ALL of the New York newspapers say that "La Tosca" is a great picture.

New York Evening Sun: "Artistic and fascinating. The motion picture patron is held to its spell. Altogether a worth-while film." New York Herald: "The genius of Miss Frederick for forcible sentiment, acting in this sort of role took her to a highly subtle play to heighten which she has not before attempted, and her acting was altogether fascinating."

New York American: "In the title role of this play Miss Frederick has done the very best screen work of her luminous career. Her portrayal of the jealous and unhappy opera singer is an artistic triumph."

COMEDY AND TRAVELOGUE THIS PART OF PROGRAM TONIGHT and TOMORROW.

The fighting extended far into the evening, being particularly violent between Chateau-Thierry and Rheims when the French and Americans resisted magnificently.

There were furious attacks and the most violent fighting south of the Marne. The French and American resisted magnificently.

Both of the Marne the Germans did not pass out of the line through St. Agnan, La Chapelle-Mont Moreau and the southern border of Boulogny forest.

The French still held Marcelline-Font. "North of the Marne the Germans were held in the line south of Chateau-Thierry and southeast of Bois de la Roche."

There were two sharp showers late in the afternoon, after which the sky again became clear.

In the hospitals, not far from the front, American doctors and nurses were all directed every where in the line.

CITY GOVERNMENT

There is perhaps no better form of government yet devised than the city manager plan, unless it be the mayor plan, which embraces the features of the former and adds one or two further which make for a still greater degree of success in the matter of the handling of the public purse.

It is a good many years now there has been indications from time to time desired on the part of many people to change the form of the government of Twin Falls. Now that there are any particular fault to be found in the men engaged in caring for the affairs of the city but on the theory the plan had resulted in so many advantages at other places where tried its adaptation to Twin Falls would probably bring about many advantages which the public as a whole know.

But it is a mistake to suppose that there is such a thing as a definitely defined "commission plan" or any other plan of municipal government. In a broad sense the commission plan amounts to the election of a mayor and a commission of a stated number of men, elected at large, to each of whom certain specific duties shall be assigned in the operation of the affairs of a city. This point reached, there are almost as many different organizations possible as there are cities.

GUNNER DEPEW

Albert N. Depew

EX-GUNNER AND CHIEF PETTY-OFFICER, U. S. NAVY MEMBER OF THE FOREIGN LEGION OF FRANCE CAPTAIN GUN TURRET, FRENCH BATTLESHIP CASSARD WINNER OF THE CROIX DE GUERRE

CHAPTER I—Albert N. Depew, author of the story, is a retired gunner, having served three years and six months in the U. S. Navy.

CHAPTER II—The "gun" was started soon after he is honorably discharged from the navy and is looking for a job with a determination to enlist.

CHAPTER III—He joins the Foreign Legion and is assigned to the gun turret of the battleship Cassard.

CHAPTER IV—On the firing line. When I reported on the Cassard after my fourteen days' leave, I was detailed with a detachment of the legion to go to the Flanders front.

We traveled from direct by rail, in third-class cars, passing through La Havre and St. Pol, and finally arrived at Bergues. From Bergues we made the trip to Dinmoo by truck—a distance of about twenty miles. We carried no rations with us, but at certain places along the line the train stopped, and we got out to eat one meal.

There is another thing about the French women that I have noticed, and that is this:—There are pretty girls in every country under the sun, but the plain girls in France are prettier than the plain ones in other countries. They might not show it in photographs, but in action there is something about them that you can't see in a picture.

There were but one rockier, first class, rigid edged guarantee of bounty among city officials and that is the reputation and integrity of the men on the job. Without this no plan has much chance of success and with it, nearly any plan which is based on common sense, ordered on the rules of good business, and doesn't cost too much to operate, will succeed about as well as any other.

right out into the open, between the screen front line and your own. Which is hardly ever a whole lot!

If your front of the line is under the guide at the head of the line is on the lookout for shells, and when he hears one coming he gives the signal and all down to the ground and well until it bursts. You never get all the time you want, but at that you have plenty of time to think about things while you are lying there with your face in the mud and waiting for the sound of the explosion.

In the communication trench you have to keep your distance from the men ahead of you. This is done so that you will have plenty of room to fall back in, and because you should find the trench, there would be fewer casualties in an open formation than in a closed. The German artillery is kept on communication trenches and whenever they spot one they stay with it a long time. Most of them are camouflaged along the top and sides, so that enemy aviators cannot see anything but the earth or bushes, when they throw an eye down on our line.

We took over our section of the front line trenches from a French line regiment that had been on the job for 24 days. That was the longest time I have heard of a troop, remaining on the firing line.

Conditions at the front and ways of fighting are changing all the time, as each side invents new methods of attacking and whenever they spot one of the Dinmoo trenches, you must retreat that it is probably just history by there. If they are still using trenches there they probably look entirely different.

But when it is like Dinmoo they are not so much like it as you think.

Behind the series of front-line trenches are the reserve trenches; in this case five to seven miles away, and still farther back are the billets. These are the places where you are ordered, therefore—any place that can possibly be used for quartering troops when off duty.

Troops were usually in the front-line trenches for eight days, and fourteen to sixteen days in the reserve trenches. Then back to the billets for six or eight days.

We were not allowed to change our clothing in the front-line trenches. It was not even to change our socks, unless for inspection. Nor would they let us have as much as a button upon our shirt, unless there was an inspection of identification disks. We wore a disk at the wrist, and another around the neck. You know the guy about the disks, of course: If your arm is blown off they can tell who you are by the neck disk; if your head is blown off, they do not care who you are.

In the reserve trenches you can make yourself more comfortable, but you cannot go to such extreme lengths of luxury as changing your clothes except in the billets, where you spend most of your time bathing, changing clothes, sleeping and eating. Believe me, a billet is great stuff; it is like a sort of temporary heaven.

Of course you know what the word "crat" and "number around the neck" will never know what the cooties themselves mean. When you get in or near the trenches, you take a course in the natural history of bugs, lice, rats and every kind of beast that has ever been invented.

It is funny to see some of the newcomers when they first discover cooties on their person. Some of them cry, if they really know what it was going to be like they would do worse than that, maybe.

Then they start hunting all over each other, just like monkeys. They team up for this purpose, and many times it is this way that a couple comes out to be trench partners and come to be pals for life—which may not be a long time in that.

In the front-line trenches it is more comfortable, but it is not so pleasant as it seems. It is not so hot, but it is not so cold, and the cooties are thicker down below, and they simply will not give you a minute's rest. They certainly will not give you a minute's rest. We used to back scratchers out of certain weapons that had flexible handles, but never had time to use them when they were needed most.

We were given bottles of a liquid which smelt like cologne and were supposed to soak our clothes in it. It was thought that the cooties would object to the smell and quit work. Well, a cootie that could stand our clothes with the smell of a couple of men would not be bothered by a little thing like this stuff. Also, our clothes got so sour and horrible smelling that they hurt our noses worse than the cooties. They certainly were a little better, because with one soap back scratchers out of certain weapons that had flexible handles, but never had time to use them when they were needed most.

When you come to a communication trench, these trenches are entrances to the fighting trenches and run at varying angles and varying distances apart. They are seldom wide enough to hold more than one man, so you have to march single file in them. They wind in and out, according to the lay of the land, some parts of them being more dangerous than others. When you come to a dangerous spot you have to crawl sometimes. There are so many cross trenches and blind alleys that you have to have a guide for a long time, because with one you are apt to walk through an embankment in a trench and
