

CROWDS CHEER DEPARTURE FOR SOUTHERN SEAS

Small Ship on Which Lieutenant Shackleton Will Spend Two Years on Exploration Trip, Leaves Thames

LONDON, (AP)—The Quest, the small ship on which Sir Ernest Shackleton will explore the uncharted sections of the south Atlantic, the Pacific and the Antarctic seas, left the Thames today on the start of her two-year voyage.

Large crowds gathered on the docks to wish Sir Ernest and his party a successful voyage.

Speaks "Lost Island" The voyage of The Quest, the quaint little 200-ton ship which is carrying Sir Ernest Shackleton and his party to their expedition to the South Pole, has for its objective not only oceanographic research but the exploration of a petrified forest and location of a "lost" island.

The Quest, which uses both sail and steam, and which may cover more than 30,000 miles before its return home, was constructed according to the personal ideas of Shackleton who, has made several voyages to the Antarctic.

Major C. R. Carr, an English soldier of fortune, the aviator of the expedition, plans to fly above the Antarctic.

Other members of the Shackleton party, besides those already mentioned, include: Dr. Edward A. Mawson, command; Frank Worsley, commander; Major A. H. Macklin, biologist; R. Steenhuis, Lieutenant commander; Captain L. Hussey, meteorologist; J. S. W. Murray and N.R. Monney, cabin boys.

Discover New Islands The petrified forest that will be explored by Shackleton on the Quest, is said to be certain islands where he landed from Captain Robert F. Scott's ship the Discovery, more than 12 years ago.

There is already in the South Polar regions, another British expedition. It is led by Commander John L. Cook who left Norfolk, Va., on October 27, 1920, for a six years' sojourn in the ice fields.

MEMPHIS WINS FLAG ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—The Southern association 1921 season closes today with Memphis as champion and a league breaking string of 103 victories and a new league record of 103 games won by the champion team.

INDIAN'S INSTINCT PICKS TRAIL

Nebel and Wife Are Unique Figures

Woman of Aborigine Extraction Proves Possession of All Trailing Craft of Her Relentless Forbear in Search for Van Eaton

Pale Face Husband, Soldier of Fortune, at Home in Wilds

"Indians just see no can my muck" was the only answer given by Mrs. Nebel when questioned as to her method of picking up and following a trail. She is the Shoshone Indian wife of Joe Nebel, hunter, trapper and guide, hunter, trapper and guide, who rendered skilled services to the officers of the law in following the trail of Sylvia Van Eaton from the time he left the home of his dead sweetheart.

The Indian woman and her husband were not summoned to help until hours had passed in futile searching—hours during which a steady fall of rain had tended to obliterate a trail in which there was meaning only to Indian eyes.

Picks Up Trail From the trampled dooryard of the cabin at Gray's mine where the grim tragedy had lately been enacted, apart from the almost watchful group of men and officers of the law, the Indian woman searched the moist ground for a trail, with eyes that "just muck" she gave no word to the waiting men.

Relentless Pursuit Day by day the trail was followed over rocky ground, through the sparse forest around and about the canyon, lost again, followed across the pathless, forbidding wild, to the Shoshone country, and the searchers felt that no help was to be had from the woman.

As the shadows figure in the audience are thrown upon the screen, for the moment obscuring the tragedy or comedy, and engaging the undivided attention of the audience, so the figures of Joe Nebel and his wife, Gena, stand out for the moment in the hard, brilliant light of the tragedy—characters from the old romantic days of the west that live elsewhere only in the mimic adventure of the screen.

Leaving his native home in Switzerland, when but a little boy, he grew up, a citizen of an land—was a stray in a world full of people—just people, not one a friend or care. On tramp over the steamer, he cared much of the world—New Zealand, Australia, the ports of South America and South Africa, the west coast of Mexico thence drifting north across the border into the United States.

It was a land to fight for he thought, and the Spanish war carried him to the Philippine Islands, a killing volunteer. The years of fighting the world's old-handed had developed a resourcefulness that placed him in the scout service and won for him distinction and two wounds, none of which he thought of sufficient importance to mention. Back in America—home, he feels it was—his life began where it left off three years before, in the mountains of the west where his horse still range the valleys in thousands and where a man of patience and skill can take them as he will and turn them as "cowponies."

But the world had been contracted for Joe Nebel to the boundaries of the United States, and presently it was further contracted to the little ranch of a government game warden, his home, the home that he chose out of the hundreds that he might have taken because it lay close to the heart of the really primitive, wild America of whom he preferred to read. Here he brought Sam the Shoshone Indian girl whom he met and married in Eiko five years ago.

Primitive in Character Sam was never a reservation Indian and can neither read nor write. When asked if he had ever seen the young man whose trail she had followed over so many fatiguing miles, she answered in her slow speech, "No. I not know people. Just two store man." When her husband entered with the guns she took with what was reasonable and exclaimed, "Pretty soon we go hunt deer."

"Can you shoot a deer?" was asked, and there proved that the subtleties of the English language passed over her head, for she answered as though not her ability, but her right, had been questioned. "Yes, I kill but two. Joe get one, him let me get other one."

When questioned as to what she did in an environment that to women of today would seem to be substantially lonely, she replied readily, "Sometimes I tan deer hides and make in gloves, sometimes hunt, sometimes just work all time."

Quizzed as to his personal knowledge of Sylvia Van Eaton, Joe Nebel told of an acquaintance that had gone before the young man had been overseas, where Van Eaton saw a year of service. "Sylvia, the Crook."

"He was always a quiet sort of fellow, not a mixer at all. Always signed himself, 'Sylvia, the Crook,' though I never thought he would think he was. He was crazy about Dolores alright, and the night of the dance he wanted her to go with him. Her mother didn't want her to go to a dance five miles away at night that way, but finally let her go in the car with a young fellow named Jennings and another name I Paul Jones or some such name. It was a bunch of them together. At the dance Van Eaton and Dolores were quarreling and finally Dolores, so her sister said, refused to have anything to do with him. She went to left his dance hall and several fellow said he was trying to get a gun, and finally he traded his watch for a gun to a pool hall man. In the back of the watch is a picture of Dolores and her hair her in the picture, is a cross, scratched there by 'Sylvia, the Crook.'"

ROUGH TREATMENT, BUT CAR STANDS IT

"Any motorist who has ever tried to shift his gear into reverse will going forward has either paid for a stripped gear (if he was strong) or experienced the feeling that the bottom of his car was dropping out," says Edward E. Johnson, local Maxwell-Chalmers dealer. "To try this without even throw the car would begin to move backward. Several hundred motor fans saw the demonstration, which had been well advertised beforehand, and when it was over, they took the cars to the spare rooms, where the covers were removed from the gear boxes and the gears washed.

"They saw for themselves that the gears were in perfect condition, without a tooth even chipped. The demonstration was made to prove that the good Maxwell will stand an awful amount of punishment and the fans who witnessed it went away convinced of the fact.

WOMEN AS GOOD DRIVERS AS MEN, OFFICIAL SAYS

For husbands who hesitate to trust the family motor car to the mercies of a frail wife.

For the masculine division of the general automobile public— For all those who look askance when "lady" is at the wheel— Here is a bit of information which will upsets all the dopes and throws a new light on an interesting situation.

A large manufacturer making one of the important parts of an automobile through inquiry among his hundreds of service stations scattered over the country, develops the significant fact that the number of women driving cars as compared with men is increasing, and that women are good drivers in the broader sense of the word.

This was reference not alone to what she does when at the wheel but also to her knowledge of the car itself and the condition in which she keeps it. The company which thus comes to the defense of the chauffeur fair, the Willard Storage Battery company of Cleveland, was able to picture the ridiculous observing through the many eyes of its service men what kind of treatment women give the storage batteries in the cars they drive.

Contrary to popular opinion, it is the testimony of these countless drivers who do not neglect the storage battery any more than do the men. In fact, many service men are of the opinion that they are more careful in testing to see that the battery gets the necessary occasional hydrocarbon. Some of the best records in battery service are obtained by cars driven almost entirely by women.

Many women even look after their cars themselves, doing their own testing and filling, and likewise making themselves handy with screw driver or monkey wrench. To help increase the number of fair ones who can be trusted with the family gas chariot, the Willard service stations in this city and throughout the country are now making special efforts to teach the women the rudiments of battery care.

Educational pamphlets are being distributed, patrons of service stations are getting verbal instruction, and even the motion picture screen is being used. The company has produced a short film in which the principal character is a young woman who makes the story of which centers around a motor car.

CIRCUS HOLDUP MEN DISAPPEAR

Vancouver Police Without Clue to Bandits who Robbed the Sells-Floto Show

VANCOUVER, Wash., (AP)—Police today were without any clue to the identity of three men who were reported to have held up a truck of the Sells-Floto circus here last night, getting away with between $25,000 to $30,000 which was being transferred from the circus grounds to the treasure car.

Circus Men Move On

Police today said none of the circus officials had remained to aid in the search.

According to the report to the police the holdup was made at the edge of the city. There are several houses on one side of the street and on the other side there is dense brush from which the robbers were said to have emerged. Two shots were reported to have been fired upon the truck and on the other side of the truck, a man and a woman, among those on the truck, said they were knuckled down when they refused to obey commands.

Fleece in Automobiles

According to the police report, the men were equipped with new revolvers and escaped in an automobile, which was seen in the vicinity before the holdup. A man named Jackson, who resides in a street on the south side of the holdup, was reported to have been fired upon by the bandits when he stepped out to determine the cause of the commotion caused by the robbery.

Fifty jobless men were recently placed on the auction block in Boston Commons. Stripped to the waist, after the custom of the old slave auctions, they declared their willingness to work by standing before a crowd of thousands, offering their services to the highest bidder. The good points of the men, including many war veterans, unable to find employment, were pointed out by Urban Ledgar, philanthropic worker, who conducted the sale. Ledgar is issuing notices to employers about the "slave market" requested them to be on hand to "buy honest-to-God Americans," anxious to work for their keep. The photo shows Ledgar auctioning one of the "slaves."

CHILDREN SWARM ALL OVER COUNTY FAIR GROUNDS ON DAY SPECIALLY PROVIDED

Last Day of District Exposition is Another Record-Breaker in Point of Attendance—Sixth Annual Livestock and Produce Presentation Closes with Youngsters in Gleeful Multitudes on the Grounds

Children's day at the county fair was the most successful day of the week viewed from the point of weather conditions, number of visitors, entertainment and enthusiasm. From early in the day until the gates closed in the evening, the merry-go-round and the ferris wheel were taxed to capacity. The supply of toy balloons, rubber balls and squarers were found to be far below the day's demand for these fair day necessities.

Besides the children of whom no record was taken, the gates checked in approximately 2,000 paid admissions, the total receipts for the day approximating $2,000, according to Managing Secretary J. M. Markel, who today, in checking up the week's business profited by issuing an official and accurate statement of the fair for the county board. Asked for an estimate of the number of minors attending the exposition yesterday, Mr. Markel said he had never figured how many the grounds would hold but "it was a capacity crowd," he stated.

Fighting on a basis of 1000 persons attending on Tuesday opening day, and taking the other three days' figures as given by Mr. Markel, the net at attendance was 12,000. If this estimate proves correct, the average for the county fair show higher marks by several thousand this year over that of 1920, which was the best of the first year's experience.

Going to the wind of the previous day preventing the balloon ascension of the aeronaut, J. L'Estreane, obligingly gave two exhibitions yesterday afternoon, the team and the prize in a free trip to the state fair at Boise this fall where they will compete for the state championship. The Kimberly and Oklahoma teams were second and third places respectively. In the canning demonstrations, the honors went to the McMullin team, whose score was 92. The individuals of this team are: Ed Miller, Leona Strickland and Roberts Siver. The prize is the same as that for the cooking team.

The second and third places were won by Mrs. Mary and Elizabeth Rural Junior teams. In the stock judging teams among the farm club boys, John Owens won first place, Miles Davis second, Ralph Brown third. The winner here will have a free trip to the state exposition where he will participate in the contest for the state championship. County Agent H. E. Powers said that practically all of the premium lists from the horticultural building will be taken to the state fair.

Mercury's Rise to be Followed by Rain—Colder

ALTHOUGH last night was one of the coldest of the present season, indications are for an immediate upturn of the mercury. But the boost is not to last long. The prediction made by the official weather observer at Boise, is for cloudy and warmer weather tonight with probably rain and colder Sunday. Last night's low was 29 degrees above zero, as against 25 on Thursday night. The day's high was 70.

IDAHO POTATO OUTLOOK IN SEPTEMBER IMPROVED

Estimate of Crop in August is Exceeded According to Official Report

Idaho's potato crop is now estimated at 92 per cent of normal as against a 62 per cent crop for the entire United States, says the September report of Julius H. Jacobson, agricultural statistician of the Idaho crop reporting service, issued Thursday afternoon. The average total potato crop for Idaho in the last five years was 6,94,000 bushels. Last year's crop totaled seven million bushels. The present crop was estimated on August 1 as nine million bushels, but the September estimate is 9,664,000 bushels. Favorable weather made the difference.

Nationwide forecasts show an increase of seven million bushels over a month ago, but they are still 107,000,000 bushels below the 1920 crop of 107,734,000 bushels. National forecasts show an increase of seven million bushels over a month ago, but they are still 107,000,000 bushels below the 1920 crop of 107,734,000 bushels. National forecasts show an increase of seven million bushels over a month ago, but they are still 107,000,000 bushels below the 1920 crop of 107,734,000 bushels.

Following is the September estimate of this year's potato crop in the principal producing states, as compared with the actual crop of last year:

ROLING ON FRUIT WILL HELP SALES OF SAMPLES

Two rulings which will obviate difficulties lately encountered in grading and marketing hall damaged apples have been made and telegraphed to all the inspectors of the state department of agriculture, Commissioner Miles Cannon announced. They are considered of vital importance in assisting apple growers to fill contracts involving many thousands of dollars, and answer telephone and telegraph queries being received hourly by the department.

One of the rulings is that hail marks resulting in only a faint skin blemish will be considered the same as scab lesions, leaving the apple from grading and fruit grade but not from fancy, while noticeable indentures will admit apples as cookers only.

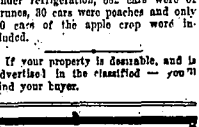

The other ruling does away with the term "orchard run" in the grading of Idaho apples. Extra fancy and fancy apples, packed together, are labeled as a combination grade, and 'O' grade apples are now to be graded in a combination grade instead of being graded orchard run. The latter ruling is made Commissioner Cannon explained, solely because in eastern and southern markets "orchard run" conveys a different meaning than in Idaho and is detrimental to the sale of fruit of high quality.

Sections of the inspection and standardization service now conducted by the department of agriculture is indicated in the fact that more than 3005 cars of farm produce have been passed upon by the department's inspectors this season, and that the total, 2103 cars represent the early potatoes shipped under refrigeration, 692 cars were of 10 cars of the apple crop were included.

BODY OF VAN EATON STILL UNCOVERED. Has Not Risen to Surface of Salmon Reservoir and the Draggings Also Falls

Reports from the Salmon dam, where a special watchman has been kept this week, indicate no success for operations looking to the recovery of the body of Sylvia Van Eaton, believed to be lying on the bottom of the reservoir.

The special watchman was employed by Sheriff E. H. Sherman when the latter, in a force of deputies and volunteer dragsmen the reservoir all one afternoon, decided to give up the quest for a period, and let time and nature aid in the recovery. The special watchman has assumed the greater part of his time dragging the water body since the sheriff temporarily abandoned the work, but has reported no success to date in finding the body. It is expected that in ten days the first natural signs of decomposition will have affected the locks that a sufficient amount of gas will be formed to raise the body to the surface of the lake. Medical experts here do not consider it possible that this natural process will take place in ten days, and they declare it is quite possible that the coldness of the water in the reservoir will retard this action a still longer period.
