WESTERN MARCH OF INFLUENZA IS CONTINUING

Epidemic Spreading Rapidly in Both Camp and Civilian Population—At Height in Middle West

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Two hundred and eleven thousand cases of influenza have been reported in army camps to date with 7,437 fatalities.

One week ago only 17 of the 43 larger camps were infected. There are now 83 such camps reporting more than 600 cases each for the week.

The influenza epidemic continued with great intensity in the majority of camps, and stations in the United States during the past week, the war department announced today.

It is spreading rapidly westward. Many new camps are now affected. In eastern camps where the epidemic first appeared comparatively few new cases are now being reported.

Few Pneumonia Cases
The disease as it has appeared in the south has been less frequently complicated by pneumonia and therefore less fatal.

14 view of the number of camps now infected and the progress of the epidemic in the earlier camps affected, it is believed that within a short time the peak will be reached and an improvement in condition may be observed.

During the week there were 4,111 new cases compared with 2,240 of last week.

EVACUATION OF BELGIUM WILL BE COMPELLED

Hindenburg Unable to Stop Retreat Until Withdrawal From Northern France is Complete

YANKS AND BRITISH CLOSE TO LECATEAU

Maubouge Now Main Objective of Allied Armies and Rate of Advance Comes Close to Establishing New Speed Record

By J. W. T. MASON
 NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Von Hindenburg is now entering the last lap of his retreat, to the great French fortress of Maubouge, guarding the Belgian border. The Belgian boundary zone will be occupied by the German army as its main defensive position and northern France will be redeemed. The Americans and British are advancing so quickly along the main railway leading to Maubouge that it is now doubtful whether von Hindenburg can make a prolonged resistance anywhere until he gets back to the fortress.

The fact that the Americans and British are today within two miles of Lecateau shows von Hindenburg is in desperate straits to retire to Belgium as soon as the retreating of his stores will permit. The Germans are fighting only rear guard actions and by making no determined stand before Lecateau, indicate they have no intention of clinging to any part of France beyond the Maubouge line. Maubouge is the southern extreme of the Belgian frontier and the Germans have constructed for fear of guarding their hold upon the Meuse line in Belgium.

New Line of Retreat

If the British and Americans succeed in driving the Germans from Maubouge the line of retreat would be along the Sambre river, which joins the Meuse at Namur. Namur, in its turn is the southern key to Belgium and guards the military passageway from Belgium into Germany. The Anglo-American forces, therefore, which is now moving relentlessly upon Lecateau, has but to continue its present northeasterly direction in a straight line to reach Belgium.

This is the ultimate objective of the present movement. It thus has a relationship with the American operations north of Verdun which are beginning down the Meuse to close the Luxembourg. If the Americans from Verdun follow the Meuse along its course, and the Americans in Belgium continue the present direction of their advance past Maubouge, the two armies will join forces at Namur. That is not an impossibility, but may well occur in the not far distant future.

MOTORS SPEED THEM TO FRONT

Motor trucks by the tens of thousands have made the great war different from any other in adding mobility to the opposing armies. Where preparation for battles in previous years required days, hours are now necessary. Since tankable was the first battle of the tanks, gasoline and motor have been increasing factors.

Some of the American troops in recent battles, perhaps those shown above in a momentary halt in a French village, have traveled thirty hours with hardly a stop for rest.

Your subscription to the Fourth Liberty Loan will add to the certainty that some day troops will not reach a flight too late to win it.

TWIN FALLS GIRLS GIVE VIEWS OF THE CAPITAL

Enjoy Experiences in War Work But Appreciate Home

Twin Falls girls employed in government service as stenographers at Washington, D. C. are enjoying their experience and are making the most of their opportunities in visiting portions of historic interest in the vicinity of the national capital, according to letters which have been received here from Miss Ada Walkington and Miss Lena Eckert, who were formerly deputies in the office of County Recorder E. J. Bland.

Miss Eckert, speaking of a Sunday spent at Camp Meade, Maryland, says, "I enjoyed seeing places in the camp that would not be open to visitors on any week days, as, for instance, the examining rooms. Now there are only about 40,000 men in that camp, but it seemed like a million to me."

Miss Walkington declares that she and Miss Eckert are enjoying the experience, but she says, "There is no place like Twin Falls and no friends like the old friends. While we enjoy being here we appreciate more than ever the fact that our real home is in Idaho and that our stay here is only temporary. The westerners here hang together more or less and it seems that one can tell a person who comes from west of the Mississippi river."

"The original Washingtonian has the idea that all western people ought to be 'nukes,' and are people who have not been away from home before. I'll admit that I haven't been around very much, but I believe I have seen more than the average person who has lived in Washington all his life. And talk about being up-to-date! People look askance at us when we tell them that Twin Falls has electric heat and modern houses, automobiles and paved streets. Yes, they have paved streets here, but most of them are brick and some of the sidewalks are as wavy as a road in the ocean."

POPE TO APPEAL FOR ACCEPTANCE OF WILSON VIEW

Vatican Expected to Make Definite Move on Side of Acquisition of Central Powers in Presidential Program

AUSTRIA AND TURKEY CANNOT LONG SURVIVE

Public Demand for Cessation of War Growing Steadily More Acute But End in Germany Not Yet in Sight

By ROBERT J. BENDER
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—That pope Benedict will appeal to the world to accept President Wilson's fourteen peace principles was indicated in reports to this government today. These stated that the pope has selected November 2—All Saints' Day—for his move.

In this connection, it is significant that the holy see knew as early as October 3 that Austria would appeal to Wilson for peace, accepting his fourteen points. Dispatches further disclose that Austria's plight is serious and that whatever Germany answers to the President's test of her peace sincerity, Austria and Turkey cannot long survive the growing demands in their countries for an end to the struggle.

This probably accounts for President Wilson's decision to leave Austria in doubt for the moment. Later, he will reply to her peace offer, submitted simultaneously with that of Germany, and probably will answer it at more length.

For Democracy
 Meantime, both Austria and Germany are expected to make reverent efforts

"Works Like A Clock!"

"—If we want another truck—it will be a Garford"

Say Conlon Brothers—Enumclaw, Wash.

Short and right to the point is the praise expressed in a letter from Conlon Brothers, of Enumclaw, Washington. After carefully considering their purchase they finally decided on a Garford. After using it day and night continuously for a year they feel that they have not made a mistake in their selection and do not hesitate to say so quite frankly. In their letter they say:

"We were a year buying a truck and now realize that we bought right.

"It is like a clock—it is on the road 365 days in the year.

"The reason we bought a 1 1/2 ton Garford was for the service and we got just what we were looking for.

"If we ever want another truck it will be a Garford."

The appreciation expressed by Garford owners all over the country means a great deal to every prospective purchaser of motor trucks.

Every farm and factory feels their need. The speed being attained for the demands of war make the motor truck an essential to every essential industry.

EXPLAINS USE OF BOND FUNDS FOR SOLDIERS

Superintendent Hal G. Blue Addresses Junior Red Cross Members in Convention With Liberty Loan Campaign

In the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan, explaining the government's use of money raised through the sale of bonds in providing the Army with fighting men, Superintendent Hal G. Blue, chairman of the Twin Falls County Red Cross chapter school committee, has addressed the following letter to all members of the Junior Red Cross organizations:

When Registrars Are Called
In the last Liberty Loan letter, you heard how all the men in the United States who are fit to be in the army register with their local draft boards, and how the government calls a part of these men to go at once to training camps. Now you will want to know what these men do next and how the government takes care of them.

When a man is called for active service he is given an arm-band which shows that he is now a soldier. This band carries the same authority, responsibility and protection that a uniform does. If he meets the enemy (which, of course, he will not do yet) they would have the right to fire upon him or take him prisoner, and anyone who sells him liquor is liable to arrest.

The new soldier is under the direction of the provost-marshal general, who assigns him to a training camp. He is assigned to a certain train. On the train he is in charge by the transportation department. If the trip is a long one, he travels on a Pullman or tourist sleeper. His meals are provided by the government and cost not more than 40 cents apiece.

How Soldiers Live
Arriving in camp, he is assigned to his "quarters." He lives, usually in a two-story wooden building, having plenty of air and sunlight, and the cleanest of floors. There would meet the old-time tent "clean enough to eat from." He sleeps in a well-ventilated room with other soldiers. The number of men in a room is regulated by the number of beds in the room. He has a cot with a spring, covered with good steel springs. He is given two khaki-colored wool blankets, and if the weather is cold, he is given an extra blanket and two thick comforters.

Lavatories are located at the rear of these quarters, with water pressure and fixtures like those used in the best hotels in the country, and for every company there are at least two shower-baths. Every soldier is required to keep himself and his quarters absolutely clean. The sanitary corps sees to it that the whole camp is clean and sanitary.

The camp is well drained, and all waste is disposed of in such a way that it does not cause sickness.

During previous wars more men have died from "preventable" disease than from battle wounds. In the Civil War, thousands of soldiers died from typhoid, camp fever, dysentery and other diseases caused by "dirty" camps. That cannot happen now. The man in charge of keeping camp clean is the health sergeant. He is the only man who cannot zone and so make it possible for people to live there and build the Panama canal.

Care of Health
After the soldier is settled in his new quarters, he is examined by the health sergeant. This examination is very thorough. For instance, if the doctor thinks a man may have consumption, he watches him carefully until he is cured. If he has disease, he is just started the patient is sent to an army sanitarium to be cured. If his case is advanced, he is sent home to his family.

LEADER OF BOHEMIANS

Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, president of the Czech-Slovak National Council, which is also a provisional republican government for Bohemia, held a conference with President Wilson recently, and soon thereafter the administration announced that America supported the aspirations of Bohemia for independence from Austria.

Dr. Masaryk is a Czech, professor in the University of Prague and deputy for Masaryk in the Vienna parliament. Shortly after the world war broke out he fled from Austria and became a leader of the Czech-Slovak revolution against Austria.

Masaryk was born in 1850 in Moravia, in the same district in which 300 years earlier was born that great teacher of nations, John Amos Comenius. His father was a coachman and Masaryk was destined to become a blacksmith, but at the age of fifteen he entered the gymnasium of Brno, Moravia, and in 1872 commenced to study at the University of Vienna. Masaryk knows the United States well. He came here for the first time in 1878 to get acquainted, at first hand, with the greatest democracy of the world.

He recovers. A dentist puts the new soldier's teeth in good condition. They will be taken care of regularly as long as he is in the army. A special doctor examines his feet. It has been said that in past wars there have been more desertions from feet troubles than from all other causes combined. In the American army today, great care is given to the selection of the new soldiers' shoes.

When he gets a pair of army shoes, he gets a pair that fit his feet. No account is taken of the size he wore before. His feet are placed in a form that measures the length and width exactly. He hears his weight on his feet. If the shoes do not fit exactly, the doctor registers the fact. Every soldier has a good supply of clean socks, and after a long march, his feet are examined by a doctor.

Average Gain 12 Pounds
No army has ever been kept as healthy as ours. The death rate, here and abroad, is eight men out of every thousand. Many of the men who fall ill, caught their disease before they left home. It has been found that the average gain of the American soldier after he enters the army is 12 pounds. The government is spending its money wisely in taking care of its soldiers.

In view of the fact that the churches are closed by order of the state board of health, and the Twin Falls News having courteously offered necessary space, several of the pastors have entered into an arrangement to furnish a sermon each Friday during the life of the closing order. Rev. O. L. Owen, pastor of the Baptist church, is the speaker for the coming Sunday. The public, especially the members of the churches, will do well to avail themselves of the privilege of reading the sermon on the Lord's Day. The study of the regular Bible school lesson, or other religious lesson given in denominational helps, is also urged. To follow fully in the pastors' plan, the lesson will be studied and the sermon preached in the regular church service. The Lord's Day is the day divinely appointed for meditation and prayer, and in these tremendous days, should be carefully guarded. Let us live below our high privileges.

PIPING IT UP

From all indications, Germany has apparently decided upon the inauguration of a veritable reign of terror in those portions of occupied France and Belgium through which her armies must pass in their homeward march.

In this the Hun is mistaken. The righteous and terrible anger of the French people will result in the addition of a measure of revenge to the peace terms which will cost Germany dear.

Germany is simply adding to the total of her account. This is the sort of thing which has served to popularize on the continent the slogan of 'inferno' humanity.

Nearly Three Hundred Missing as Result of Submarine Attack on Japanese Passenger Steamer

AN ENGLISH PORT, Oct. 11.—Tales of atrocities rivaling the most pitiless deeds of German submarines were told here today as the story of the sinking of the Japanese steamer Hiranu was placed out in the pitifully small number of passengers and crew who were saved.

Attacks Destroyer
The submarine remained in the vicinity and fired two torpedoes at the destroyer, which ignored the pirate until the crew picked up the struggling victims.

Five Japanese women, two nurses and three children were among the drowned.

As usual, Germany has blundered. Obviously, the thought-back of the action was that such work would compel a quicker acquiescence of the French people in the German peace program.

Dainty Uniforms Adorn Fair Society Women

Probably All Symbols Looked Alike to Him

HE WAS marching through a park. You couldn't call it walking, because he marched. Perhaps he struck the gait that suited him because there was no one around—unless you count, snappers and a woman feeding a squirrel.

You never can tell what wonderful thing is going on in the heart and mind of any man or woman you pass on life's cross-roads, especially when he goes marching through a park carrying a Jonquil as if it were a blessed candle.

The man was marching himself out of the incident when a tiny girl trotted from around a bush, and he handed her the Jonquil with the chirality of a did-time cavalier.

Just One of the Pleasures of Postal Clerks

POSTAGE stamps are little things which one uses day after day and generally thinks about only at all. And yet hundreds of men and women who make them here to think about them, and the thousands of postal employees who sell them throughout the nation have to think about them.

He walked into the drug store on the corner and strolled over to the postal station window. A brisk young American was standing behind the window.

"Yes, sir," said the young clerk. The personage twined his cane.

"What are they?" he asked, evidently felicitating himself on discovering a new way to say "How much?"

"Why, my dear sir," he said, "they are little pieces of paper with a picture on one side and some muck on the other."

Couldn't Believe Gorgonius Was Her Father

A TINY girl out southeast way lived with an uncle and aunt because her mother was in heaven and her father at sea. Being old enough to play with other tiny children, she wondered why it was that she had no papa to come home from work every afternoon so that she could race down the pavement and hug him around the legs.

The child took in the brass buttons and gold braid with wet wonder, leandered with doubt. This big, gold-shining man was not like the paper woman came home from work every afternoon to have their legs hugged. The blue cloth arms were open to receive her, but she hung back fearfully. She had to be sure.

A SUGAR ROMANCE

Bruce Lynden came out to his sister's country home, to bid her farewell. He had been called to his country's colors and must leave soon for training camp.

"Jane was glad to find that the intricate anticipated departure, had not affected her brother's gay spirit. It was the same merry-hearted Bruce who sang gay songs to his own accompaniment, made the first suggestion of a young folk's party in his honor, had been discouraged; that was before the chance meeting with Sheila.

"Jane's voice said, "Sheila's voice over the phone came to Bruce as he bent his listening head above a sister's. "I cannot come to come," she girl answered the invitation, "but will let you know later."

Instantly Bruce became a resolute knight. "I'd like to carry her off under the old woman's nose," he declared.

His sister laughed, but her eyes were tender, as she caressed the soldier's hair. She was so anxious at this time to see him in the pleasure. And he fancied himself in love with Sheila, well, who could be more worthy of love than that faithful girl?

"Good morning," said Sheila. "Can you please send some sugar to Mrs. Holston? Ever so little would be appreciated. I know you were obliged to refuse us yesterday, Mr. Schmidt, but grandmother—" the girl laughed, "never be happy 'till she gets it."

It was evident that the operator had made a wrong connection. Bruce thought fast. The girl's acceptance of the parcel was, of course, depended on grandmother's honor, and "grandma would not be happy 'till she had sugar."

"Upon the buffet near at hand presented Bruce promptly emptied into it the contents of two sugar bowls.

"I have called up both telephons," she was saying, "and cannot get a bit. Oh! 'these war times! And how my sugar disappeared, a mystery. There were the bowls all filled for this evening's party—the smallest alone remains, and Anne knows nothing about it. Oh! if you could, dear, I'd be so grateful."

After luncheon Bruce fled guiltily to the sitting room. Here in unexpressed silence he smoked and spilled into the fire. His remark was interrupted by the sight of a girl's figure ascending the porch steps.

Before the startled caller had time to press the bell he had thrown wide the door, "Come in," he eagerly invited.

But Sheila hesitated. "I came to bring some sugar to your sister," she explained; "we have more than we need at present. Will you give it to her please? I am on my way to buy a new dress for her."

"Breathlessly Bruce grabbed the bag. "Wait a minute," he begged. "I'd like to walk with you."

"As he joined the girl on the snow-covered path he decided that prompt confession was inevitable—this that to the Schmidt person complicated matters. "As to that sugar," he began.

"I need the order this morning," he added for Sheila's accompaniment by mistake for the grocer's. "That was Jane's sugar—ready for the party."

ALLIES ON EVE OF VICTORY OF GREAT PORTEND

Chief of Staff March Says Forces Now Within Fourteen Miles of One of Most Important Enemy Supply Points

CAPTURE WILL DEAL DEATH BLOW TO HUN

Junction of Main Supply Arteries of German Communication Will Be Under Fire Within a Few Days

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—America has now reached nearly 2,000,000 men in troop shipments from her shores, General March announced today. More than 1,900,000 men are now in Europe, March said, and shipments are continuing. To assure victory, the war department changed the draft ages so that 2,000 men were drafted as soon as possible, and asked more money for such supplies and ordnance. The capture of Liezeau by the British, March pointed out, brings the allied forces to within 14 miles of the most strategic town of Aulnoy—the great junction point of two roads, comprising the chief artery of communication of the German forces in Belgium and France.

Control Two Roads

One branch leads to Maugeance and Liezeau and other to Metz. An advance of a few more miles, he said, will put this line under command of the allied guns. The enemy's resistance in the Liezeau region is shattered and constant pressure of the allied forces is keeping the Germans constantly on the go, March declared.

In the north, the British are 12 miles from Valenciennes and the communications of that city are threatened. From July 13 to September 13 they captured 248,494 men and 3,699 guns and vast quantities of other weapons. These figures do not include captures of men and materials by General Allenby in Palestine, March declared. In the Balkans and in Albania, March pointed out, the allies are pressing forward.

Locates Various Units

March located specific units as follows: Ninety-five divisions in the training area in France; Delaware troops, contained in the 78th division, have been recently reported in the line, exact location unknown, but probably in the Woery; 320th infantry, and the 82nd are in the training area in France; 147th is in the Voges on the line. Third division, composed of 4th, 7th and 30th infantry and 10th; 8th and 70th field artillery, was reported in the Marne attack; the 72nd pioneer infantry, the 20th field artillery and the 82nd division were reported east of the Argonne October 7.

ASKS NEW BILL ON CHILD LABOR EVIL

Congress Prepared to Take Up Task Immediately After Spring Recession

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Assured the full support of President Wilson, a representative today was authorized to pass a new child labor bill, when this congress convenes next March. The president, according to both Democratic and Republican members, who have talked with him, wants a measure that will end the child labor evil for all time. He will support a measure that will take children out of industry and pass must be with the supreme court, which knocked out the Keating child labor bill.

Would Use Tax Pressure

He will put the drafting of such a measure up to congressmen who have worked out two plans. One method is to place a prohibitive tax on the production of child labor so as to make impossible their sale at a reasonable price. The second plan is for an outright prohibition of the employment of children under the power of the federal government. Indicating that there is nothing of immediate importance in the situation, President Wilson left Washington today for a week end in New York City. He will attend the Liberty day celebration Saturday night. He is not planning to speak, however.

DRAFT CONSTITUTION FOR MID-EUROPEANS

Plans Under Way for Consolidation of Interests of New Nation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Drafting of a constitution for the mid-European union, recently organized by leaders of subjected peoples of central Europe is under way today. Dr. Thomas Masaryk of the Czech-Slovak national council, chairman of the union, is working on the document which will be submitted to leaders of seven nationalities comprising the organization.

Each national group will be given one vote in determining all important questions, according to the present plan. Specific applications of President Wilson's self-determination will be made in the plans of the mid-European union for breaking up Austria.

Those represented in the union are: Czech-Slovaks, Poles, Ukrainians, Jugoslavs, Lithuanians, Rumanians and Italian prisoners.

HUNS PREPARE TO ARGUE FOR FURTHER TIME

Evasion and Counter Proposals Looked for in Reply to Wilson's Note Regarding Terms of Peace

By ROBERT J. BENDER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—That the Kaiser and his militaristic crew will attempt evasion and counter-proposals when they reply to President Wilson's peace note inquiries, was the conviction in well informed circles here today.

According to reports received here, the German reply will be submitted to the negotiating committee to give it the semblance of "approved by the people."

Many careful observers of German practices believe the reply will run along these lines:

"Germany will accept the president's fourteen points if they are made to apply to America's friends as well as her enemies;

"Germany" will evacuate Belgium and northern France and draw all other necessary police forces out of other occupied territory provided Great Britain evacuates the German colonies and Japan prepares to return Kiao Chau."

Expect Careful Answer

To the president's pointed inquiry as to just whom Prince Max represented in submitting his peace appeal, authorities look for some such reply as this:

"Germany is undergoing a political revolution and in the process of this change, insofar as it is possible for any man to speak for the people as a whole, Prince Max speaks." Officials here believe Max will ask the negotiating to approve his peace proffer or give him a vote of confidence that he may "put over" this claim.

That President Wilson will enter no hickering or quibbling over such evasions, if made, has been definitely ascertained. The Allies and America are the victors—they shall dictate what shall or shall not be done.

Lansing's Views

As Secretary Lansing declared in a speech last night at Auburn, N. Y., "We know the German military leaders and their forces will be defeated," and to indicate this government's continued determination to see that Hohenzollerns get their dues out of the war, Lansing stated:

"When the time comes to balance the account—and it seems to be drawing near as the vassals of Germany seek refuge from the day of wrath—the authors of the frightful wrongs committed on mankind shall not be forgotten."

Hence there is little indication that the Kaiser will have much luck in trying to save himself by "passing the buck" to the president.

Such evasion, as indicated above, authorities said, would prove rather definitely that the Kaiser made his original move to create disunion among the Allies.

To prevent even the opportunity for this stroke before the Allies had secured complete unity of purpose and counsel—the same as unity of command—was the reason President Wilson made his Liberty Loan speech in New York on Sept. 27. It appears more than ever necessary now that all the Allies get together promptly on their war aims to effectually ward off any possible coup d'etat by the Teutons.

Handing it to Him. "Ad," said Eve, coyly, as she winked at the snake unbeknownst to Adam, "we are the one man in the world for me." Then she handed him the apple.

The One to Be Feared. "Don't bother 'bout do men that brags 'bout his fightin' qualities," said Uncle Eben; "but keep your eye on di man dat 'ez horse 'is own."

GERMAN TROOPS BURN AND SLAY LIKE MANIACS

Reason Cast to Four Winds in Exodus of Hun Hordes Towards Belgian Border—Allied Officers Aghast

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—German soldiers and sailors are engaged in a new era of frightfulness and destruction as they see defeat staring them in the face. This was evidenced today by accounts of the brutal murder of men from the United States cargo carrier Ticonderoga.

The counterpart of this inhuman slaughter is found in the westward dash with which the retreating Germans are wrecking their way out of France and Belgium. Nothing is spared. Hidden burg is believed to be creating a detour as he can, just as he made a desert father west earlier in the day. Fruit trees, houses, whole towns—everything to which the Germans can apply dynamite or fire before the Allies overtake them—are being destroyed before the coalition forces.

Military authorities are at a loss to understand such insane actions and attribute them to the complete breakdown of reason under the ravages of unexpected defeat.

Lines to Be Remembered. Fear to do base, unworthy things is valory if they be done to us, to suffer them is valor, too.—Ben Johnson.

MARINE CORPS RECRUITER DOES A RUSHING BUSINESS

Eleven Men Apply for Voluntary Induction—Here in Two Days' Time

Sergeant Ashby was notified Thursday of the probability that the recruiting station in Twin Falls and all other sub-stations will be closed at the expiration of one month's time. Following is a list of the men whose applications have been received at the local recruiting station since Wednesday: Albert W. Bowie, Twin Falls; Donald B. Chapman, Twin Falls; A. # Farm Where You Can Produce Most

Upon the efficiency and efforts of the American farmer depends, to a very vital degree, the success of the cause for which America's sons and her allies' sons are shedding their blood.

Europe's grain production this year is about 525,000,000 bushels below normal. Her cattle, sheep and hogs have diminished by over 30,000,000 animals.

Not only therefore, must America maintain her normal exports of grain and animal products to her European allies—she must make up these terrific shortages and add enough to counteract the losses from submarine warfare.

It is therefore incumbent upon the American farmer, handicapped as he is by labor shortage, to farm where he can produce most.

Capay Rancho

The crops that are being produced here right now are almost beyond the conception of the farmer who is unacquainted with this section.

There are no extremes of climate to combat. The land is ready for immediate cultivation and production. Close to markets. Good roads. Splendid neighbors. Excellent schools. Delightful climate. Electricity on every farm. Abundant water supply. Every condition is ideal for profitable, intensive farming. No Pioneering.

The last of the land is now being offered. If you are interested we suggest that you investigate at once. Would you like us to send you the names of farmers from your community who have bought at Capay Rancho.

ADVISES EARLY OFFENSIVE ON CLOVER APHIDS

Entomologist Says Results of Investigation Show Serious Outbreak - Result of Bugs Living Over Winter

By Ralph H. Smith, Associate Entomologist, University of Idaho

The investigation of the clover aphid that is being carried on by the state university at the entomological station at Twin Falls shows conclusively that the serious aphid outbreak of the spring and early summer of 1918, which damaged alfalfa production to an extent of 75 per cent and threatened a much injury to the red clover crop, was preceded by millions of the aphids living through the winter in the crowns of clover plants. Careful study of the aphid problem indicates that the winter is in which this pest passes the winter and gets its start in the early spring.

All fields infested

It is doubtful if there is at the present time a single clover field in southern Idaho that is not more or less seriously infested with clover aphid. Observations show that fully 90 per cent of volunteer red clover plants along roadsides, fence rows, ditch banks, and in neglected orchards and field corners harbor from a small number to several thousand aphids to each plant.

Without attempting to forecast winter weather conditions which may accelerate or retard the development of the clover aphid, the fact that great numbers of aphids are everywhere present this late in the season increases the probability of another outbreak next spring.

Grazing Remedy Effective

Extensive investigation has proven that the aphid can be prevented from wintering over in the crowns of clover plants by grazing fields with sheep during late fall and early winter. It is necessary to graze till every vestige of green thing is gone. For this reason sheep are recommended. They not only eat the crowns of clover plants, but also trample the plants into the ground and bury everything there.

Advice from experienced growers of alfalfa and red clover is that several cleanings of the clover should be made. More growers claim a decided benefit is derived. One important advantage in this treatment is that insect pests other than the clover aphid are destroyed. Ranking next to the aphid in destruction of the clover and other plants, which passes the winter in the seed of old clover heads.

Of equal importance are isolated clover plants and clover patches which, because of the severity of winter weather and provide a supply of green food later in the fall and earlier in the spring than do open clover fields.

Ditch Banks as Harbors

There is hardly a hundred feet of unkempt ditch bank but that does an amount of damage to the clover crop of white clover on which the aphid finds excellent conditions for passing the winter. Where only a few clover plants are present they may be grubbed off during the fall.

A much better practice is to graze ditches with sheep till every plant is eaten into the ground and, whenever possible, follow this by a thorough cultivation. This treatment destroys the aphid and other pests that seek the protection of ditch banks for spending the winter.

Burning off is a good method of cleaning up ditches. Care must be taken that the ground as well as the vegetation is thoroughly dry. The burning should be done when there is little or no wind.

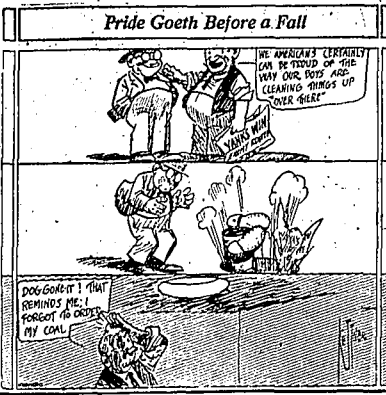

Roadsides, fence rows, and neglected patches may be cleaned up in the same way as ditch banks.

Bugs Thrive in Orchards

Orchards in which clover is grown afford the most favorable conditions for the aphid to pass the winter. Additional protection from severe weather is afforded by the trees and the fallen leaves. A certain per cent of the aphids habitually go onto apple and pear trees during the first few days of frosty weather. Here they deposit eggs on the young branches. The eggs are resistant to the cold of winter, and hatch in the early spring, starting a new branch of the pest. The aphid is not known to lay its eggs on any other common plant.

Orchards in which the clover crop is neglected should be plowed at once. Where the stand is good, it should be thoroughly sheared. Persons who have practiced grazing orchards with sheep advise that no damage will be done if trees if the sheep are properly attended and removed from the orchard at once.

Because of the important relation orchards have to the life cycle of the clover aphid, it is strongly recommended that other crops be grown in orchards.

TALES FROM BIG CITIES

All Traffic Held Up by Mr. Drake and His Harem

PHILADELPHIA.—It was not a motorcycle "cop" or a couple of smashed autos that blocked the wheels of pleasure on a park boulevard this time. No, it was only a big dawdling drake and four unwholesome members of his harem.

Mr. Drake, the sultan of his spectral flock, with the four Mrs. Drakes, were crossing the boulevard, headed for a lagoon just above the south entrance to the park, when a large motorbus, loaded with noontime shoppers, came rattling along the highway.

With furious and unrelenting quackings the sultan and his four wives took to the middle of the road and charged the big two-wheeled bus like a band of highway thiefs.

"Quack-quack" of the sultan and leader sounded more like "huck-huck" than anything else. "S-s-s-s-s-s-s-s-s-s" hissed the four ladies of the sultan's harem, which was not at all ladylike, according to modern ethics of politeness.

In about a minute there were two long lines of automobiles—one going another coming, and the lines extended for a block each way, the sultan and his "regiment of ducks" still holding utter defiance to the huge tanklike thing that continued to snort in the distance.

Presently the feathered patrol assembled in the middle of the highway for a consultation, which lasted several minutes, despite the fact that the noontime shoppers and occupants of the autos had been re-enforced by several park laborers armed with rakes, shovels and miscellaneous cutnoses.

Evidently the legion of ducks advised that discretion is the better part of valor; anyway, the sultan stalked proudly from the highway, followed by his feminine supporters, marching by "twos." By the time they had reached the lagoon the haremward officers had begun to straighten out the bootlegging traffic.

"Don't you see, this is more exciting than when I played ducks and drakes in Ireland," remarked "Big Jim" Brady, as he searched for the bowl of his pipe that had been broken off in the battle.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CANDY

Why the Craving for Candy?

It is perfectly natural for the human system to crave something sweet, especially in this true with man and women who work hard, and also with growing children.

That's because, in sugar people secure fuel for the body.

"Carbohydrates" the chemists and physicians call this fuel.

Granulated sugar is 100% carbohydrates, but, of course, taken alone, it is not a pleasant food.

But, mixed with nuts, fruit or other things, it is made up into a palatable and nourishing food product, called "candy."

Candy, being composed mainly of fruits, nuts, chocolate and sugar, is a highly nutritious food product. Different kinds, varying in the proportions of sugar, fruits, nuts, etc., vary, therefore, in the proportions of carbohydrates, fats, proteins, etc.

Growing children crave candy because growing bodies require energy fuel—hence the natural craving for candy.

Men and women who work hard consume much body fuel, hence their craving for candy. (Go into the logging camps, into the shipyards, into the army camps, if you want to see candy doing its greatest work.)

Candy is establishing itself today as a wonderful food product. It is asserting its right to live, because it is the body ammunition which is speeding the work of men and women everywhere, because it is aiding in the normal, healthful growth of children, and because it is supplying the energy which is sending many a "soldier" over the top.

Every day people in all branches of work are up to the fact that candy is a wonderful food—economical, nutritious—doing a great work in this war and establishing the right of the industry to live.

—In several times the candy industry now only 5% of the sugar consumed per capita in this country. Eighty per cent of this amount has been set apart for the war.

A WELCOME GUEST

By ARNOLD WARRENTON.

(Copyright, 1918, Western News-Paper Union.)

"I saw it first!" shouted Robert Leslie.

"And I heard it first!" roared his brother, Martin.

"Why don't you see it?" jeered the first speaker. "Suddenly taking a plunge to humanity, that you want to grab a poor little abandoned skit of a thing, after—"

"There Robert Leslie paused. An acute expression in his brother's face checked him. He was sorry, for he realized that he had made a bad break. There had been a passage in both their lives where anger had led to injustice and this, in turn, to sorrow deep and lasting.

Into their lonely lives this sunny afternoon there had come a startling experience. Their home was a double house on the boulevard. Robert lived alone in his quarters. Martin had a housekeeper, a Mrs. Wade. Thus for years these two rare old bachelors had lived, daily sinking deeper into a rut of uneventful existence.

"See-here," spoke Martin, after a pause during which the twins gazed down at the little huddled animal snuggled in a padded basket. "I saw it are one of my kind. Some other morning he'll be driven to a dissecting table, has left the child here. Why she selected two crabs old cranks to take in the little rascal I cannot comprehend. Here it is, though, and we will like two schoolboys with an odd toy. All right—we'll adopt the child."

"Yes, it will break the loneliness," responded Robert; "but what do we know about babies?"

"That's just it," said Martin, eagerly. "We know nothing about them, but she's a woman and knows a baby's ways. Don't you worry."

"No, I don't!" growled Robert. "I have as much right to the child as you have."

Unsuspected, and well made it a mutual adoption, pacted Martin, persuasively. "I've thought for a long time how senseless it was for us to maintain separate establishments. Close up your joint business the expense by taking a room with us, and share the baby among us."

So the little founding was carried into the house, each of the queer old characters jealously insistent on having a handle of the basket all to himself.

"Here's a visitor, and we're going to adopt the little fellow," announced Brother Martin, and Mrs. Wade went into the kitchen to get the tiny stranger. Never was such a lovely, smiling, chubby angel! Why, see—his round little chubby fingers around her work-worn hand and actually laughed up at her!

"This was such a rare gift from heaven!" Aunt Martha grinned and chuckled, and Robert hopped from foot to foot in a state of high excitement. And Mrs. Wade cried and laughed, with the baby cooed and crowsed.

In the following fraternal week Martin smoked down town and came back with all kinds of baby goods. Robert contributed a high chair and a rocking chair. The two food and foolish gaudiness involved about the cradle on all occasions possible.

"I've been thinking that baby ought to have some one to care specially for him," suggested Mrs. Wade. "I have my other duties, and I'm old and slow," so search was made and Mrs. Martin hired to take charge of the child. Slightly Martin hid a baseball bat, and a kite and a pocketknife. Robert eagerly went him one better. He had a toy gun and a rattle under the bed.

The days went by pleasantly and peacefully, the infatuated brothers discovering daily some new cuteness and intelligence in the baby, always crying and smiling. One day the nurse along was playing the little child along the street when a lady, youthful in face and form, stopped her to bend over and caress the baby. The nurse was attracted by this interest. They fell into conversation and the nurse mentioned that she would have to give up her charge, as some relatives had asked her to take her home with them.

"Oh, can I trust you? Will you bless my life by one simple act?" broke forth the strange lady, and into the nurse's ear she whispered a story that brought tears of sympathy to her eyes.

It came about that when the nurse left the Leslie home she recommended "a friend" as Mrs. Bell, the letter to love her from the start. She was used to the brothers and Mrs. Wade.

On day Martin called his brother into the library, closed the door carefully and extended to him a letter.

"Read that," he said solemnly.

"Why, what is it about? Who wrote it?"

"Mrs. Bell, otherwise Mrs. Arnold Leslie, wife of the nephew you sent adrift eight years ago. He has been ill in a sanitarium for a year. She had to work to keep him there and had to give up the baby. The letter tells all the story, and Arnold is well and coming for her."

"Not to take the baby away?" quavered Robert.

"Understand," spoke Robert, arising and leaving the room. He drew a roll of banknotes from his pocket. He found Mrs. Bell in the garden.

"Daughter," he said, tendering the money, his voice quivering with the utmost emotion, "hear for one nephew and tell him wife, and baby and home and love are all waiting for him here—"

First Use of Toilet Vinegar.
Perhaps the ladies who use toilet vinegar would like to know its origin?
The story runs like this: During the great plague that visited Marseille, four highwaymen who had formed a society, invented an aromatic vinegar by means of which they could rob the dead and dying without any fear of infection. This vinegar was for a long time known in France under the name of "Vinaigre de quatre voleurs," and eventually became toilet vinegar.

Flightless Parrot
When Harcourt's Island situated 200 miles to the south of New Zealand, was discovered in 1810, it was inhabited by a peculiar flightless parrot fostered by a contemporary who saw members of the birds which were brought to Sydney by sealers as "the stiffest of the loquacious tribe." Recent investigation of the island makes it almost certain that this strangely isolated specimen of the parrot family was brought to Sydney probably as a result of the introduction of cats, which have become wild and overrun the island.

They Fly Faster, Too
Our nature is symbolic of the change in America's attitude. On the new quarters the eagle is seen in full flight eastward, with beak and talons ready for action. On the old quarters the eagle simply stood still on its tall and barren perch. One claw held a few antiquated weapons, the other waved an olive branch, while its beak was entangled with a scroll—Independent.

Finding Broken Wire
It is a difficult matter to locate a broken wire in an ignition cable, unless one knows how. Here is how:
Draw each individual wire out somewhere along the cable. Hold a compass within a half-inch of the wire. If the current is flowing through the wire, the compass will be deflected from its normal position in one way or the other. A broken wire will have no effect on the instrument, which thereby acts as a detective.

Beggar Made Good Money.
A lucrative profession was the description applied to begging in Edinburgh, Scotland, by a magistrate the other day. A man who had been brought before him on the charge of begging was found to have collected in one morning nearly two dollars in half-pennies, about two dollars and a quarter in pennies, and just a little less than three dollars in silver. He was sent to prison for 20 days.

HELPLESS CREW SHOT TO DEATH BY SUBMARINE

Sinking of American Ship Ticonderoga Attended by Plain Murderer Declare Survivors of Ill-fated Boat

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Oct. 11.—A hundred and forty-three men, including American army men detailed to care for boats, are believed to have been slain, mainly by shell fire when the United States steamer Ticonderoga was torpedoed and shelled 1700 miles off the British coast. The story of her destruction, brought to this port by seventeen men, who were rescued from an open boat, is a tale of relentless murder by the commander of the U-boat.

Launching a torpedo into the side of the Ticonderoga after she had been forced to leave a convoy, the submarine commander fired on the ship as she tried to steam away, and a range of a mile, began spraying her with shrapnel. The Ticonderoga's gun crew went to their stations, but both guns were quickly shot away. The crew then tried to take to the boats, but the German cannon fire turned on the life boats and they were torn to splinters.

Murder Hopeless Men

One boat was lowered while the submarine's guns hurled shells at it. Men fell by the scores, either killed or badly wounded. They tried to get over the side of the sinking ship. As the vessel was disappearing, men in the one boat successfully launched, tried to pull away, while a hurricane of shells burst over them and over the most of the crew. One man swam to the U-boat, which was less than a quarter of a mile away, begging the German lieutenant to stop. He was commanded to swim away by the lieutenant, who leveled a revolver at him.

Tried to Sink Boat

The boat was then ordered alongside the raider, which did it by a line. Conversation was in progress it was said, when suddenly the officers disappeared into the U-boat and the submarine submerged. Only the parting of the line saved the boat from being drawn down after the raider.

Naval intelligence officers refused to allow the soldiers and sailors, who were saved to tell the story after they were landed, but they had told it before they landed, while aboard a British ship, which brought them to port.

HOLLISTER PAYS TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF SOLDIER

Private Charles E. Dudley, Disease Victim, to be Buried With Military Honors

Flags are at half mast at Hollister as a mark of respect to Private Charles E. Dudley, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dudley of Hollister, who died Wednesday at Camp Lewis from pneumonia, according to word received by his parents. The remains will be brought here under a military escort expected to arrive Saturday.

Plans are being made for a military funeral to be held here probably on Sunday afternoon. On account of the state board of health order closing public assemblies, Morris Jones will not hold indoors, but will take place probably at the cemetery. Members of the Grand Army of the Republic and veterans of the Spanish-American war have been invited to attend and take part in the service.

Private Dudley entered the military service with the selective service contingent which entrained here June 28.

TO MAKE DESERT OF NORTH FRANCE

Hun Plans Provide for Laying Waste of Whole Country During Retreat

By WILLIAM PHILIPS

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The Huns are attempting a titanic blackmail against France.

Officers recently taken prisoner declare that the German intention is to force northern France as completely as they did the section over which they retreated from the Somme. They intend to make the country such a complete desert that the advancing Allies will be unable to live in it.

But the most sinister purpose he hoped to be behind the threat is the hope to create in France a sentiment favoring stoppage of the war, as a means of saving the historic cities and towns of France and Belgium from sacking, burning and dynamiting.

Another German blunder.

These new wrecking Cambrai, have shown a wave of rage throughout the country. The Germans have made another blunder in the psychology of the people. Had the French or British Allies ever entertained the slightest idea of holding out to Germany any peace proposition, not the slightest vestige of such an idea remains.

The Tenna says what will be the fate of Lille and Valenciennes. It says the public is beginning to wonder why it is necessary that retaliatory destruction of the enemy shall be withheld.

"We have to thank God for the fact that the necessary weapons are in our hands to make the Germans feel our anger," the newspapers say. "Let them be military at the earliest possible moment."

HUNDREDS DIE WHEN TORPEDO STRIKES SHIP

Irish Mail Steamship Smashed to Pieces by German U-Boat—Second Shot Completes Work of First Attack

AN IRISH PORT, Oct. 11.—Four hundred and eight persons are believed to have been killed when the Irish mail steamship Leinster was torpedoed and sunk off the Irish coast Thursday. The ship was torpedoed twice in quick succession and disappeared within a short time.

The Leinster was proceeding from Dublin to Holy Head.

The Leinster was a packet, the property of the Dublin Steam Packet company, and was registered at Dublin. She was of 2,640 gross tons.

An officer surviving, declared all aboard would have been saved had not the second torpedo struck. It smashed the boat to splinters, many passengers being injured by the flying pieces. There was time to launch only four boats.

ALLIES TRYING TO SPILT OPEN GERMAN DEFENSE

Hindenburg's Best Efforts Devoted to Keeping His Forces Intact Within Picardy and the Champagne Region

By J. W. T. MASON, NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—American units in the Picardy offensive have begun slow movement toward the fortress of Hirzen on the western fringe of the Ardennes massif, for the purpose of separating the German armies in the Champagne from Von Hindenburg's retreating troops. Picardy, the Ardennes are now 65 miles directly west of Hirzen. Their position between Wasigny and Bohain is astride the main German railway leading to Hirzen from the west. Hirzen is an important supply center. It was also the Hirzen line that Von Hindenburg kept his stores moving into western France via the Luxembourg route, which General Pershing is now attempting to close north of the Argonne.

To Block Escape

Hirzen is the junction point where the Luxembourg communication line, after skirting the southern front of the Ardennes massif, meets the line running toward the northern side of St. Ardennes from Liege and the Meuse. If the Germans can be forced back quickly upon Hirzen from the west, the whole of Von Hindenburg's troops in the Champagne from the St. Gobain to the Argonne will be blocked from escaping by way of Liege.

They will have to crowd into the mountainous and almost roadless Ardennes, or else try to retire via Luxembourg. If, at the same time, General Pershing's main thrust through Luxembourg, only the Ardennes route will be left. A success to the Allies such as this would be one of the major victories of the war. Supplies could be sent to the Germans in the Champagne only with the utmost difficulty through the Ardennes, and a catastrophe might fall upon Von Hindenburg that would practically wipe out his Champagne army before it could penetrate the Ardennes on its return west.

To guard against this possible severance of his forces, Von Hindenburg has clung tenaciously to the St. Gobain-Masaff, 45 miles southwest of Hirzen. The American and French operations north of the St. Gobain position, however, are now making little 45-mile passageway valueless. A retirement from the St. Gobain frontier by the Germans may therefore shortly be expected.

are retreating precipitately northward from Cambrai in the general direction of Denain and Valenciennes.

East of Cambrai, the Allies are beyond Solesmes and Lillois. East of St. Quentin the French have reached the Oise at Hanterville, and the German of the grand valley and Guise region.

The enemy has set fire to Valenciennes, the important railway town on the western edge of the Argonne forest. Further to the east, between the Argonne and the Meuse, the Franco-American advance is continuing.

Americans Capture Vaux-Andigny

LONDON, Oct. 11.—American troops completed the capture of Vaux-Andigny and St. Houplet, south of Lorraine, yesterday evening. Field Marshal Haig reports today.

"Yesterday evening the Americans completed the capture of Vaux-Andigny, and St. Houplet," the statement says.

British troops crossed the St. river north of Lorraine in the eastern portions of which fighting is still going on.

"West of Solesmes, we reached the outskirts of St. Vaast and St. Aubert."

"North of Cambrai a few prisoners were taken last night in the village of Hion-Lenglet, on the Senese river, five miles and a half north of Cambrai."

"We made progress last night north of the Serpe in the direction of Trilloy-Ezechel, east of St. Guilhem, and along the north bank of the Haute-Deule canal east of Lens."

French Nearing Vouziers

PARIS, Oct. 11.—French troops maintained contact with the retreating Germans on many fronts throughout last night, the war office announced today.

Important gains were made in the Champagne and Chemin Des Dames regions. The French lines were carried to within three miles of Vouziers, in the former district and to within four miles of Cremona in the latter. Cremona is now practically encircled.

The French occupied Senlieu, together with several other villages west of Argonne.

French Advance on Four Fronts

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Progress on four fronts was reported by the French war office tonight.

French troops advanced their lines east of St. Quentin, in the St. Gobain region, south of Laon, and in the Argonne.

Despite stiff resistance from German rear guards, the French advanced nearly four miles east of St. Quentin, occupying a number of villages.

The first attack in several weeks was made in the St. Gobain region, where the village of Senlieu was captured. Between the Alletois and the Aisne, French and Italian troops advancing astride the Chemin Des Dames, pushed the enemy beyond the Oise canal.

Take Grand Pre

Advancing on a front of about 15 miles in the Argonne forest and to the westward, the French progressed nearly three miles to the outskirts of Mont de Martin and St. Morle, and captured the Grand Pre railway station southwest of Termes.

"East of St. Quentin, despite a stiff resistance, we pushed the enemy rear guards and advanced six kilometers, three and three quarters miles, at certain points," the communique said.

"We carried our lines east of Sedan, as far as the approaches of Deriveville, 18 miles northeast of St. Ardennes and less than five miles northwest of Guise, and east of Montigny and Bernot, five miles west of Guise. We occupied numerous villages, including Fieulaine."

"South of the Oise, in the St. Gobain region, Senlieu, three miles south of La Ferre, has been captured and prisoners taken."

"Between the Alletois and Aisne, French and Italian troops advancing on both sides of the Chemin Des Dames, have forced the Germans beyond the Oise canal."

Gross Aisne Near Grand Pre

"In the Argonne region we have passed the villages of Liry and Menchols and Challeran, and have reached the approaches of Mont St. Martin and St. Morle. We crossed the Aisne, opposite Termes, and captured the station on the Grand Pre railway. We took numerous prisoners."

"Our airplanes in massed formation successfully dropped 326 kilograms of bombs, fired several thousand rounds of cartridges at enemy troops, brought down 21 hostile planes and dropped 5,200 kilograms of explosives at night on the stations at Longuyon, Dommary, Darancourt and Aunul-Le-Romain."
