New British Offensive Is Supplementary to French Fifth Army Advance North of Laon, Declares Expert

CAPTURE OF HIRSON PRINCIPAL OBJECTIVE

Attack from Two Angles, Designed to Cut Communication Between German Armies in Belgium and France

By J. W. T. MASON

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The British offensive launched this morning between Le Catiau and Bohal is along the line of the Hirson railway, where American units in Pleadry were last reported as operating.

This movement is supplementary to the new advance of the French fifth army north of Laon, reported yesterday afternoon to have started under command of General Guillaumat, former military governor of Paris.

Marshal Foch is now attempting one of the most ambitious strokes of the war. His purpose is to run two armies toward the Hirson fortress, one from the south and one from the west. The capture of Hirson, which is the key to the southwest corner of the Ardennes massif, will prevent the Germans from keeping up direct communication between their retreating armies in Belgium and western France and their armies in the Champagne.

It will at the same time compel Von Hindenburg to direct his present retirement entirely by way of Belgium, where terrific congestion is bound to result.

Hurry Evacuation

The mere fact that the ignoble attack against Hirson has been started will, of itself, force Von Hindenburg to hurry his evacuation of western Belgium and northwestern France.

The danger not only exists of the severance of the communications between the German armies, but also of the capitulation of one of the German forces in the Champagne.

The latter possibility depends on the continued success of the American push north of Laon. If, coincidentally with the occupation of Hirson and the western end of the Ardennes massif, General Pershing were to close the Luxembourg frontier, at the eastern end of the Ardennes, 65 miles away, disaster would overtake the Germans between these points.

This is one of the major possibilities in the situation which now is facing the Germans to ask for an armistice.

CARRIER CORA

By VINCENT G. PERRY.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

For a whole week so morning paper had been delivered to Edward Aiken, and he had about reached the end of his endurance. "I'll give that boy a good calling down," he told himself as he set the alarm clock so that he would be able to do so.

The first ring of the alarm was awakening him. By the time he was dressed the paper boy was gone. The morning was blistery, so he stationed himself in a front room, where he would be sure to hear him peep.

After a short wait he heard someone coming up his walk. The boy was not going to forget him that morning, apparently, but it was best to give him a talking to about past misdemeanors.

"Here, you," he yelled as he opened the door. "I should give you a cuff on the ear for not bringing that paper last week. Is that the way you treat old customers?"

"I beg your pardon, you have made a mistake." It was a woman's voice.

Edward gasped.

"I thought you were my paper carrier," he hastened to apologize.

"Yes, I am," she had stepped into a spot where the light shone on her features and he could see that she was smiling at his mistake. She was pretty and the paper bag about her shoulders gave her an air that made her very attractive.

"This is my first morning on the route," she explained. "The local newspapers have had trouble getting boys to carry their papers, there are so many positions left vacant by men who have gone to the war that it is easy for them to get other work. Getting up in the morning, especially windy mornings like this one, doesn't seem to appeal to the boys."

"I shouldn't think it would appeal to young ladies either," he said, as he took a closer look at her. "There should be lots of work that you could find."

"I am doing my bit this way," she answered with a touch of pride in her voice. "All the girls in our branch of the Red Cross are carrying paper routes until the spring."

As she left to finish her route he looked after her with admiration. There was a pleasing girl if ever there was one. He had seen her face somewhere before. Where? He remembered it in a flash. She was Cora Heathswath, one of the most popular society girls in the city.

Although her duties as a paper carrier necessitated early rising, Cora did not neglect her other patriotic work. It was not many days before she was formally introduced to Edward Aiken and the end of the story of their first meeting had to come out.

"Mr. Aiken seems very anxious to be in your company, Cora," one of her friends said one day after the story had been retold. "It isn't often a man falls in love with his paper carrier, my dear."

"Don't be ridiculous," Cora laughed, but when she was alone she thought over her friend's words. Edward had almost forced himself upon her, and she had not quite made up her mind what to do about it. He was handsome and genial.

She was always nice to him, but that didn't satisfy Edward. When all his advances were met with rebuffs he decided the only way he could talk to her was by being on hand in the morning when she arrived with the paper. The alarm clock worked overtime. Even a word or two from her cheered him for the rest of the day. If she favored him with more than that he would muse so long over it that he would miss no paper.

When warmer weather came, paper boys were not difficult to come by and the girls were relieved of their duty rather a pleasant relief, too.

Edward was walking home one night thinking of Cora. His path led him by a public building that was under construction. It had been a sunny day, but the night had turned quite chilly. He was shivering he had worn a warm coat. As the man on guard passed him he noticed that he had no gloves. He slipped off his own gloves and waited for the soldier to return to his beat.

"Here are my gloves, old fellow," he said, as he handed them over. "I've got 'em at home. Your hands must be freezing."

"The man muttered a word of thanks as he passed on.

"How kind of you!" Cora had seen his act of kindness and her tone showed her appreciation of it.

"Oh," he laughed, as he stepped up beside her, "that is nothing, I know what it is to be on guard myself."

"Do you?" She was quite surprised.

"Did you attend military college?"

"No," he answered. "I served for two years in France with the First Camdflank."

Declare Ditch Will Not Carry

James A. Bybee, irrigation engineer for Twin Falls county, is made a co-defendant with Arthur L. Swim and William T. Fritchell in an action filed in district court here Thursday by the directors of the Twin Falls Canal company, through their attorneys, J. H. Dethwill and W. P. Guthrie, appealing from the order of the irrigation engineer approving the proposed transfer of water rights from lands under the low line canal to other lands under the high line canal. This transfer was applied for by Swim and Fritchell. The Canal company directors argue that the capacity of the high line canal is insufficient to carry water to the lands to which the water would be transferred if the order were carried out.

If earache does not occur often possibly home treatment will alleviate the suffering, which is always so severe while it lasts. Wring out hot cloths and apply them to the ear. This often brings quick relief. Or moisten a small piece of cotton, saturated with sweet oil or lanolin, and place it carefully in the ear. This is generally efficacious if the trouble is caused by the hardening of the wax.

A PROMISE

We told you! Such is the predominant strain of an editorial in the Nonpartisan Journal...

The editor of the Nonpartisan Journal and his advisers have yet to learn that the farmers of Twin Falls county are of an incomparably higher order of intelligence than those in some other sections.

THEY ARE MEN WHO THINK FOR THEMSELVES

They are willing to examine imported ideas, but they are not going to have their thinking done for them by outsiders. We would say frankly and without fear of successful contradiction...

WHAT MR. BERGER SAID

Speaking in the interests of his own constituency when Governor Franzer and Wendell Samuels addressed a meeting in this city, Mr. Berger Thursday afternoon, August 22, Fred W. Berger said that it had been brought to his attention that the fact that he was a native of Germany was being used against him...

meeting, was transcribed from the stenographic notes of a thoroughly competent reporter and there can be no question as to its accuracy. The News, although ready and willing to confess an error when in the wrong, does not purpose to retract from the publication of the truth, in this or any other instance, which vilified threats of boycott and 'scores of affidavits' to the contrary notwithstanding.

Why, if Mr. Berger's was misquoted by The News in so serious a matter, did Mr. J. F. Mallett, organizer for the League in this county, on the day following the publication of The News' article on the Filer meeting in which Mr. Berger's statement quoted above appeared verbatim, take occasion to call at The News office and express his appreciation of the fairness and accuracy of the report on the meeting?

Did it require almost two months for the persons who are interested in Mr. Berger's candidacy to discern the significance of his statement at Filer, and was it only made apparent to them after The News in an editorial on October 9 pointed it out?

"THE DAY"

(For many years before the Hun made his assault on civilization, a favorite toast of Prussian officers was "The Day"—the day when Germany was to bid for world domination. Many Americans who have traveled in Germany are familiar with the toast. The following verses, dedicated to that toast, were written by Henry Chappell, a railway porter of Bath, England, shortly after Britain's declaration of war. It was first published in The London Express. Now that the Prussian tongue and banner is beginning to cry for help, Mr. Chappell's lines carry a fresh inspiration for Americans.)

You boasted the Day, and you toasted the Day. And now the Day has come. Dissembler, braggart and coward all, Little you reck of the numbing ball, The blasting shell, or the 'white arm's' all, As they speed poor humans home.

You spoiled for the Day, you lied for the Day. And woke the Day's red spleen. Monster, who asked God's aid divine, Then strayed His seas with the ghastly mine: Not all the waters of all the Rhine Can wash thy foul hands clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day. Watch how the Day will go. Slayer of age and youth and prime (Defenseless slain for never a crime), You art steeped in blood as a bog in slime. False friend and cowardly foe, You have sworn the Day, you have sworn the Day.

You are wronged for the Day, you have longed for the Day. That is the awful flame. 'Tis nothing to you that kill and plain Yield steaves of dead men slain and slain; That widows mourn for their loved ones slain, And mothers curse thy name. But after the Day there's a price to pay. For the sleepers under the sod, And this you have mocked for many a day— Listen, and hear what he has to say: 'Vengeance is mine, I will repay.' What can you say to God?

LOCAL BRIEFS

FUMIGATING SCHOOL BUILDINGS
The Twin Falls public school buildings, which were closed Monday by order of the county physician, Dr. C. D. Weaver, as a preventative measure against the spread of small pox, are being fumigated this week, preparatory to probable re-opening on Monday, October 28.

DELIBERATIONS HOLD BOARD
Until they have reached a decision the matter of the petition filed Monday by the Salmon River Settlers' association asking for the calling of an election on the question of the formation of the proposed Salmon River irrigation district, the county commissioners will remain in only session here. The law provided only that they shall remain in session from the first to the fifteenth day of each month. Questions as to whether lands excluded from the boundaries of the proposed district should be included within it are the matters on which the commissioners are understood to be deliberating.

LEAGUE LEADERS TO SPEAK
Ray McKnight, field secretary of the Nonpartisan league in Idaho, and H. E. Gamella, candidate for governor, endorsed by the league on the Democratic ticket, will speak at an open-air meeting in the Twin Falls city park at 8 o'clock on Monday afternoon next, according to an announcement made by the Nonpartisan Journal. They will address a meeting also at Buhl at 8 o'clock Saturday evening.

MARINE STATION CLOSING
Sergeant B. F. Ashby, in charge of the local marine corps recruiting station, Thursday received orders to close the station here and report for duty at the central station for this district in Salt Lake. He is so happy that he may be detailed to active service in France. Only the recruiting station at Pocatello will be maintained in Idaho by the marine corps hereafter.

French Make Important Gains
PARIS, Oct. 17.—French troops made important advances on three fronts, the war effort unhampered tonight. Co-operating with the Belgians and British in Flanders, they captured Pittmen, Meulbeke and Wynghebe. In the Oise region they captured the approaches of Wasigny and Digne. West of Grandpre they advanced in the face of violent counter-attacks.

The French, co-operating with the British and Belgians in the magnificent advance in Flanders, today took Pittmen, Meulbeke and Wynghebe, despite energetic resistance," the communique said. "In the region of Oise we continued lively attacks throughout the day between the Andigny forest and the river and obtained notable gains. We took Pitt-Verly and Marcheville, passed Grandpre and Aisneville, and reached the outskirts of Hanville. On the left bank of the Oise, we took Mont-Origny. Twelve hundred prisoners were counted.

MAT. MEAN END
AMSTERDAM, Oct. 18.—The Randdablab publishes "with reserve" an unconfirmed report that all German submarines have been ordered to return to their bases.

WINDY CITY WAY BEHIND
CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Sixty-five million dollars short of its quota of $252,000,000, Chicago today entered into the final 40 hours of its Liberty Loan campaign. The seventh federal reserve district, including Chicago, had yet to raise $54,400,000 of its $870,000,000 quota.

Extraordinary Optimist.
An inmate of a Canadian charity home laughed himself to death over a joke. A man who can laugh himself to death in the poorhouse is a peculiar sort of an optimist that this world hasn't enough of.

Lines to Be Remembered.
Be a pattern to others and they all will go well; for as a whole city is affected by the licentious passions and vices of great men; so it likewise reformed by their uprightness.—Cicero.

STOCK RAISING IS ADVISED FOR BEET GROWERS

Animals Can Utilize Tops and Pulp of Plant and Increase Profits—Finishing for Market Demands Other Feed

Sugar-beet growers should raise more live stock as the recommendation made by the United States department of agriculture. The stock utilize by-products of sugar and beet growers—the tops and pulp—and increase the growers' profits, but there is another reason—the nation needs more meat as well as sugar. The combination of stock raising and the production of stable or barnyard manure, which can be used to enrich the soil. The feeding operations should be located on the farms, where the best tops are produced. When practicable, the pulp should be handled with frame and pulps to the best advantage and the production of stable or barnyard manure, which can be used to enrich the soil. LUCK
"Did he have any luck on his hunting trip?"
"Yes. He missed every guide he shot at."

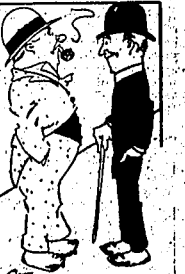

AN INFERENCE

The Artist—One who is sincerely devoted to music must not love money. Miss Sweet—I infer that from the scale of prices for every big performance.

CITING AN EXCEPTION

"Time is money, you know."
"But I don't know anything of the kind. There's young Dink, who has plenty of time on his hands and not a cent in his pocket."

POB EXCHANGE

Job printing for money. Our work is like your money—old but true. Twin Falls News.

"How is Ulram making out at college?"
"Great! He has the bull while I guess for he sees he takes a shower both every day. By he! Let's try it next time it rains. He sez it's fine!"

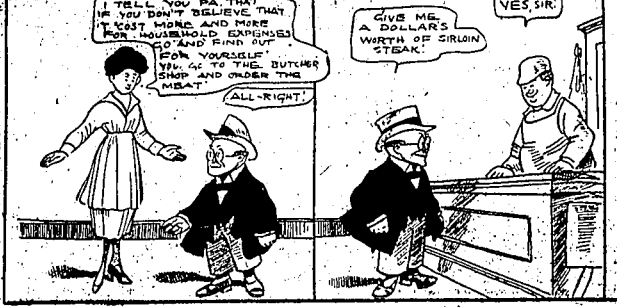

A LONG FELT WANT

Josh—Do you think there will ever be any radical change in the style of men's hats?
Book—Not unless somebody invents a hat that will cover the bald spot on the back of the head.

Good property is in demand—good tenants are awake to classified advertising opportunities.
