

BATTLE ACTION ALONG MARNE GRADUALLY QUIETING

PERIOD OF COMPARATIVE LULL SETS IN ON COISE FRONT BUT LOCAL FIGHTING CONTINUES UNABATED WITH FIERCE RAIDS HOURLY

(By United Press) PARIS, June 14.—Fighting on the entire Oise-Marne battle front has diminished to local actions, the French war office reports today. A German attack failed in the center of the Oise area. There was active cannonading on the twenty-mile front between Villers-Cotterets forest and Chateau-Thierry. Elsewhere only raiding operations were reported. "Only local actions occurred last night north of Grivesnes (four miles west of Montdidier) the communiqué said. "A French raid in the Courcelles region resulted in the capture of fifty prisoners and the Farme-Dezloger trench position.

BLOCKED IN CENTER ENEMY HITS WINGS

(By United Press) LONDON, June 14.—Blocked in the center, the Germans yesterday attacked on the extreme wings of the present battle front, which includes all the Oise theater and the northern portion of the Marne area. A powerful enemy counter attack on the two-mile front between Courcelles and Montdidier was stopped before the Germans reached the French positions, the French war office reported.

DECISIVE RESULTS ARE STILL LACKING

PARIS, June 13.—The fourth day of the battle (Wednesday) was still without decisive results, the Journal declared today. "The Germans are still within six miles of Compiègne," the Journal said. "The French withdrawal east of the Oise will have no influence on the German counter attack which threw the Germans back across the Marne declared by Berlin to have 'broken down with the heaviest loss.' The enemy claimed a total of 15,000 prisoners in the new drive with 150 captured cannon.

GAS SHELLS FOLLOW LULL IN FIGHTING

(By Lowell Mellett (United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 14 (noon).—Following the first quiet night spent by the Americans in the Torghe-Suresnes sector for two weeks, the Germans began a heavy bombardment of our lines with gas shells this morning. One American unit suffered several casualties.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Henry Ford's decision to run for the United States senate at the request of President Wilson has created a highly interesting political situation in congress. LABOR CLAIMS BIG TOBACCO COMPANY IS UNFAIR

DELEGATES TO AMERICAN FEDERATION CONVENTION TAKE UP QUESTION OF UNIONIZATION OF WAR MATERIALS PLANTS

(By United Press) ST. PAUL, Minn., June 14.—Delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention prepared today to consider resolutions demanding unionizing of workers in factories receiving war contracts. The resolutions describe the American Tobacco Company as anti-union and assert that branches of that firm's plant have been taken over by the government to provide tobacco for men in service. Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board, has addressed a telegram to the federation congratulating labor for its attitude. A resolution Government control of all tobacco companies will be urged later, it was said. "One action today, delegates believed, indicating the convention's attitude toward war time strikes. A resolution asking support of striking telegraphers in Seattle, Washington, was voted down because it empowered the Central Labor Council there to call a general sympathetic strike in the city.

BRITISH SHIP FALLS VICTIM

GERMAN SUBMARINE GETS RIG FREIGHTER OFF VIRGINIA COAST

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 14.—Attacked by a German submarine the British steamer Keemun, 3074 tons, is believed to have been sunk off the Virginia coast at 9 o'clock last night. There is no word of the fate of her crew. A steamer arriving here from a European port today reported having picked up the Keemun's wireless calls for help. They were heard off Montauk, but the Keemun's operator gave his ship's position as off Virginia. The Keemun has been in the British governmental service for some time, according to the A. Holt company, which formerly managed her.

WIRELESS FREELY USED

The first S O B was heard at 7 p. m., according to word brought here. It said: "Shelled by submarine." Two hours later at 9 o'clock there came a second message: "We are sinking." The fact that two hours elapsed between the first call and the signal "sinking" made port authorities believe that there may have been a running fight between the Keemun and the raider.

SAYS WOMEN SHOULD VOTE

PRESIDENT ENDORSES SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT WITHOUT RESERVATION

WASHINGTON, June 14.—President Wilson late yesterday endorsed the national women's suffrage amendment and expressed the hope it will be passed by the senate at this session. Suffragists believe it makes the amendment an administrative measure and confidently predict the president's endorsement will give it the necessary votes. The amendment has passed the house and its friends had planned to force a vote in the senate as soon as its passage appears reasonably certain.

AGREES WITHOUT RESERVATION

"I have read your message with the deepest interest and I welcome the opportunity to say that I agree without reservation that the full and sincere reconstruction of the world for which we are striving and for which we are determined to bring about at any cost, will not have been completely or adequately obtained until women are admitted to the suffrage, and that only by that action can the nations of the world realize for the benefit of future generations the full ideal force of opinion, or the full humane force of action."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO WOMEN

"The services of women during this supreme crisis of the world's history have been of the most signal usefulness and distinction. The war could not have been fought without them, or its sacrifices endured. It is high time that some part of that debt of gratitude to them should be acknowledged and paid, and the only acknowledgment they ask is their admission to the suffrage. Can we justify refusal to do for America, in my earnest hope that the senate of the United States will give an unmistakable answer to this question by passing the suffrage amendment to our federal constitution before the end of this session."

UNITED PRESS WAR SUMMARY

AMERICANS SET FINE EXAMPLE OF COURAGE

OFFICERS AND MEN HIGHLY COMPLEMENTED FOR WORK DURING RARE FEW DAYS OF FIGHTING

(By United Press) WASHINGTON, June 13.—French comment upon activities of the American troops was contained in a supplemental report by General Pershing today, in addition to raid details. "In Pfalz on the afternoon of June 9," said Pershing, "one of our patrols entered the German trenches and encountered several of the enemy. Three of the enemy were killed. Our patrol returned without having suffered casualties."

BACKLASH COURAGE SHOWN

"In the course of these operations the American infantry showed itself skilled in maneuvering. The courage of officers and men approached reckless. One of their lieutenants, blinded in his advance by a machine gun, rushed almost alone into the wood where it was situated and after having put to flight the men who were operating it, returned parrying it on his shoulder. The courage of the combat troops is equalled only by the superb coolness of some of their medical corps, who in a perfect hail of bullets gave first aid to the wounded."

HUN TRANSPORTS CONSTANTLY CARRYING TROOPS TO HELSINKI. FORTS AND 40,000 GERMAN TROOPS SAID TO BE IN FINLAND

By JOSEPH SHAPLEN (United Press Staff Correspondent). STOCKHOLM, June 14.—The Russian Bolsheviks have no foreign policy. They are simply ostrich-like in their naive faith that Germany soon will be undermined by a revolution.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Tschirch is constantly protesting to Germany against violation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, while swallowing the diplomatic pills dolled out by German Ambassador Mirbach.

Premier Lenin calls this policy "forest retreating before the soviet power." This is a joke. With peace negotiations between Russia and Ukraine under way at Kieff, negotiations begun between Finland and Germany are of a different order and that a real period of respite is beginning.

Forming Big German Army. I am authoritatively informed that the Finnish government is forming an army of 100,000 German-trained soldiers. Of these 25,000 already are under arms.

When I stopped in Helsinki harbor, on roofs here from Petrograd, I learned authoritatively that 4,000 German troops now are in Finland. Personally I counted nine big German transports.

The question is, why these preparations? Most naturally they are for the occupation either of the German possessions or Petrograd, probably both.

GETS UNIFORM PRICE FOR GRAIN THRESHING HERE

FARM BUREAU COMMITTEE AGREES UPON INCREASED SCALE CONSIDERING HIGHER COST

Having convened twice previously without reaching a decision, the committee of grain growers and threshers named by the county farm bureau fixed a price for threshing in the Twin Falls county, at a third meeting attended by about fifty farmers Thursday afternoon in the farm bureau. The farmers adopted a scale of prices for threshing which, roughly, allows the threshermen one cent per bushel more than was paid last year by the grain grower.

The Price Schedule
The price to be paid for threshing wheat and barley, where straw burner engines are used, is to be 7 cents per bushel, and for oats, 6 cents per bushel. Where coal burner engines are used, the farmer furnishing the coal, the price is to be 6 cents per bushel for wheat and barley, and 5 cents per bushel for oats.

The price is figured on the basis of wheat and bald barley weighing 60 pounds per bushel; bearded barley 48 pounds per bushel, and oats 50 pounds per bushel.

One cent per bushel additional is to be charged for threshing dry farm grain.

In the case of crops of less than 200 bushels where the stock is some of which inconvertible the threshermen may, at his discretion, make a minimum charge of $10 or a maximum charge of $15 for the set.

The charge for threshing alfalfa, clover and red clover seed is fixed at $1.25 per bushel and for white clover seed, $1.50 per bushel, except where the crop is poor and wages cannot be made in conformity with this scale, in which case the threshermen may charge $1 per hour.

Threshing of peas is to cost 20 cents per bushel, and of beans, 25 cents per bushel, where the measurement is made at the machine. On the basis of re-leased product a charge of 5 cents per bushel additional is to be made to each instance.

Committee's Recommendation
These prices are the lowest at which threshing can be done under favorable conditions in this district, the committee advises, and where the crop is poor, or other conditions warrant, a higher price may be charged.

The committee is composed of six members—three grain growers and three threshermen—who were appointed by W. F. Alworth, president of the farm bureau, the appointment being made by action of the farmers who assembled at Buhl on a recent farm bureau day.

M. A. Thomsen of Twin Falls, a grain grower, was selected as chairman. The other grain grower members of the committee are E. H. Moran of Murter and Howard Darrow of Buhl. The threshermen are W. F. Stratley, Filer; J. A. Steelman, Kimberly; I. E. Stantill, Murtagh.

Urges Conservation
Prior to the vote on the schedule of prices as adopted, a prolonged discussion in respect to increased costs was entered into, and C. E. Munson, county food administrator, addressed the meeting urging the importance of harmonious action in the face of the existing crisis, and the paramount need for conservation.

Consider Higher Costs
As a basis for its conclusions the committee agreed upon definite increases in the costs both of growing and threshing grain. As regards the threshing of grain the committee agreed that the wages of engine men and watermen were greater this year than last, and took into consideration the cost of employers' compulsory liability insurance, advance in the cost of repairs and oils, and of machinery.

Other factors named as being greater this year than last, as determined by the committee, on account of freight, 10 per cent; coal, 10 per cent; twice, 50 per cent; labor, 20 per cent; high cost of living, 25 per cent.

CROPS FLOURISH AS WEATHER GROWS WARM

Weather Observer Notes Conditions Generally Favorable In Irrigated Districts

That the warm weather of the last few days has caused a marked improvement in crop conditions in the irrigated districts and that all vegetation is making a rapid growth are facts noted by Clinton N. Norquist, meteorologist, of the United States weather bureau station at Boise, in his summary of weather and crop conditions in Idaho for the week ending June 11, which concludes:

Conditions in the dry farm sections are not so favorable on account of lack of moisture, rain being badly needed in many sections.

Grain Heading Out
Wheat, rye and barley are now heading generally in all but the late districts, and the outlook is excellent. Early spring wheat is in the boot and is reported generally in very good condition, but the late sown will not germinate well and come up to a poor start. In the northern counties, grain fields are being damaged somewhat by fire worms and aphids.

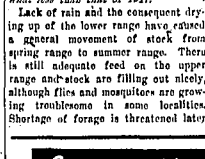

Irrigated pastures and meadows are now in excellent condition and growing rapidly. Dry farm pastures are short. Harvesting of the first cutting of alfalfa is becoming general. In some sections the crop was damaged by the late frosts and the crop is generally less than average both in quality and tonnage. The average is somewhat less than that of 1917.

Lack of rain and the consequent drying up of the lower range have caused a general movement of stock from spring range to summer range. There is still adequate feed on the upper range and stock are filling out nicely, although flies and mosquitoes are growing troublesome in some localities. Shortage of forage is threatened later.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Much Food for Thought in Jolly Man's Greeting

WITHIN a stone's throw of the capitol—if one be a good hand at throwing stones—there is a side street of close-jumbled buildings, mostly landfills and stores. The stores sell in little bags tied with silk and packed in glass-topped boxes...

Earning Her $37.83 By JANE OSBORN

When Stanley Ashton agreed to give thirty thousand dollars for the work of the ambulance corps...

"I know it's going to be hard for the students," he told the dean of the college when he made the proposal...

"Yes," he said, having flushed his little sum in division. "There are 783 students enrolled this year—about 400 girls and the rest men. That will mean about $37.83 a student, say I reckon it."

So the announcement was made, and for the weeks that followed each student of the college went around merrily on extracting the sum of $37.83 from his financial endowment...

Margaret Benton achieved quite an honor for herself among her friends by announcing that she would give up her Christmas holiday vacation.

"Why did you hold out?" she rejoined. "You were dreadfully stung."

"You aren't the plucky little girl who gave up her Christmas holidays for the fund?" The dean told me about that.

SUFFRAGE AS WAR MEASURE IS PRESENTED

LOCAL CLUBS CONCENTRATE FORCES ON SENATOR BORAH AS OPPOSITION IN WEST

TELEGRAM SENT TO SENATOR W. E. BORAH

Three hundred members of the Federated Clubs of Twin Falls still feel confident that you are big enough to change your mind and vote for the national suffrage amendment.

(Signed)
CARRIE HARPER WHITE,
President

(By Jessie Warrington)

The annual picnic of the Federated Rural Clubs of this vicinity, held in the city park Wednesday afternoon, was made the occasion for a presentation of the subject of the National Suffrage amendment, by Miss Margaret Whittemore of Washington, D. C.

The annual picnic of the Federated Rural Clubs of this vicinity, held in the city park Wednesday afternoon, was made the occasion for a presentation of the subject of the National Suffrage amendment, by Miss Margaret Whittemore of Washington, D. C.

The speaking followed a bounteous picnic dinner served at noon. Immediately after the dinner, John Borah, to be followed by a similar telegram from each of the twelve clubs represented.

Miss Whittemore was graciously introduced by Mrs. White and opened her splendid address by stating that twenty million women have no voice in their government. Miss Whittemore's charming personality and manner of presenting her subject held the intense interest of her audience throughout. The first of her addresses bore her to deliver her address in three sections, the first in the open, the second under the bandstand out of the rain, and the third out in the open, under the trees, did not in the least lessen the interest of her audience.

Served Jail Sentence

Miss Whittemore wears an interesting brooch that brings both a lump in the throat and a smile. It is a perfect reproduction of a jail door, in miniature, signifying that Miss Whittemore was one of the women sentenced to jail in the history-making campaign for national suffrage.

With quiet dignity and without bitterness or boastfulness, Miss Whittemore, after presenting the subject of the impending suffrage bill and urging the support of voting women of Idaho, told some of the experiences of the "pickets at the White House." She told of the repeated visits of groups of women of national vote and their availing effort to win the president's approval; of the groups of women who stood for seven months in quiet dignity and silent supplication about the White House with their significant banners asking for national suffrage; of the friendliness of the policemen who gave them useful information as to the best methods to be used in keeping warm on the long vigils. She told of the first arrests and how the women were sentenced to and served their sentences for three days in jail and that after they had served their time they were informed by legal authority that their arrest was not legal.

The Nation's Disgrace

There were smothered exclamations of dismay and indignation from her audience as Miss Whittemore quickly told of how sixty stippled women from among the best homes in Washington and other cities were sentenced to a confinement of hard work and solitary confinement in a southern penitentiary; of how indignants that stand in disgrace to this country were heaped upon them in their being forced to scrub the quarters of the negroes, to eat food that contained worms and sleep within two feet of a diseased negro woman of the lowest type.

From this description she led her audience into the sunlight of hope in the vote. Among the things she told of was a great handling, experienced in the present war by the women from this country who go to Europe without the rights of citizenship. This she stated was a real detriment to this country and should be remedied at once. Already she stated, more than 300,000 women have been killed in this war and thousands have suffered and worked as conditions and yet have not been recognized as citizens.

Classed with Germany

"But how," said Miss Whittemore, "are there eight countries that have recognized women? The United States is classed with two others that have refused national suffrage to women—they are Japan and Germany."

"Yes," a woman in the audience said, "and if the United States does not hurry, those eight countries will be sending missionaries over here to us."

"The French government," Miss Whittemore resumed, "granted the women the right of suffrage until after the war. The women of France indignantly sent this reply to their government: 'Suffering from the mismanagement of a man-made world, the women of France demand a voice in their government without further restriction. And they got it.'

Concentrate on Borah

Summing up her address, Miss Whittemore again urged the importance of the passage of the bill and the great necessity for getting Senator Borah's vote. Miss Whittemore stated that the Federated Women had been persuaded to take the stand for national suffrage and is now advertising it and asks for support in getting it through.

"Many people," Miss Whittemore stated, "think the president should not be bothered with messages regarding this matter at this time of crisis in national and world affairs. But this is a mistake. They do not bother him. He is working for the passage of the bill. It is generally conceded by practically all men of affairs at this time that national suffrage is a beneficial war measure that will but increase the power of this country. And why bother it? Sure the first of the year 30,000 women have taken membership in industry. Women war workers are as important to the winning of the war as are the men in the trenches, and they should be as completely equipped as the soldiers at the front for their work. It is a most necessary part of their equipment."

Telegrams Sent

At the close of her address Miss Whittemore was repeatedly recalled to the platform to answer questions and give further information on the matter discussed. The lending subject after the close of her address was the formation of a national organization for Miss Whittemore, was that of the stand taken by Senator Borah. Both surprise and indignation were shown on every side and a determination expressed to bring to bear upon Senator Borah the weight of the nation in the effort to change his determination not to vote for the passage of the amendment. Miss Whittemore gave the names of scores of prominent individuals and organizations that are now working in behalf of the bill and, in this effort, urging Senator Borah by letters and telegrams to reconsider his decision to vote against the passage of the amendment.

Besides those sent by the federated club telegrams have been sent to Borah from the Business Women's association and a number of individuals since Miss Whittemore's address. The bill is to come up on or before the 15th of this month and an immense amount of immediate efforts must be made to insure its passage.

Miss Whittemore was entertained at the home of Mrs. H. W. Clouche while in Twin Falls. From here she went to Blackfoot, Pocatello and other points in the state.

MISSING BOY COMES BACK FROM POCATELLO

PHILIP RENDAH, WHOSE DISAPPEARANCE DISTURBS COMMUNITY, TELLS STORY OF RUN AWAY FROM HOME

Philip Rendahl, 14-year-old son of B. N. Rendahl, Sixth avenue east, whose mysterious disappearance last Tuesday disturbed the whole community and precipitated a two days search in which the police, Boy Scouts and several citizens joined with relatives, returned to his home Thursday evening from Pocatello, where he had gone, he says, in search of employment.

The boy left home alone at about 6 o'clock Tuesday morning, announcing that he was going on a fishing trip to Reek Creek near this city.

Reached Decision Quickly

"I went to the creek at the steel bridge one-half mile south and fished for about 15 minutes," the boy said this morning. "Then I heard the train whistle. I decided then to leave and bend to the depot and bought a ticket to Pocatello. I left my bicycle and fishing pole on the creek bank. I went to Pocatello and tried to get work in a garage, but could not. Thursday morning I decided to come back home. I bought a ticket to Kimberly. I did not have money enough left to buy a ticket to Twin Falls."

"On the train the conductor asked me why I had not told my folks I was leaving home," the boy continued. "I could not answer him. I expected to write to my folks after I had gotten work. I did not realize how much trouble I might be causing here."

Word Ends Search

Word that the boy had been found and was returning on the evening train to Twin Falls was telephoned from Rupert Thursday afternoon, just as the father with several others was organizing a search along the banks of Reek Creek in the hope of finding some trace of him.

A party of citizens with the father met the boy at Kimberly and brought him home.

"OUTWITTING THE HUN"

BY LIEUTENANT PAT O'BRIEN

SYNOBIS.

CHAPTER I—Introductory. Pat O'Brien is at his wits' end in writing the story of his adventures.

CHAPTER II—Tells of his enlistment in the Royal Flying Corps, his training and his transfer to France as a pilot.

CHAPTER III—Describes flights in which he brought down two German airplanes and the great feat in which he was brought down and was made a prisoner of war.

CHAPTER IV—He is taken to the officers' prison camp at Courtrai. There he begins planning his escape. By some ruse he manages to save and hide away two dollars.

CHAPTER V—Discovers that German hospital staff barbarously executed the fairly wounded soldiers who might be returned to the army lines. He saves the life of his best chum, Lieut. Wynne.

CHAPTER VI—He confiscates a map of Germany and just as he is about to escape he is caught by the Germans. He escapes through a window with the aid of a woman.

CHAPTER VII—For some days he crawls through Germany, hiding during the day, traveling at night, guided by the stars and avoiding the watchtowers. He covers 150 miles before reaching Luxembourg.

CHAPTER VIII—For nine days more he struggles on in a weakened condition through Luxembourg in the direction of Belgium.

Without the means to cook them, potatoes didn't interest me a bit and I thought that the boat itself would probably yield me more than the potato patch. Knowing the canal-bands would probably take their time in the fields, I climbed up the stern of the boat leisurely and without any particular plans to conceal myself. Just as my head appeared above the stern of the boat I saw a silhouette against the sky, the broad outline of a German soldier—upheld helmet and all. I chill ran down my spine as I dropped to the bank of the canal and slunk away. Evidently the sentry had not seen me, or if he had he had probably figured that I was one of the foraging party, but I realized that it wouldn't pay in future to take anything for granted.

CHAPTER X.

Experiences in Belgium.
I think that one of the worst things I had to contend with in my journey through Belgium were the number of small ditches. They interested me at every half mile or so, sometimes more frequently. The canals and the big ditches I could swim. Of course, I got soaked to the skin every time I did it, but I was becoming hardened to that. These little ditches, however, were too narrow to swim and too wide to jump. They had perhaps two feet of water in them and three feet of mud, and I was almost invariably a case of wallowing through. Some of them, no doubt, I could have jumped if I had been in decent shape, but with a bad ankle and the weakened condition in which I was, it was almost out of the question.

One night I came to a ditch about eight or nine feet wide. I thought I was strong enough to jump it and it was worth trying as the discomfort I suffered after wading through ditches was considerable. Taking a long run, I jumped as hard as I could, but I missed it by four or five inches and landed in about two feet of water and three of mud. Getting out of the water was quite a job. The water was too dirty and too scanty to enable me to wash off the mud with which I was covered and it was too wet to scrape off. I just had to wait until it dried and scrape it off then. In many sections of Belgium through which I had to pass I encountered large areas of swamps and marshy ground and rather than waste the time involved in looking for better underfooting—which I might not have found anyway—I used to pole right through the mud. Apart from the discomfort of this method of travel, it was slow time I made, there was an added danger to me in the fact that the "squall, squall" noise which I made might easily be overheard by Belgians and Germans and give my position away. Nobody would cross the line or neutral in that part of the country unless he was trying to get away from somebody, and I realized my danger but could not get around it.

It was a common sight in Belgium to see a cow and a common, an ordinary milk cow hitched together, pulling a wagon. When I first observed the unusual combination, I thought it was a joke and an ox or bull, but closer inspection revealed to me that cows were being used for the purpose.

From that I was able to observe there must be very few horses left in Belgium except those owned by the Germans. Cows and donkeys are now horses and mules. Altogether I spent nearly eight weeks wandering through Belgium, and in all that time I don't believe I saw more than half a dozen horses in the possession of the native population.

One of the scarcest things in Germany, apparently, is rubber, for I noticed that their motor trucks, or lorries, unlike our own, had no rubber tires. Instead heavy iron bands were employed. I could hear them creaking along the stone roads for miles before they reached the spot where I happened to be in hiding. When I saw these military roads in Belgium for the first time, with their very obnoxious tracks that looked as if they would last for centuries, I realized at once why it was that the Germans had been able to make such a rapid advance into Belgium at the start of the war.

I saw the Belgians used dogs to a considerable extent to pull their carts, and I thought many times that I could have stolen one of those dogs it would have been a very good companion for me and might, if I could get a small dog, help me in a fight. But I had no use of feeding it, and the animal would probably have starved to death. I could live on vegetables, which I could always depend upon finding in the fields, but a dog could not eat any help me in a fight.

The knack of making fire with two pieces of dry wood I had often read about, but I had never put it to a test and for various reasons I concluded that it would be unsafe for me to try to do so at that time and under the first place, there was no absolute need for it. I didn't have anything to cook nor utensils to cook it in even if I had. While the air was getting so rather cool at night, I was used to the soot at that time and didn't notice it. In the daytime, when I was resting or sleeping, the sun was usually out.

To have borrowed matches from a Belgian peasant would have been feasible, but when I was willing to take the chance of approaching anyone, it was just as easy to ask for food as matches.

If the second place, it would have been extremely dangerous to have to build a fire even if I had needed it. You can't build a fire in Belgium, which is the most thickly populated country in Europe, without everyone knowing it, and I was far from anxious to advertising my whereabouts to the villages in that part of Belgium through which I was making my course were so close together that there was hardly ever an hour passed without my hearing some clock striking. Every village has its clock. Many times I could hear the clocks striking in two villages at the same time. But the hour had very little interest to me. My program was to travel as fast as I could, stop subject to surprise, and get no attention to the hours in between, and in the daytime I kept only two things to worry about: keep concealed and get as much sleep as possible.

The cabbage that I got in Belgium consisted of the small heads that the peasants had not cut. All the strength had concentrated in these little heads and they would be as bitter as gall. I would have to be pretty hungry to today even a small turnip, raw or cooked, was quite a treat. The few short months ago my life depended upon them. Night after night as I searched for food, I was always in hopes that I might come upon some potatoes or other vegetables which I really couldn't like, but with the exception of once, I had gone through and I outlined my when I found some celery, I was never so fortunate. I ate so much of the celery the night I came upon it that I walked two days thereafter without a bit of food. I carried several bunches away from the more German soldiers with me and used to chew on it as I would encounter, and without a passport you will be a marked man.

Of course, I kept my eyes open all the time for fruit trees, but apparently in the woods and woods I passed I often noticed fish of different kinds. That was either in the early morning just before I turned in for the day, or on moonlight nights when the water seemed as clear in spots as in the daytime. I cleared to me that it would be a simple matter to rig a hook and line and catch some fish, but I had no means of cooking them and it was useless to fish for the sake of it.

One night in Belgium my course took me through a desolate stretch of country which seemed to be absolutely uncultivated. I must have covered twelve miles during the night, without passing a stone or a house or cultivated field. My stock of turnips which I had picked the night before was gone and I planned, of course, to get enough to carry me through the following day. The North Star was shining brightly that night and there was absolutely nothing to prevent my steering all absolutely direct course for Holland and liberty, but my path seemed to lie through arid pastures. Far to the east to the west I could hear faintly the striking of village bells and I knew that if I changed my course I would undoubtedly strike farms and villages, but the North Star seemed to plead with me to follow and I would not turn aside.

When daylight came, the consequence was I was empty handed and I had to find a hiding place for the day. I thought I would approach the first peasant I came and ask for food, but that day I had misgivings—junc—junc—that I would get into trouble if I did, and I decided to go without food altogether for that day.

It was a foolish thing to do, I thought, because I had really suffered from hunger all the day, but it interfered with my sleep. I would drop off to sleep for half an hour, perhaps, and during that time I would dream that I was free, back home, living a life of comparative ease, and then I would wake up with a start and catch a glimpse of the bushes surrounding me, feel the hard ground beneath me, and the hunger pains gnawing at my sides, and then I would realize how far from home I really was, and I would lie there and wonder how I would ever really see my home again. Then I would fall asleep again and dream this time, perhaps of the days I spent in Courtrai, or my leap from the train window, or the Bavarian pilot whom I met so recently, or my last air fight, or my tracer bullets getting closer and closer to his head, and then I would wake up again with a start and think the Lord that I was still dreaming, but all again instead of living through it.

That night I got an early start because I knew I had to have food, and I decided that rather than look for vegetables I would take a chance and apply to the first Belgian peasant whom I came to.

It was about 8 o'clock when I came to a small house. I had picked up a heavy stone and had bound it in my handkerchief and I was resolved to use it as a weapon if it became necessary. Before I had gone through, I was resolved to win my liberty eventually at whatever cost.

As it happened, I found that night the first real friend I had encountered in all my traveling. When I knocked timidly on the door, it was opened by a Belgian peasant about my own age. He asked me in Flemish what I wanted, but I shook my head and pointed to my ears and mouth, indicating that I was deaf and dumb, and then I opened and closed my mouth several times to show him that I wanted food.

He showed me inside and set me at the table. He apparently lived alone, for his ill-furnished room had but one chair, and the plate and knife and fork he put before me seemed to be all he had. He brought me some cold potatoes and several slices of stale bread, and he warmed some milk into a small cup of coffee.

My conversation with all the time I was engaged I knew that he was eyeing me closely.

Before I was half through he came over to me, touching me on the shoulder, and speaking over so that his lips almost touched my ear, he said in broken English, "You are an Englishman—I know it—and you can hear, and that if you wish—and I not right?" There was a smile on his face and a friendly attitude about him that told me instinctively that he could be trusted, and I replied: "You have guessed right—only I am an American, not an Englishman."

He looked at me pityingly and filled my cup again with warm milk. His kindness and apparent willingness to help me almost overcame me, and I felt like expressing him of the consequences he would suffer if the Huns discovered he had befriended me. I had heard that twenty Belgians had been shot for helping Belgians to escape into Holland, and I hated to think what might happen to this good old Sammitian if the Huns ever knew that he had helped an escaped American prisoner.

After my meal was finished, I told him in as simple language as I could "celery—vegetables which I really couldn't like, but with the exception of once, I had gone through and I outlined my when I found some celery, I was never so fortunate. I ate so much of the celery the night I came upon it that I walked two days thereafter without a bit of food. I carried several bunches away from the more German soldiers with me and used to chew on it as I would encounter, and without a passport you will be a marked man."

I asked him to suggest a way by which I could overcome the difficulty. He thought for several moments and studied me closely all the time—perhaps endeavoring to make abso-

"You will call on this man" (mentioning the name of a Belgian in a city through which I had to pass), he advised, "you will be able to make arrangements with him to secure a passport, and he will do everything he can to get you out of Belgium."

He told me where the man in question could be found and gave me some useful directions to continue my journey, and then he led me to the door. I thanked him a thousand times and wanted to pay him for his kindness, but he would not accept anything. He did give me his name and you may be sure I shall never forget it, but to mention it here might, of course, result in serious consequences for him. When the war is over, however, or the Germans are thrown out of Belgium, I shall make it my duty to find that old Belgian if I have to go through again all that I have suffered already to do it.

CHAPTER XI.
I Encounter German Soldiers.
What the Belgian told me left behind the need of a passport gave me fresh cause for worry. Suppose I should run into a German sentry before I succeeded in getting out?

I decided that until I reached the big city which the Belgian had mentioned—and which I cannot name for fear of identifying some of the people there who befriended me—I would succeed in getting out. Since I had discarded my uniform and had obtained civilian clothes, I had not been quite so careful as I was at first. While I had done good road improvement work now in progress, the Spokane falls grade will be closed to traffic of all sorts except between the hours of 6 o'clock p. m. Saturdays and 8 o'clock a. m. Mondays. By Order of the County Commissioner—Adv.

Effective Thursday morning, May 8, and continuing until the completion of road improvement work now in progress, the Spokane falls grade will be closed to traffic of all sorts except between the hours of 6 o'clock p. m. Saturdays and 8 o'clock a. m. Mondays. By Order of the County Commissioner—Adv.

That evening I came to a river perhaps seventy-five yards wide and I was getting ready to swim it when I thought I would walk a little way to find, if possible, a better place to get to the river from the bank. I had walked more than a few hundred yards when I saw a boat. It was the first time I had seen a boat in all my experiences.

I was firmly chained, but as the stakes were sunk in the soft bank it was not much of a job to pull them out. I got in, drunk to my heart's content, shivered over to the other side, got out, drove a stake into the ground and moored the boat. I would have been a simple matter to have drifted down the river, but the river was not above on the map and I had no idea where it might lead me. Very reluctantly, therefore, I had to abandon the boat and proceed on foot.

I made several turns that night and before daylight found a safe place in which to hide for the day. From my hiding place I could see through the bushes a heavy thick wood only a short distance away. I decided that I would start earlier than usual, hurry to the wood and perhaps, in that way, I could cover two or three miles in the daytime and gain just so much time. Traveling through the wood would be comparatively safe. There was a railroad going through the wood, but I did not figure that that would make it any the less safe.

Left-Handedness.
At least one human being in fifty is left-handed. This is the minimum estimate. Some authorities say four in a hundred. Dr. Franklin Jones declares that 40 per cent of the race are born left-handed, but about three-fourths of these are converted by training into more or less imperfect right-handers. On the other hand, about 1 per cent of the race, though born right-handed, is trained to use the left hand because of accidents to the right—Scientific American.

Had a Right to Be Preved.
"Blines missed an important experiment the other day because of the transportation situation and now he thinks he's got a good case against the railroad." "Did they annual his trial?" "No—they ran it on time."—Buffalo Express.

MEASUREMENTS OF SUBSTITUTES EQUAL TO ONE CUP OF FLOUR

These weights and measures were tested in the Experimental Kitchen of the United States Food Administration, Home Conservation Division, and of the United States Department of Agriculture, Office of Home Economics.

Table listing measurements for various flour substitutes: Corn meal (coarse), Corn meal (fine), Sweet potato flour, Peanut flour, Potato flour, Rice flour, Rolled oats, Soy-bean flour, Sweet potato flour, etc.

This table will help you to make griddle cakes, muffins, cakes, cookies, dry biscuits, and nut or raisin bread without using any wheat flour.

Table comparing Old Recipe and New Recipe for flour substitutes. Old Recipe: 2 cups wheat flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, etc. New Recipe: 1 3/4 cups barley flour, 1 cup (scant) corn flour, etc.

The only difference is the substitution for the wheat flour. Everything else remains the same.

GOOD COMBINATIONS OF SUBSTITUTES

You will get better results if you mix two substitutes than if you use just one alone.

Table showing good combinations of flour substitutes: Barley flour or Buckwheat flour and Peanut flour or Soy-bean flour.

CAUTIONS: 1. All measurements should be accurate. 2. The batter often looks too thick, and sometimes too thin, but you will find that if you have measured as given in the table the result will be good after baking.

3. Bake all substitute mixtures more slowly and longer. 4. Drop biscuits are better than the rolled biscuits, when substitutes are used. 5. Pie crusts often do not roll well and have to be patted on to the pan. They do not need chilling before baking.

In Which Red Hair, "Booze," and Heredity Mix

WASHINGTON—He was in the prime of life, with the prime left out. And he had been to Baltimore. You can tell.

Two young women passed him, and the one with a straw helmet on the reddest hair he ever saw turned up her nose and commented:

"He'll get run over the first thing he knows and serve him right. I hate a man who drinks."

The other young woman must have been foolish in spots, of course, or she would never have worn heels high enough to make her wobble, but she had her share of humanity and common sense.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself for saying a thing like that. Maybe he can't help it any more than you can help the color of your hair."

"Heredity; that's what it is. Mother says that when she was a girl it was an every-occurring occurrence for some young fellow to be brought home in a huck, but that as the years went on and men began to realize that they couldn't dissipate and do big brain work, they left off their spears and their sons of today do for it. By the time my Pa's hair is grown you won't ever see a poor chap like this one but your Ma's will probably have a daughter with hair as red as her own—which shows what heredity will do."

When you have thought something fine and beautiful, go a little further and put it into the action. Noble thoughts which do not inspire to noble living are the most hopeless of shams.

Qualified Explanation.
The teacher had asked the children to tell her something about giants, when one little boy blurted out: "A giant is an awfully great—oh, big, big man"—and then a pause and, fearing some one would think he believed in them, quickly added: "But most everybody knows there isn't any!"
