INTREPID YANKEES SURGE FORWARD IN TIDAL WAVE OF VICTORIOUS ADVANCE

WHOLE LINE ABLAZE FROM AISNE TO MARNE

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN THE CHAMPAGNE, July 10.—2:30 p. m.—The battle is increasing in intensity on the whole front from the Aisne to the Marne, as this is cabled. The Americans and French are driving forward in an extended advance toward the main highway from Soissons to Chateau-Thierry...

The Germans, aided by great numbers of reserves, made a heavy counter-attack on the plateau southwest of Soissons, but it was bloodily repulsed. Americans and French in that region are continuing to hold the line they established yesterday evening, or are advancing eastward...

The remarkable transport system of the allies is enabling them to maintain a constant flow of men and supplies to the front. As the line advances solid miles of motor trucks, carrying ammunition and other material, rumble forward. They return to the rear with slightly wounded men. Men and guns, rushed up on trucks, are dumped off and are in the thick of the fighting a few minutes later.

PREPARATIONS FOR FURTHER ADVANCE ARE ON

WORK OF CONSOLIDATING NEWLY WON POSITIONS GOES STEADILY FORWARD—OFFICERS FIND DIFFICULTY IN HOLDING BACK MEN

By FRANK J. TAYLOR (United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE AMERICANS NEAR SOISSONS, July 10.—3:55 a. m.—Preparations for resumption of the Franco-American drive between the Aisne and the Marne were in full swing at this hour...

While some of the soldiers who had battled almost continuously for twenty hours were busy consolidating the newly won positions and getting ready for the next blow, believed to be scheduled for daybreak. The Germans retreated so rapidly yesterday that the French were enabled to move forward at the rate of about a kilometer an hour, reaching their twelfth hour objectives in seven hours...

Officers had great difficulty in holding back the victorious doughboys, in order to keep the line straight. The Americans wanted to go to Germany. Regimental commanders had to send couriers forward to pull back some units, while one airplane got so far ahead that an airplane was used to carry the restraining message.

German Panzertruppen along the line were panicky. They left their artillery, machine guns, rifles and supplies, and sprinted eastward. The area captured by the Americans between the Aisne and the Ourcq had more than 30,000 prisoners.

BRITISH ACTIVE ON SUBMARINES IN NORTH SEA DESTROYER WORK AND BOMBING RAIDS KEEP GERMAN BUSY—AIR PLANES OUT OF LUCK

(By United Press) LONDON, July 10.—Activity of enemy destroyers, constant patrol duty over the North Sea and some combats were reported today by the British air ministry for the period from July 11 to 17...

The royal air forces, working with the navy in home waters, have maintained anti-submarine and escort patrols, the communique stated. Bombing raids have continued out when the weather was favorable, with good results.

Enemy Destroyers "Enemy destroyers have been sighted off the Flanders coast on several occasions and attacked with bombs. A direct hit was obtained on one large destroyer. Our formations also attacked destroyers with machine gun fire. On one of these occasions four enemy seaplanes approached, beginning attack, but immediately withdrew."

Enemy Aircraft have been active and have attacked our bombing and patrol formations. Three hostile machines were destroyed and four driven down out of control. Two of our machines are missing and two collided and crashed down.

Seaplane Updates Down "One of our machines on anti-submarine patrol observed an enemy seaplane up in the sea, but saw no occupants. "Enemy attempts to salvage the destroyer recently sunk close to Zebruges by a bomb from one of our machines have been greatly hindered by our bombing formations."

Parts of eight American divisions were in the fighting only in the week that resulted in checking the German drive on the Marne. In addition to the two divisions now engaged, many other American troops are brigaded with the French in the offensive action. The committee was told that nearly 1,200,000 Americans are now in France or on the way.

SAYS JIG IS UP FOR GERMANS

MARVIN MONROE OF BUHL GIVES VIEW OF AMERICAN SOLDIER

"The Germans are making their lines and push through to Paris. They will not succeed. With their 80 fresh divisions from the eastern front over here, if they can't do more than they have done, I think the jig is up for them."

This is the statement of Marvin Monroe, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Monroe of Buhl, a graduate of the Idaho state university and winner of a Rhodes scholarship at Oxford, who enlisted here last fall in the artillery arm of the American expeditionary forces in France, and the statement quoted is made in a letter recently received from him by his parents, which is in full as follows:

Good-Natured Divally

We have finally reached our destination, and billeted in a little village a few kilometers behind the battle line. Since our arrival we have been having things pretty easy, resting, preparing to go up to the Headquarters building and feeding on French chickens, and the gardeners the peasants left behind when they retreated. In another two or three months the beds of orchards and grapes will be for us. We nearly had a fight with some French soldiers last night over some chickens, but everything went off alright. The orders were not to let any French come for trenching. Have chickens. Last night a good many French soldiers began to roam about the courtyard, or barnyard and soon began carrying off the feathers. We were not coming, we stopped them, and nearly had a fight. Some of the chickens got loose, and we had a free-for-all to see who would get them. After army fare, chicken is good. It is so good. Frenchmen know this, hence their bias for chicken. I don't blame them much for wanting the wealth of their own countries, but Americans must be treated better than we are. We are not coming though, we feel like Ramonides now. The only difficulty we have now is in getting candy or chocolate. We are nearly starved for sweet stuff.

Visits Ancient Cathedral

With the exception of the battle of the Frogs," which was only a minor affair, after all, nothing of particular importance has yet occurred to our enjoyment of war. We have long looked over the novelty of neoplaton. That is the commonest, being the go off. Our main interest now is not in wondering what he is going to be like, but in the favorite phantom of each individual, having eyes or wine, or something else. We are now in a big church, in a little village. I was inside a fine church at a city where we stayed for about a week on our way up to this. It was a church about five hundred years old. It was a fine church while it might not compare with the work of churches like Rheims, was wonderful. The outside, stones were warm, but that only enhanced its aged beauty. There were many statues, as well as all French churches, and Gothic. I stayed for vespers services one evening. These people are certainly fortunate to live in such surroundings.

Meets Old Friends

You must be hoping for the way to be ended as soon as possible, and we want the same. The Germans are making their lines and push through to Paris. They will not succeed. With their eighty fresh divisions from the Eastern front over here, if they can't do more than they have done, I think the jig is up for them. The Father has me for peace this Fall, and then I am free to come home. Until then, one must be contented with a resolve to get along on the march, about which I am only my romantic of the second year at the University—a lawyer from Pocatello. He was drafted and sent to the Military Police. Drafted, and then volunteers are gradually being gelled up. In a year from now there will be nothing but the National Army.

FRENCH GENERAL MAKES STIRRING SPEECH TO MEN ON EVE OF BATTLE

(By United Press) WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, July 10.—"KILL them, kill them in abundance until they're dead enough."

That was a portion of General Gouraud's orders to the French and American troops, on the eve of the new German drive.

"A defensive battle was never chosen, it was under more favorable conditions," he declared. "Strong, brave hearts of free men beat in your breasts. None will look behind; none will give way."

ARMY BEAN IS LOSING GROUND

(United Press Staff Correspondent) WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY AT THE FROGS—It is hardly time to stir the bean soup for the army bean, but they say it is time to begin composing the farrowful idyll.

The army bean is disappearing from the army menu. "It's just out of style, that's all," says one army cook. "This man's army must be up to date."

Ten years ago, when the army bean was at the height of its glory, it was "piece de resistance" in every army menu. Now it is served only once in several days.

Met with potatoes, "slum" (stew) and other foods seen to have left the bean far behind. The boys over here claim they still like the bean as a food.

The poor old army bean seems to have suffered from the whims of style, and passed out for the time, like bubble skirts and pre-top trousers.

HIGH TRIBUTE IS PAID TO FARMERS

HOOVER TELLS OF ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN WORK OF FEEDING FIGHTERS OF EUROPE

WASHINGTON, July 19.—When America lightened up her belt June 7, 1917, she made it possible for the United States to ship to the 144,600,000 more pounds of meats and fats and 80,948,000 more bushels of cereals during the ensuing 12 months than was possible the year previous.

In a letter to President Wilson outlining this nation's grocery deliveries to her associates in arms, Food Administrator Hoover said that "All the millions of our people who have contributed to these results should feel a very definite satisfaction that in a year of universal food shortage, in the northern hemisphere, all of those people joined together against Germany, have come through into sight of the coming harvest not only with health and strength fully maintained but with only temporary periods of hardship."

Total Shipments Heavy

All food shipments to the allies, the Belgian relief and the Red Cross totaled 1,400,000,000 during the fiscal year, represented in 3,911,000,000 pounds of meat and fats (including sweet and dairy fats, lard, tallow, oils, etc.) and 240,800,000 bushels of cereals.

(In addition some 10,000,000 bushels of grain have been shipped to neutrals.) Hoover pays a high tribute to the effort and loyalty of the farmers, and to those, "whose sacrifice has been accomplished voluntarily and individually." Without trying to distinguish where the greatest credit belongs, Hoover says: "No one will deny the dominant part of the American woman."

FOOD ADMINISTRATORS FOR MOTOR TRANSPORT

FAACILITATED HAULING BASES MOVEMENT OF PERISHABLE CROPS

The movement to utilize motor trucks on rural express lines has received the endorsement of a number of state food administrators. The highways transport committee of the council of national defense has received a very general and prompt response to its suggestion that motor trucks be utilized to facilitate the shipping of perishable food products to shipping and consuming centers. This will relieve farmers of some of the task of hauling so that they may devote more time to actual crop production in the field during the period of labor shortage.

Reports received from many sections indicate that farmers have been inclined to decrease production of perishable food stuffs, owing to the time required for hauling to markets. Small lots of fruits, vegetables and other produce which could ordinarily be marketed have been left on the farm because of labor shortage. Rural motor express gathers up such produce and delivers it to market promptly, thereby operating to increase the local food supply of perishables and to aid in the campaign to conserve food stuffs.

Saves Perishable Crop

An interesting plan has been developed in the vicinity of Washington, whereby motor truck loads of fruits and vegetables for canning will be delivered direct from the producers to canning plants by the use of motor trucks. The food administrators of Arizona and New Mexico report that there are many fruitful but fruitless valleys which are inaccessible to trucks and mill shipments where motor trucks can be used and save millions of bushels of produce brought to market that might otherwise be wasted.

Permanent Service Planned

Arrangements are being perfected in a number of important fruit growing sections in supplement the usual shipments of fruit by rail by using fleets of motor trucks during the rush period of fruit harvest. Surveys conducted by the Highways Transport committee for this work can be made available for this work and the equipment is that steps be taken to mobilize them promptly when needed. It has also been found that a large number of trucks owned by farmers are now used only once in several years in many instances arrangements can be made to have these trucks used to haul perishables in an emergency.

The establishment of permanent lines of rural motor express has been brought about by making local areas of communities in which there is need of regular daily service for farmers to and from the market and the food administrators are assisting in this work by directing localities where such a highways transport is needed.

UNITE TO HELP WITH CLUB WORK

WOMEN OF PARENT-TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION ORGANIZE

Under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association, organization has been effected of a group of assistants to Miss Lucile Crossland, leader of Twin Falls girls' club, in her work of directing and encouraging the work of the club members during the summer vacation. It is the purpose of these assistants to arrange for occasions at which the girl club members can be brought together in social pursuits and for receiving technical instruction and assistance from Miss Crossland. There are at the present time 418 girls enrolled in the cooking, canning, sewing and knitting clubs in Twin Falls, under direction of Miss Crossland.

Aims of Assistants

The organization of assistants to the girls' club leader is similar in its aim and purpose to that recently formed under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association to assist with the work of the boys' clubs of Twin Falls. The work of the boys' club assistants, however, has to do principally with assisting the members to keep the required records of their work as members of garden and livestock clubs. Technical problems encountered by the boys in their work, in the absence of George E. Deenan, who was named by the board of school trustees as boys' club leader in Twin Falls, and who has been called into the military service, will be referred to F. A. Smutt, county club leader.

Doing Better Work

Reports and investigation indicate to the county club leader, who directs the work of both boys' and girls' clubs, that more and better work is being done by club members this year than ever before in the history of the organization in this county. The plan of providing district club leaders to exercise personal supervision over the work of members during the summer months, as has been carried out in Buhl and Twin Falls, is believed to be a principal factor toward this end.

List of Assistants

Following is a list of the assistants to Miss Crossland as named for each subdivision of the Twin Falls school district, and at large, in the case of Red Cross knitting clubs:

BUY FREELY BUT NOT EXTRAVAGANTLY

GOVERNMENT WORK TIES UP WOOLEN MILLS AND CUTS CIVILIAN QUOTA

That it is an unpatriotic to board clothing-as-to-board-food is the opinion of local clothing men without exception. Better to curtail purchases than to buy more than necessary. But in order to appreciate the full force of the suggestion an understanding of the conditions which make such a recommendation advisable is necessary. S. S. Straus of Straus and Glesher yesterday discussed the matter from the standpoint of the manufacturer.

When America went into the war quick action was necessary by the government in getting into the market to procure wool for its needs. Great quantities were required to provide uniforms, shirts and underclothing for our fighting men. Every available loom was required to weave this wool so the cloth could be made into garments and be ready before cold weather came on. The textile industry almost entirely discontinued making civilian fabrics and went to work on goods for the army and navy.

All on Government Work

We must outfit a far greater number of troops this summer for the coming winter. This is a huge problem and nearly every woolen mill in the country is engaged in government work. The soldier comes first.

The government's demand for such tremendous quantities of wool has drawn on the nation's reserve supply and sent prices soaring. The price of wool is set by the government at about 65 cents a pound where it was around 25 cents in normal times. This rise in cost of wool together with the increased cost of labor accounts for the advance in the cost of clothing.

The whole situation resolves itself into the question of raw material, shipping and manufacturing. More ships are being built. More wool is being grown. Though handicapped by the serious shortage of labor the woolen mills of this country are the largest in the world.

The loans must be kept working on military fabrics which compels a curtailment of civilian fabrics. Time is needed to keep ahead with the production and we must cooperate with the government's industrial plans by buying only what we need.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN WITH WEEK'S RAINFALL

General Idaho Crop Conditions Excellent, Says Boise Weather Bureau Head

A summary of weather and crop conditions in Idaho for the week ending Tuesday, July 16, just issued by Glendon E. Nordquist, meteorologist for the Department of Agriculture weather bureau station at Boise, is as follows:

Rains, general and quite heavy in the eastern counties but only light to moderately heavy and somewhat scattered elsewhere, occurred in most sections of the state during the past week. As a result the crop situation is somewhat improved, although more rain is badly needed in most parts of the western and northern counties. In the eastern counties the rains interfered with haying and damaged the crop considerably. The general condition of all crops in the eastern portion of the state is excellent, ample moisture and moderate temperatures having favored the proper filling of all grains.

Irrigated Grass Boom

All crops in the irrigated valleys made rapid growth. Corn, favored by warm nights, made phenomenal progress and is now maturing in many fields. Alfalfa is growing fine and the second cutting is beginning. Alfalfa weeds are reported numerous in Blaine county. Dry farm pastures and meadows in the west and north are very short. As a result of the light hay crop many milk cows and other stock are being offered for sale in Bonner county. Range conditions are somewhat improved by the rains and range stock for the most part are doing well.

Spring Wheat Prospect Good

The winter wheat harvest is becoming general. The early fields have been cut. Yields are variable; in general the crop in the eastern counties is in very good condition; in the western and northern counties the crop is spotted—in some localities fair to good, in others, more severely affected by drought, very short and being cut for hay. The spring wheat crop is generally in excellent condition, except where lack of rain has cut the crop short. Some damage by aphids is reported in Ada, Canyon, and Twin Falls counties.

Potatoes—Some plants are making thriving growth; canary peas are poor in the north and are below the average in the rest of the county, where some fields are affected by weevil; sugar beets are doing very well, but in the Idaho Falls districts the fields are woody and stands are uneven; the raspberry season is at its height, with a fair crop of good quality being gathered.

Optimistic Thought

He whom the good produce and wicked oats have to be satisfied with his reputation.

TALES FROM BIG CITIES

This Lad is Eager to Fight for Democracy

NEW YORK.—Llewellyn Joseph S. Smith, author of "Over There and Back" and "Trench Warfare," both written as the result of three years' experience with the Canadian and Scotch armies, has been in France for some time in his American uniform. A few weeks ago he received a letter from his twelve-year-old brother Paul, which he enclosed in his last note to some friends in New York. "I think it is a pretty good letter to come spontaneously from a boy of his age. It is in the spirit of the American-boy, they God help the Hun." The letter follows: "Dear Brother Joe: "I write to you especially to thank you for the dollar bill you sent by mother and to ask you some questions. I bought four Thrift Stamps with it. Every copper saved is a shot at the Kaiser (I hope). I read your book and enjoyed it greatly. I am recognizing it every place I go. "If with you would write some columns (not a story, as I wish to make my own story) about the tenderest thing you ever saw an ALLY soldier do. (The reason for underlining the word ally is because a German soldier never does anything tender. I guess you know that.) We are hearing good news about what the allies are doing to the Hunks. I hope it is true. (We hear it daily in the newspapers.) "Another thing I wish to ask you. I have been reading about Charles Muev, eleven-year-old war hero, who has been in some of the biggest battles during the war. Also I have been reading about John Traversa Corwell. Why do not true American boys have the same chance? Mother says I couldn't handle a gun. But did John Traversa Corwell handle a gun? "You might think I am silly, talking this way, but I mean it. This war stands for democracy and many other things. Why cannot people who want and stand for democracy and wish democracy to be the ruler, fight for it? Another thing, I fully realize that there are plenty of ways right here at home that we can do to help make the world safe for democracy, but other boys have actually fought for it, so why couldn't I? Think it over and then write and tell me what you think. "Well, I hope you have barrels of luck, and send you barrels of love. Lovingly, your brother Paul."

THE VICTORY AT HOME

The splendid part taken by American forces in the fighting yesterday marking the most momentous struggle of the year if not of the entire war, must necessarily exact a toll of the gallant men who have withstood the onslaughts of the Hun and driven him back, and in thousands of American homes today casualty lists are being scanned with deep anxiety.

General accounts of the glorious victory for American arms produce in this country general enthusiasm and rejoicing. On the Chicago board of trade, trading stopped momentarily while men shouted and threw their hats in the air and huffed each other in glee. When news of the great American drive reached Birmingham, Alabama, a Methodist clergyman led the guests in a cafe in a prayer service, returning thanks to God for the success of American arms.

It is with a combination of the spirit that impelled both these demonstrations, that the Americans learn of the achievements "at large" of their boys on the battlefield.

And it is with the spirit that impelled a distinguished former Chief Executive of this Nation to say, when he learned that his youngest son, Quentin Roosevelt, had fallen fighting in the air against a fleet of ten airplanes, he was glad his son had rendered some service to his country and had a chance to show what stuff was in him, that the story of the casualty lists will be received in American homes deepest touched by the sacrifice.

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

Perhaps the best sum-up of the proper attitude of a man towards his country ever given to the world is to be found under the title of "An American's Creed" in the official bulletin of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The writer, William Tyler Page, was awarded the sum of one thousand dollars for his effort in open competition with the country. The judges were among the most distinguished men of letters in America. There is scarcely a new thought in the article, but as a summary of all that is highest and best in American patriotism it has probably never been equaled. The creed follows: "I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

URGES VALUE OF SPANISH

Former Gov. Benton McMillin of Tennessee, now minister to Peru, is in the United States for a brief stay, believes that Spanish is the most important foreign language in use and that it ought to be taught in all the higher schools of the public schools and universities. "Spanish is the most universally used language," said Minister McMillin. "Every one of the 20 republics of South and Central America speak pure Spanish except Brazil, and there it is mostly Portuguese. There is the utmost cordiality existing between the South American republics and the United States, and the trade opportunities offered American manufacturers and exporters are tremendous. "After the war we will have the greatest chance of any nation to monopolize practically all the trade with South America. The relations between Peru and the United States are not merely conventional. They are exceedingly warm. The people of Peru have the warmest sort of regard for our people, and there is every desire on their part to extend the trade relations in every way with this country. Our manufacturers are giving a little more attention to South American business, but there is still room for much improvement. There is need for more consideration of the South Americans in finance and in the shipment and packing of goods. "Peru is growing rich since the war began. The balance of trade is largely in her favor. The restrictions on imports have made it necessary to sell largely at home, but Peru today is exporting many times the amount of goods that she did before the war."

WOMEN PRODUCE SUGAR AND STARCH AT HOME

Women in Uinta county, Utah, are going to make sugar at home. The great interest taken in sugar-bet production for sirups by the women of that county has led to the planting of 7000 to 100,000 pounds of sugarbeet seed. This is the direct result of the work of the county home-demonstration agent, who has demonstrated the use and making of the sirup to each of the fifty organizations in the county with whom she works. The women have also made between 2,000 and 2,500 pounds of potato starch, averaging 25 cents a bushel of raw material. This means the saving of 400 bushels of potatoes that otherwise would have been wasted. Don't you want it? Advertise in the Classified Column and get rid of it!

DEATH ENDS LIFE OF USEFULNESS

COMMUNITY MOURNS PASSING OF ALFRED A. WALTERS-SHOSHONE

Best remembered because of financial assistance given by him for completing their higher educations to young men of Shoshone, Idaho, where he had resided for several years, and where he was affectionately known by his friends as "Dad," Alfred A. Walters, father of Judge E. A. Walters of Twin Falls, and of Charles Walters of Gooding died at the age of 65 years, at 5:30 o'clock Thursday evening at a local hospital, where he underwent a surgical operation two weeks ago for cancer of the stomach.

Funeral services for Mr. Walters, conducted by Rev. E. J. Creaney, rector of the Episcopal church at Fort Hall, Idaho, will be held at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the residence of Judge Walters, 182 Seventh avenue west, and interment will be in the Twin Falls cemetery. A large contingent of Shoshone people is expected to attend the funeral services.

Up to three months ago Mr. Walters had enjoyed the best of health. He was brought to the local hospital six weeks ago.

Mr. Walters was born February 10, 1853, in St. Paul, Minnesota. He spent the greater part of his life in northwestern Iowa, where he was married January 15, 1875, to Mrs. Walters, who survives him.

In 1878 he moved west and resided for the rest of his life in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. As a locomotive and efficiency engineer, he was employed for many years by the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line rail way systems, and at that capacity was a resident of Shoshone when the rail road there was in operation there. He retired from employment as an engineer ten years ago while residing at Rawlins, Wyoming, and returned there to make his home in Shoshone, where his son, Judge Walters, was established in the practice of law.

Held Important Positions In Shoshone, Mr. Walters served for some time as a member of the board of school trustees and had charge of the construction of school buildings in that district.

His benefactions to young men in assisting them to complete their college educations were invariably made on the condition that the gift should remain a secret between the donor and the recipient. It was sometimes as long as four and five years after the young man had graduated that the fact that Mr. Walters had assisted him became known to members of Mr. Walters' family.

OBJECTORS TO WAE GET WORK ON FARMS

Camp Commanders Get Authority to Furlough Those Bound by Conscience

Useful war work is in store for "conscientious objectors," according to arrangements just completed by the war department and the United States food administration. All men in Camp Taylor, Mead and Lee who have scruples against fighting may be furloughed to engage in agricultural work. When it became known through Fred Sackett, federal food administrator for Kentucky, that in Camp Taylor alone there were about 100 "conscientious objectors"—nearly all farmers—a prompt interchange of letters between United States food administration officials and the adjutant general's office provided the men with an opportunity to serve their country.

Instructions have already been sent by the war department to the commanding general of each camp, authorizing them to furlough all "conscientious objectors" to engage in agricultural pursuits until August 15.

COUNTY OFFICIALS MAY BE TIED DOWN

Those Serving on Military Exemption Boards Face Awkward Situation

County officials serving on members of local boards without pay are facing a peculiar situation as election approaches, says the Idaho Statesman.

If they are not re-elected, these men must continue to serve as members of their respective boards without pay, which, under some circumstances, would work a hardship on those whose duties with the boards would take them from their places of business. Their acceptances of the appointments are for the duration of the war.

Although no provision is made for resignations, as the men for a technical standpoint are drafted, in certain cases where board members would be unduly imposed upon they have been permitted to resign.

However, many county officials who earlier in the season, announced that they would not be candidates for reelection, are reconsidering the matter, and in some instances the original announcements have been rescinded.

On this point the adjutant general recently advised an inquirer as follows: "Occasionally you are drafted for that work and the government, of course, could refuse to release you, but there seems to be no inclination upon the part of anybody one to impose any unnecessary hardship upon those who in good faith, and for good reason, ask to be relieved from the performance of this duty."

THRILLS IN HART'S NEW PLAY

The thrills accompanying any story of the early days of the frontier are not wanting in "The Tiger Man," Wm. S. It affords a strong part for Mr. Hart, and will add another triumph to his innumerable successes upon the screen. "The Tiger Man" is showing at the Idaho Theatre.

Albert N. Depew
EX-GUNNER AND CHIEF PETTY OFFICER, U. S. NAVY
MEMBER OF THE FOREIGN LEGION OF FRANCE
CAPTAIN GUN TURRET, FRENCH BATTLESHIP CASSARD
WINNER OF THE CROIX DE GUERRE

SYNOPSIS.
—Albert N. Depew, author of the story, enlists in the United States navy, serving four years and attaining the rank of chief petty officer, first-class gunner.

CHAPTER II—The great war starts after a month's discharge from the navy and he sails for France with the intention to enlist.

CHAPTER III—He joins the Foreign Legion and is assigned to the dreadnaught ship Cassard. Where his marksmanship wins him high honors.

That is, the reinforcements did our company of this Legion had not come from so far, and when the front of the column had drawn out to the way along the road we kept on alling, as if saying, "I do not care about being tough then, and I was ready for the wagon."

Only now there were no wagons! They belonged with the other troops. So I had to see after the pack and found myself longing for the Cassard and the rolling way, where no Marathons and five-mile hikes were necessary. But this was not to store for me—yet.

CHAPTER VI.

Fritz Does a Little "Strafing."

My outfit was one of those that saw the Germans place women and children in front of their machine guns to fight against our fire. More than a third of our men, I should say, had been pretty tough criminals in their own countries. They always traded their pay against a couple of cards or a roll of the bones whenever they got a chance. They had been in most of the dirty parts of the world. This was not such a much to them; just one more job in the list. "The world will find out the saints and the human body more things than any boss steverdore that ever lived."

Yet they were religious in a way. Some of them were always reading religious books or saying prayers in different ways and between them they believed in every religion and superstition under the sun, I guess. Yet they wore the toughest bunch I ever saw.

After they saw the Germans using the Delgan women in the way they did, almost every man in my company took some kind of a vow or other, and most of them kept their vows, too. I heard of those that were religious got more so after that.

Our chaplain had always been very friendly with the men, and while I think they liked him they were so tough they would never admit it, and he was often claimed by a few men as Jinx, or bad luck of some kind. But they all told him their vows as soon as they made them and he was supposed to be a sort of referee as to whether they kept them or not.

During my second stint in the front lines things got pretty bad. The Germans were five or ten and they kept coming back parts of the line and cleaning out others. And the weather was as bad as it could be and the food did not always come regular. Now, before they took their things away another shell whizzed over them. They laid to and in three or four minutes, directly over their heads, then a shell landed on the left side of the trench and a polli yelled that four men had got it. They were all wounded and the men talked to the lieutenant went over to them and just after he passed in a had got it right now for from me and was knocked over to where I was lying.

The lieutenant came back and helped me with the first-aid roll and then the Germans began using strapping. The lieutenant was sweating hard about the strapping and the Germans and everything else.

Further to the right a shell had just struck near the paradoss and made a big crater and across from it, against the parapet, was a young chap with a deep mark in his head, sitting on the fire step and next to him a fellow nursing the place where his arm had been blown off. Our bread ration lay all about the trench and some of the men were fishing it out of the mud and water and wiping the biscuits off on their sleeves or eating as fast as they could. Only some of the biscuits had fallen in bloody water and they did not eat these.

A young fellow, hardly more than a boy, stumbled over the paradoss and fell into the trench right near the lieutenant and the lieutenant dressed his wounds himself. I think he was some relation of the boy.

"The lieutenant asked him how he fell, but the boy only asked for water and smiled. But you could see he was in great pain. Then the boy said: "Oh, the pain is awful. I am going to die."

"You are all right, old man," the lieutenant said. "You will be home soon. The stretcher bearers are coming. So we passed the word for the stretcher bearers."

Then he took the water bottle from the boy's side and set him up and gave him some water. He left the water bottle with the chap and went to hurry the stretcher bearers along.

How We Give 'Em the Butt.

When he got around the corner of the trench the boy was slipping back and the water bottle had fallen down. So he went over to him and prepped him up again and gave him some more water.

The lieutenant came back with the stretcher bearers and he asked one of them, so the boy could not hear him, if the boy would fire. The stretcher bearer said: "I don't think so. One through his chest and right leg broken."

The boy had kept quiet for a while, but now he spoke up and said: "Why not a cigarette?" I handed him a cigarette but that I had found in the dug-out. We were all out of cigarettes.

So they lit it for him and he kept quiet as soon as they could get going around the corner of the fire bay with him and set through a communication trench to a field hospital. The lieutenant and I walked a little way with him and then he said to us, and he told the lieutenant, "Old man, you have been a father and a mother to me."

"And the lieutenant said to him: "You have done well, old boy. You have done more than most boys."

When they started into the communication trench the boy began to scream again. And the lieutenant acted like a wild man. He took out his cigarette case, but there were no cigarettes in it, and then he swore and put it back again. But in a few minutes he had the case out again and was swearing worse than ever and talking to himself.

reins were sticking out of his neck and one side of him was blown off. Also, his foot was wounded. That is what strapping does to you. As I lie flat on my back and he comes over to place. But when I tried to say I was sorry I could not, for then he apologized and died a moment later.

There was a silver cigarette case sticking out of the trench where his side had been blown away and the lieutenant crossed himself and reached in and took out the case. But when he tried, upon the case he found that it had been bent and cracked and all the cigarettes were soaked with blood. He swore worse than ever, then, and threw his own case away, putting the other officer's case in his pocket.

At this point our artillery began shell and we received the order to stand to with fixed bayonets. When we got the order to advance some of the men were already over the parapet and the whole bunch after that, and, believe me, I was as pale as a sheet, just scared to death. I think every man in when he goes over for the first time—every time for that matter.

We ran across the enemy's Land. I cannot remember much about it. But when we got to the German trench (it fell on top of a young fellow, and my bayonet went right through him. It was a relief to get him, at that. He was as delicate as a lamb after that.

When I got back to our trenches after my first charge I could not sleep for a long time afterward, for remembering how that fellow looked like and how my bayonet slipped into him and how he died when he was hit. He had his legs and his neck twisted under him after he got it. I thought about it a lot and it got to be almost a habit that whenever I was going to sleep I would think of him and then our company took a German trench that time and along with another company four hundred prisoners. We had to retire because the men on our side were being flanked. But we lost a lot of men doing it.

When we returned to our trenches our outfit was simply all in and we were lying around in the front line, like a bunch of old men in a barracks. None of us showed any signs of life except a working party that was digging with picks and shovels at some bodies that had been frozen into the mud of the trench.

I used to think all the Germans were big and fat and strong, and, of course, some of the grander regiments are, but lots of the Boches I saw were little and weak like this fellow I "got" in my first charge.

It was a good piece of work to take the prisoners and a novelty for me to look them in the face—the fellows I had been fighting. Because, when you look a Hun in the face, you can see the yellow streak. Even if you see their prisoner you can tell that the Hun is yellow.

Maybe you have heard pigs being butchered. It sounded like that when they got to them. When they picked up they yelled to beat the band. I guess they thought they could scare us. But you cannot scare machine gunners nor the foreign legion either. So when they could not scare us they were up against it and have to give it. I will admit, though, that the first time Fritz came over and began yelling I thought the whole German army was after me, at that, and Kaiser Bill playing the drum. When they have a bayonet they would much rather sit in a ditch and not cry.

I admit I am not crazy about bayonet fighting myself, as a general proposition, but I will say that there have been times when I was sure a gun behind the front lines when I wished for a rifle and a bayonet in my hands and a chance at Fritz man to man.

It was in this charge that our chaplain was shot in the commission. As we were lined up, waiting to start in to the fire step and then over the parapet, this chaplain came down the line speaking to each man as he went. He would not say much, but just a few words to cheer them up and give them the sign of the cross. He was in a black casack.

He was just one man from me as we got the word and stood up on the fire step. He was not armed with any kind of a rifle, but I jumped up on the step and struck his back with my parapet and got it square, landing right beside me. I thought he was killed, but when we got back we found he was only wounded. The men all saw it when over the parapet before the order was given and then the whole bunch after them, because they, too, thought he was killed and figured he never would keep any of them out about their vows. All the men in the company were glad when they found he was only wounded.

While half of us were on the firing step throughout the day or night the other half were in the trench, some sitting around in the bottom of the trench, playing little games, or mending clothes or sleeping or cooking or doing a thousand and one things. The man who was always in the dug-out at such times and it seemed to me even more so when the enemy fire was heavy.

If a man was slightly wounded down would come the rifles to order arms, and some would keep eyes to about: "Right this way. One franc." It was a standing joke and they always did it. The polli who did it most was a Swiss and he was always playing a joke on somebody or making some one of us or making faces.

FOREIGN BUYERS WANT LEANER PORK

Food Administrator Outlines Present Situation and Possible Developments

To acquaint hog growers of the United States with new conditions brought about by foreign demand, the food administration outlines the present situation and possible developments. East fall, owing to the large amount of soft corn, there was a general heavy feeding of hogs, with a consequent large increase in their weight when they arrived at market. Foreign buyers were filled with fat and heavier hogs than the European populations had been agencies now request a return to the customary weights.

From the present outlook, swine producers may anticipate preference for lighter weights of hogs. This country is not likely to have to repeat any request for heavy feeding. The condition outlined has been fully discussed by the agricultural advisory committee which met in Washington in a recent conference with officials of the food administration and the department of agriculture.

MUST MOVE FAST OR BE CRUSHED

By ED L. KERN,
 (United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, July 19.—The German army facing the Franco-Americans in the Salsburg district must move fast if it wants to escape a disastrous pocketing. Opinions were issued here today that the onward smash of the French and American troops marks the first stage of the tide now moving to engulf Germany. That nation and its allies are everywhere on the down grade and losing the initiative. The allied upward gain grows more noticeable as American contingents advance.

All fighting front the allies' activities are magnificent. With failures of the German drive toward Rheims, the victorious Franco-American coalition now dominates the Rhineland activity and Alsace. There is a possibility that there will soon be more important developments along the west front. The allied armies everywhere are straining at the leash, eager to take the offensive.

Reports reaching here from the point where the Franco-Americans opened their attacks Thursday bring the news that 5,000 Germans had been captured up to 3 p. m. Thursday. It looks as if as if the allies had hit their victory stride.

The navy isn't sleeping while the allies are steadily smashing at the German lines. The fleet is busy with men who are seeking for chances to help stage the final smash. In this connection advice are coming from a neutral source that eye-witnesses report the attack in the German fleet which is said to be mobilizing for the German war effort night report admitted that reserves will be thrown against the French in the district where the attack is being made, and admitted the loss of some ground.

WORK OF HUNS FOR LONG TIME

Their first baptism of fire will shoulder deep in the Sarre river. Singing lustily they waded through, clambered up the bank and rushed the amazed Germans, who had in the least expected result of facing Americans there. This fact was obtained from 29 prisoners, taken from a wood by the Americans.

There has been an opportunity to talk up the prisoners taken at all points, but when this is done it will further emphasize the value of the present allied effort, in contrast with the Germans' three day offensive strike Rheims.

Thrown out of gear by the allies' rapid strike, the German line is being broken. The fighting at some places was furious all night long, dispatches to Paris from the front today said, but the Americans were able to gain on Soissons from a plateau when dawn came today.

harrage and the tanks and infantry moved forward. That was all. A heavy thunderstorm had helped to conceal the troop movements, but the day broke bright and clear. It was great fighting weather.

Many of the German soldiers were at breakfast or seeking shelter from the sun when the allies moved forward. The Americans had breakfasted the night before and were without the handicap of observing meal-time. The advance was maintained without interruption up to noon, when the French and Americans halted briefly to rest and reorganize. They then swept ahead again, advancing further than in their first unit. French cavalry swung ahead with the infantry in the afternoon and aided the Americans in cleaning up the captured villages.

Whole Batteries Taken
 Americans and French surrounded and captured entire German batteries, including the artillery of an anti-aircraft division.

The Americans carried their full pack of 30 pounds on their backs. Most of our units did not bother with machine guns. It was a struggle to get rid of rifles, bayonets and grenades.

The Americans worked their way through fields and woods and into villages, driving the Germans before them. They took prisoners so rapidly that the latter became a hindrance and were sent to the rear as rapidly as possible.

Later when infantry units were sent forward in support, they carried up machine guns. They were quickly followed by field guns and then heavy artillery. It was one of the quickest examples of organization in the whole war.

Ambulances Busy

The fighting units of France and America was illustrated by the fact that repeatedly French and American wounded were carried to the rear in the same ambulances. Among them drove French motor trucks and Frenchmen drove American trucks. Doughboys, constituting the reserve, rode forward on trucks and ammunition wagons, carrying loads and drums as they hounded over the uneven ground. They had not halted to eat in the last twenty-four hours, but they were grinning and satisfied at the prospect of "eating up" a few Helles.

The little French "Fif" tanks were remarkably effective. The Americans would behind them like veterans as they rolled across the field and up the streets of the villages.

When the attack was being planned Wednesday night a certain American general suggested that his troops should advance in a certain point.

"I fear it will be inadvisable," said his superior. "You can't go that far."
 "The hell we can't!" exploded the general. "Any place I ask you to go, I'll go!"

Alsace-Marne Front

The Americans and French, after consolidating their newly won positions, resumed the offensive at a glacial moment on the Alsace-Marne front. The twenty-five mile front from Soissons to Chateau Thierry. New progress was reported despite heavy reserve forces flung into the battle by the Germans. A strong German counter attack southwest of Soissons was repulsed. The enemy is reported to be destroying supplies in Soissons, preparatory to evacuating the city. United Press dispatches reported that the battle was increasing in fury.

Champaign Front

Simultaneously with the Franco-American drive to the westward French and Italian troops are attacking the vicinity of Soissons from the Marne, between Chateau Thierry and Epernay, northeastward toward Rheims. They have made some progress and their advance is begun.

Oront Front

Extensive French raids on the whole front ended in the Wever, district netted more than 100 prisoners.

150 artillery pieces of various calibres in it. The enemy saved practically none of them, as the American infantry cut them off as they rolled back, which completely silenced the German guns.

"We were so busy chasing German reserves that we haven't had time to pay any attention to the shells they let behind them," said one observer.

Slightly wounded doughboys, happy grinning, lay about in groups after the advance was voluntarily halted, swapping experiences and displaying souvenirs.

"We were just rushed into the trenches last night," said one youngster. "We were only there half an hour when the captain said:

"Boys, in just twenty minutes you are over the top. There is time for every man to have a good smoke."
 "Before we reached their trenches the Helles were running. It sure gave us a good feeling to see the Helles hop out like rabbits. We couldn't help laughing at 'em."

Another doughboy, wounded in the hand after he had chased the Germans across the line (four and a half miles), carried his automobile with his good hand, ready to use it as he had the opportunity. He encountered three pairs of all of whom had been wounded more than he. He brought them home, but to the Americans, protecting them with his rifle.

LEON C. FINCH OF JEROME SUCCOMBS ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

From the effect of a gunshot wound accidentally inflicted by a companion with whom he was hunting Wednesday evening in the vicinity of Shoshone, Leon T. Finch, sixteen year old son of Mrs. Louise Ward, Jerome, died on Thursday on Blue Lakes grade while he was being brought to a local hospital. The fatal wound was from a .38 calibre rifle bullet, which entered the left side near the heart.

The remains were taken this morning to Shoshone, and will be taken from there to Pocatello, where funeral services will be held Sunday.

has placed probably 350,000 troops. This pocket swings southward from Soissons to the Marne and then north to Rheims, forming a line of about 350 miles.

The Franco-Americans are now driving the western side of this pocket inward, while the southern and eastern sides are being firmly held and locally attacked by the Americans, French and Italians. If the driving process continues a little longer the pocket may be squeezed.

Only One Way Out
 The only way of escape for the Germans caught within the pocket then will be northward, along the 65 mile opening between Soissons and Rheims. If the Germans wait too long before effecting their escape, the largest single capture of prisoners yet made by the allies may fall to the Americans and French.

The accomplishment of this possibility is now the main objective of the Franco-American drive. To prevent it, Van Hinderburg will be compelled to discard his own offensive plans and proceed the military activity of the Americans after such actual experience in trench warfare.

The Americans moved forward yesterday without previous artillery bombardment of the enemy positions. This is the newest and most highly technical method of attack. Yet American adaptability and initiative equalled the training of the veteran fighters.

Presence Appreciated

"These Frenchmen are so tickled they want to hold our hands all the time," said one doughboy.

American ambulance units operated speedily, following up the advance and tending the wounded, who are happy in their bandages. American hospitals were established in chateaux in woods and in the captured villages.
