

LAST BODIES OF AMERICAN DEAD HAVE BEEN SENT

Remains of All Those Dying Abroad in War are Now on Way Home or Permanently Interred on French Soil

PARIS, (AP)—The work of returning to the United States the bodies of American soldiers who died in France was completed today with a final shipment of 1,600 bodies from Brest for New York. This brings the total number of American bodies returned to 45,023.

The simple announcement of the completion of the task marks the close of one of the most trying and difficult problems ever placed before the American army. The American graves registration service, the special branch of the army organized for the purpose, began work in February, 1920.

Agents of that service will now go to England and assemble 97 American bodies destined for shipment to America. These were American soldiers who died in widely scattered parts of Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England. Five hundred other bodies of Americans whose relatives have decided to leave them in England, will be concentrated in a beautiful little permanent cemetery at Brookwood, Surrey, England. The British government having given the site. This work will be completed by July.

TO BEAUTIFY FRENCH CEMETERIES

An extensive scheme of beautification has been developed by a special fine arts commission for the four cemeteries in France which are to be the permanent resting places of nearly 30,000 Americans who fell in the world war. Original plans called for the expenditure of nearly $5,000,000 but in the interest of government economy this sum has been reduced to about $1,000,000.

Work will begin immediately after this appropriation is made by congress. Colonel H. F. Ritters, who has been in charge of the graves registration work, probably will direct the work.

The four fields of honor are: Suresne cemetery, near Paris; Bony, near St. Quentin; Helleau Wood, near Chateau Thierry; and the Argonne or Romagne cemetery, near Romagne-sous-Montfaucon.

For the latter a scheme has been worked out which will make it very much like Arlington cemetery. Each cemetery is to have a rest house and chapel for visitors and every grave will be marked with a uniform headstone.

One of the most touching features of the four cemeteries has been the way in which French people have made them their own.

FRENCH ATTENTION NEVER WAVERES

Sunday never goes by without scores of French people visiting them and placing flowers on the graves. This manifestation of friendship and appreciation caused many relatives to leave the bodies in France.

The beautifying of the fields of honor will take two years but a great deal of preliminary work has already been done and the cemeteries in their present state are impressive.

When the graves registration service began its work, the bodies were in more than 500 cemeteries scattered in every part of France, Alsace-Lorraine and Germany. Several thousand men were employed under the direction of American army officers.

Concentration of bodies in the four fields of honor has been completed. The graves registration service will maintain a permanent office in Paris for the convenience of American visitors.

DROPS THE OUSTER ACTION

Proceedings Against Export Mayor and Councilmen to be Dismissed

RUPERT—The ouster proceedings against the mayor and three councilmen of Rupert which were instituted some months ago, will be dropped, according to statement of Hugh A. Baker, Minidoka county prosecuting attorney. Hearing on the ouster proceedings had been set by Judge T. Bailey Lee for March 20. Recently the state supreme court, upon application of the mayor, granted a temporary order restraining Judge Lee from hearing the case. Attorneys were to have argued the restraining order before the supreme court March 16.

The news is read by the permanent raising clique.

LET BATTERY EXPERTS FIX UP THE BATTERIES

Addition of Acid to Fluid Gives Temporary Help but Works Mischievous Later On

A storage battery is made of lead and lead compounds which absorb acid from the battery solution as it delivers current. The acid is driven from the plates again when the battery is recharged either while on the car or at a service station. Thus a continuous interchange of acid to plates and back to the solution is kept up, says F. H. Seville, local Willard battery dealer.

"To begin with, the battery is fully charged," says Mr. Seville, "and has a solution which contains the proper amount of acid. Because the plates absorb this acid as it discharges, some sleight-of-hand artists have been making a nice living by pouring more acid into it. Of course the additional acid makes the battery operative but when it is charged on the car through normal driving, the acid in the plates comes out and then there's the Dickens to pay."

It is best to let only an authorized battery service take care of storage batteries.

TRAIN IS STALLED WEEKS

Russian Railroad Service Requires Permission Every Foot of the Journey

MOSCOW, (AP)—Americans who came when trains arrive late at their destinations should come to Russia and learn patience. The Trans-Siberian express has just come in 21 days late, a new record even for Russia when trains eight or ten days behind time are common.

The locomotive of the Tashkent express broke down in the Ural mountains and the train was stalled there three weeks until it could be repaired. Sir Benjamin Robertson, an Englishman who had been on an inspection tour of the famine districts in the Volga and who was a passenger on the delayed train, was informed that 27 passengers died of typhus, cold and hunger during the delay.

POCATELLO—With a view to augmenting the work of the state historical society maintained by the state government, the Idaho Historical society was organized here Wednesday. Its purpose is to collect and preserve both historical documents and relics which have to do with Idaho. A museum for reception of this material is to be provided at the Idaho Technical Institute. Dr. Minnie Howard was elected president and J. Robb Brady, secretary of the organization.

FORMER REVOLUTIONIST OFFERS GOOD SUGGESTION

Aguinaldo Proposes Use of Photograph Instead of the Names on Ballots

MANILA, P. I., (AP)—General Emilio Aguinaldo made what is said to be his first suggestion regarding the political affairs of the government, since his surrender to the American forces more than 20 years ago, when he appeared today before the senate committee on privileges and elections which has before it a proposed amendment to the election law.

The committee is attempting to find a means of enabling voters who cannot read or write to vote intelligently and General Aguinaldo made the proposal that instead of requiring the name of the candidate to be written on the ballot, his photograph be printed and handed to the voter when he goes to the polls. He suggested that the elector could use the picture of the man he desired to vote for and thus avoid being deceived by persons selected to write down the names.

through formation of the Snake River Irrigation Improvement district.

Directors of the Burley Irrigation district took similar action at a meeting Tuesday.

JERUSALEM FOR PALESTINIANS

Native Population of the Holy Land Opposed to Turning It Over to the Jews

JERUSALEM, (AP)—New hope has been aroused in the hearts of the Arabian people in Palestine by the publication here of a statement made by the London Morning Post that the British government intended to give no interpretation to the Balfour promise to make Palestine a Jewish homeland.

That declaration has been a boon to the Arab natives of Palestine who are fighting tooth and nail the idea of a "Jewish Home" in the Holy Land. Their delegates have roamed Europe in an endeavor to influence public opinion in favor of Palestine for the Palestinians.

It is rumored here that a larger measure of self-government will be accorded the Arabs, that they will be allowed permanent majority in all departments of the government, and that the government will be far corrupted by Englishmen will be opened to them. Toward all such concessions the attitude of the Arabs seems to be:

"Good as far as it goes, but we want more. We want to see the Jews out of Palestine."

DISSATISFACTION IS WIDESPREAD

That dissatisfaction with the present political situation is widespread is evident in the Arab, that they are complaining bitterly in their respective press that what they call the "double faced policy" adopted by the administration has put the greatest obstacles in the way of the country's development.

Here, a Zionist daily, is openly demanding the recall of Mr. Storrs, governor of the Jerusalem district for his pro-Arabism, while Palestine, an Arab daily, declares that the British government's "pro-Zionist policy" is allowing 500,000 people to be sacrificed on the altar of Jewish capitalism.

WILLIAM de Mille, invariably careful of his productions for Paramount, naturally does not overlook the importance of casts. So, in order to keep his latest production, "The Lost Romance," which comes to the Idaho theater next Monday, up to the high standard he had previously set by such pictures as "What Every Woman Knows," "Midsummer Madness" and "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," he has chosen a remarkably well balanced cast for this photoplay. Jack Holt, Conrad Nagel, Lola Wilson, Montaine Lu Rue, Maym Kelso, Robert Brower and Mickey Moore are among those who compose the exceptional roster of players.

Edward Knoblock, famous dramatist, was author of the story—his first original for Paramount—a story that brims with the character of incident and situation that is certain to be handled with much skill and artistry by Mr. de Mille. Olga Printzlau wrote the scenario, with her usual appreciation of the essentials. Guy Wilby was the cameraman.

CIRCUS MAN IS MURDER VICTIM

Mystery Surrounds Shooting of J. T. Brunen, Well Known Amusement Promoter

RIVERSIDE, Cal. (AP)—John Theodore Brunen, an amusement promoter and owner of the Doris and Ferrari circuses, was shot and killed last night while seated near a first floor window of his home residence. A full charge from a shotgun struck him behind the left ear. His wife was on the second floor when the shooting occurred and found the body of her husband on the floor when she rushed into the room. There is no clue to who fired the shot.

Mrs. Brunen's mother and the slain man's daughter had left the house only a few minutes before the shooting to attend a motion picture theater. In July, 1920, the Brunens home was entered by two men who held up Mrs. Brunen and robbed the place of jewelry and money. According to Burlington county authorities today the descriptions of the two men resemble those of two of three men seen by neighbors to park a motor car near the Brunen home last night before the shooting.

No man's spirits were ever hurt by doing his duty; on the contrary, one good action, one temptation resisted and overcome, one sacrifice of desire or interest, purely for conscience sake, will prove a cordial for weak and low spirits; far beyond what either indulgence or diversion or company can do for them.—Paley.

The Effect of Eam.

Experts say that American women are saller than they were 40 years ago and that athletics is responsible. But only a small proportion of the women of the country indulge in athletics. It would be just as easy to prove that the increase in height is due to less exercise than formerly. Surely the broom and the washbasin are as effective muscle producers as the golf stick and the tennis racket, and the modern housekeeper does not as a rule have to work as hard as did her mother and grandmother.

EXTOLLS MERITS OF BIBLE TALES

Chicago Minister Declares Holy Word Not Merely a Collection of Texts

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP)—"Contrary to general supposition the Bible is not a collection of texts for ministers to preach from," Theodore G. Soares, professor at the University of Chicago and preacher at the Hyde Park Congregational church, declared in an address here. "It is a collection of literature, the greatest which was developed before the coming of the Greeks. Benjamin Franklin recognized that. Professor Soares substituted a dramatic rendering of Ruth for a usual sermon from a text.

"While Franklin was in France during the period when the age of reason and swept away reverence for the Bible," said Professor Soares, "he remarked at a meeting of a skeptical society, 'In the course of my antiquarian researches I have discovered a rare Oriental tale in an obscure volume. I should like to have it read at some future gathering of this circle.' The members enthusiastically insisted that the esteemed Dr. Franklin's discovery be introduced at their next meeting.

STORY OF RUTH NEW TO ALL

"Accordingly, Franklin procured a skilled reader, who read Ruth before the society. Charmed by the story, which they supposed was a new discovery, the members voted that it be published in the records of the organization."

"What would be unnecessary," said Franklin, "as the story is already widely published in a volume which contains many others of equal merit—the Bible."

Professor Soares said that aside from its purpose, which was to combat nationalistic bigotry, Ruth is a beautiful prose idyll.

Cornish Tin Miners.

The men who work in the Cornish tin mines are a class by themselves, and all their differences are adjusted by the statutory courts, as they are called from the Latin word stannum. These curious courts have existed in their present form since the middle of the Thirteenth century, and, in a simpler form, much earlier; and the miners claim to be free from all other jurisdiction, "except in matters affecting the land-life or limb."

What's Your View?

A Paris newspaper inquired of its readers what attributes a Frenchman regards as most desirable in his wife. The 20,000 replies indicated that health was regarded as the most desirable quality. "Then came courage, frankness, wit, fidelity and cleverness in turn. The majority put wealth about half-way down the list and more surprising still, honesty was placed last of all.—Indianapolis News.

Adam's apple is the prominence made by the thyroid cartilage on the front of the human throat. It is natural on both men and women, but is larger in men. TO PROMOTE IMMIGRATION

SYDNEY, N. S. W. (AP)—Promotion of immigration to Australia will be the principle concern of John McVie, who left today to assume the post of agent general for Victoria in London, he announced prior to his departure. He said that immigration of Englishmen was vital to the safety of Australia, "which is menaced from two quarters, Europe and Asia."

America is a closed door to Slaves and other persons who must go elsewhere, he declared, adding that the next 30 years would show whether "Australia will remain a white man's country or whether it would have a mongrel race."

Canal Stockholders to Give Opinions on American Falls Proposals

The first of a series of public meetings to be held at various centers in Twin Falls county for submission of the question of joining in the Snake river irrigation improvement district for the purpose of building the American Falls reservoir was to be held this afternoon at Buhl.

Stockholders in attendance at this meeting were to be asked to vote by ballot for or against joining in the proposed district.

J. H. Barker, former president of the Twin Falls Canal company, was to preside at this meeting. Speakers were to include H. E. Stoutenmeyer, attorney for the reclamation service in Idaho, and F. A. Banks, reclamation service engineer.

Arrangements for this and subsequent meetings were delegated to directors of the Twin Falls Canal company in pursuance of recommendations of a committee of which they were members, which endorsed the district plan for building the American Falls reservoir, after it had been presented here at public meetings addressed by Mr. Stoutenmeyer, Harry Dibble, and others.

"Building"

The bull-whip, also called a bull-whip, is a terrible whip, with a short handle and a long heavy lash. In Texas and Louisiana it is used by drovers to intimidate refractory cattle. It is said that the use of this weapon gave rise to the term "bullwhacker." The term first found its way into print just after the Civil war, when it came to mean intimidation for political purposes by violence or threats of violence. Since that time the word has acquired a wider significance and may be used with reference to intimidation of any kind.

EARTH AND WATER EQUAL TO ETHER

Electrical Expert Declares Either One Might Serve as Air for Wireless

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., (AP)—Under certain conditions, radio waves might travel more easily through the ground of the waters of the sea than through the air, it was said today by Dr. C. I. Schenectady, chief consulting engineer for the General Electric company.

He said he considered well founded the supposition that recent performances of low power radio sending apparatus in transmitting messages to surviving distances gave an indication that the radiations peculiar to wireless transmission pass with equal ease through the earth as through the ether.

Such radiations, he said, would be in accord with accepted electrical laws, as the ground, to which both the sending apparatus and receiving set are connected, would act as a return circuit for the current. In like manner, he pointed out, water might serve as a medium for radio conversations between ships or between ships and land.

WIRELESS PHONING REVOLUTIONIZED

Wireless telephony, it was said by associates of Dr. Schenectady today, had been revolutionized by the successful performances of the duplex transmitter, completed early this week when conversations were held between New York and passengers aboard the steamer America at the time a distance of 300 miles at sea.

The duplex telephone enables land lines to be handled with the radio, so that one might talk over his own home telephone to persons far at sea. Heretofore such a link was impracticable because it was necessary to turn a switch from "send" to "receive" in the radio apparatus each time the speaker became the listener.

Testing Child's Musical Ability.
Musical ability, in a child, can be well judged by testing five faculties: The sense of pitch, which is the ability to discriminate between higher and lower tones; the sense of time or rhythm; the sense of consonance, which is the ability to tell what is more pleasing and what is less pleasing; the sense of intensity; and musical memory, or the ability to remember a number of tones from hearing them once. These qualifications are probably in large measure inherited, for very young children sometimes have them.—Youth's Companion.

Thoughts for the Children.
To help a child to become unselfish, self-reliant, kind, thoughtful, considerate, honest, and independent; to train to habits of usefulness; to promote purity of thought and life; to have even some small part in awakening loftier purposes and nobler aspirations; to arouse in the minds of boys and girls an honest and sincere hope to be able to make happier the school, the home, the community, the state, the nation, and the world—should be the greatest ambition of every teacher.—R. C. Barrett.

CABINET SOLIDARITY WAS NEVER THE RULING CODE

Deposed Secretary of State for India Would Justify Course of Conduct in Office

LONDON, (AP)—Edwin D. Montagu, in speaking before the Liberal club at Cambridge, his constituents today, justified the policy he had pursued as secretary of state for India and declared the doctrine of "cabinet solidarity" invoked in connection with his resignation Thursday had never been the ruling code in the Lloyd George cabinet.

"My disappearance," said Mr. Montagu, "has nothing to do with the doctrine of collective responsibility. It is an effort to preserve this government from the fate that must attend it."

"You know how dangerously near the government is to collapse. The liberal members see their colleagues disappearing one by one. The conservatives also have a lot to swallow. The 'die hard' have shown in the Indian, as in all other matters, a complete lack of political sagacity. They are the most dangerous element in the political life of this country, and to them the great genius presiding over the country's destinies has given my head on a charger."

Mr. Montagu said he had never been able to understand the motive for the prime minister's pro-Greek policy. "I do not think it is in the interests of the Greeks," he declared, "and I am certain it is calamitous to the British empire."

Get After What You Want.
It is no use just sitting down and waiting for things to happen. Life is "round the corner," and you've got to run after it, and run fast, too, with your head up and your mind alert. Wishes are all very well, but they must not master you. You've got to master them. Long years, desire, as much as you like, it is a good sign, but oh, don't put your wishbone in the place where your backbone ought to be.—Exchange.

Stop the Ache.
Zoo-therapy is a system of relieving pain by applying pressure to the nerves—like shutting off the water or gas by turning a valve. For instance, to stop toothache, grasp the gums over the aching tooth, between thumb and forefinger. Press tightly! That is worth remembering. When you have toothache, everything else in the world fades into insignificance.

No session of her trial was held, court having adjourned yesterday until Monday morning, when she will return to the stand and the prosecution will resume its cross-examination.

It is expected the state will devote considerable time Monday to even questioning the defendant on events immediately leading to the slaying of the young broker in her presence on the steps of his cottage. Beverly Glen, a suburb, August 5 last.

Already she had been quizzed rigidly concerning her relations with the three men who had occupied the most prominent places in her life—Hatch H. Ochs, Chicago attorney, her former husband, and her present auditor and a member of her counsel; Arthur C. Burch of Evanston, Ill., jointly indicted with her for the murder of Kennedy and the young broker himself.

Regarding these three, the prosecutors have declared:

"She made a fool of Ochs; a murderer of Burch and a corpse of Kennedy."

"Gringo."
The word "gringo," Mexican nickname for an American, is in Spanish dictionaries of many years ago. The word was first brought into the Spanish language from grego and the use of the French phrase "to speak in Greek," which was generally applied to persons who spoke in a tongue unintelligible to them. It is not, as has been stated, of Mexican war origin.—Dearborn Independent.

Building a Big Business

These Men Did It— So Can You!

A recent article in the Outlook mentions some remarkable cases of business successes. Such instances show that there is no limit to the advance of the competent business man who believes in advertising.

In a town of 4000 people in the state of Washington this writer found a department store doing a business of $783,940 last year. In a town of 2800 people in Georgia he found sales for 1919 of $898,486. And in a town of 3000 in Missouri he found a store that did $250,000 worth of business last year.

Cases like these, which are not uncommon, suggest that the enterprising dealer almost anywhere can expand his business far beyond the limits that conservative people would consider possible. And usually in such cases, advertising is what does it.

It has become possible during recent years to draw trade much farther than formerly. Automobile travel gives people a much wider circuit through which they can reach out to find bargains. They will travel a long distance to reach a trading center where enterprise and the spirit of growing business is found. The persistent advertiser finds that he can pull trade three times as far as he could 20 or even 10 years ago; and every year the possibilities of expansion through advertising are increasing.

The people have confidence when they read the notices of a well advertised store that it is doing a large business in comparison to its expense, hence that it is able to put its goods on the market at a reasonable expense for distribution costs. The efficiency of a store depends upon the relation between its volume of sales and its overhead and operating expenses. Advertising provides a big trade on a relatively small burden of expense, hence helps the dealer to serve the public economically.

No longer can the country regard complacently the contracting of bills for which payment has not been provided in advance, save in exceptional cases of emergency. Several decades ago it did not appear to make much difference whether there were, or were not, such deficiencies, for federal revenues almost always exceeded demands upon the treasury. We see now that it was wrong not to insist upon the departments living within their means—the means which congress assigned to them after consideration of their estimates of requirements for carrying on their business. A bad habit was created. It is in which the budget system was designed to cure, the ultimate effect being to put every government activity on a basis absolutely economical.

When the deficiency habit grew up the only embarrassment the treasury felt in consequence of unexpected demands for appropriations was the reduction of its ability to retire the civil war debt. Even that was not serious, since the surplus annually was very large. The present condition demands that the national financiers "cut the coat according to the cloth."

The difficulty today is to find resources sufficient to meet all demands without overburdening taxpayers. The debt service must be nicely calculated and provided for in the enumeration of taxes. A surplus in the old sense is not imaginable. Consequently demands for deficiency appropriations are embarrassing. They will have to be compulsed. And President Harding means that they shall be.

FIUME A SYMPTOM

Fiume is a symptom of what is the matter with Europe. Claimed by both Jugo-Slavia and Italy at Versailles, it offered a stage to D'Annunzio, defying the world and, when he was finally induced to quit, the compromise of creating it into a free city was accepted as merely temporary. Even the treaty of Rapallo, by which Jugo-Slavia and Italy were supposed to compose their territorial and other differences, failed to assure permanence to the arrangement as to Fiume.

At the first opportunity Italian nationalists were certain to make another effort to seize it for Italy. The Fas-chist and the D'Annunzio Legionaries, with the tolerance of the Italian warships, have driven out the local Zanol-li government and Fiume is back where it was when the post trod the bonds and wrote his orders in metre.

Americans, seeing Europeans of the most diverse races living peacefully side by side in this country, forgetting the racial rivalries and animosities that plague Europe, have difficulty understanding the contrast offered by Fiume, by Vienna, Danzig and the other communities where nationalistic aspirations maintain a ferment. Is this jealousy inherent, or is it fomented by political intrigue? If politicians and demagogues are responsible for stirring up these hatreds in Europe, it is easier to understand the peaceful juxtaposition of the same races here without such enmities. Self-determination in Europe seems likely to prove more a curse than a blessing if it provokes such antagonisms. Many students have, indeed, argued that the great mistake at Versailles was in not planning a United States of Europe instead of multiplying the little nationalities.

AS OTHERS SEE US

Down at Twin Falls there has been some discussion of a change in the city government. Ever since the last city election there has been discussion at that place concerning a change in the city government. There were those who wanted a commission form of government and also those who wanted a managerial form. After much discussion and searching around they have finally decided to go to "bat" on the changing of the city government in a commission form.

There was a time when the commission form of city government was quite the rage. From every part of the country there came reports of this city or that city changing over to a commission form of government and it looked for a while as though this form of government was the wave of the future. But by the reports came in and it was found that a commission form of government differed from the old form in but one particular: It was more economic.

When it was found that the first forms of the commission government proved failures there were many additions and new inventions added, but they all turned out to be failures. They were more or less failures. Some were to a great deal better than others but they were all failures. The commission form of government is a city government and one by commission and it is the name, commission is substituted for councilman.

Now, down at Twin Falls they are going to have an election and change the form of government. They are going to take Bill Brown, a councilman, and transform him into Bill Brown, a commissioner, and with this exchange of title they expect to change the form of government.

Oh! the foolishness of damn fools when it comes to religion and politics!
Will they then learn that government has within itself no life? That in order that it may have life men must administer it. Then if men must administer government, what difference does it make if the title to the officers means? The real and only test of government is the men who carry it on. If there comes to our city government a man with administrative ability he will make a success of the city government no matter what kind it may be. If he has not this ability he will make a failure of it no matter what may be the form of government.

We presume that the oldest forms of government were city governments. As men began to group themselves together it was early discovered that some form of government was necessary. The first attempts at government were probably feeble affairs and with the years they have become more complex until today we have the systems of government that obtain throughout the world.
And it is the universal experience of mankind without exception that the government of the quality kind develops upon quality men.

When Twin Falls gets through with her little election she will have at least a change in her form of government.
Whether it will be a change in the personnel of the officers. She will have the experience of an additional election and in the end she will probably have the same old thing as she has always had.
However, should she adopt the Idaho commission form of government, who will have the salaries of four high-paid officers to pay for with the taxpayer's money? The city treasurer, their whole business will be to make Havanna, draw their salaries and work hard the efficiency of Twin Falls—

We think of the psalms as hymns of praise and victory, and in part they are, but the note of praise and thanksgiving that we see in so many of the psalms comes from the heart of David as an older man, when he is conscious of God's forgiveness. David repented; he confessed his sins to God with all the earnestness of his soul; he had prayed to God in all the agony of a broken spirit, and God heard his cry, and filled his heart and soul with the sense of forgiveness. "Out of the deep have I cried unto thee, O Lord, hear my prayer," yes, it was the depth of sin in which David felt he had fallen—and then with the peace of forgiveness in his heart, David can shout a hymn of praise.

"Praise the Lord, O my soul . . .
Yes, as long as I have any being,
I will sing praises unto my God."

What a lesson for us is this life of David! A reckless youth, an ambitious king—and yet he made his peace with God, and became a new man.
He was the author of such beautiful psalms that he could be called the sweet singer of Israel. And it all came about, because David was honest and sank enough with God to confess his sin.

The story of the Prodigal Son, from the Gospel of St. Luke, is only a parable, but it is just as true as an illustration from human life, as the story of David. It shows the practical utility of the Old and New Testaments. Human nature doesn't change essentially from one generation to another. Sin, envy, weakness, temptation, sin, remorse, confession, forgiveness—the same old cycle of human experience, repeats itself.

The prodigal son's repentance and confession appealed to the love and mercy of the father, and he was forgiven and taken back into the family.
It all came about because the boy was honest and frank enough to confess his sin.

Why were these two accounts given to us in the Bible? To help us see sin in all its naked truth, and to apprehate the consequences of sin; but more than that to show us that there is a way out. And that is the way of confession. There can be no peace or rest or sense of forgiveness unless we are sorry for our sins, and honestly and sincerely confess them before God.

And so soon as we are conscious of our sins, personally responsible for them and accountable for them, we are on the way to forgiveness. To the person who is conscious of his sin, there is only one thing in all the world that will make a difference, and that is to confess the sin, and be forgiven.

How prejudiced we all are against that word Confession! No, we say, it is not confession that we are talking of; we are talking of a man's confession to his conscience, and to his pride to really confess a sin to any one whom we have wronged—much less confess it to God. It is unbearably to me to confess that I have been in wrong—the other person is always in the wrong—let him come to me and apologize, but as for me doing such a thing—never!

If we are really prejudiced we should feel a real sorrow for our sins—not only because we know that sin is hurting us and destroying our character, but because we feel that just so far have turned our backs upon our Lord and have betrayed him. It is because we love God that we must seek him again and find him, and realize his glorious presence in our lives.

If we have strayed from his presence, let us go to him again and seek his loving pardon. Let us in all sincerity put away those things which separate us from God.

"Then you waved a hand to the line, and presently stepped up to him and his friends.

"Sir, I said to you, 'I'm not going to be pressed into the navy.'"

"There's no press, Michael," you answered, "We'll be quota men. We'll do it for you—for forty pounds each, and no other. You let them have you for 'no'—but if you don't want to come," you added, "it's all the same "Path, I knew that was only talk.

I knew you wanted me. Also I knew the king's navy needed me, for men are hard to get. So, when they'd paid me the cash—forty pounds apiece—I stepped in behind you, and here we are—here we are! Forty pounds apiece—equal to three years' wages of an ordinary recruit of the army."

"Well, but we're here for three years, and no escape from it. Yes, here we are!"

Dyck laughed.

"Aye, here we're likely to remain, Michael. There's only this to be said —we'll be fighting the French soon, and it's easy to die in the midst of a great fight. If we don't die, Michael, something else will turn up, maybe."

"That's true, sir! They'll make an offer of you, among the common herd, the dregs of the world that come to the ship's bottom in time of peace or war."

"Well, I'm the dregs of the world, Michael. I'm the supreme dregs."

Somewhere the letter from Virginia had landed. Dyck Calhoun's fate for him. Here he was—at sea, a common sailor in the navy. He and Michael Clones had eaten and drunk as sailors do, and they had realized that, as they ate and drank on the River bank, they would not eat and drink on the watery floorway. They had seen the tank full with age, from which water was drawn for men who could not live without it, and the smell of it had revolted Dyck's senses. They had seen the water of pickled meat, and they had been told of the evil ration given to the sailors at sea.

The Ariadne had been a flagship in her day, the home of an admiral and his staff. She carried seventy-four guns, was easily obedient to her swift and her speed, and her reputation for gallantry from the first hour on board. Dyck Calhoun had fitted in; with a discerning eye he had understood the seamen's needs and the weaknesses of the system.

The months he had spent between the wall from prison and his entrance into the Ariadne had roughened, though not coarsened, Dyck's outward appearance. From his first appearance among the seamen he had set himself to become their leader. His color was for three years, and he meant that these three should prove the final success of his naval enterprise, or the stark period in a calendar of tragedy.

The life of the sailor, with its coarseness and degeneracy, its inadequate pay, its evil-smelling food, its maggot breed, its beer drawn from casks that once had held oil or fish, its stinking salt-meat barrels, the hideous stench of the bilge-water—all this could in one sense be no worse than his sufferings in the spite of self-control.

It had been to him the degradation of his hopes, the humiliation of his manhood. He had suffered cold, dampness, fever, and indigestion there, and it had sapped the fresh blood of life in him.

From the moment Dyck arrived on board the Ariadne he was a marked man. Ferenc, a disfranchised soldier, who knew his story, spread the whisper of his trouble among the sailors, and he received attentions at once offensive and flattering.
The best educated of the ship's hands replied to him with a look of scorn.

"What's the game of the fleet at the shore?"

Ferenc replied in a low voice:
"You mean to go to sea out petitions—to the admiralty and to the house of commons."

"Why don't you try Lord Howe?"
"He's not in command of a fleet now. Besides, petitions have been sent him, and he's taken no notice of them."

"Howe! No notice—the best admiral ever had! I don't believe it," declared Dyck savagely. "Why, the whole navy believes in Howe. They haven't forgotten what he did in '94. He's as great to the seamen as the seamen is to his mother. He's a big enough friend of the sailor to waste no time before doing his duty."

Ferenc shook his head morosely.
"That may be," he said, "but the petitions were sent weeks ago, and there's no sign from Lord Howe. He was at Bath for good. My idea is referred them to the admiralty commanding at Portsmouth, and was told that behind the whole thing is conspicuous—French acquiescence and English politics. I give you my word there's no French navy in the fleet, and if there were, it wouldn't have any effect. Our men's grievances are not new. They're as old as Croquet."

"Suppose," said he, "you go on the grievance with which the whole navy was stirring."

Something had got a new spirit into the life of his majesty's ships; it was, in a sense, the reflection of the French Revolution and Tom Paine's "Age of Reason." What the Americans had done in establishing a republic, what France was doing by her revolution, got into the veins and minds of some men in England, but it got into the veins and minds of the sailor first; for, however low his origin, he had intercourse not given to the average landman. He visited foreign ports, he came in touch with other elements than those of British life and character.

Of all the ships in the navy the Ariadne was the best that Dyck Calhoun could have entered. Her officers were humane and friendly, yet firm; and it was quite certain that if mutiny came they would be treated well. The agitation on the Ariadne in support of the grievances of the sailors was so moderate that, from the first, Dyck threw in his lot with his. Ferenc, the former soldier, first came to him with a list of proposals, which only required the demands made by the sailors at Spithead.

"You're new among us," said Ferenc to Dyck. "You don't quite know what we've been doing. I suppose some of us have been in the navy for twenty years, and some for ten. There are men on board who have been in the navy since the war, and you studies that would make your blood run cold—take my word for it.
There's a lot of things going on that nightn't be to go on. The time has come for reform."

"Talk me the matter," and we've got to start our stand now when the time is ripe for it, or else lose it forever.
Over at Spithead they're getting their heads up. The government are going to send the admiralty round here, because our list says we want more than the sailor who's been in the navy it won't be a ship unless they do."

"And what are we going to do here?"

ORANG-UTAN

"Two forgotten whether I was named after another Orang-Utan or after a Chimpanzee," said the Orang-Utan, "but anyway my name is Toto and I was named after one of those creatures I have mentioned."

"The one of the creatures myself. That is—I am an Orang-Utan and mightily pleased I am to be one. I think I will sing a song about it."

So the Orang-Utan sang in his funny little voice.

An Orang-Utan am I,
And never do I sigh,
For I'm happy as the day is long,
This is all my little song.

"Are you going to tell the story of your life, Toto?" asked another Orang-Utan in the zoo.

"I don't know," said Toto, "but I will tell something of the ways of the Orang-Utan family. It would be a pity if people didn't know about us and how friendly we are. It would be a great pity indeed."

"From the time an Orang-Utan is a little baby he is a dear, cunning little creature."

"When he is little he is a dear little creature, wanting to be friendly with everyone. If no one will be friendly with him he cries in a sad little voice. But an Orang-Utan baby makes friends. He is such a darling! But he usually has such beautiful brown eyes, which look so pleadingly at everyone."

"We haven't been shaped as the Chimpanzee has, and we don't dress up with so much fuss as he does, because we cannot wear shoes very comfortably."

"Our toes are long and shoes don't fit us well. But we are much more friendly than he is, though he may have more brains than we have. We have brains though. Yes, plenty of brains and were surely next to the Chimpanzee as far as brains are concerned. I'm quite sure of that."

"I Am Proud"

but I know we become very heavy in time.

"But I never want to grow so big that I can't be loved by my keeper. For how I do adore to be loved by him, and how I do care to play with him and show him how much I love him!"

"I play with some of his friends who come to the zoo, too. And I've some good friends among them."

"My name of Orang means man, and my second name of Utan means jungle, for often I am known in the true state as the jungle man. I am called Toto by my keeper just as a boy is called by a special name."

"A boy is called Jimmie or Sam or Johnny or some such name."

"Some of us like to do tricks and others of us like to find out all we can and learn all we can, but all of us are pretty bright and pretty good at tricks."

"We have long hair and when we get to be old we do weigh a lot! Especially we Mr. Orang-Utans. The ladies don't want to weigh so much."

It doesn't seem quite ladylike to them.

"When I was free I used to live in a big nest in a tree which was strong but which used to blow a bit and move a bit so we could swing. We slept on beds of lovely branches and while we slept on our backs we always had our hands and feet about a branch so we could never fall or be come hurt by any such accident."

"But, oh, while sometimes I think of the free days, I am happy here in the zoo. I am proud too, because my keeper loves me so."

"I would never go back on him. No, there isn't a man or tricky or treacherous or unkind thing about me or my family. A mean orang-utan is something I have never seen and if there ever are any more I hope I don't see them. An I'm not want to feel the family was disgraced."

"No, we are true, and loyal, and we never change. Ah, there comes my good keeper friend now. I shall give him my finest kiss!"

Varieties of Spider's Web.

The common house spider spins a web quite different from that of the garden spider. The house spider's web consists of a silken tube hidden in a dark corner, with an irregular circle of sticky web-meshes spread before it. The tube is the spider's lurking hole and place of refuge; the outspread web is its snare. The wolf spider makes a tubular hole with a hinged door for a refuge and spreads no snare. Still another species of spider constructs a funnel tube of silk without any lid or door.
