SUPREME TEST EXPECTED ON WESTERN FRONT

ALLIES EXPECT BRUNT OF NEXT EFFORT TO FALL BETWEEN REIMS AND VERDUN—YANKS IN LINE OF FIGHTING AT SEVERAL POINTS

(By United Press)

LONDON, June 23.—The Germans will soon launch their final, supreme effort, it was learned from an authoritative source today.

It is certain that a partial offensive will be started against the northern portion of the British front. Where the main blow will fall is not known, but it probably will be between Reims and the Ardennes region, with subsidiary attacks simultaneously along the whole front.

Will Hit Americans

If the new drive should fall in this area, it would be straight southward on a front of more than 70 miles, embracing both Rheims and Verdun. The British in the Rheims region, the Americans in the Verdun and the Toul sectors and the French between would bear the brunt or the blow.

Austria's offensive power has been broken and she will be unable to renew her Italian drive for a considerable time, unless aid is furnished by Germany. There are no indications that such aid is likely.

Counter Attack Due

An Italian counter offensive in the mountain area, on a major scale, is due, it was declared.

In addition to the large forces of Americans between Verdun and St. Mihiel and eastward of St. Mihiel, which would be involved in case the American left wing were included in such a drive, it is probable that a small force of our men would be in the exact center of the fighting.

Several weeks ago American artillery was reported in action at Batterie Kemmel, northwest of St. Menhoult. It is possible that this force has been withdrawn, as were the American units

HINDENBURG'S DELAY CAUSES SPECULATION

WITH MUN CHIEF'S FORCES AT MAXIMUM AND ALLIES' EVER INCREASING AND WEATHER CONDITIONS FAVORABLE, MILITARY MEN CANNOT FIGURE WHY HE HESITATES

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 23.—Hindenburg's delay in resuming his west front offensive is mystifying allied leaders, but is occasioning them no worry. Our ability to stop a new drive increases proportionately as he holds back.

"Flamers Grip" Busy

Antislavery rumors are in circulation concerning Hindenburg's reasons. There are stories of a strange new disease devastating whole divisions, thus necessitating postponement of the drive. Apparently the only foundation for this is the prevalence of what the Germans call "Flamers grip." This is not serious and lasts only a few days, though accompanied sometimes by a high fever.

Another misleading rumor is that dissatisfaction is rampant in the German army and that the high command is afraid to order another attack. It appears to be true that the Germans are beginning to realize that their battle plans are less God-inspired than they had been led to believe, but their discipline is such that they still march when they are told to.

A third explanation is that the weather and ground are declared to be unfavorable for offensive maneuvers. I personally investigated the lowlands and highlands of northern France. Soldiers have been seen driving and adapted to easy movement.

Must Retain Stand Firm

Hindenburg's delay is due to infinitely deeper reasons. Despite the vast number of men at his disposal—he will never have more than he has now, even with the arrival of released prisoners from Russia—he must carry out victory or defeat with what he has.

"Seeing that his forces are dwindling while the allied troops are increasing, he is unable to make a move without weighing every chance and calculating the cost in men."

Hindenburg must play his hand soon. All the stakes are on the table.

SUMMONS VON HERTLING TO CONFERENCE

KAISER THOUGHT TO BE READY TO FORGE KUEHLMANN TO QUIT

COPENHAGEN, June 23.—Imperial Chancellor Hertling has been called to German headquarters for an important conference. This news followed word from Berlin that Foreign Minister Kuehlmann probably would not resign immediately, but would at least remain until the Barmen peace and eastern questions had been further cleared up.

Following Kuehlmann's speech to the Reichstag in which he said peace would not come through military effort, the kaiser was reported to be furious at him. Summoning of Hertling to headquarters after word of Kuehlmann's intention to resign in office had been circulated, may indicate the kaiser intends to take a further hand in the matter.

UNIVERSAL TRAINING COMES NEXT

WAR MEASURE TO BE SUBMITTED IN FALL WILL PROVIDE FOR MILITARY AND VOCATION OF YOUTH OF NATION BETWEEN 18 AND 21

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A direct step toward universal training—both military and vocational—of the nation's young manhood is contemplated in the great man power bill which will be presented to congress by the war department in September.

The tentative plan which will be a part of the general measure changing the draft ages will provide that youths of 18, 19 or 20 shall be trained both in military and industrial lines until they are 21, at which age they may be drawn into the military establishments.

President Favors Measure

As reported recently by the United Press, President Wilson is said to favor careful training of young men for all emergencies even after peace has come. That he and Secretary Baker are about to urge such training as an actual war measure also was stated by members of the house and senate military committees today.

The reason the president and Secretary Baker urged postponement of the proposed legislation to increase the draft ages now is understood to have had its basis in their desire to get a carefully worked out plan whereby both now and after the war the nation's manpower may be trained and not lost. The manpower bill, it is stated, will make it possible to turn to war work or fighting every man between the ages of 21 and 50 years.

PRIVATE TELLS HOW HE TAKES HUNS WHOLESALE

CHICAGO'S LATEST HERO IS MAN WHO BROUGHT IN EIGHTY-THREE GERMAN PRISONERS

By LOWELL MELLETT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 28.—(Night)—Frank P. Lennart, the oldest hero Chicago ever produced, told the United Press today how he was forced to capture 83 Germans in the midst of Tuesday night's fierce battle at Belleau wood. He had just arrived with his prisoners, breathless with pride.

"You see, I got caught between the lines," he said, "I discovered a machine gun standing straight at me, and I fired into a shell hole."

Gave Himself Up
"The gunner did not shoot, so I waited a while and then put up my hands. Still he didn't shoot, so I slowly raised my head and there stood the gunner with his hands up. He motioned for me to come up and took me to the captain, who conveyed me to his dugout. He gave me something to drink and some cigarettes and asked if he wasn't surrounded. I assured him he was."

"He said 'wait a minute—' you know I went the German—and went out. When he returned he said the others wanted to surrender before they were killed and asked me to take them to the American lines."

Secured Assistance
"We started off with all hands, including mine, held up. We got lost in the woods and it took a long time to find the American army. Then some more Americans came up and they wanted to escort my prisoners to headquarters."

"I said: 'Nothing doing. They're mine.' They let me have 'em, and I brought 'em back."

RELATES HORRORS OF GERMAN RAIDS ON HOSPITALS

RED CROSS ILLUMINATIONS USED AS TARGETS BY ENEMY AIR PLANES

(By United Press)
AN ATLANTIC POET
June 28.—How several German airmen attacked and destroyed a British hospital, killing 37 defenseless persons, including three nurses, and injured thrice that number, was told today by Colonel G. H. Andrews of Vancouver, B. C.

The colonel, who went to France as a chaplain with the first Canadian expeditionary force, arrived here on a Canadian steamer with a score of other Canadian and British officers.

Tells of Attacks
"I was conversing at a hospital in a little French town called Boulogne," said Andrews. "This place handled about 30,000 patients a month. Every night the Red Cross markings were brightly illuminated with searchlights, so there would be no possibility of mistaking the buildings identity."

"On the night of May 29 several of us who were lounging outside heard the unmistakable drone of German aero motors."

"Suddenly a bomb struck squarely on the roof of the main building. It tore through the upper stories, overturning several cars and exploded squarely in an operating room, where two or three doctors, two nurses and several orderlies were at work. All three in the room, including the patient, were blown to atoms."

Drive Off Escapers
"Other bombs were dropped and the building caught fire. Most of the stairways were destroyed so that we had great difficulty in removing the helpless patients."
"As we struggled to save these poor fellows from being burned to death two of the German machines swooped low and began to hammer away at us with their machine guns."

Reciprocal Relations of Utility and Public

WHILE the ownership of a utility is lodged with individuals, the service which it renders is for the use of the public. The public is, therefore, justified in expecting that the service shall be of a satisfactory quality and adequate to meet the needs of the community.

But no utility can be successful without the co-operation of the public. In fact, a relationship of reciprocity exists between the utility and the public. The duty of the utility to the citizen and the duty of the citizen to the utility is reciprocal and each is interested in the welfare of the other.

If the citizen does not prosper the utility loses its patronage. If the utility is not prosperous, the citizen loses through inferior or inadequate service.

Hence the question of adequate revenues for the utility is one with which both the utility and the public are mutually concerned.

The Telephone Company is carrying a terrific load of abnormal costs of material and labor. In view of the fact that our revenues are going along practically on a level, not increasing with the increased costs of rendering service, the burden has grown too heavy for us to carry alone.

The year 1917 produced in Idaho alone a deficit of $118,233.76.

Until adjustments are made that will correct this condition, the telephone service upon which the public depends will remain in jeopardy.

No utility can meet the expectations of the public without adequate revenues. So the public serves its own interests when it co-operates with the utility in any effort which the utility makes to produce revenues sufficient to meet the requirements of the service.

WEATHER CONDITIONS FAVORABLE TO CROPS

Rain in South Idaho, Though Delaying Haying, Is Boon to Dry Land Grain

Fine growing weather and all crops are making rapid growth is the feature of the week ending Tuesday as summarized in a statement issued by Clinton E. Nordquist, meteorologist for the department of agriculture weather bureau station at Boise. The summary contains:

"Light to moderately heavy rains occurred in some localities of southern Idaho. These interfered to some extent with hay harvest but they were very beneficial to grain and root crops, especially in dry farm sections, where drought conditions were becoming acute. The rains did not extend into northern Idaho and crops in that portion of the State are in a critical condition. Crops in the upper Snake River valley were damaged by high water."

Lack of moisture has caused dry farm wheat to head short in some sections. Irrigated wheat is developing in fine condition and prospects for a large crop are very good. Oats and barley look good, except in the north where these crops are drying up."

Haying Order of Day
Irrigated pastures and meadows are in fine shape. Haying is the order of the day. Much alfalfa has been cut but only a small portion of the first cutting is in the stack. Work in the hay fields has been interrupted by showers. In the fields where the first crop has been removed the second growth is coming on fast and indications point to a heavy yield. A scarcity of harvest help is reported in Owyhee county. Dry farm pastures and meadows are burning up, except where freshened by the rains of the past week."

The condition of the range is much improved in the areas favored by rains. The unusually warm weather has hastened the growth of forage on the up-range. Stock are holding up fine. Cattle are said to be in much better condition now than at this time last year. They are doing especially well in the eastern counties. Boundary county reports a good supply of beef and mutton on hand, with no buyers."

Raspberries Ripening
The cherry season is at its height in the Lewiston district; in Kootenai county the cherries are just beginning to color; in southern Idaho the season is about over. Raspberries are now coming on the market. A fair crop is indicated.

Garden and truck crops are growing fast and are in excellent condition for the most part. Cannery crops were damaged by heat and the crop is almost a failure in Paria county. Corn, beans, and potatoes are seriously damaged by wire worms in Nezperce county. The sugar beet crop is irregular. In Madison county thinning is about done and the crop is good; in Cassia county beets are good except on sandy soil; in Bonneville county beets are suffering from heat, cut worms, and weeds."

DEYING COSTS LITTLE

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Dehydration, or drying of fruits and vegetables, urged now by the U. S. government as a food saving measure, costs but about 1/2 cents a pound.

The process reduces the products treated to from 1-7 to 1-10 original size, and leaves a practically non-perishable food, affected by neither heat nor extreme cold. It requires no special container or sealing. Plain paper bags to protect against dust and insects, are the best and cheapest containers.

Re-hydration—restoring the water to the vegetable—requires from 20 minutes to two hours; and the reconstituted product has lost neither its original flavor nor its color.

FILER COMING IN FORCE FOR FOURTH

Plans Organization of Section Led by Red Cross Float to Join Parade Here

At the regular monthly meeting of the executive board of the Filer Branch of the Red Cross, it was decided on Monday evening of this week that Filer should be represented at the Twin Falls Red Cross Fourth of July celebration, says the Filer Journal. In this connection committees were appointed and a parade will be organized by Filer at 9:00 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth. This parade will then proceed to Twin Falls where it will join the Twin Falls parade. This section of the parade will be distinctly a Filer organization and all Filer people who own automobiles, and all those tributary to Filer, especially those belonging to the various Red Cross auxiliaries, are urged to join in the parade, which will be organized at the bandstand at 9:30 o'clock as indicated above. All automobiles are expected to be decorated for the occasion, with flags and emblems appropriate to the national holiday and the Red Cross organization. The Filer section of the parade will be led by a Red Cross float which will be prepared by the committee appointed for that purpose, of which Mrs. O. H. Sherrer is chairman. Wm. Bunce is chairman of the parade committee.

Filer will also be represented at the Twin Falls celebration by a home unit play that will be given in a tent there under the direction of Mrs. Wilfred McKay-Olsen. Mrs. Olsen will also operate a fortune telling booth and another concession or two and the proceeds from all of these will go to the Red Cross—in fact the whole celebration is for the benefit of this organization and all profits accruing will go into the coffers of the Red Cross.

Effective Thursday morning, May 1 and continuing until the completion of the road improvement work now in progress, the Shoshone falls grade will be closed to traffic of all sorts except the hours of 6 o'clock p.m. to 8 o'clock a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.

PARISIANS GET ACCUSTOMED TO BOMBARDMENTS

ONLY PASSING INTEREST SHOWN WHEN SHELL HITS CLOSE BY—USED TO WAR CONDITIONS

(By United Press)
NEW YORK, June 28.—“People living in London and Paris do not realize the strain they are under,” said Mrs. Bertha K. Mellett, writer and wife of Lowell Mellett, United Press war correspondent, who arrived last night from Paris.

Parisians Used to It
“Two days before I left Paris a shell from the German long range gun fell a couple of hundred yards in front of me. Not having a gentle temperment, I ran away from and not into the smoke and fumes and took refuge in a shop. Not a single saleswoman on the front glass roof of the establishment seemed disturbed by the catastrophe in the street. They went on matching samples and measuring materials as calmly as though the systematic bombs could not be relied on to forward another moment of himself in fifteen minutes.”

Little Curiosity in Evidence
“Six shells fell between noon and half past one that day and except for a momentary curiosity and his racial ambition to be able to tell of being within twenty yards of a bursting shell and coming away unscathed, the Frenchman evinced no emotion.”

“The big gun and the Gotha have not made panic in Paris. Much less have the Gotha weakened the Londoner’s genius for ‘carrying on.’ But after the war when all the new evolved facilities of resistance against shells which have been supplementary means to the people that need them, are left without purpose or function there may be a general uneasiness such as I felt during my first night in New York. We may hear no more of peace now than we hear of shell shock now.”

Quietness Disturbs Sleep
“The absence of war conditions come to be the abnormal state of affairs to the person who has spent a year or more under the Gotha. To land in a night and find not only undisturbed sleep but a shattered nervous system and moreover to see the unloved moon in the sky and then to experience not so much as a raid warning amounted to a shock to my nervous system. I understand now the plight of the war correspondent. I know who is kept awake by the crickets and nightingales at the chateau where he lives and has to get up to the front where the guns boom to get a night’s rest now and then.”

PROMINENT SOCIALIST CALLS PARTY UNAMERICAN

Foreign-born Leaders Have Stated Control of Party Declare Man Who Headed Ticket in 1916

NEW YORK, June 28.—Alban Benson, writer, Socialist candidate for president in 1916, has withdrawn from the Socialist party, he announced today. He charges that the party has passed into the control of foreign-born leaders who are devoid of Americanism and of “an anarchistic, syndicalistic minority.” Benson said that the leaders he referred to were not pro-German, but were irascible by reason of their blurb of seeing the difference between a covetous and imperialistic nation like Germany, fighting for conquest, and a nation like the United States, fighting for the principles of freedom.

—Make the Most of Everything.
“If we are not doing as well as we think we ought to we may not have far to go for the trouble. Most of us have more time than we profitably employ, more money than we actually need, more minutes than we make use of, and more friends than we keep in friendly touch with. If we would make the most of everything we would do better than we thought it possible.”

—Doves Not Always Peaceful.
In spite of the fact that the dove is the emblem of peace, a couple of male birds of this deceitful species can give a very good account of themselves to the feds. The weapons they employ are their wings, which they use with terrific force.

—The Idea.
“I see where Smythe has got into trouble by an abusive letter to the man who injured him.” “That’s so. Justice does not always allow a man to write his wrongs.”

WRITES GAS STORY WEARING GAS MASK

By FRED F. YERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES
IN PICARDY, June 5. (By Mail).—This is a story about gas, written with a gas mask on.

A flickering candle furnishes the light. It is night. Outside the roar of the regular artillery bombardment of the night can be heard. Tight light of the guns flashes across the sky. The hum of airplanes can be heard overhead in the moonlight, while an anti-aircraft gun over at the right barks in protest at the invading foe of the air.

The gas mask is not comfortable, but it is to demonstrate that your copy from home who may have to wear one is not helpless in it. The eye pieces—the windows—cloud up a good deal, but after taking your finger and carefully pushing in the side of the mask, the windows can be wiped. This must be done carefully, so there is no leak along the side of the face. The mask must remain tight and snug.

Breaths Through Mouth
The nose clip is on my nose, as I write. A rubber hose with a mouth piece much like a football nose guard runs from the box respirator. If you can just forget about the mask, and breathe naturally, through your mouth instead of your nose, you get along in great shape. If you get fussy about it, there’s likely to be trouble.

The secret of combating gas is to keep your head. When there is a gas alarm, a soldier is taught to put on his gas mask and keep it on. Well-trained troops do not often suffer heavy gas casualties nowadays. The best the Boche can hope for is to impair their efficiency while they are wearing the masks.

A FORLORN ANNIVERSARY

By J. W. T. MASON

Four years ago today Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, was assassinated by Serbian fanatics. In revenge for this crime, Austria-Hungary tried to make a vassal state of Serbia, and this gave to the German militarists an opportunity to bring about the world conflict which they had long been planning for the time when they could be sure of the dual monarchy's support as an active and willing ally.

This was the cause of the war. On the fourth anniversary of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand's murder, the German militarists are gathering together in anxious convulsion because the German government has been compelled to declare to the world that peace cannot be won on the battlefield. It has required three years and eleven months of fighting to extort this confession from Germany. The vast dreams of pan-German ambitions that made international outlaws of the Hohenzollern warriors cannot be realized by force of arms.

The German military machine which was ready for instant brigandage on the assassination of Franz Ferdinand is no longer able to keep up its bluff front of assured victory. The machine has failed. Von Kuehlmann, the third foreign minister whom Germany has called to subservient office under the militarists during these last four years, has declined to conceal any longer from the German people the fatal defect of the machine which is so relentless in its futile sacrifice of German man power.

The four years from Franz Ferdinand to Von Kuehlmann mark the shattering of the Hohenzollern's plan to rule the world by force of arms. Von Kuehlmann's words are ringing throughout Germany not to be forgotten. They soon will be ringing in the ears of the soldiers who will then know that in every future German offensive they are dying in vain for victory.

Four years after Ferdinand's death disquiet has gripped Germany. Demoralization is the next condition the Kaiser must face unless he publicly abandons the worship of militarism.

Fighting Under Two Flags

By J. W. PEGLER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third installment of the true story of the heroic careers of Lieut. Col. Richard H. Griffiths and Maj. Alexander Rasmussen, interwoven with which is the first authentic history of the famous American Legion, which didn't wait for America to enter the war, but joined the Canadian army early, to get an early crack at the Boche. The fourth installment will appear Saturday.

When we came into the war most of the surviving Canadian Americans applied for transfer to the American army, and at St. Louis they who had been keeping a little silk Stars and Stripes under the water-proof lining of his cap in readiness for the day, went over the top in a daylight campaign with his American flag pinned to his blouse. This had distinctly won the Texas gunner who carried his flag on his bayonet.

Few were chosen to go to the American army. Bass and two friends were among them. Of the latter, one went back to his home in Columbus, O., suffering from fresh wounds, to help train American troops, while the other, from Florida, went with Rasmussen to an American officers' finishing school in France to lecture to new American officers.

Didn't Like Swivel Chair, Joe
"We were rotten lecturers," said Bass on the day the assignment ended, as he sat in a little swivel chair in an ancient French fortress town, waiting for his train. "I'm glad I'm going back to be with troops again, because I wasn't built to fill a swivel chair."

Next time I heard of him he was commanding his battalion in the line. It was a heavy responsibility for Bass—the biggest job he had ever tackled. And his rank of major in the American army meant much more than the same rank in the Canadian force had meant to him.

It cheered him up, however, to know that his old comrade from Florida, who had been his partner in raids, lectures and forays into London and Paris, was close by, commanding a company in the battalion of Col. Griffiths.

This company commander is still in the ring and fighting, so he cannot be identified except by his nickname of Capt. Jack. Capt. Jack had been a captain in the Philippine constabulary with the selfsame Griffiths as his major. Prior to that he had been a sergeant in the old Sixth infantry in the Philippines.

Went to Hong Kong
When we came in 1914 Griffiths and a constabulary captain, whom we will call Capt. Mack, beat it pronto for Hong Kong to fight under their old flag, because it was impossible at that time to throw their fighting ponies against the Boche under the flag of their allegiance—and of their true devotion.

Griffiths and Mack received commissions and went to join the Sherwood Foresters in England. They went through the hardest fighting at the Somme. Mack got two shrapnel blows but neither he nor the colonel ever "got up" the wound stripes they were entitled to wear.

"What good do stripes do? Who gives a whoop how many times they were wounded?" said Mack. He would ask whenever you called his attention to the harness of his left cuff, where stripes are worn.
These two Philippine constables, Griffiths and Mack, were as much responsible as any other two men for the great reputation achieved by their division. In the British army today the old soldier regards that division as the fightingest outfit that ever took a trench—even after the recent fighting to death by many other gallant units. If the British had ever taken the French custom of decorating the corps of collective units then that division would have had the Victoria Cross.

STORIES OF AMERICAN CITIES

Cripple Naturally Averse to Giving Up Soft Soap

KANSAS CITY—Give the cripple a chance to be an honest man is the main theme of a report on Kansas City cripples compiled by James Ford, district superintendent of the research department of the board of public welfare. Mr. Ford made his observations from 350 cripples, most of them found north of Ninth street. Of these, 70 were self-supporting, 14 partly so, 52 were beggars and others were cared for by charity. Eighty were legal residents of Jackson county, 10 of Wyandotte county and 40 had no permanent residence. About 72 per cent of the men disabled were under thirty years old and self-supporting; 75 per cent of those disabled after forty years of age were not self-supporting. The study shows that the beggars who loiter the streets and claim they are too badly crippled to work are entirely self-supporting. The success of the cripple in supporting himself depends a great deal on his attitude of mind. The use of alcohol is a big factor, 80 per cent of the beggar cripples being addicted to liquor, whereas 60 per cent of the self-supporting disabled men do not use liquor.

A peculiar sort of "cripple philosophy" along the line, that the world owes them a living, is generally the reason why a crippled man takes up begging as a livelihood. It is often quite remarkable. One young beggar with a leg off below the knee was offered a place by a merchant at $20 a week with a promise of $15 after six months. The cripple told the merchant that he could not consider the offer as he made more money if he took less than two hours' work each day.

Disabled people are especially handicapped. Mr. Ford says, if they live in home or relatives. Only 50 per cent of the unfortunate men included in his survey live with relatives and have any sort of home in the true sense. The balance of them live in cheap lodging houses among questionable surroundings. "It would be much better for the cripples and the public if every cripple could have personal attention in solving his problems rather than to receive doses from passersby on the streets," said Mr. Ford.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

DIRECTOR OF AERONAUTICS

Brig. Gen. W. L. Kenly, who has been made chief of the new division of military aeronautics in the United States army, believes in straight-from-the-shoulder methods, calls a spade a spade, and has no fads. Burnished with closely cropped reddish hair, rather short though stockily built, General Kenly looks the part of a soldier and a fighter. He looks like the type of a man who would be first out of a hundred to volunteer to break a bucking bronco if occasion required.

"I'm going to do the work and then talk about it afterward," General Kenly said. "When I talk about airplanes, it's not going to be how many we're going to send to France, but how many we have sent and delivered."

He was graduated from West Point in September, '85, in the artillery. He served with Caproni's battery at Santiago and later saw service in the Philippines. He served two years on the Mexican border and was six months at the flying school at San Diego. He went to France last July as colonel of the Seventh Field artillery and was promoted to brigadier general on August 5.

While in France he was placed in command of the air service by Pershing and showed unusual aptitude for this line of work.

REALLY IN A BUCKET SHOP

A Successful Experiment

By GORTON CARRUTH
(Copyright, 1918, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

"He put his paper aside abruptly, rose and walked down the left-street path to the other bench, where the girl was sitting.
"Would you like to try an experiment?" he asked quietly, standing with hat in hand before her.
She looked at him for a moment unsmiling, her expression neither inviting nor repelling.
"Perhaps," she said at length.
He sank into the seat beside her. "It is something I have often wanted to try," he said slowly. "Here are two, perfect strangers in a city of five millions, and never likely to see each other again after we have this chance meeting place. We have not here for half an hour, each pretending to read, or to watch the squirrels, or the falling leaves, or the misty golden sunshine out there on the field, but each examining and appraising the other when the other was not looking."
"Now, this is the experiment: We have each gained a strong first impression of the other. Let us, with absolutely frankness, tell each other what those impressions are. Let us do what friends cannot do—speak without reservations, made for fear of hurting each other's feelings."
She sat without speaking for a moment after he had finished, gazing thoughtfully out at the warm expanse of autumn-tinted park.
"But why?" she asked at last. "I am not sure that Burns was right. Perhaps it is just as well that we can't see ourselves as others see us."
"That," he said, "makes it an experiment. It will be a new experience. I want to know exactly how I look in the eyes of a stranger, however much the knowledge may hurt. Have you ever felt that way?"
"Yes," she said. "I have. Everyone does, I think."
"Well, I'll tell you, if you will do as much for me."
Again she hesitated and sat silently watching him as he squirmed at that unbroken by self-consciousness, was busy burying a nail.
"Well," she said finally, "you first."
"The fact that I came over here and proposed this experiment to you at all shows that I thought you a sensible girl," he began slowly. "You impressed me as being neither a prude nor a flirt. You are pretty—I don't need to tell you that—but I was not spooled you. You are rather thoughtful and studious, and you have a genuine interest for the beauties of nature—something which too many girls just pretend to have. You are not above, I believe, taking an interest in bibles and embroidery, although you know what is going on about you in the world and read something besides the woman's page in the newspapers. You don't work for your living, and your home is one of the comfortable houses in the suburbs. You are a good citizen of the society side of life, but you keep heartily busy at serious things. You are probably a suffragist in a quiet way, and you are also interested in some form of social or philanthropic work, and you do not do it as an heretically assumed duty. And—"
He was interrupted by the girl's low laughter. "Why not say that I have all the good qualities, and be done with it?" she asked. "Your impression is certainly not very accurate. Let's see if I can do better."
"You, it seems to me, have many of the excellent qualities that you are attributing to me. You are nothing of a sport, but are a rather serious-minded young man, somewhat too much given to introspection. You are not had looking, and you impress me as having a good deal of common sense. You are about twenty-five, and you are one of our young professional men—an architect, perhaps, or an engineer of some sort. You read a good deal, and when it comes to newspapers, something besides the sporting page. You are rather domestic by nature, and you have a sense of humor. You also live in one of the better homes in the Seventies or the Eighties, and you are a confirmed New Yorker. There, how is that for a snapshot portrait?"
"It did not answer at once, and they both sat silently for a few minutes. Presently he said gloomily:
"My experiment has failed, I'm afraid."
"Of course," she assented gently. "It seemed bound to. It shows of how little worth a first impression is to the way. You wondered if the defects that you see in yourself were apparent to others, and you are half disappointed that they are not, for you do not like the idea of wearing a mask. Isn't that it?"
"Yes."
"And yet you must have known, except in moments of self-depreciation, that you make a favorable first impression; and I know that I do, concealed as that may sound."
"All right," he straightened up abruptly. "Then we come to the second part of this experiment. We will now tell just how badly each of us is mistaken."
"Well," she hesitated. "We can try it, but that also is a pretty hard try to do."
"Listen to me first," he answered. "While I tell you what a poor judge of character at first glance you are, I may have a sense of humor, but it is doesn't work very well. I am gloomy, pessimistic and am rapidly converted into a chronic grouch. I am not one of our rising young professional men; I am a clerk in a large mercantile house, and there have been anything startling in my rise yet. I may have common sense, but it doesn't keep me from making a fool of myself about half the time. I may be domestic by nature, but that's all the good it does me. So far from being in a brown-study house in the Eighties, I think I live in a single room down in the Twenties." I come from Michigan and am a comparative stranger in New York. I read a good deal, it is true, and you are right about the sporting page, but I don't believe that I ever had an original idea in my life. And—well, I might go on at considerable length, but how do you like the retouched portrait, so far?"

The girl was laughing at him again. "You are the portrait man now," said she; "especially since you are clearly in a mood for self-depreciation. Let me now offer your portrait of me a little. I hope that I am sensible. I'm not a flirt, but I'm not so sure that I am a genuine friend. I may have embroidery, but I'm not interested in charitable work and I don't read the woman's pages in the newspapers. I don't live in a brown-study house in the Eighties, either, but have a room up in the One Hundred and Eighties, and I'm living by teaching a class of Little Greek, Italian and Russian children down in an East Side school, and I don't move in any other society. I have a bad temper; I'm afraid my pupils suffer a good deal at times. No doubt I am more studious than most girls, but I like the movies and candy and all sorts of frivolous things very much. Now how do you like the retouching?"
"Well," he admitted gravely, "I rather think it improves this portrait; it makes it so much more human."
They fell silent again, watching the sunshine on the colored trees.
"You are quite right about one thing," said the girl presently. "I like the sun and the wind and the sky. I was brought up in the country, and I don't believe I could stand it here in these endless miles of brick and stone, if it were not for the park."
"Yes," she said. "I have. Everyone does, I think."
"Every Sunday afternoon. I like this spot best of all; the view is so beautiful."
"So do I."
The sun had left the trees and they could see the lights of the city twinkling like brilliant stars.
"Do you know," said the man, rising. "I think my experiment is not going to be a failure, after all, though it has resulted as I expected."
"Perhaps it won't be," answered the girl quietly.
There was a moment's pause. Then: "I will say only good-bye," said she. "Good-bye, and have a genuine interest for the beauties of nature—something which too many girls just pretend to have. You are not above, I believe, taking an interest in bibles and embroidery, although you know what is going on about you in the world and read something besides the woman's page in the newspapers. You don't work for your living, and your home is one of the comfortable houses in the suburbs. You are a good citizen of the society side of life, but you keep heartily busy at serious things. HOW PIONEERS MADE CHANGE

Silver Dollars Were Quartered and "Sharp Shins" Were Result—Pella Curren Currency.

We of today, with half-dollars, quarter-dollars, dimes, nickels and pennies, often find it difficult to "make change." How much difficult was it for the early settlers to do so, largely, it is written in "Stories of Old Kentucky." As the Indians used wampum, so the pioneers of Kentucky used the skins of wild animals as their first currency. While immigrants continued to come to this region, Spain after a century, came gradually into circulation. Still there was no small change.
"As necessity is the mother of invention," our forefathers actually made change by cutting the dollar into four equal parts, each worth 25 cents. These were again divided, each part worth 12½ cents, called bits. People sometimes became careless in the work of making change, and often cut the dollar into five "quarters" or into ten "eighths." On account of the wide shape of these pieces of cut money, they were called "sharp shins." If change was needed for a smaller sum than 12½ cents, merchants gave pins, needles, writing paper and such things.
The cut silver gradually found its way back to the mint for recoinage, usually to the loss of the last owner. As late as 1800, a business house in Philadelphia received 100 pounds of cut silver from a Kentucky merchant, which was sent on a dray to the United States mint for recoinage.
The Christening.
"And what is the name of this child?" asked the minister ready for the ceremony.
"Well, you see, parson," said the plain-speaking father, "we haven't just decided yet. Wife wants him named after her uncle and I want him named after mine. Just flip up a cent, parson, and see which it is to be—heads I win."
Suits Not Comfortable.
"I'm afraid I will lose my business," remarked A. J. Merrill, manager of the Princess theater at Evansville, the other day.
"And why?" wondered an innocent listener, who was sitting on the front bench.
"Well, you see, the seats don't seem to be comfortable since the government put the tax on them."—Indianapolis News.

DRIVE WORKERS LAUD SACRIFICE OF SUBSCRIBERS

SAY CONTRIBUTIONS OF SMALL MEANS ARE DESERVING OF HIGHEST PRAISE

The War Savings Stamps drive in Twin Falls county which has for its goal the securing of pledges for the subscription to the county's quota of $400,000 is bringing to light a measure of patriotic devotion and sacrifice among those of smaller incomes which has not yet been equaled by the subscriptions of those better able financially to subscribe for larger amounts.

The drive committee has promised to announce the names of the members of the Limit Club--those who have subscribed for $1000 worth of the stamps--but it is the opinion of workers in the campaign that the subscriptions among those of smaller means who are contributing most heavily in proportion to their means are equally deserving of publicity.

Give Up Electric Lights

One block captain relates a touching story of the sacrifice of an aged couple in this city to help win the war by purchase of War Savings Stamps. They are doing without electric lights, this captain says, in order that the few cents thus saved may be used for the purchase of War Savings Stamps. The husband earns his livelihood by caring for lawns, and when he was paid for this work by one of the block captains he took the interest of his sheep amount in a baby bond.

Bill Boy Invests Earnings

Another block captain relates as an example of praiseworthy patriotism the war contributions of Cyril Rhinehart, 464 Fourth avenue west, a bell boy at the Rogerson hotel, whose older brother, Harlan Rhinehart, is with the American expeditionary forces in France. Cyril is the owner of a fifty dollar Liberty bond and of five War Savings Stamps, all paid for out of his earnings. In addition to this he has pledged himself to buy three War Savings Certificates each month until the end of the year.

Incomplete returns from the several districts of the county Thursday night at the close of the third day of the campaign, showed the total of pledges reported to headquarters in the sum of $205,523. In addition to the subscriptions secured in this drive, prior investment in the county of approximately $100,000 in War Savings Stamps applies on the quota. Only reports of block captains who have completed the canvass in their blocks are being recorded at this time in Twin Falls.

Following are the incomplete returns for the county as compiled at headquarters in the Twin Falls Bank & Trust company building Friday morning:

Subscription Quota	Amount
Twin Falls	$25,100
Dahl	30,000
Filer	10,000

OFFICERS TAKE HAND IN HINDUS' QUARREL

Convince Best Worker, Where Kaffir Falls of What is Fair Price for Board

Deputy Sheriff John M. Heck and Probation Officer John R. Ash were called Thursday to adjudicate a difference that had occasioned bloodshed between Hindu workers in the mill fields one mile north and two miles east of Twin Falls. According to the story told the officers the Hindu who exhibited a wounded hand stating that he had been stabbed with a knife by another of his countrymen, was employed by the alleged assailant, and that he had complained about the requirement for paying to the other the charge of one dollar a day for board, considering fifty cents a day a sufficient temperance. The argument was closed temporarily when the employer resorted to the use of the knife to emphasize his position, and was finally adjudicated when the employer agreed with the officers that the higher price for board was the price to be paid and returned to his work.

"Washington of Europe" Placed in New War Zone

WOMEN BUY FEMININE FINERY—ONE THEATRE
DOES BUSINESS IN BOMB-PROOF CELLAR—MEET-ING PLACE OF MANY NATIONALITIES

By FRED R. PERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, June 28.—The official order that Paris has been placed in the army zone means more to Americans than a mere passing notice. It means that America's "Washington of Europe" is in the war zone.

From the offices occupied by Americans throughout the city to the guard day and night, the heart of France beats with the heart of America.

"Business as Usual"

War is the only thought of Paris, but the broad, shaded boulevards, the shop windows displaying feminine finery, the beautiful women and the uniformed men thronging the streets speak everything but the war zone. The city has the appearance of a vast park, with sunlight streaming down on the crowds, the sidewalk cafes and taxis and military automobiles hurrying about.

Sitting on benches or strolling in the moonlight along the Champs-Elysees, where American boys—some fresh from the trenches, others newcomers with French girls on their arms. Their voices drift to the ear like the whispering of lovers in shaded lanes at home.

New Meeting Place

British, French, Belgian, Australian, Italian, Portuguese and Canadian officers, and soldiers of all the nationalities of the world mingle with Americans, meet on the same mission—to save the city that is the symbol of all that is best in the world from the crushing power of barbarism, typified by the boche.

Theaters and cafes are open and are crowded as heretofore. On one side street just off a boulevard there is a little "upgar de guerre." It is in a cellar and here performances can be continued regardless of air raid alarms.

"OUTWITTING THE HUN"

By
LIEUTENANT
PAT O'BRIEN

(Copyright, G.A. by Pat O'Brien)

"No, Lieutenant," he rejoined, "that is out of the question. We can't risk losing you for good by sending you back to a part of the line occupied by Germans, because if you were unfortunate enough to be captured again they would undoubtedly shoot you."

"Well, if I can't serve in France, sir," I suggested, "wouldn't it be feasible for me to fly in Italy or Salonica?"

"No," he replied, "that would be almost as bad. The only thing that I can suggest for you to do is either take up instruction—a very valuable form of service—or perhaps it might be safe enough for you to serve in Egypt, but just at present, lieutenant, I think you have done enough anyway."

Then he rose and shook hands with me and wished me the best of luck, and we both said "Good-by."

In the adjoining room I met Earl Cromer again, and as he accompanied me to the door seemed to be surprised at the length of my visit.

As I left the palace a policeman and a sentry outside came smartly to attention. Perhaps they figured I had been made a general. As I was riding back to the hotel in a taxi I reflected on the remarkable course of events which in the short space of nine months had taken me through so much and ended up, like the Bible, with my being received by his majesty, the king! When I first joined the Royal Flying Corps I never expected to see the inside of Buckingham palace, much less being received by the king.

CHAPTER XX.

Home Again.

That same day, in the evening, I was tendered a banquet at the Hotel Savoy by a fellow officer who had met three other friends of mine there. I would be home by Christmas. This was had been made at the time he heard that I was a prisoner of war, and the dinner was the stake.

The first intimation he had of my safe return from Germany and the fact that he had won his bet was a telegram I sent him reading as follows:

"Lieut. Louis Grand:

"War bread bad, so I came home."

"PAT."

He said he would not part with that message for a thousand dollars. Other banquets followed in fast succession. After I had survived nine of them I figured that I was now in as much danger of succumbing to a surfeit of rich food as I had previously been of dying from starvation, and for my own protection, I decided to leave London. Moreover, my thoughts and my heart were turning back to the land of my birth, where I knew there was a loving mother who was longing for more substantial evidence of my safe escape than the cables and letters she had received.

Strongly enough, on the boat which carried me across the Atlantic I saw an R. F. C. man—Lieutenant Lancelot.

I walked over to him, held out my hand and said "Hello!"

He looked at me steadily for at least a minute.

"My friend, you certainly look like Pat O'Brien," he declared, "but I can't believe my eyes. Who are you?"

I quickly convinced him that his eyes were still to be relied upon, and then he started at me for another minute or two, shaking his head dubiously.

His mystification was quite explicable. The last time he had seen me I was going down to earth with a bullet in my face and my machine doing a spinning-nose dive. He was one of my comrades in the dying corps and was in the fight which resulted in my capture. He said he had read the report that I was a prisoner of war, but he had never believed it, as he did not think it possible for me to survive that fall.

He was one of the few men living out of eighteen who were originally in my squadron—I do not mean the eighteen with whom I sailed from Canada last May, but the squadron I joined in France.

As we sat on the deck exchanging experiences, I would frequently notice him gazing intently in my face as if he were not quite sure that the whole proposition was a hoax and that I was an impostor.

Outside of this unexpected meeting, my trip was uneventful. I arrived at St. John, New Brunswick, and eventually in the little town of Monmouth, Ill., on the Ex-hatke river.

I have said that I was never so happy to arrive in a country as I was when I set foot on Dutch soil. Now, I'm glad I shall have to talk that statement back. Not until I finally landed in Monmouth and realized that I was again in the town of my childhood days did I enjoy that feeling of absolute security which one never really appreciates until after a visit to foreign parts.

Now that I am back, the whole adventure constantly recurs to me as a dream, and I'm never quite sure that I won't wake up and find it so.

(THE END)

THE KAISER PHONES TO HELL

The kaiser called the devil up.
On the telephone one day,
And the girl at central listened in
To all they had to say.

"Hello," she heard the kaiser's voice.
'Is old man Satan home?
Just tell him this is Kaiser Bill
That wants him on the phone.

The devil said "Hello" to Bill
And Bill said "How are you?
I'm running here a hell on earth
So tell me what to do."

"What can I do?" the devil said;
'My dear old Kaiser Bill!
If there's a thing that I can do To help you, I sure will."

The kaiser said, "Now listen,
And I will try, and tell
The way that I am running On earth a modern hell."

"I've saved for this for many years,
And I've started out to kill;
That it will be a modern job
You leave it to Kaiser Bill."

"I started out to Paris,
With the aid of poisonous gas,
The Belgians, darn them, stopped us,
And would not let us pass."

"My Zepps dropped bombs on cities Killing both old and young,
And those the Zeppelins didn't get Were taken out and hung."

"My army went through Belgium
Shooting women and children down
We tore up all the country
And blew up every town."

"My submarines are devils,
Why, you should see them fight,
They sneaking through the sea
And sink a ship at sight."

"I was running things to suit myself
Till a year or so ago,
When a man called Woodrow Wilson Wrote me to go more slow."

"He said to me, 'Dear William,
We don't want to make you sore,
So be sure to tell your U-boats
To sink our ships no more."

"We have told you for the last time,
So, Bill, it's up to you,
And if you do not stop it
You have got to fight us, too."

"I did not listen to him
And he's come after me
With a million Yankee soldiers
From their home across the sea."

"Now that's why I called you, Satan,
For I want advice from you.
I know that you would tell me
Just what I ought to do."

"My dear old Kaiser William,
There's not much for me to tell,
For the Yanks will make it better Than I can for you in hell."

"I've been a mean old devil,
But not half as mean as you,
And the minute I get you down here
I'll give my job to you."

"I'll be ready for your running,
And I'll keep the fires all bright,
And I'll have your room all ready
When the Yanks begin to fight."

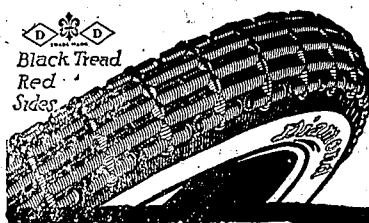

"For the boys in khaki will get you,
I've nothing more to tell,
Hang up the phone and get your hat
And meet me here in hell."

MOTORISTS are buying Diamond Tires—such numbers that over 2,000,000 are now service—easily, one for every three cars in America.

This patronage is significant when you consider that the big demand for Diamonds comes from motorists who have used them in previous years and insist upon Diamond mileage again.

Such demand can be commanded only by tires of super-value.

Environmental influence. To understand fully the effect of environmental influence requires a pretty good understanding of the native qualities of the material upon which the environment acts. The reaction of differently formed human beings is never exactly the same even when the environmental action on them is nearly identical. AMERICAN GUNS MOW DOWN HUNS IN BELLEAU WOOD

GERMAN CASUALTIES OVER THOUSAND IN THE FIGHTING TUESDAY BARRAGE FIRE DEADLY

By LOWELL WELLET,
United Press Correspondent
WITH AMERICAN
ON THE MEUSE
(2:25 p. m.)—The of German killed in in Tuesday night in Belleau wood is be-and 1,200, according to reports today.

This big preparation of casualties due to the large fire of the Amercan artillery preventing the huns from fleeing the wood.

There was a brilliant moonlight and numerous patrol incursions resulted.
The Germans shot up with machine guns one of their own patrols, which was running from an American party.
Another incident was the use of gas shells against a small American unit.

CONTROL OF AUSTRIAN

reported slight advances on the Aigue, at Col Del House and Capo Sile. Von na declared all these efforts were frustrated.

Paris reported only artillery activity, while London detailed successful patrol encounters.

The German war office, evidently as precaution to further destruction of the Rhine cathedral, announced that allied artillery observers had "again" been seen on the cathedral.

"On the east bank of the Meuse we carried out successful reconnaissance north of St. Mihiel (where Americans are in the line)" Berlin said. "A strong attack was repulsed."

FRENCH IMPROVE POSITIONS

PARIS, June 28.—French troops make some progress and improve their positions in Senest wood, northwest of Montdidier, last night, capturing "thirty prisoners," the war office announced today.

"Detail operations between the Marne and the Ourcq, south of Dammarcy, resulted in 32 prisoners."

FRESHING RESULTS QUET

WASHINGTON, June 28.—"Aside from repulse of hostile parties which attempted to raid our positions in the Vesges (Thursday) there is nothing to report," said the American communiqué today.

"AT QUENELMIE, FRANCE, APRIL 27, 1918, under a heavy bombardment, vol- untarily went to the assistance of other soldiers who had been buried in a dug- out by enemy shell fire and was killed while engaged in this heroic action."

HAG REPORTS RAIDS

LONDON, June 28.—"Attempted enemy raids in the neighborhood of Moyonville and south of Arras were repulsed Wednesday night with losses to the enemy," Field Marshal Haig reported today.

NEW RULE MAKES AVAILABLE BIG FLOUR SUPPLY

STATE FOOD ADMINIS- TRATOR R. F. BICKNELL EXPLAINS REGULA- TIONS AT MEETING

Dealers who have exhausted the stocks of flour they are entitled to buy under the food regulations, will be permitted to replenish their stocks under special permit provided the quantity for their community has not been exhausted, according to an announcement made by State Food Administrator R. F. Bicknell at a meeting of about 60 food dealers of Twin Falls recently assembled here Thursday afternoon in the offices of the county familiar.

Under the provisions of the new rule two bakeries which have been closed for several weeks past on account of inability to secure flour, will be reopened July 1, when special permits to enable them to buy more flour will be issued by the county food administrator.

All Dealers to be Supplied This emergency regulation will assure to Twin Falls county an abundant supply of wheat flour, according to County Food Administrator C. R. Munson, who presided at the meeting and introduced Mr. Bicknell. Some of the members of the county have been out of flour for several weeks, having used up the allowance of .20 per cent of their flour purchases of the corresponding period of the preceding year, or who through operation of the regulations herebefore obtaining, have been deprived from securing a sufficient supply.

How Discrepancy Arose

A considerable discrepancy between the theoretical and actual distribution of flour in the several communities has resulted from the withdrawing this year of the Twin Falls Milling & Elevator company from the retail flour regulations provided that each dealer should be permitted to buy this year 70 per cent of the amount of his flour purchases during the corresponding period last year. There was no provision for the distribution of the flour credit during the year that have gone out of business during the year. The new ruling provides that the county food administrator, beginning July 1, may issue special permits to release equally among the several dealers in each community the differences between the amount allowed and the amount actually purchased by the community under the regulations.

Cooper, manager of the Twin Falls Milling & Elevator company, stat- ing that the sales of flour during the first quarter of 1917 totalled 1,200 tons, while the sales dur- ing the corresponding period this year had reached 1,500 tons, leaving a balance of 300 tons in the hands of the community under the regula- tions.

Mr. Bicknell will sales of flour throughout Idaho this year about 45 per cent of the sales during the corresponding pe- riod last year.

Substitutes to be Cheaper

New regulations governing the distribution of food to be issued at the beginning of the fiscal year on August 1.
Mr. Bicknell promised, will bring about a decided drop in the price of wheat flour substitutes. Hereafter manufacturers of substitutes have been permitted to add heavy overhead expense to the price of their product, Mr.
Bicknell said, but for the ensuing year a fixed charge for manufacture will be permitted the same as with the manufacturers of substitutes have been permitted. "Substitutes will cost less and flour will cost more next year," Mr.
Bicknell said. He predicted that the price of wheat will be set this year at between $2.35 and $2.50 per bushel at principal points.

Grain Storage Problem

Transportation and storage of his crop is the big problem that confronts the wheat grower this year, Mr. Bicknell asserted. "There are not enough cars in the United States to move this year's wheat crop within a period of even 60 days. It is up to every farmer to provide himself with facilities for storing at least one-half of his grain crop this year," Mr. Bicknell said.

Sugar Situation Aids

While the situation as regards wheat flour is improving with the promise of the abundant crop this year, the sugar situation, within the next few days has become critical, Mr. Bicknell stated, and the most drastic regulations must be rigidly enforced to meet it.
Within the past 30 days the United States has lost 25,000,000 pounds of sugar in transit from Cuba through the sinking of ships, and tonnage that was dependent upon to tap the sugar supplies of Java and other producing sections also must be replaced, he stated.

There was mutual artillery firing last night.

"Casualties were inflicted by our patrols."

"Near Montcourt we carried out a successful daylight raid yesterday. We took a few prisoners and sustained no casualties."

A CITY IS FULL OF MEN

Red Cross Women Serve

At noon, luncheon was served in the city park to members of the contingent by women of the Twin Falls Red Cross branch, who, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the same place, will serve to the men their final meal before leaving for the cantonment an hour instant.

Big Demonstration Planned

Arrangements for the farewell demonstration for the contingent are on a scale commensurate with the size of the party and the importance of their undertaking. The men will depart in squad at 6 o'clock at the park from which point they will be escorted to the railroads station by the Twin Falls band, members of Dan McCook post, Grand Army of the Republic, the Boy Scouts, and the Elks lodge, together with a crowd of relatives and friends of the men who are going to get the kaiser.

Follows Brother to Front

Dave Girdner, leader of the party, is the older brother of Charles Girdner who, as a member of the Canadian expeditionary force, was the first Twin Falls man to fall in France, being killed at white on seventy day in the fall of 1916. He has waived detailed classification, leaving his wife, who is the mother of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hart—and-year-old son, to take active part in the struggle in which he was permanent. A greater personal interest than does any other resident of Twin Falls, except his parents.

Office Closed During War

Assistant Arthur W. Ostrom is the senior member of the law firm of Ostrom & Green at Buhl, which is discontinued automatically during the importance of the war, with Mr. Ostrom's departure, the junior member, William T.
Green having been commissioned as a lieutenant and assigned to duty in the aviation section upon his graduation last November from the army aviation officers' training camp at the San Francisco.

OGDEN PRISES HOLD FIRM

The Ogden livestock market maintained its price for hogs at $10.00 during the past week despite the general heavy receipts for summer months, and the increased slightly for top prices in several days of the past week. With such a record maintained for June, livestock commission men at the Ogden Union Stock yards anticipate that there will be generally good prices throughout the summer.

The minimum price for hogs has been set at $15.50 on the Chicago basis, which would be approximately $14.50 in Ogden, yet there is no doubt that the market conditions will remain such that minimum prices will not be required. It is expected that the hogs to be shipped overseas as well as the distribution of western throughout the United States will continue to be satisfactory for the summer months. The market conditions are expected to be good throughout the summer months, with prices in general holding firm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Commission board buying was active on the Chicago Board of Trade today. With few offerings corn futures bulged quickly, followed by oats to a less extent.
Slight reactions occurred when longer sold around the top figures. Slightly higher hog prices started provisions off moderately higher.

June corn opened late at $1.40c, down 5c, quickly advancing 7-8c thereafter. July corn, up 5c on opening at $1.47, made a further gain of 1-3-4c before noon. August corn, opening at $1.49, was down 1-4c, but later advanced 1-4c.

June oats were up 1/2c on a late opening, 78c, and rose to 79c. July oats opened at 72c, up 1/2c, and made a further 3-4c gain. August oats, opening

WASHINGTON ADVISED OF CONTAMINATED DELIVE

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The expected offensive on the west front is nearly ready to burst forth again, according to information reaching the war department today.

Apparently it is being hastened by the Austrian failure in Italy, and the war by Von Kuhlmann's recent remarks casting doubt on the military leaders.

PEACE MISSION MAKES LITTLE HEADWAY

Feels Out Situation in Switzerland and Finds Things Unfavorable

LONDON, June 28.—Another Austrian attempt to throw out peace feel-ers via Switzerland has failed, it was reported here today in press dispatches from Zurich.

These dispatches stated that Austria, Hungary, through an unofficial representative in Switzerland during the past few days, had attempted to discover the allied standpoint regarding "important questions." The attempt failed completely and returned to Vienna.
