Reports State American Cavalry Shoot at Cattle Rustlers Who Are Chasing Mexicans Far into Interior

ELL PASO, Tex., March 24.—Reported killing of five Mexican cattle rustlers by United States cavalrymen, who chased the bandits miles into Mexico across the border, was reported today as a new movement today for pacification of the border country.

Use of American airplane squadrons to locate the Mexican bandits was the leading feature of a proposed increased border guard.

Inability of the Carranza government to prevent border raids on American ranches was pointed to as the result of the reported American pursuit below Hidalgo. Also, strong denials have been received of the Carranzaists claim that the bandit chiefs Lopez, Vera, Holguin and Hipolita in Mexico were killed by federal troops in Mexico.

Prominent Spanish-Americans in New Mexico are expected to back the movement to send American military airplanes to hunt the Villistas in the mountains and alkalai plains of Chihuahua. Bombing from the air is a possibility.

This proposal for open military cooperation with the Carranza government is said to be awaiting the return of President Wilson's cabinet when it will be suggested that a special American commission be appointed to take up this and other subjects with Carranza.

GERMAN HAND IS SHOWN IN HUNGARY ACT

Bolshevik Entrance Into New Republic Reflects Reason for German Delay and Obstructive Tactics at Conference

BY WILLIAM PHILLIP SIMMS
PARIS, March 24.—The Bolshevik movement in Hungary setting up a soviet republic and declaring war on the allies, was believed today to have furnished an explanation for Germany's military and obstructive tactics toward the peace conference.

Germany, playing for time, has now reached a point where she will offer to oppose a Bolshevik invasion of western Europe in exchange for more favorable peace terms in the opinion of many delegates.

This is not such a chaotic situation as at first appears, according to the British and French, who are noting the entire situation south of the Baltic as chaotic and "full of dynamite." It may possibly grow entirely out of allied control, if not put out, unless action is taken immediately.

The proposed amendment would prevent any power from acquiring territory in the western hemisphere by conquest, purchase, treaty, or otherwise, unless the Americans consented.

This article was reported today to the meeting with opposition from within the commission, especially by the British and French, who have extensive interests in the Americas.

The feeling is growing here that making this international jigsaw puzzle of peoples and nations fit is the most important problem of the peace conference.

SOVIET REPUBLIC JOINS RUSSIANS

Hungarians Have Formed Alliance With Bolsheviki—Creating a World Organization

BERLIN, March 23.—(delayed)—The new Hungarian soviet republic has formed an alliance with the Russian Bolsheviki and declared war on the allies, Budapest dispatches announced today.

Bolshevik forces were reported to be moving into Hungary and the new government against France and other allied troops, which are scattered throughout the country.

The action of the soviet ministry in resigning and turning the country over to the communists was said to have resulted from dissatisfaction of the allies and proposed adjustment of the Hungarian frontiers by the peace conference.

Representatives of Premier Lenin are reported to have assisted in forming the "soviet" socialist government ministry which is constituted as follows: Alexander Gornal, president.

Bela Kun, minister of foreign affairs. The new cabinet has issued the following proclamation: "Uniting with the world's Bolsheviki, we rise against the entente and the imperialist and reaction general mobilization. All opponents will be executed."

A COMPLAINT

A certain local business man made a speech to The News the other day and the burden of his remarks ran something like this:

"My business, like a majority of all business in Twin Falls, is developing fast, and with this development comes the necessity of hiring more and more men. These men are brought into Twin Falls at my expense to do my work. We need the men and the men need the jobs. They have been arriving at intervals for the past two or three months. They remain with me from two weeks to a month and then they go away again. Why? I'll tell you why, simply because they cannot get a house to which to bring their families.

"These men are mostly skilled mechanics, men who command high wages and who are able to obtain employment elsewhere. They are the very best of material for the building up and continued development of Twin Falls; yet they will not continue to live here or anywhere else where the best they can get in the way of living quarters consists of a room or two at a crowded rooming house or hotel. They do not have to accept such accommodations and they won't.

"Cases of this kind are not mere isolated instances, they are a common happening, not only with me but generally. What Twin Falls needs most is more houses. Twin Falls is retarding her own development by not being able to provide houses which men who are constantly arriving in this city may secure for themselves and families." The News passes the information along. The condition complained of is substantially as outlined. The city today cannot commence to accommodate the people who are arriving here with a view to establishing homes. To which may be added the fact that there is no better form of investment in the world than that offered by the building field in the Twin Falls country.

PREBENT JOINS THE OBSTRUCTIONISTS

(Kansas City Star) It was inevitable in a few senators to use their power to filibuster and defeat necessary legislation. It is just as inevitable in the president to use his power for arbitrary ends in refusing to call congress in extra session to enact necessary legislation. He says: "It is not in the interest of the right conduct of public affairs that I should call the congress in an extra session while it is impossible for me to be in Washington because of a more pressing duty elsewhere."

"I do not cooperate with the houses. Why not? The president did not hesitate to leave Washington while congress was in session. Legislative business went forward as usual in his absence. There is no reason why the same conditions should not exist in the next few weeks that existed in the last three months.

The president is plainly irritated because congress does not accept his dictation on the league of nations. His irritation leads him to sacrifice the public interest in the matter of necessary immediate legislation.

By this action he puts himself in the class of the little group of obstructionists whom he denounces.

MERELY A WOMAN'S PEN

By Belle McCord Roberts in the Lantz Beach, Cal., Telegram.

The most irritating impediment to a candid discussion of a league of nations and to a searching inquiry by Americans as to its best form is President Wilson himself. He is opposed to a league of nations. Mr. Wilson sent home the league of nations and with it a request that discussion be suspended until he got here. He came on a speech in Boston casting no light upon the points of his league, but devoting himself entirely to an appeal to the emotions of the people with something like a threat to opponents. There was a dinner to committees of congress, but while inviting questions, he added that amendments would be difficult to procure. Serious objections to his plan appeared in and out of congress, and he and his followers promptly put down the objectors as small Americans whose provincial minds "have no sweep beyond the narrow horizon of their own country and the peace of the world. His last appearance was in New York, March 4th. Here also he did discuss the contents of his plan. He does not contemplate any form of league except his own. He says that he is puzzled—not by the criticisms, "but by the fact of the criticism." No criticism yet made is worthy of his notice and he leaves us to the conclusion that he will not attend a single one at the peace conference. He says that he did not need to be told because he knew that "the people of the United States would support this concept." This is the fact that he starts for France. He will return bringing with him his plan, which he says is so bound up with the treaty of peace that they cannot be separated, and will call the senate together for action. If there is hesitation he proposes to stump the country. He says that this is not a party issue, but his whole attitude in the case is the same. It is the case of Wilson against everybody who does not view his plan as he does, and particularly against his partner, the senate of the United States.

Consideration of Wilson's Acts

We must still insist on the right to the president to call congress in extra session, and since we are asked to take it on the author's judgment we must consider his acts in order to gauge our confidence in that judgment. Is he a statesman or is he a political troubadour?

When he went to France he did not go knowing what the people of this country wanted. He went with an effort to find out from the representatives of the people. When he got there he said that he came with a mandate. He had no mandate, no step had been taken to give him a mandate. He went in the shadow of the most humiliating defeat ever suffered by any president, inflicted in answer to his own policy. He went to France with every American with shame that the people elect a democratic house, to conduct a war which all men and women of all parties were sustaining heart and soul. He went to France to get a mandate. He went in the shadow of the most humiliating defeat ever suffered by any president, inflicted in answer to his own policy. He went to France with every American with shame that the people elect a democratic house, to conduct a war which all men and women of all parties were sustaining heart and soul.

On April 2, 1917, he read a remarkable address to congress in favor of the league of nations. He went back to August, 1914, and read everything he said about this war, beginning with his charge to us to be neutral, not only in act, but in sentiment and feeling, and going on to his peace without victory and his declaration that with the objects and purposes of this war we had nothing to do, and such like hand-me-downs of speech and his claim in reelection because he was keeping us out of war, down to this very April 2, what American can read the record without humiliation that we had a president who could make such a colossal blunder in judgment as to what this war was about. That blunder cost the world hundreds of thousands of lives and a tragic prolongation of misery.

Delay of Help to Europe

He now says Europe "did not believe in us throughout the first three years of the war." He might have added that he was not, as his worshippers claim, waiting for this country to come to the war point, but for two years and eight months he used the whole weight of his power and word and pen to make this country take blow after blow from Germany, being down like a coward, while the allies were bleeding to death. It is true, as he says, that "the Europe of the second year of the war and the Europe of the third year of the war was sinking to a sort of stuporous desperation." But what caused the millstone that was crushing the heart of Europe to roll off was not his coming to us, as he says, but the fact that it was the crush of American soldiers at Chateau Thierry, which with inconceivable indifference to the need of the world for help, he had done everything he could to delay.

are thinking about it, and that 90 per cent of them don't like it; and they question the judgment of the man who constructed the spectacle. Support of the Radical Classes. England, France and Italy are free countries; they are as free as America. They are having all that they can do to keep down the spirit of Bolshevism. It is boasted that Mr. Wilson went past those governments from which he was receiving presents and talked to the people, and he did. He told them that the people were in the world-wide. His statement that the world must be made safe for democracy had preceded him to Europe and each man was certain that it meant his brand of democracy. This and other talks have had an effect in Europe, so that, for instance in France, some time ago, it was a question with the most radical socialists whether they would follow Wilson or Lenin, with the odds in favor of Lenin, but all doubt seems to have been removed. John J. Keegan, member of the United States Congress, member of the peace conference, and well known in Indianapolis, has just returned from six months in France and England. He says: "Wilson is the one man who receives praise from the radical class of socialists in France. Socialists of the most radical type ordinarily are a foe to any form of government anywhere seem to take to President Wilson. They like his idealism. Here again the doubt as to the capacity of a man who gives out such impressions, to deal safely with such a mighty problem as this proposed league, is not put to rest. America is not and never will be a socialist. It has a plain, old-fashioned representative government, republican in form, based upon Anglo-Saxon principles, where every man is equal before the law and where every man must live underneath the law. America will so remain and those who start anything to the contrary will find themselves as much mistaken as the Kaiser was in believing that there would be a German uprising in America whenever he dropped the bat. Duty of the Senate. The president now knows that his partner, the senate, will not approve of his plan in its present form. His apparent attitude is that he will defy the senate; that he will just work step by step in conjunction with the senate, but will sign a combined covenant and treaty such as suits himself and lay it before that body. Should his plan be unchanged the senate must abdicate its functions and yield or it must stand its duty. No true American will approve of such an attempt at coercion; the senate must not yield. Objections to the present plan which demand consideration have been raised by Senator Lodge and Senator Knox and others. We need the assistance and criticism of the ablest American lawyers, and it is the duty of the man on the street not to be swept away by emotional speeches but study the subject and let his voice be heard. Mr. Wilson's public acts do not show him a fit man to be the sole sponsor for this vital document. Being fully advised, it will be the duty of the senate to render its decision and if that decision is against the plan, Mr. Wilson, having acted in contempt of the opinion of his partner, will have to hear his defeat. The senate is not in session and cannot act officially, but unofficial meetings should be taken to inform the peace conference of what will happen so that it may not consent to write the treaty and the league of nations in the same document.

AGRICULTURE MEET COMING TO TWIN FALLS

Newly Created Department Will Co-operate With Farmers Over Southern Part of State in Conventions

BOISE, Idaho, March 24.—The newly created department of agriculture which embraces within its scope the administrative duties covering all of the agricultural, horticultural and livestock interests of the state of Idaho, is now engaged in assembling data and the views of all interested parties relative to the better methods of carrying these extensive laws into effect. The magnitude of this department may be appreciated when it is recalled that all shipments of farm produce made to points outside of the state must be graded and inspected, in accordance with the federal laws, rules and regulations now in operation, or which may be adopted, throughout the United States.

One of the most extensive plans yet inaugurated in connection with the department of agriculture is the proposal to arrange for commissions of investigation to hold hearings in the several districts of the state, and consider the probable effect of the agricultural laws upon the products and marketing features of their respective localities.

Personal of Commission.

These commissions will consist of five representative producers and each commission will investigate the situation as it may appear in its respective district. The personnel of these various commissions will be announced within a few weeks. The first meeting in southern Idaho will be called at Twin Falls on Monday, April 7, at the hour of 10 a. m., and will continue over the 8th and 9th, if found necessary. The second meeting will be called in American Falls for Thursday, April 10, and will extend over the 11th and 12th, if necessary. The third meeting will be called in Idaho Falls on Monday, April 14, at the hour of 10 a. m., and will continue over the 15th and 16th, if desired. The investigation will be conducted by the duly appointed member of the agricultural advisory board, representing the respective localities, with the assistance of four local producers, as may be arranged hereafter.

To Promote Better Conditions

It will be the duty of this investigation committee to solicit the views, counsel and recommendation of all who may be interested in the promotion of better agricultural conditions, including producers, dealers, warehouse men, bankers, etc. When this commission has completed its work, it will incorporate its findings in a series of resolutions duly signed by each member, and transmitted to the department of agriculture in Boise. These resolutions will be the basis of operations when these laws are carried into effect. It is hoped that arrangements will be made with federal inspectors and graders, situated in the various products of southern Idaho to appear during the course of this meeting, and deliver lectures of interest to the producer. It is likewise hoped that arrangements can be made to have Governor Davis present and address a public meeting.

during the time the committee is employed in its work. A complete program will be arranged, with the assistance of the county agricultural agents and members of the university extension department, and announced in due time. A full and complete investigation of every detail of the new laws will be undertaken and all interested parties are cordially invited to take part.

When the fruit crop is assured, a similar investigation will be held in the horticultural sections along the lines and under like conditions.
