India's Prize Fighting Birds

In most countries little birds are matched against one another for beauty of plumage or strength of song, but in India they are taught prize fighting.

The quality is most commonly used in these prize competitions and the bird dealer who stock the fighting kind do a good trade among the natives. The birds are kept in cages, scores and scores being on view at the various bird dealers' shops. Those who engage in the sport go the round of these shops, and select those birds that seem quarrelsome to the other inmates of the cage. For the small additional fee of five cents to one many the native here is given of selecting from the stock in hand.

Only the male birds are used, the females being placed in their cages within sight of the battle royal to encourage their mates to fight. This really do by means of a peculiar whistle. The natives have side stakes on the fight, but the only calculation the winning bird receives for perhaps a few brasses—and a good shaking up in a liberal feed of delicacies.

plant food than any other crop.
 12. Will smother out nearly all kinds of weeds.
 13. Will prepare heavy wet alkal land for other crops.
 14. An excellent bee pasture, making white honey.

Portable Granaries

The maximum storage to be obtained from an advantageous use of the most economical tonnage of lumber is as follows:

In this section of the country 8, 12 and 14 feet lengths of "dimension" lumber are available at the same price per thousand, 16 foot lengths have a higher unit price and 8, 12 and 20 feet lengths are still higher in cost for the same actual quantity of lumber. The use of 8 foot studs, joists, and rafters, rather than 9 or 10 foot pieces, is therefore economical and also gives the compact sily essential to portable bins. This bin is designed to be of sufficient strength to withstand high usage and racking when being dragged over the ground, as well as the pressure of the grain when filled. The granary may be set alongside the separator—one or more to be provided for each setting—and be filled directly from the elevator of the separator.

15. Will grow where other clovers and alfalfa will not.
 (a) On low, wet, alkali land.
 (b) On dry, stony, gumbo soils.

Disadvantages of Sweet Clover

1. Is a biennial—will not seed every other year.
2. Grows rather coarse for hay and cove slowly.
3. Must be cut very green and high for hay.
4. May be killed by mowing too low.
5. If not cut once for hay grows too large to cut with grain binder.
6. If pastured too close will not reseed.
7. Stock sometimes refuses to eat it, but will soon learn to like it.

Percherons

During the last 10 months the Percheron breeders of the United States have sold more than 10,000 Percherons to Canadian buyers. Six hundred during the last seven months by 91 different Canadian buyers. Thirty-two purchasers were located in Alberta, 4 in British Columbia, 12 in Manitoba, 2 in New Brunswick, 7 in Ontario, and 25 in Saskatchewan. Two hundred and thirty-nine of the 611 sold this past season were males. It is believed that this constitutes a record for the exportation of any kind of pure bred livestock to Canada. These very heavy exportations are significant of the growing popularity of Percherons in all parts of the Dominion, and of Canadian's firm belief in the superiority of these for breeders of good draft horses.

Sales increase—It will also interest you to know that 7,430 transfer certificates, showing sales of Percherons, were cleared through the offices of the Percheron Society of America between November 1, 1917, and June 24, 1918. This shows a gain of 4 per cent in sales over the same period last year.

Illinois and Iowa leading Percheron States—Measured by the total number of registrations made last year, Illinois and Iowa are far in the lead of all other states in Percheron production. Out of the 10,658 Percherons recorded during the last fiscal year, Illinois recorded 2,765 or 26.7 per cent of the total; Iowa, 2,110, or 20.07; Ohio, 804, or 8.22 per cent; Kansas, 769, or 7.28 per cent; Nebraska, 523, or 4.97 per cent; Indiana, 440, or 4.18 per cent;

Obseper Grasshopper Poison Inducers

For Farmers to Combat Pest Effectually

A new formula for a poison in fighting grasshoppers has been tested out and found to be the equal, if not the superior, of the bran-mash formula, at least in the particular region where it is used. According to a report to the United States Department of Agriculture from the entomologist of Nebraska.

The regular bran-mash formula composed of 25 pounds of bran, 1 pound of paris green, 1/2 pint of kerosene, 1 gallon of molasses, and 6 gallons water to cost about $1.75 at current prices in Nebraska.

By using 15 pounds of alfalfa meal, 10 ounces of Paris green at the same time, replacing the molasses by 1 gallon and the water by 6 gallons, and reducing the number of lemons to 3, it was found that the same bulk of poison mixture was obtained for approximately $1.50 at current prices.

The molasses used in the mixture obtained at a bee-keeper factory for 60 cents a gallon. Alfalfa meal has such swelling power when plenty water is added that the 15 pounds makes approximately the same amount of poison mixture as 25 pounds of bran.

It has been found that in warm climates, such as that of California, the poisonous bait prepared with alfalfa meal must be used almost immediately, as they sour if kept until the following day. Another objectionable feature is that the meal is usually, so finely ground that it cannot be distributed without considerable labor by the use of any anti-grain sower, such as they are now for use in some portions of the country in distributing the bait.

The greatly lessened expense of fighting grasshoppers by the use of the alfalfa meal mixture induces many Nebraska farmers to combat the pest much more energetically than they would have done if the more expensive mixture for alkali and seepy land.

Advantages of Sweet Clover

A light seedling should be made on pasture on last snow each spring.

1. Will grow on practically all soils in the northwest.
2. As easy to get started as alfalfa. Makes good hay and pasture.
3. All kinds of stock much learn to like it.
4. Seeds heavily in all sections.
5. Feeding value equal to alfalfa.
6. Does not blast cattle and sheep like alfalfa.
7. Starts early in spring, grows all summer and late in fall.
8. A. Monnal legume—fits well in rotation.
9. Roots are soft, easily top-dressed.
10. As green manure will add more good beans but which could not be banded profitably in any other way because of the cost of handling. This machine is a cheap laborer and a time saver, and it will handle any kind of stock. This makes it very profitable indeed.

Mr. G. I. Reeves, in charge of the alfalfa weevil investigations at Salt Lake City, advises us that white arsenic, 99 per cent purity, can be purchased for 8 cents per pound, Salt Lake City, of the United States Smelting & Refining Company. If anyone has need of white arsenic in eradicating grasshoppers and cutworms, write the Farm Bureau.

Percheron Society of America.

Mr. Donald McLean, Twin Falls, Idaho.

760 are manufacturing a small capacity bean picker. The cost of the smaller machine is 29 bushels per hour and it is designed principally for growers and small dealers. We have had a good many requests for such machines from farmers in all sections of the country. This machine will put the farmer on an equal footing with the bean jobber since it will condition his stock for him and enable him to put it on the market in good condition, that will command the highest market price. We have also inquires from several states concerning this machine. It is the thing that the farmer needs and it is going to be a good seller.

We have just shipped a consignment of the largest-size machine into California and expect to ship some of the smaller machines later in the season. These machines are handling practically all varieties of California beans and are proving very profitable to the purchasers. They will also handle the Michigan beans successfully and both the dry stock and the wet weather damaged stock have been put over the rolls of this machine with good results during the past year. It is a cheap laborer. It requires only a small amount of power. Indeed a man can operate the small machine by hand, and the amount of time saved, and thus the low cost of preparation of the stock makes this machine a profit maker and with no friction. This means long life for the wearing parts of the machine. It also means that it will handle such beans as the plater more profitably than any other machine on the market, because there is less danger of cracking them.

Some dealers are using this machine on call beans that contain a good many

Are You Doing Club Work?

There is a misunderstanding of club work on the part of a large number of both children and parents. Do club work a member must develop a business of his or her own. It makes no difference what club it is, the same rule applies in all cases. The member, whether it be the raising of a garden or a club starts some kind of work, whether it be the raising of a garden or a club or the conservation of food or any other field of work. If then keeps a record of the actual expense and receipts of this work. If in the fall these records show a profit the member may be considered successful in business. If the record is not kept up or she is considered careless in business, and if the record shows a loss he or she has been unsuccessful in business. Failure through misfortune or circumstances cannot be considered the fault of any member. Carelessness however, is a fault that makes more men and women and children fall than any one cause that could be named. What will your record show, success, failure or carelessness? Are you developing business habits or habits of carelessness? If your work or your record is not up to standard get busy for a few minutes and make them show your standing in business.

WOMEN AND WAR WORK

In the decision of the women of the Parent-Teachers Association to take up and carry on the work as leader of the boys' garden and livestock clubs of George E. Deaman, former instructor at the local high school, who has been called into the military service, Twin Falls has a notable example of the capability and willingness of women to take the place of men and preserve the social and economic equilibrium under the war crisis.

It is unlikely, however, in this instance, that the women who are now taking up this work will be willing to relinquish it when the emergency shall be at an end. They are beginning to learn that in this new capacity and leadership they are coming into a closer contact with a new angle in their boys' lives, and they are finding not only places to serve the Nation in supplying places made vacant by war's demands, but they are discovering larger spheres of helpfulness for themselves as mothers.

The amplification of the club work, too, made possible by the enlistment of mothers in its furtherance is a factor that is bound to figure largely in future plans of the organizations, and greatly to its benefit and advantage. The decision of the Twin Falls women in this instance is one well worthy of commendation from every viewpoint.

STATES' RIGHTS

One of the most interesting decisions to come up in Idaho in some years is that which will be handed down in the near future by the Supreme Court as to the validity of a certain marriage ceremony performed within the prescribed period following divorce of one of the contracting parties.

The question to be settled is as to whether when a man or woman is divorced in a state which prohibits remarriage within a term of months following the granting of the decree, is a ceremony performed in another state without waiting for the passage of the period of prohibited constitutes a legal marriage.

The decision is fraught with interest and with grave possibilities. The practice of obtaining a divorce under Idaho law, which law prohibits remarriage for six months following the annulment of the previous marriage, and then stepping across the line of the end of a few days or weeks and re-assuming the title of spouse with a new partner, is such a common one as to be hardly worthy of notice. Prior to this time it was an accepted custom. Many such marriages have been performed without a thought of possible illegality. In some cases the parties return to the state from which they have come, in others they do not. There is no breach of State law. State law applies only to the State in which the law is enacted, and the laws of adjoining states are not in any manner interfering. Yet the intent of the State law is contravened. Persons prohibited from marriage within six months get married in a many days.

In the event that the federalizing decision should find that such interstate marriages are invalid, a remarkable state of affairs would be found to exist. Literally hundreds of men and women now living in the bonds of matrimony would find themselves automatically divorced, with re-enactment of the marriage ceremony, if only possible way out of the dilemma and with a chain of complications following every step. Innocent and guilty would suffer together, there would be no way

Mr. Burlison Promptly Restored Old John's Salary

HERE is an old colored messenger in the post office department building on the southwest corner of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. His is one of many messengers, but his claim to distinction rests on the fact that he has been in the service for 35 or 45 years.

Several months ago he suddenly found himself reduced in salary from $300 to $170 and the only cause given was that the department had to cut expenses. The old man thought it pretty hard that he should have been among those hit and he wondered at such a reward for his long service but he said nothing.

Nobody heard him complain. Then one day he happened to be sent up to the house office building with a message for one of the members of the house post office committee.

Now, it happened that Postmaster General Burlison, himself was visiting the member that morning and was present when the messenger came. It also happened that the messenger had never seen the postmaster general.

"John," said the member of congress, "how do you like your job at the post office department?" "I like it all right," came the reply. "I ain't got no kick. Only—"

"Only what?" asked the representative. "Only I don't understand some things," replied the messenger. "After I been working here for all these years, lo get reduced, that seems a funny way to give a man reward."

Still the postmaster general remained impassive—and unspoken. But the next day an order was issued at the post office department. It was signed by Postmaster General Burlison and called for the reinstatement of the old messenger in the $300 grade.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

Louis Raemaekers, the Dutch cartoonist whose sketches of German frightfulness have caused the Kaiser to place a high price on him, spent his early years at Rotterdam, in Holland, and afterward studied art in Amsterdam and Brussels. Before the war he was living quietly with his family in Haarlem, the heart of tulip-land, where he was contentedly painting the canals, cattle and windmills of his beloved Dutch countryside.

Four days after the war began he drew his first cartoon, "Christendom After Twenty Centuries." He investigated the low life in Belgium personally. Since then his chief thought has been of the war and how best to all the cause of the allies. From the outset his work revealed something more than the humorous or trite quality of the caricaturist; they showed that behind the mere pictorial comment on the war was a man who thought and wrought with a deep and uncomprehending conviction as to right and wrong. The leading newspapers, first of Holland, then of the continent and England, reproduced his sketches. Quick to recognize the significance of his work, the German authorities did all in their power to suppress it, and, failing in this, used every form of intrigue at hand to silence him. They charged him with endangering Dutch neutrality; they put a price on his head, and he was continually threatened with the vengeance of the central powers.

There is no mistaking Raemaekers. No matter what his form, he breathes "kultur," and against the dark background of evil he causes to stand out the nobility, endurance and sublimity of the objects of "kultur's" persecution, the sacredness of the allied cause.

Natural Butter. Shea butter, the richest oil of the West African shea tree, is one of several vegetable butters that are of unusual interest to makers of margarine, chocolate, candles, and soap. The sweet and wholesome pulp of the nut is rich in vitamins, and is said to be nearly toothless butter. The tree, beginning to bear its crop of nuts when about 15 years old, reaches its prime at the age of about twenty-five.

Naming the Cherry. The cherry gets its name from the one old Greek town on the Black Sea, whence came the first garden cherry, which came to Europe.

FROM MARY

By JANE WILKINS. (Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Grandma Bates sat alone at the window, rocking. She was always rocking these days. She was too feeble for work about the house, and her old eyes too dim for much fine sewing. She sat rocking gently, looking out at the mellow autumn landscape.

"Never so falling," she murmured to herself. "When they are most beautiful and brightest-colored they can drop. They don't have to hang on and on. Oh, if folks were only like that. If they were wise something I could do!"

The sound of quick footsteps on the porch outside arrested her attention, and she looked up eagerly at a slim, dark-haired girl, entering the room. Mary's coming was always like the coming of the sun to Grandma Bates. But today Mary was not smiling. There were traces of tears on her rosy cheeks, and her lips were quivering.

"She buried her head in the old lady's lap and shook with sobs. "Oh, grandma, grandma!"

Grandma Bates stroked the girl's smooth head with a trembling hand. "There, there, honey, don't cry," she urged. "Whatever your trouble is I guess I've had it, too. There isn't much I haven't been through in my time. I know what you are going through somehow. Tell grandma what you're crying about."

"It's Jim, grandma. We've had a quarrel. Oh, yes, it was silly. I can't tell you what it was about, but it happened a week ago. I told him I didn't want him ever to come near me again—yes, I did—and he hasn't, all this week. He acts as if he thought I would do what I said. He ought to have known—"

The shadow of a smile flickered over the old lady's face, and the light of whimsical memories warmed her eyes. "What's the exact date and time when you quarrelled with your granddaddy, too. It was about the color of a horse, I think, or something as stupid."

Within half an hour Grandma Bates was busily clicking her needles over a lapel of khaki-colored worsted, and Mary was listening, with an occasional preoccupied sigh, to tales of that other world in which she had lived, tales that had marched away never to return.

And so, through the week that followed they knitted together, the old lady cutting the first three fingers and learning to turn heels and toes, "purl" and "knit-oh!"

And then, one day, the girl came in white-lipped and sad, with her knitting unrolled and her eyes dim. Grandma Bates knew that something had happened, but she wisely kept her silence, and at last Mary spoke. "Jim's enlisted," she said dully. "Jim's enlisted. His state has no such morning. And if he goes without my seeing him again—"

"He won't," said the old lady confidently. "Finger he will come to see you, or else you will write and ask him to."

"Oh, I can't! If only I weren't so stubborn and stupid. I can't, grandma, and I'm sure that Jim will never come first."

But Mrs. Bates shook her wise old head and said no more. Several days passed and nothing happened, except that Mary grew pale with the struggle she was making.

But Mary's grandmother kept steadily at work upon the sweaters, socks and helmets which she completed with amazing rapidity. And if anyone had noticed, there was a curious, happy little smile about her lips at times, a secret twinkle in her eye when she looked at Mary.

One morning after the old lady had gone to bed Mary sat alone trying to read, straining her ears for the sound of steps which never came. And then, quite suddenly, they did come. As of old there was a quick ring at the bell, an impatient tinkle on the door-pane. "Mary opened the front door, to see her Jim, in khaki.

"He's in as though nothing had happened. "Like my uniform, Mary?" he asked. "They talked for a strained five minutes of things that didn't matter, every-day things that had excited her, but she was cheerful. And when she took her hand again and they made mutual confessions, each one lasting on the blame for that misunderstanding, she was all my fault, Mary, every bit. You don't know how hard it's been to keep away from you, especially since I knew I was to go to France. I've tried and tried to get over my sturn, stupid pride and come to you, but I couldn't. If you hadn't sent me that sweater to show how you felt—"

"Sweater?" she repeated vaguely. "Yes, it fits beautifully, too. When I unwrapped it and saw the words 'For Mary'—when I saw how good and forgiving you were, I felt like all kinds of a scoundrel, I can tell you."

Mary sat, dazed. She had seen no sweater, she opened her lips to say so, but she was silent. And when she felt that she remained silent. She would tell Jim later, when she had made sure.

Next morning Jim's wife in her own hand, and she and her granddaddy, the old lady waiting for her, bright-eyed.

"I know what you're going to say," began Grandma Bates. "But I brought him, didn't I? And I didn't say what Mary. I guess my name's Mary, too."

Billie Burke in "Eve's Daughter" There is a company of Irish plays soon to hold forth at the Idaho theatre in Billie Burke's newest Paramount photo-play, "Eve's Daughter." This is merely a coincidence, because the production is not in the least an Irish story, but worthy of mention from its very uniqueness. From Director James Kirkwood, nicknamed "Irish" Kirkwood by his friends, to Miss Burke herself, the personnel is Celtic. Thomas Meighan, Riley Hatch, Clarence Dashi, Florence Ryan, Icy Shannon, Henry Lee and Lucille Barney are a few of the typically Irish names in the cast.

SPUD DEAL IS AIRED IN COURT

PROBATE JUDGE O. P. DUVALL TAKES QUESTIONS OF LABOR CREDIT AND BROKEN CONTRACT UNDER ADVERTISEMENT

Whether H. B. Walters owes Harry McKinley $147.05 or any other amount for digging his potato crop last fall, or whether McKinley owes Walters the same or any other amount as damages for failure to purchase the crop pursuant to verbal contract are questions taken under advisement Tuesday by Probate Judge O. P. Duvall at the conclusion of the trial of the suit of McKinley against Walters. Both parties to the suit are well known farmers residing in the vicinity of Filer.

McKinley brought suit for the collection of compensation alleged to be due on account of digging the crop. In his defense Walters set up that McKinley contracted to buy the spuds agreeing that credit for his work should apply on the purchase price of the crop at $1.25 per hundredweight. Despite also exist as to the number of sacks of potatoes dug, McKinley admits the contract for purchase of the crop but says the purchase was to be made by him for a produce dealer, who refused to accept them. Walters later sold the crop to a third party at a less price than McKinley had agreed to pay. He claims the amount of the credit due McKinley for his work as damages.

The trial occupied practically all day Tuesday.

McKinley was represented by Attorney E. V. Larson, while Judge J. R. Holwell appeared for Walters.

Old Ways of Telling Time.
 In remote ages the Japanese and Chinese used a knotted wick to record time, two feet in length. The wick burned slowly and each knot recorded an hour. Philip II of Spain is said to have used an oil lamp for the same purpose. The oil was contained in a glass receptacle, on which was a scale marking the hours from four in the afternoon to eight the next morning, and the height of the liquid upon the scale would show the time. A 12-inch scale, of which three inches would burn away in an hour, is supposed to have been used by King Alfred.

United Press War Summary

(Fourteen hundred and thirty-eight day of the war.)

Nearby Front
German artillery began bombarding the British line along a ten mile front between the Aisne and Villers-Bretonneux, following reports of German attacks south of the Somme last night. Enemy guns also were active north of Meuzidaler.

Flanders Front
British troops advanced their lines slightly near Brest, taking several prisoners.

Marne Front
Artillery fighting occurred south of the Aisne, near Chavigny farm.

Champagne Front.
French took prisoners in raids.

Russia
The murder of Ambassador Mirbach is reported to have been the first step in a Russian terrorist plot for killing the other German ambassador for Russia's predicament—the Kaiser, Hindenburg, Ludendorff and Kuehlmann.

Belgium
A daylight raid on an ambulance station at Lapanne by German airmen resulted in the death of 54 girl workers.

Turkey
(Smyrna) was bombed by five allied airplanes Sunday. The Turkish war office reported "no damage."

Cascadepage Head.
This remarkable looking rock is known as a schist which is weathered and crumbled into a human expression which is startling. Not only is there a distinct resemblance to a man's profile but the head is apparently the center of the eye of the rock in the last century such as the soldiers of Cortwell's work. The rock is located on the top of a 2,000-foot hill on Seaward peninsula, Alvin, and is called by the natives the Big Head, or the Cascadepage Head. The face is about eight feet high.

True Meaning of "Boomerang."
Boomerang has beaten all records of words turned inside out. The term does not convey the idea of returning, as the boomerang returns not at the thrower's peril, but to his further use. No Australian would make that blunder. Colonel Miles, the allied expeditionary force's chief chaplain during the war, used the term right when he declared: "We are your boomerang, flung out by you to conquer an continent and now returning to your feet for another throw."

Dignified Rebuke.
Two little girls tried to tell a story of something exciting that happened. Finally, rising to her full dignity, Mary said: "Babe, will you please let me tell this story? It isn't nice to be chipping in that way."

RIGID ECONOMY

or hamper the fullest dissemination of news of the war and the government's war activities will have a real effect on the nation's morale, will interfere with liberty loan campaigns and prove generally of more harm than good.

Hurd on Newspapers

This tax, they pointed out, would deprive many newspapers, particularly the smaller ones which reach readers in less densely settled districts, of wire service, upon which they depend to furnish their readers with the news of the day.

The proposed tax of from 25 per cent to 100 per cent on the wages of household servants was accepted as just. Suggested taxes on hotel bills and restaurant checks probably will be accepted to relieve food.

As to Revenue Estimates

Representative Kitchin, to whom the suggestions were transmitted, returned them today to the department, with a request that an estimate be furnished him of the amount of revenue the department thinks the new taxes would raise. This would involve further suggestions as to the fate of taxation on clothing, home furnishings and toilet articles. In its original suggestions, the department did not even hint at the proper rate, stating that this was within the province of congress to decide. Kitchin, however, wants the department's views on this point also, simply as a basis for starting discussion.

Chinese Do It, Too.

A department store was opened recently in Shanghai, China, and has been such a success that it will stay there. The Chinese are going to this department store rather than to amusement places, finding it more interesting to walk around and pick up bargains than to patronize the theater. They are credited with buying things they don't want, just as people do in the United States. Human nature is pretty much the same all over the world.

Silly Wives of Time.

The man or woman who is blessed with good, common sense gives all signs, dreams, or other superstitious omens a wide berth. We each, individually, must play our own part, fight our own battles, and work for success if we hope to succeed; but if we are influenced by every wind that blows—if we trust to "luck" to help us along every day, then we are simply wasting time and wasting time that can never be recalled.

Russian Sturgeon Fisheries.

Sturgeon of various species are especially abundant in Russia, where the sturgeon industry is of great value. The fish is eaten when fresh, but is chiefly used in the preserved form, either smoked or salted. More than 10,000 fish are sometimes caught at a single fishing station during the upstream migration, which lasts for a fortnight. The eggs are removed in quantity from the ovaries and separately prepared as "caviar."

Habit of Horned Toad.

Horned toads are landless, never trying to bite, even when taken into the hand. But they have a habit, perhaps as a means of defense, of spitting a little jet of blood from the eye when disturbed. One will thus spit first from one eye and then from the other a drop of blood to a distance of 12 to 15 inches, repeating this several times.

Sponge Industry.

The best sponges come from the Levant, in the eastern Mediterranean, and are obtained by diving. The Levantine sponge divers cut the pieces from large sponges, replant the pieces, and tie them to stakes to keep them from being swept away by the current. They soon grow to an enormous size.

How Cloves are Cured.
In the Spice Islands the cloves are sometimes cured by being smoked over a wood fire until they assume a deep brown color, when the further drying is accomplished by the sun. Occasionally the buds are scalded before being dried. If bright sunny days prevail artificial heat may be dispensed with and the buds sundried from first to last. The crop loses about 60 per cent in drying.

The Yesterdays.
Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt, crept in; but forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely, and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This day is all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with all its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the yesterdays.

To Keep Pictures Straight.
Take small pieces of adhesive tape, untear one end and attach to back of picture (near the top left corner), moisten other end and fasten to wall. Picture will always hang absolutely straight after that.

Discount All "Luck."
Luck is a myth—a devil-in-the-wood man, a counterforce through and through—and the misguided individual who banks on "luck" to assist him or her in any enterprise or undertaking is simply reaching after the impossible.

William Old-Bear of Oklahoma Stirs Up Chicago

CHICAGO.—There came into West Madison street one William Old-Bear of Cushing, Okla. There hovered about William the quaint fancy of the Whistler, the gentle soundless zephyr of the endless prairies, the song of the coyote, and the solemn silences of the starlit night.

The crash of traffic appalled him, automobiles zoomed past him like dragons, and the street echoed a rushing, howling, hopeless boom. William Old-Bear turned in at the sign of the dusty livery and bought himself a man's size sifter, and more of the same.

When he had filled his person with potent head he stood forth upon the sidewalk at Jefferson and Madison streets and winked a sinful eye. A pedestrian glanced by among the hundreds who scurry. Perhaps something in the unconscious phiz of the pedestrian recalled an ancient foe. For William Old-Bear drew back his fist and let fly. It caught the pedestrian a prodigious jolt and set him astonished upon the curbstone.

Another pedestrian tripped past. Suddenly he sprawled upon the walk. William Old-Bear had dealt him a wallop that came clear from the stone age. Two more pedestrians fell and dropped into the profound abyss of unconsciousness before someone thought to turn in a riot call. Policemen Marshall, Jotner and Gall of the Delphinus station came at a gallop.

In the police station he almost tore down the jail. Then it was realized what ailed William Old-Bear. He was rushed to the bridewell hospital, where the reflections of his unbelonging retina came true. There was no wickup, no somnolent zephyr; but pink buffaloes and blue snakes and turkeys with straw bonnets on trotted to endless profusion before him. For William Old-Bear has the D. T.

Reciprocal Relations of Utility and Public

WHILE the ownership of a utility is lodged with individuals, the service which it renders is for the use of the public. The public is, therefore, justified in expecting that the service shall be of a satisfactory quality and adequate to meet the needs of the community.

The Telephone Company is carrying a terrific load of abnormal costs of material and labor. In view of the fact that our revenues are going along practically on a level, not increasing with the increased costs of rendering service, the burden has grown too heavy for us to carry alone.

But no utility can be successful without the co-operation of the public. In fact, a relationship of reciprocity exists between the utility and the public. The duty of the utility to the citizen and the duty of the citizen to the utility is reciprocal and each is interested in the welfare of the other.

The year 1917 produced in Idaho alone a deficit of $118,233.76. Until adjustments are made that will correct this condition, the telephone service upon which the public depends will remain in jeopardy.

If the citizen does not prosper the utility loses its patronage. If the utility is not prosperous, the citizen loses through inferior or inadequate service. Hence the question of adequate revenues for the utility is one with which both the utility and the public are mutually concerned.

No utility can meet the expectations of the public without adequate revenues. So the public serves its own interests when it co-operates with the utility in any effort which the utility makes to produce revenues sufficient to meet the requirements of the service.
