

MEDIATION IS EFFECTIVE IN ARIZONA MINES

Work of Labor Administrators Results in Increased Copper Production and No Shifts Are Lost

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—An increase of Arizona's 1918 copper production of 100,000,000 pounds over 1917. Not a shift lost in mine, mill or smelter from November 1, 1917, to October 31, 1918.

The results of the work of the labor administrators appointed for Arizona by the president's mediation commission in the fall of 1917, as is shown in the annual report of William B. Wilson, secretary of labor.

The situation in Arizona in 1917 was one of the chief causes leading to the appointment of the commission. About 28 per cent of the copper output of the United States is produced in four copper districts of that state. In the early summer of 1917 there were widespread strikes in these districts, resulting in three months in a loss of output of 100,000,000 pounds. The commission arranged a settlement which provided for final adjustments of all labor disputes and the fixing of wages by the labor administrators. Hyatt Davies and Joseph S. Myers. In a letter to H. L. Korwin, Director of the Bureau of Adjustment, the president's mediator reports: "Mr. Davies wrote, on October 21, 1918, that the commission not only had provided the machinery for accomplishing the splendid results named, but also had created a spirit of loyal co-operation that materially simplified the work of the administrators."

Would Expensive Possibilities

"During this period," says the latter, "the administrators have handled hundreds of individual and some large collective cases without friction. Not many of these cases contained expensive possibilities that would have ended in a suspension or strike if they had occurred prior to the coming of the president's mediation commission. These have matured into a strike prove the loyalty of labor to the agreement or award of the commission. Nor has any appeal been made to the commission from any interpretation or decision made by the labor administrators."

The report also addresses reasons for the increase and over production of copper. It is stated that, partly as a result of increased cost of living or due to the necessity of readjusting the relative wages between districts. These changes also were made without friction.

Open Shop Modified

"Arizona works on the open shop principle. With grievances being elected by all the employees recognized and dealt with by the managers in all local districts. The creation of this substitute for a trade-union organization (which did not exist except in a minor way) by the president's mediation commission has been a great step toward peace, because these committees have served as safety valves that relieved the tension, now that they can go direct to the managers for a full, free and frank discussion without fear or favor. This elbow touch has helped also to eliminate some of the bitterness of the latter part of 1918, to a better understanding of one another."

WILL ASK APPROPRIATION TO BUY OLD CANTONMENTS

Senate and the Secretary of War Do Not Agree as to the Purchase

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Any attempt of the senate to buy up the army cantonments for permanent use will be a gross violation of the good faith," said Senator Martin, chairman of the appropriations committee in the senate.

Senator Martin replied to a question from Senator Baker whether he thought of Secretary of War Baker would have authority to take over the cantonments without the sanction of congress.

Baker will appear before the house military committee soon to ask for an appropriation of $500,000 for purchase of the cantonments. It was announced today.

TO ELECTRIFY FUTURE NAVY

Secretary Daniels Unfolds Plan for Insuring U. S. Superiority

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Completion of the three-year naval program will cost from forty to fifty per cent more than originally estimated, Admiral Taylor told the house naval affairs committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—An capital shipbuilding navy will be electrically driven, "insuring their superiority over vessels of other nations," Secretary Daniels today told the house naval committee.

Construction of the ten battleships and six battle cruisers authorized will cost between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 more than originally estimated, Admiral Taylor said. Four years will be required to complete the building of the war vessels authorized under the 1916 three year program, he explained.

The New Mexico, the first electrically driven dreadnaught, is the most powerful naval vessel of any navy in the world today, and has put the electric drive beyond the field of experimentation, the committee was told.

"Built to develop 24,500 horse power, the New Mexico actually did develop 31,000 horse power, Daniels said.

Gives List of Advantages

Other advantages claimed for the electric drive by Daniels, and Commander Footy, his aide, are:

- A 25 per cent saving in fuel.
- A great saving in deck space and engine space.
- As great power to drive astern as ahead.
- Economy in installation and operation.
- The ability to develop full power in one propeller, as well as four.
- Greater endurance at high speed.

FAMOUS GOURSE DRAWS WILSON

President Plays Golf on the Napoleonic Links

PARIS, Jan. 3.—A breathless world, for these many years of anxious waiting, may now know just what President Wilson stands in the golf league.

It has always been an unwritten law that the president's golf card should remain a deep, dark mystery—probably a matter of "secret diplomacy," but today this precedent was shattered, just as many others have been on his European trip and it was semi-officially announced that his score at St. Cloud yesterday was:

"Fifty-four for the first nine holes, and a much better score for the next four, when he was forced to quit because of the rain."

It is reported by the best Admiral Jackson—who is regarded by some as one of the most politic men in the president's party. Mrs. Wilson also played. But the most urgent inquiries failed to reveal where he finished in the threesomes.

Course in Bad Shape

After reports attempt the president played his first golf on the historic Napoleonic Links at St. Cloud. He braved many natural as well as unnatural hazards.

The weather was cold and wet and the course was soggy and covered with fertilizer.

The president was an old grey cat. He had a surplus of capital, a small army of secret service men, followed him around in addition to doughboys.

Starting off, badly by topping his first drive, the president was in anything but championship form the first four holes, but showed considerable improvement the rest of the way.

The course is long and sporadic, somewhat like that of the Columbia Club at Washington, where the president plays frequently. A heavy shower compelled the president to quit after the thirteenth hole. He returned to the Murat Palace to "tinge."

Thousands Flock to Rome Today

ROME, Jan. 3.—Thousands flocked into Rome today to greet President Wilson, who is due to arrive here this morning. The hotels were filled. The American president will receive a welcome as vociferous as he accorded him in any allied capital. Final arrangements for entertaining him for the White House are being completed. It is officially announced that the president will occupy the lieutenant governor's apartment in the Quirinal. Tonight there will be a gala reception. Wilson is to visit the United States embassy Saturday and will then go to the Vatican to meet the pope. At the same time Mrs. Wilson will call on the queen.

A reception to President and Mrs. Wilson at the chamber of deputies was scheduled for Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening there will be a reception at the government buildings.

Rome has been ardently received with allied and American flags. Victory poles have been set up all along the Via Nazionale, which the presidential party will traverse en route from the railroad station to the Quirinal.

SENATOR SPEAKS OF CRITICISMS AGAINST WILSON

Thinks Opposition Is Conspiracy to Discredit the President and Make Him Seem a Failure

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Republican attacks on the league of nations, are paving the way for Roosevelt's candidacy for the presidency, Senator Lewis Williams declared today. The senator, declared today in a speech replying to Senators Knox and Lodge, two of the league's most persistent republican critics.

Lewis asserted that "in the censoring assaults upon anything President Wilson has attempted in Europe and in refusing to approve anything under the name of the president, the senator declared today in a speech replying to Senators Knox and Lodge, two of the league's most persistent republican critics.

Lewis asserted that "in the censoring assaults upon anything President Wilson has attempted in Europe and in refusing to approve anything under the name of the president, the senator declared today in a speech replying to Senators Knox and Lodge, two of the league's most persistent republican critics.

Purpose of Opposition

"The president is a failure—his mission is a failure—his failure has made America ridiculous and lost for her all the fruits of the war and made a mockery of the sacrifices of blood."

"This would make the presidential issue, and this, I charge, is the political purpose of the enemy leaders who assail everything the president is doing. I don't object to Senator Lodge or Senator Borah speaking for the support of the league, but for the nomination of president by first catching the expression of opposition of the colored and then saying: 'So say we, all of us,' but I do object to the country being deceived as to the design and purpose of the opposition by political fakery principles to accomplish the purpose."

Japanese Situation

Senator Borah interrupted Lewis to ask what effect on the league of nations the attitude of Japan recently announced by one of her statesmen would have.

"A leading Japanese statesman recently said that Japan would demand that her citizens be given an equal standing with Anglo-Saxons, and he granted the same right of citizenship in Angli-Saxon countries," said Borah.

"The effect would be that better than a member of the league of nations?"

Lewis declared he believed the question would be settled by an agreement which would prove satisfactory to Japan and which at the same time would give all the fruits of the United States to exclude Japan from citizenship. Senator Hitchcock said the question of Japanese citizenship is not one for the league of nations to settle, but is a domestic question.

"But in Russia we have made domestic question international one," said Borah. "American soldiers are fighting and dying in Russia simply to settle a domestic difficulty."

ROAD BUILDERS ARE READY FOR PEACE RETURN

War Slows But Does Not Stop Activities of Highway Associations Which Are Now Redoubled

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—War may have slowed but it has far from stopped the activities of the various highway associations in preparation for peace, and the alluring project of the park-to-park highway, meaning the adaptation or building of a series of roads to connect the national parks of the country, has been furthered in several sections during the year past. The work on the Glacier-Yellowstone-Bea Line highway advanced a great deal, various cities along the route having helped materially with road repairs. This highway connects the east entrance to Glacier national park with the north entrance to Yellowstone.

Selected Detours:
"In order that the tremendous value of this interstate highway from the standpoint of publicity may not be impaired, the forthcoming report of the director of national parks will say, "It should not be encountered with a multitude of side trips and detours to regions not compatible with the scenic and recreational facilities of the parks and monuments. Only well-improved highways of recognized scenic or historic importance directly tributary to the park-to-park road, such, for instance, as the Columbia River highway, the Denver mountain road system, the Pike's Peak highway, and the Tahoe-Yosemite loop, should be included in such side trips."

Government May Assist:
"It is not unlikely that in the development of this automobile road between the parks the federal government will have to assist in constructing certain links of the chain."
Such assistance, for example, is proposed by Senator King bill to survey a road to connect the Mesa Verde national park with the Grand Canyon by way of several national monuments of distinguished interest.

PRODUCTION OF PORK ATTRACTS STOCK MEN

Year Opens With Excellent Prospects for Profits in Cattle, Sheep and Hogs

OGDEN, Jan. 3.—With the opening of the new year there is every indication of continued demand for livestock and a general maintenance of the excellent prices that are being paid for cattle, sheep and hogs. The attention being given by the livestock men to the hog industry, for the demand for pork is not only general in the United States, but throughout the entire world. There is general assurance that the high minimum prices for hogs will be maintained, and that most sales will be at figures considerably above that quotation.

Hog sales in the Ogden market during the past week ranged from $15.50 to $16.00 a hundred, these prices being generally conceded as excellent for the winter months. There is no anticipation that the prices will drop to these amounts, unless there is a sudden flooding of the market. To avoid that, the livestock men and packing companies are advising that hogs be held until fully developed. In that way the farmer gets "the full benefit of all profits" and the hog raiser gets the hogs in better condition for killing and the delivery to the packing-house center is equalized.

Reports from Europe show that there will be a tremendous demand for pork there. The herds of Belgium, France, Holland and Germany are being reduced, and have been almost wiped out, there is such a shortage of fats, that America can hardly supply the demand. These reports show that America must be depended upon for the supply of pork, as well as other meats, not only in 1918 and 1919, but also in 1920. The farmers who plan accordingly in the development of their hog industry will continue to reap good profits, according to the view of livestock men.

Twin Falls Gunners in New Positions on German Borderland

Command Leaves Biercourt for Luxemburg, Where River Separates from Germany

The Sixty-sixth artillery brigade, which includes the One Hundred Forty-sixth regiment for which the unit that was D company of the Second Idaho regiment is headquarters company, was stationed on the Demerle river, a short distance from Grovesmarcher, Luxemburg, the width of the Mœlle river only separating them from German soil at that time, according to word received Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Carlson from their son, Lawrence Carlson, a member of headquarters detachment with that brigade.

He enclosed with his letter a post card picturing the boundary line along which the Twin Falls gunners were posted, and a specimen of the paper money bearing its value in German and in French francs. Luxemburg has suffered little as a result of the German occupation, according to Privaté Carlson, and the land has an air of prosperity at wide variance with the situation in France. There are many English speaking residents, he says. The quarters of the Twin Falls gunners occupying now to acquire a conversation with the language of the enemy that they have gained with that of the French. The weather at the time the letter was written, Privaté Carlson says, was not cold, but there had been rain for several days. The quarters provided, however, were dry and comfortable and the men were well equipped with rubber boots to stand the weather and climate.

The Sixty-sixth brigade left Biercourt, France, with a convoy for general headquarters in Luxemburg, it is attached to the American Third army.

FEDERATION OF LABOR IS SCORED

Berger Decries I. W. W.'s Better in Many Ways—Must Fight for Rights

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Editorials from the Milwaukee Social-Democratic Herald, which were written in 1904 by Victor Berger bubbled up today. "Workmen must be prepared to fight with bullets for their rights," read one editorial. "Back your dollars with your bullets," Berger admitted having written the editorial, but declared he had never at any time since expressed the same idea. Attempts were made on cross-examination by the prosecution to connect the I. W. W. organization and the socialist party. Replying to questions Berger said he believed the I. W. W. in many ways was better than the American federation of labor. Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, he dubbed the "Tail of a capitalist crooked deal."

That opinion of the federation, Berger said, was held for twenty years and its activities during the war had confirmed it. Editorials from the Milwaukee Leader of January 15, 1915, entered as testimony and admitted by him to have been written by Berger, upheld the Socialist "war proclamation" and urged voters to back up the "correct and courageous stand."

WORK TO SAME END BUT IN A DIFFERENT WAY

Great Leaders Have One Object But Methods Differ—Thinks Ideas Will Bear Fruit at the Conference

LONDON, Jan. 3.—There is no fundamental discrepancy between the aims of President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau, the London Times declared today in an article on Wilson's condemnation of the balance of power idea, and Clemenceau's support of it.

This newspaper announces a belief that both statesmen are working to the same ends, but from different angles. Wilson is regarded as being most interested in bringing permanent peace to the world, while Clemenceau "does not repudiate that hope," but is determined to insure the future safety and peace of France by proposing a "league of great democracies."

Names Differ
The Times does not overlook the fact that Clemenceau called this league the "balance of power," but it explains "the name is a small matter."
"Realization of a world league of nations would certainly take time and this league of great democracies is comparatively easy of attainment. It would be the league of nations in embryo."

Carrying out this idea, the Times calls Wilson's contention that the peace conference should be made a permanent secretariat for the league a "wise idea which is likely to bear fruit at the conference."

WORKINGMEN TAKE OVER STREET CAR SERVICE

Resolved Not to Pay More Than the Usual Price—Cars Are Com-manded

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 3.—While street car service was practically normal early today, further trouble was regarded as certain to develop from the resolve by workingmen in "Fifty-Cent-or-Nothing" clubs not to pay the new seven cent fare and one cent for transfer. Ten thousand demonstrators blocked all service last night by cutting trolley ropes and commandeering cars. No arrests were made in the absence of any more serious violence. Trouble opened today when workers took charge of one car and drove it by a roundabout route to their place of employment.

LABOR TO REPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was to be the first witness today when the senate committee of Education and Labor began its hearings on after-the-war problems.

Men Who Dare to Do

Conventional men consider clothing, reputation and returns. The age calls for men who forget all in the challenge of the opportunity. While the crowd speculates and wonders, the man of the hour sees the opportunity and goes on to success. His fearlessness is a mark of his fitness. He dares while others cringe. It is this quality that gives the lion-tamer control of the beast. It is the quality that has thrilled every man that has risen above the average. It's a case of dare to do, or remain with the crowd.—Grit.

WOULD BREAK WAR MACHINE

Germans Seem to Favor the Abolition of Compulsory Service

BY JOHN GRANDENZ

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The present German government seems agreed that one of the main factors in insuring future world peace should be destruction of the foundation upon which the Kaiser's great war machine was erected—compulsory military service.
Beth Chanceller Ebert and War and Marine Minister Noake, who naturally will direct Germany's military policies, took this attitude in discussing the matter with the Press today.
The two officials said the German delegation would advocate international abolition of military compulsory service, at the peace table, providing all nations agreed to it. If France insists on maintaining a strong standing army, the peace table, providing all nations agreed to it. If France insists on maintaining a strong standing army, the peace table, providing all nations agreed to it. If France insists on maintaining a strong standing army, the peace table, providing all nations agreed to it.

Plants That Grow in Craters

In the crater of the extinct volcano, Halakalan, in the Hawaiian Islands, there flourishes a curious plant, locally known as "Silver Swords." They are evidently some kind of cacti. Efforts to propagate them elsewhere have, it is said, always failed. The crator where they grow is a large circle-strewn bowl, absolutely dry and devoid of any other form of vegetation.

NO GREAT ACT OF HEROISM REQUIRED

If some great act of heroism was necessary to protect a child from croup, no mother would hesitate to protect her offspring, but when it is only necessary to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and give it as soon as the first indication of croup appears, there are many who neglect it. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is within the reach of all and is prompt and effectual.—Adv.

THE BALANCE OF POWER

Only Germany and those in sympathy with the enemies of humanity can rejoice or feel any measure of satisfaction over the apparent misapprehension that has taken in the statements of Premier Clemenceau and of President Wilson regarding the attitude of the nations they represent on the question of the league of nations.

In view of the fact that disunion among the allies at the peace conference would serve the ends of Germany as well as would military victory, it is extremely unfortunate that question should be raised in respect to a possible lack of unity among those who have jointly defended the enemy on the field of war.

As a matter of fact, there is no basis in fact for a supposition that there is any disagreement between the allied nations as regards the league of nations or any other problem that will be presented at the peace table.

While it is probably true, as given by press dispatches, that the "Tiger of France" has declared that the peace conference would establish a "balance of power" in Europe, England, France and the United States will become the guardians of world peace; and while it is probably equally true that President Wilson, as reported, declared twenty-four hours later that the United States would have nothing to do with a conclusion of peace that did not do away with the balance of power theory, there is nothing in these statements to justify the conjecture that the two views are at unalterable variance.

The trouble arises from the fact that President Wilson has not yet given public utterance to a statement of his conception of the full duties and powers of the league of nations.

It requires no very great depth of perception or reach of vision to see that a league of nations or any other organization designed to guarantee peace, that has not adequate power to enforce its decisions is worse than useless, a travesty on the deepest rooted aspirations of humanity.

Every intelligent person must appreciate that a law that does not carry a penalty is not a law and a league of nations that cannot compel acceptance of its rulings is a necessity.

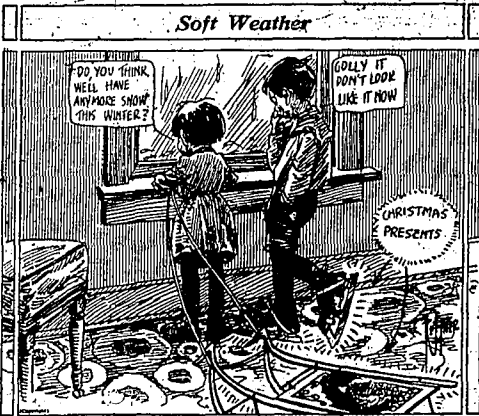

In the essence of things, if the proposed league of nations is to be even worth considering it must be armed with a balance of power that will so far outweigh any power outside it that opposition to its dictates would be impossible. This, undoubtedly, is what the French premier has in mind in his declaration for the balance of power.

And either Woodrow Wilson has in mind the same thing when he talks about the league of nations, or the president of the United States is talking through his hat.

THE SERVICE FLAG PLEDGE

In any consideration of the problem of returning our fighting men to civilian life, the service flag is bound to play a prominent role.

Wherever these banners have been displayed by an employer of men, they have been accepted not only as an emblem of pride in the going out of men from that place into the service, but also as a pledge that their positions were held for them upon their return.

BIG PROBLEMS OF FARMER ARE ON PROGRAM

Consideration of Crops and Labor - Receives Wide Berth in Arguments for State Meeting Coming Here

A tentative program for the meeting of the state farm bureau to be held here in connection with the joint conference of Idaho agricultural, livestock, engineering and irrigation societies, January 13-16, provides for full consideration of many problems that are regarded as of vital importance to the farming industry in Idaho.

One afternoon is to be given over to a discussion of sugar crops and prices led by J. W. Jones of Salt Lake, sugar beet plant specialists for the department of agriculture; and lengthy sessions are to be devoted to consideration of the farm labor problem in which M. O. Evans of the department of agriculture, and H. A. Lyons, Idaho farm labor specialist, are to take part.

W. F. Alworth of Twin Falls, president of the state farm bureau, will preside at the sessions.

An excursion on the first day of the meeting to Shoshone Falls and Blue Lakes is planned as a means of affording diversion and opportunity to the visitors to view scenic grandeur of this section.

CELEBRATION WAS QUITE EXPENSIVE

Premature Launching Cost the Government a Large Sum of Money

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The celebration that marked the launching of the first ship of the Hog Island last July cost the government $38,000, Charles Pizer, general manager of the emergency fleet corporation told the senate commerce committee.

"The ship was the Quistcock, which was prematurely launched and later had to be towed to a station for repairs.

"I think this expenditure was justified," said Pizer, "the launching of the ship should have been celebrated because of the moral effect."

"Moral effect on whom?" asked Senator Johnson, California. "On ourselves and on our enemies," answered Pizer.

"The moral effect would have been lost and then some," had it been known that the ship was not ready for launching, would it not?" asked Johnson.

He said that the $38,000 covered the building of a grandstand and fences, refreshments and invitations. He said twelve ships had been launched at Hog Island and that three had been turned over to the government. All the launchings with the exception of the first had been successful, he said.

TO INVESTIGATE SHIPPING BOARD

Senate Commerce Committee Calls for Full Information on the Subject

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The senate commerce committee went on record today favoring a complete investigation of the United States shipping board when it unanimously adopted a resolution by Senator Nelson, Minn., directing the board to submit all information bearing on the shipping situation.

"We don't want to stop at Hog Island. We want to go into the whole business," said Nelson.

Charles Pletz, general manager of the emergency fleet corporation, was then asked by Nelson to answer the charges. Pletz said there were about 150, or 160 yards in the country engaged in government work.

"Don't you think you could have done better work if you had concentrated in fewer yards?" asked Nelson. "In some instances, yes," Pletz replied.

"The $300,000,000 prediction was made in September, 1917," said Pletz. "Mr. Hurley never predicted that he would ever reach such a figure. In March, 1918, he estimated the year's output at 3,100,000 tons," he added.

"Had glowing reports of what was expected," said Senator Jamison, California, that the government faced a probable loss of from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 by the abandonment of the Liberty yard on the Pacific coast, near San Francisco.

"The project has been totally abandoned and we will be obliged to bear that loss, will we not?" asked Johnson.

"Yes, but we have the land," Pletz replied. "Johnson also asked how it had been possible to build ships on the Pacific coast at a much lower figure than in the east, notably at Hog Island.

"The ships there have cost about $100 a ton and at Hog Island the cost has been $240. How is that?" he asked.

"Explains Differences. Pletz said the Hog Island cost would be about $220. Difference in types of ships explained in part the difference in cost, he said. He added that the proportionate cost of the first fifty ships would be more than those built later.

Senator Lenroot, Wisconsin, asked Pletz how the Bristol yards and that of the Submarine boat company of Newark, N. J., had been built at a much lower cost than that at Hog Island. Pletz explained that conditions were very different there and that the lack at Hog Island had been entirely now and best by enormous difficulties.

HOG CHOLERA CONTROL MAKES GAINS ON PLAGUE

Losses Are Reduced to Less Than 15 Per Cent Through Work of the Bureau Specialists

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Through work of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture 5,600 hogs were vaccinated against cholera in the last week, and average losses in cholera-infected herds were reduced to less than 13 per cent by the use of anti-hog cholera serum. An increase of 108 counties working for hog cholera control is considered notable, there being 477 counties in the country now engaged in this work, besides 17 states in which activities of this character are conducted. Representatives of the federal department visited 15,500 farms for the purpose of making investigations, diagnosing disease, and giving advice regarding control and eradication. Furthermore, 2,056 meetings were attended by 100,190 farmers who were interested in the control and combating of hog cholera. In addition, 2,236 cholera-infected farms were cleaned up and disinfected under the direction of the federal specialists.

In order that only the best anti-hog cholera serum may be used an actual field work, rigid inspection of all serum is necessary. During the last 12 months of the 271,402,530 cubic centimeters of serum produced in licensed establishments, 2,488,661 cubic centimeters were destroyed as unfit for use similar inspection of hog cholera virus was also conducted for simultaneous use with the serum.

BETWEEN FLOORS

By SOPHIA B. COHAN.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure, Newspaper Syndicate.)

"And I don't think there is any virtue in helping all these poor hands with money given to me by dad, so I'm going to work, and besides buying more War Savings stamps and contributing to the Red Cross, I'll be releasing some man for the service." Marcia Gray spoke earnestly, at the same time unfolding a small piece of paper, which she promptly displayed to Bob Eaton's astonished eyes. "An elevator operator's license," he gasped, then smiled. "To think of a woman running an elevator, and of all women you!" And Bob, usually so sympathetic, could control his mirth no longer, and was now shaking with laughter. Marcia's eyes filled with tears. She had worked so hard to gain that precious bit of paper, and had been so in earnest, and here was Bob ridiculing her! Her cheeks gave way to anger. Folding the license with a snap she ran into the room with a curt, "Well, you'll see, Mr. Robert Eaton, and don't ever speak to me again," and shut the door in his face.

The following day, as Bob stepped into the elevator in his office building, he was amazed to see Marcia at the wheel. Then, regarding his composure, he smiled and she, who had been so angry, looked sweetly at him over her plain gray uniform! All that day Marcia's face, framed in the black curls which she rebelliously refused to stay under her severely serviceable little cap, was hopelessly mixed with Bob's letters and reports, and it was with difficulty that he restrained himself from running to the elevator. At last, at five o'clock, he saw her again, and again she ignored him.

So Bob rode up and down in the elevator, hoping against hope that she would redden. Then, when a month had passed, without any result, he decided to walk, rather than see her so often and not be able to speak to her. Perhaps Marcia missed him, for many times as she saw him running swiftly up the stairs, she felt an impulse to call to him. However, she still remembered how he had laughed at her when she had been so angry, and in spite of his unbelief, she was succeeding far better than she herself had dared hope.

Then one day, at the end of two months of arduous stair climbing Bob was very late, and to save time, took the elevator. Besides, he was wearing a new, wonderful olive-drab uniform, which he was very anxious for a certain little lady to see. Bob was the only passenger in the elevator. Marcia's heart leaped, but she said nothing. And then a curious thing happened. She stopped the elevator between the sixth and eighth floors, and, turning around, said warmly, "I congratulate you, Mr. Eaton." She turned swiftly back, the light in her eyes forbidding Bob to say anything.

Marcia's heart sank—the brakes refused to yield! Bob was at her side immediately. She silently accepted his aid, and, after a moment's hesitation, for fifteen minutes they worked together. Marcia sank to the floor when Bob finally told her it was no use for them to try, and that they would have to wait until they were pulled up.

Half an hour later they were released from the elevator. Marcia's face shone radiantly through the oil from the brakes as she stepped out. And the radiance from her countenance was reflected in Bob's, for hadn't she promised to become Mrs. Eaton, and wait for him until he came back from "over there"? And Bob, having a true diplomatic instinct, had agreed to let Marcia work for the time being.

Ekimo Names. Ekimoes are not able to trace their ancestors back for more than a generation or two because the Ekimio names do not run from generation to generation, and in every Ekimio family each person has a separate name. This is pointed out by Charles Menadlook, an Ekimio teacher, writing in a recent issue of the Ekimio, the only publication issued for the benefit of his race.

The city had an eventful history during its short career, repeatedly invaded; destroyed and restored. Finally, after the Arabian invasion of 647 A. D. it is left to the mercy of the wind and desert.

The "Beckel" Pear. G. D. Seckel Headman tells me: "The gentleman for whom I was named, George David Seckel, brought a pear tree from France which he had planted on his farm and he named the fruit the 'seckel pear' after himself, as it was the first of the kind in this country. Mr. Seckel's city residence was on Walnut street below Fifth street, where he died about the year 1800."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Imitation Elks' Teeth. Imitation elks' teeth in large quantities recently have made their appearance in the local market to the alarm of jewelers who deal in the genuine article. Some of the bogus teeth are easily detected. Others made of bone or walrus tusks are fair imitations of the genuine. A sure test, the jewelers say, is to immerse the teeth in muriatic acid. The acid will bleach and roughen the better imitations and almost disintegrate the poorer ones.

Had More Than Their Share of Servant Problem
TWO Frenchwomen, wives of members of one of the French commissions sent to Washington by their government since the United States entered the war, were riding home on the street car the other night. The voices of the women although modulated, attracted the attention of passengers near by, and any foreign tongue will. There is always something tantalizing in hearing someone talking brightly while you yourself are utterly unable to understand a thing that persons say.
Persons on the car listened, but very few, indeed, were able to understand a word. Women looked curiously at each other, and would have paid another fare, I'll bet, to have been able to understand what the French women were talking about. Was it the war? Was it of heroes and heroines? Or the sacrifices of their native land for freedom?
They were not troubled much by inability to get domestics, it seemed. Their trouble was this:
Being themselves able to speak English but imperfectly, they were having a dreadful time, they said, to make their servants understand what they wanted done.
Young Financier
Newell entered his father's study one day much excited and out of breath. "Oh, papa," he said, "a man out in the street has some pigeons for sale, and I just lack 24 cents of having enough to buy one. Won't you give me that much?" As the father handed over the desired amount he asked how much the pigeons were worth. As the small boy hurried away he shouted back: "Twenty-five cents."
The Name Gutta Percha.
Gutta percha derives its name from the Malay word guta, a gum, and percha, a comb. It was introduced to the civilized world in 1842 by Doctor Montgomery, a Scottish surgeon.

RESCUE PARTIES WORK VALIANTLY IN STORMY SEAS

made by army officers to shelter all troops, walking wounded, bed-ridden and all that were left here. Special boats carrying additional supplies were held at Long Island city ready for a quick run to Bay Shore opposite the wreck, ready for emergencies.

Spirits High

Many came off in the trolley boat and others in the breeches buoy. The trolley boat system was abandoned last night after several upsets. Fifty doctors, one hundred workers, nurses and guards were stationed in cottages on the island to care for the drenched and shivering soldiers as they tumbled out of the lifeboats. Two motor boats and two surf boats arrived this morning from the Sandy Hook station to listen disembarkation.

Many steamers stood off shore all night brilliantly lighted and looking like ships in a spectacular night naval review.

The soldiers on the Northern Pacific kept their spirits high.

Two days on the stranded vessel, bumping on a sand bar in bleak weather, failed to make them downhearted. They cheered their comrades along shore in breeches buoys and yelled with glee when one of them was doused by a high wave. The rescued were warmed at bonfires and given coffee and sandwiches by the Red Cross. It was reported the supply of drinking water on the Northern Pacific was very low.

Much Bad Weather

Shortly after dawn, the northeast increased, howling about the buildings of the island, driving the rain with stinging force and backing up a dangerous sea.

There was little activity in the early morning hours. Before daylight, the Northern Pacific and ships in the room were talked with blunder, signal lights. Search-lights swept the stricken transport.

Veteran coast guard men predicted the relief work would be greatly hampered, should the northeast become strong enough to drive the steamer from the beach.

Twelve rescue women Red Cross nurses arrived during the night from headquarters in New York. Their launch was stranded for a short time in Great South Bay. Later they were transferred to a scow and landed safely, well and cold.

Many Heroic Acts

Many acts of heroism marked the separation of wounded. Lifelines up to the boiling surf and soldiers and officers on shore unhesitatingly plunged into the sea to save the floating men. The coast guards risked their own lives repeatedly. Some were captured and dragged ashore unconscious. Roy Arnold, a beach comber, went into the breakers and handed out a number of swimmers from the cruiser Columbia when their motor launch capsized. Arnold worked with a rope tied to his waist with which a equal on the beach pulled him to safety each time he was swept off his feet.

The officers who leaped into the breakers to rescue soldiers and coast guards from a capsized lifeboat was Lieut. John P. Spaullet of San Francisco, it was learned today. He came here with 150 men and trucks from Bradley field to assist in removing troops from the Northern Pacific.

When a lifeboat upset yesterday afternoon he plunged in and saved several, then hurried away without revealing his identity.

CROWDS CHEER THE PRESIDENT ENTERING ROME

hour, the president and his party spent ten minutes shaking hands with this second group of officers. They then entered the royal carriage.

Americans Take Part

As the carriage rolled about the station, the president was given a rousing greeting by American and British officers, American Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. workers and representatives of every American military mission at Rome, who were grouped about the exit.

At the same time, the commander of Rome garrison gave a sharp order, which hundreds of soldiers, repeated, and more than 5000 soldiers presented arms while one of the largest crowds Rome has ever seen, massed behind the troops, gave the president the city's popular welcome.

Mass of Waving Flags

The large square appeared to be a solid mass of waving flags. Crowds thronged the streets and adorned the windows of every building, especially the windows of the Hotel Continental and the Prince Massimo's college. demonstration, remained with hat in hand for several minutes.

In the first carriage were the king's aide and Rear-Admiral Grayson. In the second were the king and the president, while the third contained the queen, Mrs. Wilson and the Duchess D'Aosta. The latter two vehicles were surrounded by the king's body guard of mounted cuirassiers. A number of other carriages and automobiles followed, bearing members of the suites and cabinet members.

Venetian Masts Decorated

The procession made its way slowly through the streets in the accompaniment of music. When it reached Piazza square, a dazzling sight met the eyes of those in the cortège.

In addition to flags and bunting, there were countless Venetian masts, topped with winged victories, allied flags and the coat of arms of every neighboring city. In the reviewing stand on the square sat the mayor of Rome, Trent, Trieste, Fiume and Spalato.

Emigrants' Greeting

In front of the Fine Arts building, hundreds of societies were massed. A group of returned emigrants greeted Wilson in English. He replied, repeatedly waving his hat and smiling merrily, but his words were unintelligible because of the clamor.

Mrs. Wilson responded to the emigrants' greeting by waving a large bouquet of American Beauties.

When the party reached the quinal, a monster crowd massed outside and cheered for several minutes. The personnel of the foreign office, thronging the windows and balconies, joined in the shouts.

The incessant cheering brought the Wilsons out on the balcony of the palace.

Planes Maneuver Overhead

During the procession from the station to the palace, several squadrons of airplanes flew overhead, church bells were rung and guns of the city's forts boomed out the royal salute.

The demonstration continued long after the presidential party had reached the quinal.

ization bill at this session of congress, Tent said. "It would be silly to try to put such a measure through in the fifty working days remaining at this session of congress."

World Investigate

Kahn's statement was an indication of the dissatisfaction many committee members feel with the attitude of the general staff.

"Before I enter into the solution of an army, I want to hear from General Forbush and General Liggett and others who have seen actual fighting on the other side," Kahn said. "Obviously we can not get them here for this session of congress."

"Furthermore, I am going to Europe immediately after this session of congress to find out what I can of the English, French and Belgian army plans and talk to any of our officers who may still be on the other side at that time."

"An army reorganization bill cannot pass this session of congress, but an army appropriation bill will have to be passed."

Many Questions

As members of the house and senate military committees view it, fixing of a peace military policy involves, among others, decision concerning the following:

Future of the national guard. Size of the standing army, both mobile and reserve. Universal military training. Disposition of army contingents.

Upon all these questions there is a wide variance of opinion.

BIG FIVE GROUP CONTROL PRICE

Great Packers Purchased Large Proportion of the Country's Supply

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Evidence intended to show that the big five great packers virtually controlled the livestock situation in the country was given the house interstate commerce committee today, when William B. Colver, chairman of the federal trade commission said this group purchased 87 to 90 per cent of the animals sold at the twelve great markets during 1916.

"This represents a very great proportion of the meat supply of the country," said Colver in explanation.

Prices for packers outside the "Big Five" are controlled by those fixed in Chicago, the packing center of the country, Colver testified.

drive business away from their lines. All the waste resulting from these practices and running into huge costs is paid for by the public in the form of increased rates."

Summarizes Situation

In presenting his views to the committee McAdoo said:

"I have given you a statement of the transportation conditions a year ago, of the transportation achievements under federal control during a year of war, and of the present situation."

"What remains to be considered is what permanent solution of the railroad problems should be adopted and what shall be the temporary freedom of railroad control pending a permanent solution."

"In December, 1916, there were about 180 separate operating railroad companies in the United States, with operating revenues of $1,000,000 or more per year each. Seventy-three of these companies had operating revenues of $10,000,000 or more per year each."
