THIRTY-SIX THOUSAND HUNS HURLED FORWARD

ENEMY LAUNCHES DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO CAPTURE CITY, BUT HEROIC DEFENSE COMPELS THE WITHDRAWAL OF FORCES - ATTACKING ARMIES FORM HALF CIRCLE EAST TO WEST ON NORTH FRONT OF FIFTEEN MILES

(By United Press) PARIS, June 10.—A desperate German attempt to take Rheims "at any price" last night was completely blocked by the defenders, the French war office announced today. The assault was made on a 15-mile front between Virgny and Fort La Pompelle, forming a complete half circle about the city on the north front, east to west. Thirty-six thousand Germans participated in the repeated attacks.

TURKS ATTACK HOSPITAL OF AMERICANS AT TABRIZ

(By United Press) WASHINGTON, June 10.—What may prove to be an act of war which this country cannot help but recognize—state department awaits full reports. The attack on the American hospital at Tabriz, Persia, was reported by the American minister at Tehran.

Spanish Flag Flying The flag of Spain was flying over the hospital and the Spanish colors, representing United States interests, at Tabriz, protested against the looting.

CAPTURED HUNS ARE DRAGGED OUT OF BED

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 10.—One Franco-American unit on this front, under an American commander, faces the well-known German fighting regiment, it was held in a daring patrol by American marines.

At the opposite side of the town of Charvres (seven miles east of Chateau-Thierry, on the south bank of the Marne, and directly opposite Chateau-Thierry) in the darkness they crossed to the opposite side in a boat.

After the prisoners and their captives had jumped in, the boat started for the American side again. As it neared the shore it struck some submerged object and capsized. All of the occupants were rescued.

There were dozens of volunteers for this venture. Those who were chosen were solemnly that they would not be captured.

SEES ENEMY BIRDMAN FALL

ARTILLERYMAN GENORIS R. BYBEE GIVES GRAPHIC STORY OF FLYER'S DESTRUCTION

A fragment of wood from a German airplane destroyed in the region where he is stationed is an interesting inclosure in a letter under date of May 28 received Monday from Private Genoris R. Bybee of the 160th field artillery regiment in France, by his parents, County Surveyor and Mrs. James A. Dybon. Describing the destruction of the enemy flyer, Private Bybee says:

Battle in the Air
A German airplane came over yesterday to take pictures. A French plane went up after it. After fighting a long time at a height of about 3000 feet, the German plane caught fire and started to fall. There was a captain and a lieutenant in the machine. The lieutenant was driving. When the first flame burst out the captain got out on the tail of the machine and was putting out the fire, when the lieutenant turned a sharp loop that threw the captain off and of course killed him instantly. Then the plane burst into flames again and came down.

He Fall in a Woods
The lieutenant kept good control of the machine until the fire beated his back and then fell straight down. Both the machine and the man burned to ashes.
It was an awful thing to happen, and it sure showed that they were very daring. But that is what we are here for, and if they want to be safe they had better stay at home.

Carries Shell to Gun
I am well and happy and enjoying myself fine. We are still at the front. I am a cannoner. My part is to carry the shell from the bench to the bay which is placed on the gun at the breach. Then the other fellows do the rest—run, place the powder and set the gun for the work. That, of course, is done after I am out of the bay and the shell is rammed home.

On the first shot we always have to stand clear of the gun, for the shell spade has to bury itself, and in soft dirt it may come back three feet.
They have a great deal of noise as a companion. The sergeant of my section was firing something up in front of the wheel of our piece, and as we were firing they didn't notice him up there and fired the gun. I was standing at the side of the wheel at a dis-

VANGUARD OF AMERICAN TELEPHONE GIRLS REACHES FRANCE

These are the first of the American telephone girls who are going to operate the switchboards for our soldiers in the fighting lines, photographed on their arrival for duty in France.

GIRLS BACK HOME ARE BEST HELP IN FRANCE

WITH THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES AT THE FRONT.
The girls they left back home form a powerful bond of sympathy among the fighters over here. A pretty illustration came out in a visit yesterday with a medical officer of a regiment on repose.
The medical officer is a captain, his assistant a second lieutenant, and they have a private for orderly. The three were living in a single room of an old and dilapidated French house, inhabited by a French family, despite the proximity of the front lines.
On the walls were French lithographs, mostly religious. One showed friends and relatives gathered around the cradle of a newborn child of European. Underneath was the inscription, "He shall be French." A gootly number of old-style portraits were hanging over the bright colored wall paper. On the mantelpiece was a complicated clock in a glass case, the luxury of the family, probably.
Sweethearts Are Equal
With the clock on the mantelpiece were the following photographic portraits of three lovely and wholesome looking

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO TREASON CHARGE

NEW YORK, June 19.—Jeremiah O'Leary, charged with treason, was arraigned before Judge Hand yesterday, shortly after his arrival from Portland, Oregon, in the custody of agents of the department of justice.
He pleaded not guilty and was committed to the toms to await trial. The reading of the indictment charging him with treason took twenty-five minutes. When asked by Judge Hand if he had any request to make, O'Leary replied that he might wish the court to aid him in securing counsel. He said he realized that attorneys now were reluctant to defend men charged with so serious an offense.
O'Leary was nervous and ill at ease while the indictment was being read and his voice broke several times while he was addressing the court.
When the reading of the indictment was finished, Gertrude O'Leary, a sister, who was attending the trial of John J. O'Leary in the adjoining court on a charge of aiding Jeremiah to escape from federal authorities, came into the room. Crying "Jerry, Oh, Jerry," she pushed her way through the crowd to his side. Throwing her arms around his neck, sobbing, she clung to him until they were separated by court attendants.
When O'Leary emerged from the court room he was met by his father and brother, Alexis. None of the members of O'Leary's family knew of Jeremiah's being in the city until told he was pleading in the adjoining room.

OLD SOLDIERS OPEN PROGRAM

COLONEL J. A. PATTEE AND HIS VETERAN FIDELITY FIRST NUMBER AT CHAUTAUQUA

Colonel J. A. Patee, and his company of four Old Soldier Fidelity, four battle-scarred veterans, two from the North and two from the South, who faced each other during the stormy days of the early sixties, came to the Twin Falls Chautauqua with a stirring patriotic program on the opening night, Thursday evening. The Chautauqua tent is being erected on the lots on Fifth avenue north, opposite the Presbyterian church, and an unusually heavy advance sale of tickets indicates a capacity audience at each number of the concert which continues until Wednesday evening, June 26.

"We're a few promising youngsters," says Colonel Patee, "and none of us can read music. Notes look like little negroes on a 'bob-wire' fence to us." But how they can play!
For eight years these veterans, the youngest one 72, and the oldest over 80, have young men have been appearing in leading theaters throughout the country. Last year they went on the Chautauqua platform as a feature attraction on one of the large eastern circuits and were voted the most convincing patriotic number on the week's program.

As a fitting background they appear in a stage setting representing the battlefield of Gettysburg as it appeared July 1, 1863, when the fiftieth anniversary of that great battle was celebrated by a reunion of the Blue and the Gray.
The Chautauqua committee and the Elison-White management invite all veterans, their wives and widows to attend the opening night free of charge.

CONGRESS FAVORS RAISING DRAFT AGE

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Congress as a whole is strongly in favor of changing the draft age, thus removing the danger that deferred classes will be drawn upon next year.
Fear that congress would not approve increasing the age up to 25 or 30 has interested President. Harsh - Crowder from pressuring it before this. But Crowder has now been assured that congress will not only "stand for" radical revision of the age limits, but will welcome it.

SHYSTER IN UNIFORM DEFRAUDS PATRIOTS

Sheriff Kendall Receives Warning Notice from Welser Where Red Cross Was Victim

Sheriff F. M. Kendall has received word from Sheriff W. B. Walker of Welser, relative to a young man wearing a soldier's uniform and giving the name of James J. Murphy, who is wanted for obtaining money under false pretenses from the local Red Cross at Welser.
Murphy, who claims to be on furlough from the 301st Engineers, stationed at Fort Douglas, Utah, is branded as an impostor and not a member of the army. He has plenty of money, it is said, but his game is to go to the head of the local Red Cross and ask for aid, also soliciting help from young girls, giving as a reason that he is broke and must get back to duty. He is about 23 years old; height about 5 feet 6 inches; weight about 150 pounds; brown hair and eyes, rather long face and very prominent chin; body long and legs short. He was last seen at Nampa.
Effective Thursday morning, May 8, and continuing until the completion of road improvement work now in progress, the Shoshone falls grade will be closed to traffic of all sorts except between the hours of 6 o'clock p. m. Saturdays and 9 o'clock a. m. Mondays. By order of the County Commissioners—adv.

HAIL IS H

When your crop is devastated and you did not carry hail insurance. What would you do about those obligations you have to meet if your crops were wiped out by hail?
You never before had so much invested in your crop and you never had such urgent demands on you for money. Where would it come from if you were haled out? Such a loss this year would mean financial ruin to many.
You can not afford to take the chance. Think it over and then come in and inquire your wheat, beans, etc., before it is too late.
Landed in tenant can insure a share of crop and pay insurance only on the part insured.

"OLYMPIAN OF THE HUN"

BY LIEUTENANT PAT O'BRIEN

CHAPTER I—Introductory. Pat O'Brien tells of his purpose in writing the story of his adventures.

CHAPTER II—Tells of his enlistment in the Royal Flying Corps, his training in Canada and his transfer to France for active service.

CHAPTER III—Describes fights in which he brought down two German airplanes and his final fight in which he was brought down wounded while the German plane was near a prisoner of war.

CHAPTER IV—He is taken to the officers' mess in a field hospital. There he begins planning his escape. By great sacrifice he escapes to a wooded area two daily rations of bread.

CHAPTER V—Discovers that German hospitals are being selected. He is severely wounded and deserted by his comrades. He escapes to a wooded area and returns to the dining table. Wilhelm's name is called.

CHAPTER VI—His captives are many of them. He escapes through a hole in the wall. He is traveling at a rate of 10 miles an hour.

CHAPTER VII—For nine days he crawls through Germany, hiding during the day, traveling at night, and eating and subsisting on raw vegetables. He covers a mile before reaching a safe hiding place.

CHAPTER VIII—For nine days he has been in a hole in the ground, hidden through Luxembourg in the direction of Metz.

CHAPTER IX—He enters a forest. He is followed by a German soldier. He escapes through a hole in the ground. He is followed by a German soldier. He escapes through a hole in the ground.

CHAPTER X—When well on his way through Belgium he is betrayed one night by a French peasant who betrays him and directs him to a man in a Belgian city who will help him to get a passport.

CHAPTER XI—By mingling with Belgian peasants he manages to elude German soldiers and reach the Dutch border. He is followed by a German soldier. He escapes through a hole in the ground.

CHAPTER XII—Hijacker forces a passport for O'Brien and promises to assist him in getting into Holland. Later, however, he and his associates demand an exorbitant sum for their services and O'Brien breaks with them.

Because of the fact that I was unable to speak either English or German I could not go out and buy food, although I still had the money with which to do it. That was one of the things that galled me the most, that I had to be the wherewithal in my jeans to buy all the food I needed and yet no way of getting it without endangering my liberty and life.

At night, however, after it was dark, I would steal quietly out of the house to go what I could pick up in the way of food. By that time, of course, the stores were closed, but I scoured the streets, the alleys and the byways for scraps of food and occasionally got up enough to say hello to Belgian peasants whom I met on the streets, and in that way I managed to keep body and soul together.

It was quite apparent to me, however, that I was worn out in the city.

I Rummaged the House Many Times. Then I had been in the brick and I decided to get out of that house as soon as I could. I knew that Huy-lichter had made up his mind to do nothing further for me.

might come I would go out and investigate the window. When I got the answer I laughed and so I went to the window for the moment I must have attracted the attention of the neighbors, but I couldn't help it. The window was filled with huge quantities of sausage! The store was a butcher shop and one of the principal things they sold apparently was sausage. The display they made, although it consisted merely of sausages piled in the window, certainly had plenty of "pulling" power. It "pulled" nine Germans out of ten out of their course and indirectly "pulled" me right across the street! The idea of those Germans being so interested in that window display as to stand in front of the window for two, three or four minutes at a time, however, certainly seemed funny to me, and when I got back to the house I sat at the keyhole again and found just as much interest as before in watching the Germans stop in their tracks when they reached the window, even though I was now aware what the attraction was.

One of my chief occupations during these days was catching flies. I would catch a fly, put him in a spider's web (there were plenty of these on the house) and sit down for the spider to come down and get him. But always I pictured myself in the same predicament and rescued the fly just as the spider was about to grab him. Several times when things were dull I was tempted to see the tragedy through, but perhaps the same Providence that guided me safely through all perils was guarding, too, the destiny of those flies, for I always weakened and the flies never did suffer from my just punishment.

The house was well supplied with books—in fact, one of the choicest libraries. I think I ever saw—but they were all written either in English or French. I could read no French at all, but my little French I might have made a little headway with the latter, but the books all seemed too deep for me and I gave it up. There was one thing though that I did read and reread from beginning to end; that was the New York Herald which must have arrived just about the time war was declared. Several things in this interesting bit, and particularly the baseball scores, which I studied with as much care as a real fan, really caught my eye. I couldn't refrain from laughing when I came to an account of Zimmerman (of the Onus) being benched for some spat with the umpire, and it afforded me just as much interest three years after it had happened—perhaps more—than some current item of world-wide interest had at that time.

I rummaged the house many times from cellar to garret in my search for something to eat, but the result of three years of war had made any success along that line impossible. I was like the man out in the ocean in a boat and thirsty; with water everywhere but not a drop to drink.

I was tempted while in the city to go to church and Sunday school, but my judgment told me it would be a useless risk. Of course, someone would surely say something to me and I didn't know how many Germans would be there or what might happen, so I gave up that idea.

During all the time I was concealed in this house I saw but one automobile and that was a German staff officer's. That same afternoon I had one of the frights of my young life.

I had been gazing out of the keyhole as usual when I started smelling down the street the measured tread of German soldiers. It didn't sound like very many, but there was no doubt in my mind that German soldiers were marching down the street. I went upstairs and peeked through the window and sure enough a squad of German infantry was coming down the street accompanied by a military motor truck. I hadn't the slightest idea that they were coming and as I had no practical means of escape I was in a predicament. There were many places among the wine kegs and cases where a man could conceal himself, but as a matter of fact, I did not believe that any such contingency would arise.

The marching soldiers came nearer. I could hear them at the next house. In a moment I would see them pass the keyhole through which I was looking.

"Halt!" At the word of command shouted by a junior officer the squad came to attention right in front of the house! I waited no longer. Running down the stairs I flew into the wine cellar and although it was almost pitch dark—the only light coming from a gas-tight which led to the backyard—I soon found a satisfactory hiding place in the extreme rear of the cellar. I had had the presence of mind to leave the door of the wine cellar ajar, figuring that the soldiers found a closed door they would be more apt to search for a fugitive behind it than if the door were open.

My decision to get away from that front door had been made and carried out just too soon for me. I had only just located myself between two big wine cases when I heard the tramp of soldiers' feet marching up the front steps, a crash at the front door, a few harsh words of command which I did not understand, and the sound of a door being flung from room to room and such banging and hammering and smashing and crashing that I could not make out what was going on.
