neutral at that time, up to Austria, and thence to Germany. He did when he put in at Gibraltar, after leaving England, there were two suspects taken off the ship, men that he was sure were neutral subjects, but much to his relief his own passport and papers were found on him.

When he got no answers out of me, he walked away disgustedly.

"You don't have to worry any more," he declared, as a parting shot. "For you the war is over."

I was given a little brother later in the day, and as I began to collect my thoughts I wondered what had happened to my comrades in the battle which had resulted so disastrously to me. As I began to realize my plight I worried less about my physical condition than the fact that, as the doctor had pointed out, for me the war was practically over. I had been in it but a short time, and now I would be a prisoner for the duration of the war!

The next day some German flying officers visited me, and I must say they treated me with great consideration. They told me of the man I had brought down. They said he was a Bavarian and a fairly good pilot. They gave me his hat as a souvenir and complimented me on the flight I had put up.

My helmet, which was of soft leather, was split from front to back by a bullet from a machine gun, which they examined it with great interest. When they brought me my uniform I found that the star of my rank which had been on my right shoulder strap had been shot off clean. The one on my left shoulder strap they asked me for as a souvenir, as also my B. F. C. badges, which I gave them. They allowed me to keep my "wings," which I wore on my left breast, because they were aware that it is the proudest possession of a British flying officer.

I think I am right in saying that the only chivalry in this war on the German side of the trenches has been displayed by the officers of the German flying corps, which comprises the pick of Germany. They pointed out to me that I and my comrades were fighting purely for the love of it, whereas they were fighting in defense of their country, but still, they said, they admired us for our sportsmanship. I had a notion to ask them if dropping bombs on London and killing so many innocent people was in defense of their country, but I was in no position or condition to ask that at that time.

That same day a German officer was brought into the hospital and put in the bunk next to mine. Of course I naturally looked at him, but did not pay particular attention to him at that time. He lay there for three or four hours before I did take a real good look at him. I was positive that he could not speak English, and naturally I did not say anything to him. Once when he looked over in his direction his eyes were on me, and to my surprise he said, very sarcastically, "What the hell are you looking at?" and then smiled. At this time I was just beginning to say a few words, as my ward had requested me from being but I said enough to let him know what I was doing there and how I happened to be there. He evidently had heard my story from some of the men there, though because he said it was too bad I had not broken my back that he did not have much sympathy with the flying corps anyway. He asked me what part of America I came from, and I told him "California."

A few more questions he asked that I failed from San Francisco, and then added to my distress by saying, "How would you like to have a good, juicy steak right out of the Hofbrau?" Naturally I told him that I had not broken my back, but that he did not have much sympathy with the flying corps anyway. He asked me what part of America I came from, and I told him "California."

LESS ESSENTIAL INDUSTRIES FACE CHANGES THROUGH FOOD CONTROL

Less essential industries using sugar are facing an entire change in their business, according to a telegram transmitted by the United States food administration through the state administrator and received by County Food Administrator C. E. Munson.

The bureau at this time falls on the confectionery and soft drink industries, on account of the lack of ships which to transport raw sugar from abroad.

No Figures on Allotment "We desire to be as considerate as circumstances will permit," the administrator says, "but we are compelled to ask that only the largest minimum operations be carried on. We can not give an assurance as to the percentage of sugar that may be allotted for the first three months beginning July 1."

"All manufacturers of the less essential food products using sugar must file the required statement with you by June 10. Such statements must show the amount of sugar used and on hand, also their requirements. They must show their present situation so that we may know that they are not conforming to the rates."

"Please make it known that unless these reports are filed with you by June 10, no sugar will be allotted for the balance of the year 1918 to the manufacturer failing to make such returns. If any manufacturer is in stock a large amount of sugar and thinks that he has no objection to apply to the food administrator, and does not take cognizance of the rules, he will suffer the penalty for his failure to make report, and will be proceeded against as a hoarder in the meantime."

Cyclones and Tornadoes. The so-called "cyclones" of the West are tornadoes, which are whirling storms of great violence, but contracted in area. Tornadoes have been known whose greatest width did not exceed a few rods, and those which crossed several miles in width are very unusual. The ordinary storm, where the wind attains a velocity of 40 to 60 miles an hour, has nothing in common with either a cyclone, or tornado. It is a straight thrust of air and does not whirl at all.

Dyes From Lichen. The use of lichens as sources of dye is of long standing. The famous blue and purple dyes of the East, so frequently mentioned in history, were in all probability extracted from the Rocella lichen, which has in recent times been extensively used in France for the gorgeous coloration of silks. Lichen dyes are secured by pulverizing the plant body, termed the thallus, and applying water to extract the coloring matter. One lichen dye, litmus, finds wide application in the arts of chemistry.

"Doctoring" Hollofote. The delicate hollofote is scarce and unprofitable to the perfumer. He detects in its odor, however, the aroma of vanilla combined with the sharper scent of bitter almonds. Therefore, he adds to a tincture of vanilla a small quantity of the otto of bitter almonds and rose and orange flower essence, and thus easily makes extract of hollofote.

Which is Real "Judas-Tree"? Why the name "Judas-Tree" for a wholly respectable and worthy tree? The supposition has been that the tree or red bud was the tree upon which Judas hanged himself and for that reason a few superstitious people will not plant it. But all the older writers on trees of the Bible claim the elder was the one used by the guilty tree. The Spaniards call the cherry "the tree of love."

Genius. It's wonderful how a handily can serve so many things you don't care for—Kansas City Journal.

Dr. John H. Finley, commissioner of education for the state of New York, it is announced unofficially, will be the head of the Red Cross work in Palestine.

How to Go Up Stairs. How do you go upstairs? With your body bent over? And clinging to the banister? That isn't the way to profit by stairclimbing. Going upstairs is a fine chance for body-training. People who know its value in physical culture go upstairs in a prescribed way. This is how to do it: You pause lightly on the balls of your feet; you lift your chest; you inhale a good long breath; then you go up easily and quickly as if you were lifted by your chest. See? Try it.

Chinese Cooks. It is said by those who have employed them that the Chinese always cook by rule, if they have any rule to go by—following the receipt with the same scientific exactness with which the druggist puts up a prescription. Hence their results are equally satisfactory. They never burn or spoil anything, nor spill materials on the floor; consequently, nothing that goes through their hands is wasted. They cook just enough and no more.—Hotel Gazette.

Deceiving. Dido (apocryphally): "Why didn't you tell me that you were in debt? You seemed so unhappy that I thought you had money."

Habit to be Avoided. The habit of unkind criticism or promiscuous criticism, if you prefer the word, grows by leaps and bounds if permitted to flourish at all. We have ideas in which we take a certain amount of pride, and these we do not live by them fall under the no of our displeasure. We have no reason for believing that our ways are better, we merely assume it, and expect others to take the same line of thought. You see we demand freedom of action that we are not willing to accord to others.—Exchange.

Travels of Light Rays.

It takes eight minutes for a ray of light to travel 60,000,000 miles from the sun to the earth. But the time required for a light ray from the star nearest to the solar system (Alpha Centauri) to reach us is four and a half years. A vast majority of the stars (very one of which is a glowing sun) are so far off that it takes thousands of years for light from them to get here.

ENDS FINANCIAL WORRIES WITH REVOLVER SHOT

M. E. BASON, PIONEER FARMER OF RUPERT, FIRES SHOT THROUGH OWN HEART

(Special to The News)
RUPERT.—M. E. Bason, aged about 60, shot and killed himself with a .32 caliber revolver at 7:45 o'clock Sunday morning in the five mile south of this city. The bullet entered just above the heart, and death resulted almost instantaneously. Financial reverses which Bason had not believed to be the motive for his rash act.

Sold Farm to Soldier

It is reported that Bason had sold one farm to a man who was called later under the military draft. With the expectation of paying for it from the proceeds of the sale of his first farm, Bason continued to buy and sell other farms. He was unable to make collection from the soldier, and it is said he had worried over means of making his own payments.

Verdict of Coroners' Jury

Bason left the breakfast table apparently in good spirits Sunday morning. About 10 o'clock he was called by his family behind a shot and his cry. They were horrified to find his dead body. A jury at a coroner's inquest convened in Rupert Monday afternoon and found as its verdict that Bason had come to his death from a gun shot wound of his own infliction.

Pioneer of Rupert

Deceased had been a resident of the vicinity of Rupert for about 10 years. He leaves, besides his widow, two sons and three daughters. All are residents of Rupert except one daughter, Mrs. Ruby Ryan, residing at Elmer, Oregon. The other daughters are, Mrs. Neal McKenzie and Mrs. Inez Ingalls. The sons are George and Roy Bason.

Funeral services were held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the W. A. Goodman chapel, with interment in the Rupert cemetery.

THE RUFFLED DRESS

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)
It all began by Miss Vandervoort happening to enter the physician's office where Celia was employed as secretary. At first the society young woman glanced curiously at the little figure seated before the mahogany desk, then her glance changed to one of pleased recognition.

"My, Celia," she exclaimed, "Who would have expected to find you here?"
The doctor's young secretary returned the greeting coolly.

"My friends of late more prosperous time have long ceased to expect anything of me," she replied.
But Miss Vandervoort responded frankly:

"That is unfair of you, dear; you yourselves have been much to blame for the seeming neglect. After your father's death you disappeared completely. Even the obituary Frank Kimball was unable to obtain a clue to your whereabouts."
Celia's face flushed.

"There was no reason," she answered slowly, "why Mr. Kimball should have tried to locate me. Our contacts have been few and far between, but blue eyes looked into those of her former friend. "Father's investments had been unfortunate," said Celia. "I was left penniless, and was obliged to seek work." A tremulous smile curled her lip. "You know, Josephine, working girls' were not included in our circle."

"What happened?" Miss Vandervoort promptly responded. "As if I should have forgotten you, Celia! To make reparation for your ungenerous suspicions you must come out and spend the week-end at 'The Gables.' I positively will not take no for an answer. Just the old chums, and we would have time, and we shall all be so glad to have you."

Josephine's hand warmly clasped hers, while quick tears filled the secretary's eyes.

"I will come," she impulsively agreed. And when she adjusted her hat later, before the mirror, her cheeks were glowing with a new and delicious excitement. There was still more than a year before the shops would have time to select a new frock.

She was out of the question; crepe also. Celia hopefully made her way across the department store show-rooms to the window rack where, beneath a sign printed "FIFTEEN" organdie gowns were displayed. Eagerly she swung the rack about. Various pinks, greens and blues were discarded, and when she reached the reds, she viewed, of softest gray it was, blue ribbons quaintly worn among its frills. Celia sighed in admiration.

"Just the thing!" she confided to the salesman. "Give your maid!"
Thoughtfully she considered. "I will have the dress charged," said Celia. "The frock will be charged to your account, madame," she announced.

Celia smiled at her own reflection when she gazed for the week-end party; the effect was so strikingly charming. Frank Kimball was evidently not slow in recognizing this; neither had absence nor the determined aloofness of his one-line sweetheart changed his affection.

Perpetually he ignored her in forbidding manner and plead his own cause.

"What sort of a man did you take me for?" he accused.

"It's no use, Frank," she said decidedly. "I have thought the thing out. If you had really tried to find me at first—"

"Tried!" exclaimed the young man, exasperated.

"But Celia rode back alone in Josephine's car to the boarding house she called home, and there were tears on the ruffled dress that night as she folded it away. Sheo, after a dull, lonely month, when Frank Kimball's repeated telephone calls were discouraged, came an astounding bill from the great store that was his father's. Celia gasped at it in dismay, but instinctively realized its import. A terrible mistake had been made in the price of the quaint organdie dress and she was charged for fifty dollars.

Wearily she went to the saleswoman.

"So sorry you misunderstood," said that person. "Some one must have slipped the dress of the wrong size. Mr. Woods!" she called sympathetically, and before Celia realized she was being escorted by that gentleman to the manager's office.

"But really it is not remedial," Celia explained. "The dress has been worn." But the courteous Mr. Woods placed a chair for her in the manager's office.

When Celia looked up again Frank Kimball stood staring down upon her.

"You, Celia!" he exclaimed. "Great Scott! Woods has been telling me of you—you—"

"It is nothing," she answered firmly, and arose to go.

"I beg your pardon," Frank insisted. "The mistake is entirely our own. The frock should have been upon its own hanger. You will be charged fifteen dollars."

"I shall pay," Celia started out bravely—then her voice faltered—"fifty dollars," she added faintly. Then, in one quick, breathless moment she was swept from her feet straight into her lover's arms.

"In just as short a time as it takes to get it," said Mr. Frank Kimball, "we shall secure a license, and you and I will be married. I want you and a chance of losing you again."

HAPPENINGS in the CITIES

Mule Doesn't Get This Idea of Saving Daylight

LEHINGTON, GA.—Among the many problems that had to be solved with the inauguration of the daylight-saving movement, and one that still is a source of perplexity to local professors of natural history and astronomical translations in the regulating of the famous Lithonia jacks, who, by his regular and dependable brushes, has regulated clocks and watches in Lithonia for several months.

E. W. Reagan, who lives not far from the center of the town, owns the biggest jacks in De Kalb county, the prize specimen of North Georgia.

Something more than a year ago Reagan's little son, Aaron, started going out in the morning and leading his horse out of the barn, and whenever the jacks saw the horse he would bray. Aaron was pretty regular in his time, hence the jacks brayed every morning at eight o'clock sharp. During the last six months he has brayed at precisely eight o'clock whether he saw a horse or not. Lithonia folks quit bothering about watches and clocks. Whenever they heard the jacks bray the children liked to school.

There along came the daylight-saving law. Those who have clocks and watches got them out and pressed them up, preparatory to setting them ahead an hour. They didn't want to depend upon a braying jacks when government law is concerned. Their old timers must do full duty now, if they never did before. So they set their timepieces ahead one hour and let it go at that. But they were they to set the old jacks ahead an hour? Not by making from behind, said some. One man did not try it, and it didn't work. Neither did he for a fortnight.

A special meeting of the board of trade has been called to consider ways and means of setting up "that braying jacks," who still insists on braying at eight o'clock, old time, but which is nine o'clock, new time, thus making all the kiddies late at school.

HAYAKAWA IN "WHITE MAN'S LAW" AT IDAHO

VAUDEVILLE AND COMEDY ON SAME PROGRAM

The mysterious "bush" of West Africa is a place where anything may happen—and in this many of the scenes for "The White Man's Law," the new Paramount picture starring Sessue Hayakawa, are laid. Ivory hunters are shown plying their dangerous trade, and the picturesque jungle will lead an exotic air to a picture that is wittily unusual and presents the star in the role of an educated Arabian—an Oxford "man." "The White Man's Law" is being shown at the Idaho today, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Short Stories of Plays and Players

Had he not broken an ear drum while diving in a naval academy, Sessue Hayakawa, the famous Japanese motion picture star in Paramount pictures, might now be an officer in the Japanese navy. This accident incapacitated him for the navy, greatly to the regret of his relatives and friends, many of whom are officers in the Japanese army and navy.

In speaking of "Mr. Fix-it," his latest photo comedy, Douglas Fairbanks said that he regarded this as his best work. When asked what kind of a picture it was, Mr. Fairbanks said with his accustomed smile: "A costume piece." This designation was due to the fact that for the first time in many months, Mr. Fairbanks will be seen in evening dress in the picture, instead of the chaps and other cowboy impediments that characterizes his recent roles.

When a pretty young woman is sent in a trunk, dog or cat, to a distant city, and when the trunk, instead of the consigned falls to claim the consignment, and the young woman is auctioned off to the highest bidder to meet express charges, who is the sufferer? This was the unique experience of Betty Burke, daughter of Sheriff Burke, the captivating role played by Vivian Martin in her new Paramount picture, "Unclaimed Goods." How Betty escaped being purchased for thirty cents by a stranger, whose purse was frustrated by a man whom Betty had once befriended, but at the sacrifice of his life, and how she won love and happiness in the end, is charmingly told in a series of unusually interesting scenes, all of which bear the impress of dramatic realism and deep heart appeal. This is one of the finest productions yet made for Paramount and we do not hesitate to recommend it to you as one that will amply repay you, as well as the thousands of Miss Martin's admirers, for any inconvenience you may be put to by your desire to see it.

Freezing to Death.
Many a traveler has frozen to death while asleep. An recent scientific experiments have shown, the body's capacity to regulate temperature is diminished through sleep. This appears to apply both to heat and cold. A healthy man's nervous and muscular activity is reduced to the natural minimum when he falls asleep, and it is then that his temperature falls to its lowest point.

Daily Thought.
We have applied physical courses or the course of nerves, of moral course, or the course of principles. Besides these there is intellectual course, or the course of options.—Pauline Brooks.
