GERMANY'S ROCKY ROAD.

Germany's immediate and unqualified ratification of the allied peace terms offers the first indication of a recognition on her part of the fact that she is "licked," and marks the first step on the hard path she must travel to regain a place of favor in the eyes of nations.

It is improbable that a more effective policy in this direction could have been adopted by the Germans than in ready acceptance of the treaty and in endorsement of the purpose of Minister of Finance Matthias Erzberger who has outlined Germany's course with the significant statement, "I am firmly resolved to tread the hard path of economy and have therefore given" out the watchword that from October 1, 1919, there shall be no more items not detailed, and there shall be no more war funds.

In general "men everywhere" will incline to the opinion of President Wilson in view of the German's apparent penitence and resolutions for the future; that trade relations between the conquered nations and the associated powers should be resumed at the earliest possible moment for without trade Germany could not meet the reparations demanded of her.

For most of us the mark "Made in Germany" has completely lost its glamor; but a new trade mark—"Made in Germany for the Benefit of Outraged Belgium and France"—might work toward a more cordial reception for German wares.

AMERICA'S DUTY TO BEFRIEND THE WORLD, WILSON TELLS SENATE

than a world settlement. It would not be possible for me either to summarize or to construe its manifold provisions in an address which must necessarily be something less than a treatise. My services and all the information I possess will be at your disposal and at the disposal of your committee on foreign relations at any time, either in person or in session, as you may prefer; and I hope that you will not hesitate to make use of them. I shall at this time, prior to your own study of the document, attempt only a general characterization of its scope and purpose.

Bolans Already Informed.

In one sense, no doubt, there is no need that I should report to you what was attempted and done at Paris. You have been daily cognizant of what was going on there—of the problems with which the peace conference had to deal and of the difficulty of laying down straight lines of settlement anywhere on a field on which the old lines of international relationship and the new alike followed to intricate a pattern and were for the most part cut so deep by historical circumstances which dominated actions where it would have been best to ignore or reverse them. The cross-currents of politics and of interest must have been evident to you.

It would be presuming in me to attempt to explain the questions which arose or the many diverse elements that entered into them. I shall attempt something less ambitious than that and more clearly suggested by my duty to report to the congress the part it seemed necessary for my colleagues and me to play as the representatives of the government of the United States.

On Different Footing.

That part was dictated by the role America had played in the war and by the expectations that had been created in the minds of the people with whom we had associated ourselves in that great struggle.

The United States entered the war as a "different footing" from every other nation except our associates on this side of the sea. We entered it, not because our material interests were directly threatened or because any special treaty obligations to which we were parties had been violated, but only because we saw the supremacy and even the validity of right everywhere put in jeopardy and free government likely to be everywhere imperiled by the intolerable aggression of a power which respected neither right nor obligation and whose very system of government flouted the rights of the citizen as against the autocratic authority of his government. And in the settlements of the peace we have sought no special separation for ourselves, but only the restoration of right and the assurance of liberty everywhere that the effects of the settlement were to be felt. We entered the war as the disinherited champions of right and we interested ourselves in the terms of the peace in no other capacity.

Coming of Crusaders.

The hopes of the nations allied against the central powers were at a very low ebb when our soldiers began to pour across the sea. Anxious men and women, leading spirits of France, attended the celebration of the Fourth of July last year in Paris out of generous courtesy—with no heart for festivity, little zest for hope. But they came away with something new at their hearts; they have themselves told us so. The mere sight of our men—of their vigor, of the confidence—that showed itself in every movement of their stalwart figures and every turn of their swiftness of march, in their steady comprehending eyes and easy discipline, in the indomitable air that added spirit to everything they did—made everyone who saw them that memorable day realize that something had happened that was much more than a mere incident in the fighting, something very different from the mere arrival of free's troops. They were recognized as crusaders, and as their numbers swelled to millions their strength was seen to mean salvation. And they were fit to enter such a hope and make good the assurance it forecast.

Embodiment of America.

But I speak now of what they meant to the men by whose sides they fought and to the people with whom they mingled with such utter simplicity, as friends who asked only to be of service. They were for all the visible embodiment of America. And the compulsion of what they stood for was upon us who represented America at the peace table. It was our duty to see to it that every decision we took part in contributed so far as we were able to influence it, to quiet the fears and realize the hopes of the peoples who had been living in that shadow, the nation that had come by our assistance to their freedom. It was our duty to do everything that it was within our power to do to make the triumph of freedom a triumph of right, a triumph in the assurance of which men might everywhere live without fear.

Old Entanglements Interfere.

Old entanglements of every kind stood in the way—promises which governments had made to one another in the days when might and right were confused and the power of the victor was without restraint. It was not easy to graft the new order of ideas on the old, and some of the fruits of the grafting process, I fear, for a time be bitter.

Our Privilege to Formulate.

It had been our privilege to formulate the principles which were accepted as the basis of the peace but they had been accomplished, not because we had come into hasten and assure the victory and insisted upon them but because they were readily accepted to the principles to which honorable and unlighted minds everywhere had been bred. They spoke the conscience of the world as well as the conscience of America, and I am happy to pay my tribute of respect and gratitude to the able, forward-looking men with whom it was my privilege to cooperate for their unflinching spirit of cooperation, their constant effort to accommodate the interests they represented to the principle were all agreed upon.

Conference Reciprocity.

The atmosphere in which the conference worked seemed created, not by the hopes and aspirations of small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed. Two great empires had been forced into political bankruptcy and we were the small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed. Two great empires had been forced into political bankruptcy and we were the small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed. Two great empires had been forced into political bankruptcy and we were the small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed.

You Owe Your Children a Home of Their Own

It is your duty, Mr. Family Man, to provide your little ones with a home of their own! A house is not enough. No matter how fine or beautiful or expensive a rented house may be, it can never mean to your children what a home of their own will mean.

It is in the home that your children first base their concept of life—of duty and industry and responsibility. Denying them a home of their own now robs them of its precious memories in after years and witholds from them the higher ideals, the saving influences which would help carry them safely through life.

A home that you own, by its very stability and permanency, will impress your family with the self-respect and responsibility which comes of being an approved, established part of a community. Children who live here today and elsewhere next year never acquire the home idea of steadfastness and constancy. Instead, they receive impulses to float and drift which may follow them all through life.

You owe your children a chance to make good—an opportunity to face life fully equipped with deep-rooted ideas of honor and integrity. You owe them your help, your support, your guidance. You owe them the safety and protection of a home, because it is in the owned home, in the home that is theirs, that the cardinal principles of life are most indelibly stamped.

You not only owe your little ones the present joy and comfort and happiness of Home but it is your duty to provide them with a safe and secure shelter for the years to come.

Statistics handed down by the Equitable Life Assurance Company state that Eighty percent of the adult population leave no estate whatever at death. Stop a minute and think what would happen to your family if accident or death should overtake you and your earnings should suddenly cease. Would your little ones be homeless, or safe beneath the shelter of their own roof?

It is your business to face these problems today! It is only right and fair and just to your family to provide them with the protection of their own home. And the most satisfactory way to secure that home is to build it!

And build now! Nothing can be gained by waiting. Authorities concede that building costs are somewhat higher today than they were five years ago, but they also state that costs cannot be lower until some unforeseen time in the future. As against this, rent are enormously above normal, so you are actually losing money each day you delay building.

For any information you may desire on any subject pertaining to locations, materials, finishings, furnishings, equipments, costs, information concerning architects, contractors, etc.—call at the Building Information Office. Not a thing to sell, but a great deal to give away!

SUES MINIDOKA COUNTY FOR EXTRA BRIDGE COST

Commission Brings Action in District Court for Total Sum of $7750.

Seeking to compel payment of an aggregate sum of $7,750 the Hansen Bridge commission has instituted proceedings in the district court.

This suit is the outgrowth of controversy engaged in between the Bridge commissioners of Minidoka county over the payment of proportions assessed against Minidoka county for the construction of the Hansen bridge.

The Hansen bridge was originally planned to cost $80,000, the state to assume $20,000 of this amount leaving $60,000 for the bridge commission to raise.

The complaint filed yesterday alleges that it was found that the bridge as would meet all requirements, and would be substantial, could not be constructed for the sum set apart for the purpose, and it became necessary to add $17,000.

In the second count of the complaint Minidoka county is alleged to be indebted to the bridge commission in the sum of $750, which represents 25 percent of the cost of the bridge.

GARDENERS MAKE START TOWARD PUBLIC MARKET

Enterprising Truck Men Bring Their Product to Town and Enjoy Good Business.

What is considered the first actual step toward the establishment of a farmers' public market in Twin Falls has been inaugurated by two truck gardeners.

Speaking with respect to the future of the public market project for Twin Falls, today voiced the hope that more of the gardeners would take advantage of the opportunity to supply Twin Falls with fresh vegetables daily.

It is understood the gardeners now selling the produce of their gardens are enjoying ready sale for their goods, but are not able to meet the demand in more than one-tenth its volume.

ROAD OFFICIALS WILL URGE FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

Director Johnson and Secretary Taylor Going to Boise to Get Special Guarantees.

For the purpose of discussing general questions pertaining to highway construction in this district, but more especially to obtain information having bearing on all relating to procuring federal aid in the proposed construction, W. L. Johnson, chief engineer and director, and Stuart H. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the Hillsdale highway district, will leave either this evening or tomorrow for Boise.

At the present time there is an actual highway construction going on in the Hillsdale district, this being due to the necessity of waiting for action of the bureau of roads connected with the federal department of agriculture with reference to securing the Hillsdale district federal aid in road construction.

Federal aid is required on practically all the highways in the Twin Falls tract and some on the Salmon tract. At the present time operations for the construction of a rock crusher plant, near the Rock Creek bridge south of town, are proceeding apace, and it is expected that the plant will be ready for operation by September.

Anticipating a price higher than ever for apples, E. A. Milner, a horticulturist and farmer of the Buhl district, announces he had lately refused a contract price of $3 per hundred weight for his crop of more common varieties of apples, and has also refused to contract his Delicious crop for $4 per hundred weight.

Mr. Milner has an orchard of 40 acres near Buhl, the trees giving much greater promise of bumper crop than ever before. The Delicious variety, he expects, will be an especially large crop.

Accused Shearers Given Hearings

Men on Preliminary Trial in Probate Court Charged with Stealing Wool.

B. F. Nichols and W. C. Robertson were placed on trial in the probate court this morning on charges of stealing wool valued at approximately $1,000 from Joe Bannahan. The men are sheep shearers and are accused of hauling the wool a distance of 20 miles from the storage place and to have cashed it in the bank near the Nevada state line. The men were arrested by members of the Twin Falls county sheriff's posse.

Little progress was made in the trial this morning, and owing to the number of witnesses subpoenaed, it is expected the case will continue the greater part of the afternoon.

COMMISSIONERS PROCEEDINGS

All government bonds held by the county treasurer be turned over to the custody of the auditor. That all unrecorded official bonds held by the auditor be at once recorded in 'Official Bond Record'. That the assessor as collector of motor vehicle license, be required to furnish an additional bond as such in the sum of $5,000.00.

That all surety bonds deposited as security for county deposits in the various banks of the county, be signed by the president of such bank, and all banks having changed their names since filing such bond be required to furnish a new bond under its proper name, and signed by its president, also that all bonds be made large enough to cover any probable deposits made with such banks.

That O. E. Carlson, former chairman, and E. J. Finch, former clerk of the board of county commissioners, be requested to come in and sign up the minute book for the first two weeks of the present year.

That the bond of the clerk of the district court after being duly recorded, be deposited with the Probate Judge.

Cool Day Thoughts In a July Sun

Cool evenings and days are not so far away despite the burning rays of a July sun, so fashion decorates a fascinating wrap, closely resembling the dolman but distinct enough to have character of its own.

It is richly embroidered and with swaggar roll collar. The new hats for early fall wear are either large or small.
