SOLDIER BONUS RIGHT OF WAY FINALLY FIXED

Measure to Come Up as Soon as Tariff Definitely Disposed of—Sharp Debate Precedes Agreement

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The soldier's bonus bill was made Tuesday by a vote of 62 to 4, the special order of business of the senate immediately after the final vote on the tariff bill unless it is disposed of before that time.

Adoption of a motion to this effect came after an all-day fight at the outset of which a request to get the bonus before the senate failed. Several senators gave formal notice that they would continue to press for action on the bonus ahead of the tariff.

A move to upset the program of the republican majority calling for action first on the tariff, was launched by Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, who made a formal motion that the tariff bill be displaced by the bonus measure. Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, moved to lay this motion on the table and his motion prevailed, 61 to 22. Eight democrats supported the Watson motion and two republicans voted against it.

How Late Is Five Hours?

With the announcement of the result of this vote, the senate began in earnest and waged for five hours in the midst of it, Senator Watson of Indiana offered a motion that the bonus be made a special order of business immediately after the final vote on the tariff and that thereafter, it be held first on the calendar. The motion was continuously before the senate until two-thirds of the senate voted to displace it.

Senator Underwood of Alabama, the democratic leader and an opponent of the measure, made point of order against the two-thirds vote provision, pointing out that this was in the nature of an amendment to the senate rules. The point of order was sustained and that provision was withdrawn.

A question then arose as to whether the motion to amend in the modified form would preclude a motion to take up the bonus before the tariff bill was disposed of and after a long discussion the motion was finally modified at the suggestion of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, so that a motion to proceed to the consideration of the bonus could be made at any time. Some opponents of the bonus supported this motion but eight of them cast their votes against it. They were Ding, King, Myers and Williams, democrats, and Edge, France, Peppers and Woodworth, republicans. Several opponents were absent when the vote was taken late in the day.

Wall Street Brought In

Senator Hiram, democrat, Alabama, attacked the majority for delaying action, declaring that Wall Street was behind the move for delay in the hope that the bill could be killed meantime by a propaganda which the senator charged was being conducted by the "war chis." He also attacked other politan newspapers opposing the bonus and declared that some of the papers in opposition were "subsidized."

The democratic senators were attacked by Senator Lennox, republican, Wisconsin, who declared that he delayed final disposition of the bonus bill by the time they had taken up in discussion it. He charged also that the time was being occupied for the purpose of making "political capital out of action."

Senator Watson of Indiana then offered his motion to make the bonus the special order of business after passage of the tariff and Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, jumped into the fray with a demand that "there be no understanding that once the bonus was taken up, it should not be displaced by the ship subsidy or any other bill. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, said he would not consent to any such agreement.

Uses Strong Terms

Launching into an attack on the bonus bill, Senator William, democrat, Mississippi, declared that this was a measure to commercialize patriotism. He asserted that what the American soldiers did in the war could be rewarded only in honor, worthy of being rewarded in honor," he said, "is unworthy of being rewarded at all."

Senator Williams charged that if the bonus could be "out over six months, it would have less value in the senate

Life Detector Clears Murder Suspect

Photograph shows Henry Wilkens submitting himself to the "aphygonometer" test, in plain language, the "life detector," invented by Dr. John A. Larson, professor-police-man, of the Berkeley (Cal.) Police department. The detector records the pulse vibrations of suspects under police examination, and it informed the police that Wilkens was telling the truth about the murder of his wife by two auto bandits. The police suspected Wilkens, because he told them he had never seen the bandits before, when he had actually been a foreman over one of them for months, and a nation-wide search was instituted for Walter and Arthur Ooster. They further suspected because his wife had filed a separate maintenance suit and because he had often threatened suicide because of his grief. But the life detector freed him.

HOUSE MADE FROM FIR LOG

TO TOUR MIDDLE WEST

EVERETT, Wash., (AP)—That the people of the middle west may have an opportunity of seeing a section of a native Douglas fir, B. F. Blannett and son of Sultan, near here, have constructed a tree house with which they hope to tour the United States.

The house is hollowed out of a giant log. It is seven feet high with an exterior diameter of eight feet and an interior diameter of six feet. The roof of the house is made from 23-inch shakes, as is the front of the house. One of the shakes is used as a door. The house is supported on a light trestle. Mr. Blannett plans to exhibit the tree house at intervals along the Sunset highway and the Oregon trail, which roads he will follow to Omaha. He has not as yet arranged his itinerary from Omaha. He will carry with him letters of introduction from officials of the Everett chamber of commerce.

"Milestania"

There are several theories as to the origin of the name Milestania as applied to the Irish. One is that the country was first settled by colonists from the island of Melos (modern Milo) in Greece; another that the name is derived from Milestian, an early conqueror, while still others claim the term is taken from the Latin "mixta," a knight.

REQUEST BASIS OF MUCH RUMOR

McCormick Provides Himself with Exemplified Copy of Recent Divorce Decree

CHICAGO, (AP)—Harold F. McCormick, head of the executive committee of the International Harvester company, today received an exemplified copy of the decree of divorce obtained last January by his wife, Mrs. Edith Barker McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller. With the decree was an exemplified copy of the record in the case.

The records were delivered while Mr. McCormick was at the Wesley Memorial hospital recovering from an operation performed a week ago by Dr. Victor D. Leptinowski, widely known for his research work in the field of rejuvenation accomplished through glandular operations.

Considerable mystery was thrown about the procuring of the records, it being pointed out by the court officials that the certified copies might be used in other states or in Europe as documentary evidence of the divorce, should it become necessary to produce such evidence, as in procuring a marriage license.

Revives Marriage Rumors

This revived rumors that Mr. McCormick, who is 31 years old, might be married soon to Miss Ganna Walska, a Polish girl, 19 years old, who is engaged to his attorney, John P. Wilson, denied that this was the reason for procuring the records.

At the Wesley hospital Mr. McCormick, sitting up in bed, received reporters during the afternoon and talked freely on any subject except his engagement and the future plans for himself or his 17 year old daughter, Marnie, who has announced her intention of marrying Miss Oser, Swiss riding master, and 27 1/2 years her senior.

WOMAN'S NOMINATION FOR SENATE SETS NEW ORDER

Minnesota Democrats in Se- lecting Anna Pickle Olson, Establish Change

ST. PAUL, (AP)—A woman has been nominated for United States senator by a major political party for the first time in the history of the country.

This became apparent Tuesday night when returns from half the precincts participating in Monday's primary election showed Mrs. Anna Pickle Olson had captured the senatorial nomination of the democratic party from two male opponents.

When 1715 of the state's 3348 precincts had reported, Mrs. Olson had a margin of 4200 votes over Thomas Melgren, her nearest opponent; the count then standing: Mrs. Olson 19,819; Melgren 14,622.

Opposing Mrs. Olson in the November election will be Minnesota's junior senator, Frank B. Kellogg, who was re-nominated on the republican ticket with other state officers endorsed by the party's convention. Henrik Shilsted, farmer-labor candidate, also will be an opponent.

Margin Very Small

The closest contest of the primary was that in the third congressional district, where Representative Charles B. Davis and Zouba Thoresen, fought it out for the republican nomination, with Davis holding a slight advantage, Tuesday night when 260 of the district's 276 precincts had reported. With seven precincts missing, Davis had 10,953 votes and Thoresen 10,903 in the unofficial compilation.

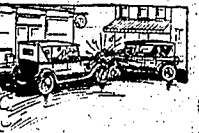

While the democrats were nominating Mrs. Olson for the senate post, the republicans were nominating Miss Grace F. Kaescher of Orono,ville, for clerk of the supreme court over Herman Mueller, incumbent. Miss Kaescher had the endorsement of the state convention.

DIVORCED FROM FIRST WIFE ATTIE SECOND WIFE, DIES

COLFAX, (AP)—Henry McEvers, an old resident of Colfax, has been granted and interlocutory divorce from Elizabeth McEvers, whom he married in 1864 and from whom he separated in 1883. The divorce proceedings started a few weeks ago when Mr. McEvers learned through the pension office that his first wife, whom he had believed dead, was still living.

While living in the west in the '80s, Mr. McEvers married a second time. He raised a family and several of his grown children are now living in Colfax. Their mother, the second Mrs. McEvers, died here a short time ago.

EUROPE MUST HELP ITSELF

Carlo Schanzer, Italy's foreign minister, who appreciates more than many of his contemporaries the fundamental ideals of American purpose, expresses the opinion that the time is at hand when the United States will participate in European affairs.

territory is as wide as the impulse of men to liberal living; it could not wish, and certainly never has professed, an isolation which denies the brotherhood of republican principles.

Signer Schanzer has every means at his disposal to determine with accuracy when the hour of American participation is likely to strike.

WANTS NO ODDS IN FORTUNES OF POLITICAL LIFE

Democratic Senatorial Nominee of Minnesota Will Make No Special Plea for Women in Campaign

CLOQUET, Minn., (AP)—To the country at large she may be Anna Dickie Olson, but to this city of 8,000 population, she will always be Mrs. Peter Olson, though even her husband, who is superintendent of schools, insists that the "Anna Dickie" be substituted for the "Mrs. Peter" when she is referred to in the newspapers.

And the little family of three—especially the husband and 14-year-old daughter, Mary—are thrilled with the knowledge that the wife and mother has been chosen to "pioneer a trail for women in politics," as Mrs. Olson herself has termed it.

But there was no denying she was happy and almost eager to be in the campaign for the November election, which she will press as perentally as she did her primary campaign, she said.

"I am deeply grateful to the people that have stood by me in the primary campaign," she said. "I did not seek the nomination in the Minnesota convention, but having accepted it, I did the best I could—with the limited funds at my command—to make an effective campaign for the furtherance of the party's interests."

"I was as Citizen Olson she gained the nomination, she insists, and not through any advantage gained by her sex."

"I made no plea for recognition of women in politics; I was and am ready to accept as equality with men the fortunes of politics."

"Now that I am nominated," she continued, "I will do the best I can for the party through the fall campaign, and I think we will have a united party" when the November election comes round. If elected in November, I shall do the utmost to serve the people well.

Her Motto For All Time During my preliminary campaign I set up as my motto—and I shall continue to keep it before me in the fall campaign—the words of George Washington: "Let us raise the standard to which the wise and honest can rally—the event is in the hands of God."

"My campaign, my desire for the nomination, were not for personal vanity or gain at all; my one desire is to serve the people of the democratic constitution and the other people of the state who nominated me. I have no personal ambitions at stake; everything is for the people."

Not more than 4,500 were present at Mrs. Olson in her preliminary campaign, she said Tuesday. She visited nearly 40 towns and cities in every section of the state, traveling in a small sedan automobile given her by friends. Most of the time she did her own driving.

SHIP SUBSIDY MEASURE MUST BE CONSIDERED

President Approves Plan of Republican House Leaders to Take Up Bill When Tariff is Disposed of WASHINGTON, (P)—President Harding Tuesday night gave formal approval to plans for republican leaders in the house to bring the administration ship-subsidy bill to a vote at this session immediately after the tariff bill has been sent to conference by the house.

The president's position was stated in a letter to Representative Mondell of Wyoming, the republican leader, which embodied also detailed arguments advanced by Mr. Harding in favor of enactment of the measure at the present session.

Public interest will not admit of a postponement of decision on the policy to the next congress or the approaching short session, the president said, but advantage will result from a short delay, while house members, particularly many of whom are away from Washington, consult their constituents. The subsidy bill, he declared, is needed to get the government's ship holdings into private hands and into economic usage, if for nothing else, and this question, he held, "not to be prejudged by the old and worn-out cry against subsidy."

Must Stop Tolls
"It does not become us to go on paying shipping tolls to the world," the president said further, "when our righteous purposes in trade are better promoted by serving ourselves in making our tenders in the markets of the world."

The exact time fixed for voting on the measure, the president said, in describing his agreement with house leaders, is "approximately such time as house members will be called in active attendance to send the tariff bill to conference."

What a Whale Weighs
Have you any idea of the size of the common Greenland whale? Millions, the zoologist, estimates the full-grown animal to average 100 tons, or 224,000 pounds. That is to say, a whale weighs as much as 100 elephants or 400 bears. Of course, some run larger than this. There are tales among old whalers of whales 110 feet long, and weighing at least 100 tons. But such are not seen these days. A 70-foot whale is a big one now. Still it may give some idea of what monsters are occasionally killed when we mention that a ton of oil has been extracted from the tongue alone of a single whale.

A Lake on Shipboard
When one contemplates that up much energy is exerted to the end of keeping the water out of a ship, it looms up as an astonishing fact that there is of necessity a great deal of water within the hull of the vessel. A good one may be enough to fill a bathtub to make a good-sized lake. About 1,740 tons of water is carried by a big passenger vessel. The drinking water for the use of passengers amounts to 500, and there are about 800 tons of water being used for ballast. The six boilers contain 800 tons. The tanks are situated between the double hulls of the vessel.

The Fan Long in Use
Fans have been in use since the time of Sennacherib, as a base-relief in the British museum represents that monarch surrounded by his eunuchs carrying feather fans. Fans are also seen in plates of the ruins of Persopolis and of Egyptian sculptures at Thebes. A wooden fan handle, with holes for feathers, found in a tomb 17 centuries before Christ, may be seen in a museum at Boulak, near Cairo. Fans were the symbols of sacred emblems and rulers in India.

Hard to Beat
A real estate agent had been engaged to drive a prospective purchaser and his wife over a large estate in the West of England. He was a young man, and had adopted, as tried to adopt, some of the American methods. As the car wound along the lanes he pointed out the park and meadows and woods of the estate; lunched out in a pantry. Finally he gazed up at the sun, and, waving his arm, concluded, "And there's sunshine for you! There's a sun! Can you beat it?"

RATE ON CHAINS OCCUPIES SENATE SENATOR HALE WINS PRIMARY

Resolution on Behalf of Nebraska Hardware Man Pre-empted Warm Debate Results in Contest in Maine Settle Uncertainties of Early Vote Returns

WASHINGTON, (P)—The senate got back to the tariff bill Tuesday but only for one hour. The finance committee majority offered a new amendment modifying its original rates on chains to what was stated to be about the levels in the Payne-Adair law, and immediately there was a sharp controversy, democratic speakers urging further reductions.

Presenting a resolution from Nebraska hardware dealers opposing rates in the bill on hardware, Senator Hillebrand, democrat, Nebraska, declared the business men of the west without regard to politics, believed passage of the bill would result in increased prices.

Supporting the committee rates, Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, declared American manufacturers would have to be protected from chain manufacturers in Germany who, he asserted, have their agents in this country looking orders at prices below the cost of production in the United States. Senator Hillebrand told the senate that he would undertake to show Wednesday that the cry-of-mercantile competition was a myth and that there was an attempt to continue commercially the war that ended some time ago for the benefit of a few manufacturers in the United States. He argued that Germany was the best customer the United States had in Europe.

Distinction Few Would Covet
The distinction of being the only woman to be married in a dining church probably belongs to a recent bride in England. When the bridal party arrived at the church they found the building ablaze and a small army of firemen dousing the flames with water. Nothing daunted, the prospective bride declared that fire or no fire, she would not leave the church unscathed, and to the accompaniment of flying sparks and clouds of smoke the marriage ceremony was performed.

Abnormality in Mankind
Regardless of whether "genius is to madness close allied," eccentricities no doubt could be found in all great men. But if the truth were known would not something just a trifle abnormal be discovered in everybody? Is it not too much to expect that the brain should always be well balanced under the terrific strain to which modern conditions of life subject it? Under a dull place the world would be if everybody always did the conventional thing!—Trenchard.

BIRTH CONTROL BEFORE WOMEN

Delegates to Federation of Women's Clubs Convention Open Program

CHAUTAQUA, N. Y. (P)—The board of directors of the General Federation of Women's clubs, in session here Tuesday, endorsed the principles of the non-partisan tariff league and decided to send to the 2,000,000 members of the federation information on the work of the tariff league. The resolution was the climax of a spirited campaign between republican and democratic women and is expected to be contested when it reaches the floor of convention during the biennial convention which opens Wednesday. The board took another action Tuesday which is expected to provoke discussion on the floor of the convention when it determined to inaugurate a campaign of education on birth control. The conduct of the campaign was given over to the public welfare committee of which Mrs. Elmer Dial of New York City is chairman.

At the request of Greek women, the board protested the placing of Greek Christian women under Turkish rule and ordered that the resolution be sent to all the allied governments.

SHERIFF'S COLLECTION OF STILLS-DRAWS CROWD

Several Citizens Take Advantage of Opportunity to Inspect Seized Outfits

Display of between 25 and 30 outfits for manufacture of moonshine whiskey captured by the sheriff's office and police during the past few months, took a considerable number of Twin Falls county citizens into the basement at the court house Tuesday afternoon.

Word spread through the court house that deputy sheriffs were sorting out and piling up the confiscated machinery for the production of illicit alcohols, and county officials were joined by their deputies and citizens who happened to be in court offices at the time in a general cordon to the basement. Persons taking advantage of privileges of visitors day to call on relatives in jail, joined in the movement, and several of the more privileged prisoners themselves found their way to the basement, some of them recording in the heap the apparatus which was taken from them when they were made prisoners.

There were at one time more than 20 persons inspecting the sheriff's spoils.

In the heap there were as many different varieties of stills as there were specimens, some of them bearing evidence of considerable ingenuity on the part of their original owners.

It was suggested that the heap should be photographed, and that in point of fact and variety it would exceed in number of similar pictures which have appeared recently in periodicals of national circulation.

HARRIET and the PIPER

When they returned from Huntington in the fall, she and Nina, at Richard's suggestion, had taken Isabelle's handsome rooms, turning both into bedrooms and sharing the dressing rooms and bath that joined them. It was here that Harriet found Nina awaiting her, still with her hat on, and still loitering with obvious discomfiture.

"Miss Harriet!" Nina said with a rush. "You are so sweet about finding like this. I wonder if you will mind taking the yellow guest room—it's really much larger—and leaving this room? You see, when I have friends—"

"Harriet, at the dressing table, had laid her hands to remove her hat. Like any general, she realized the crisis of the apparently unimportant moment and met it by instinct.

"But you have an extra bed, besides the couch, in your room, Nina?"

Nina cleared her throat, threw back her head, regarded Harriet between half-closed eyelids in a manner Harriet realized was new, and drawled:

"I know. But if you would be so very kind—"

"Do you know I'm afraid I shan't be so very kind!" Harriet said, briskly. "You're one of my dearest here, you know, little girl, and I think Daddy would prefer to have me near you. Now, if you like to ask him, perhaps he'll not agree with me. In which case I shall move immediately! But meanwhile—"

Nina's face was scarlet: she left the room abruptly. A moment or two later Harriet wandered into the adjoining room, and found her again. The younger girl was assuming a trifled and bemused expression, looking her wraps and street dress about carelessly. Harriet stood with this disapproving eyes, but said nothing. There was an unamused picture of Mrs. Tabor on the dressing table, and she found in the young girl's explanation of the strange change in Nina.

"With Ladybird's unending devotion to Ninette," read Harriet, from the inkly scrawl across the picture. "Do you call her Ladybird, Nina? You and she have become a pretty—rough friendship, haven't you?"

"Oh, something more than that!" Nina drawled in her new manner. "She's the best sort!"

"Does she have any room when she is here?" Harriet presently suggested, speculatively. "Now, my dear," she added, as Nina's quick self-conscious and hostile look gave consent. "Mrs. Tabor is too thoroughly acquainted with convention to blame you if your father keeps you under a government, but for a little while longer. You're the most precious thing your father has, Nina, and as I used to remind you years ago, you don't begin to have the restrictions that the European princesses have to bear!"

She added, and accompanied him instantly into the pantry, where they could be alone.

"It's a nuisance," said Bottomley, bitterly, "she's just had me up here again, it's really trying—that's what it is. It's trying!"

"Now, just wait one moment, Bottomley," Harriet said, soothingly. "I want to talk to you and Pilgrim. Is she in her room? Suppose we go there?"

Pleased with the consideration in her manner, the outraged Bottomley led the way. The housekeeper was sipping a solitary cup of tea: she

She nodded, and accompanied him instantly into the pantry, where they could be alone.

"What this business needs," he told himself, "is a place in the mind of the public."

And deliberately he set out to sacrifice the greater volume of his profits and invest the sacrifice into the building of good will.

He did. And to this old business, advertising was the breath of life.

For six months had not passed before the business had

Murder Charged to Showman's Wife

Mrs. Doris Brunen; Charles M. Powell; Charles M. Mohr.

Mrs. Doris Brunen, widow of John T. Brunen, owner of the "Mighty Beric & Colonel Francis Ferrar Show," has been arrested, charged with complicity in his murder. Brunen was shot to death through a window of his home at Blomville, N. J., on March 10, Charles Mohr, his brother-in-law, and Charles M. Powell, who was once conspired with Brunen's hands, were already under arrest. Powell is said now to have confessed he killed Brunen at the instigation of Mohr.

He was told to tell you that your cousin has taken a load off my soul," said Pilgrim, a gray, round-shouldered woman who had a sentimental heart, "and so I said to Mr. Carter not three days since! It's been very bad, indeed, Miss, since you went, as we was telling you a bit back, impudently, orders this way and that, confusion and what not, and Mr. Ward very wild, really very wild, and so at last Bottomley said he couldn't stand it!"

"I'm hoping he will reconsider that a glance at the face Bottomley tried to make intelligible. "For I'm going to tell you two old friends some news."

With no further preamble—Harriet announced Isabelle's death.

The arrivals were naturally shocked. There were a few moments of ejaculatory and sorrowful surprise. When this had died away, Harriet had more news.

"I'm going to tell you two something," she began. "You are the very first to know, and I know you'll be glad. Before I left the house last October, Mr. Carter did me the great honor to ask me to—marry him."

It gave her inward delight even to voice it! It made the miracle seem more real. Bottomley and Pilgrim exchanged stupefied glances in a dead silence.

"I met him at eleven o'clock today," Harriet faltered, simply, "and we drove to Glenville in Connecticut, and we were married at one o'clock."

Bottomley and Pilgrim glanced again at each other, glanced at Harriet, opened their mouths slowly. "To think of you being Mrs. Carter!" Pilgrim married in a whisper. "Oh, ha-ha-ha! You mustn't say it over!" Harriet caught both their hands. "No one must know. I only told you so that you would help me, so that you would understand! There will be no change, anywhere."

Bottomley shook a dazed head; but Pilgrim looked at the other woman with bloody eyes, and presently said:

"You'd have been a very silly girl not to take him, and—as I always tell the girls—love'll come fast enough afterward!"

The words came back to Harriet, some later, when the house was quiet, and when, comfortably wrapped in a loose silk robe, she was musing beside her fire. Nina was asleep; to Ward, who was headachy and feverish, she had paid a late visit. Madame Carter had not come down to dinner; and when Harriet had sent in a message, had asked to be excused from any calls, even from Nina and Miss Field, this evening.

Nina had continued constantly during the week. Harriet had had a terrible time with them all. And Ward and Nina and "Royce"—the name suddenly leaped between them again—had been arrested for appealing, and Daddy had threatened Nina with a boarding school, and Granny had cried.

"Where is Mr. Blomden now, Nina? Harriet had asked.

"Glad to hear you're all here planning a trip. Nina had further promised: "I shall be eighteen in February, you know, and we want to go to the world. Wouldn't it be wonderful to go with her, for she's been about fifty times!"

"Wonderful!" Harriet had been obliged to concede.

"But, dearest child, what does your father think?"

"Father—" Nina had shrugged resentfully. "I shall be of age!" she had reminded her companion.

"Yes, I know, dear, but Father's word for another three years, you know!"

"Why, Ladybird says—the girl had been ready, and had spoken with flushed cheeks—"

"After what? Well, certainly not after anything so short, simple, and efficient as that three minutes with the clergyman today. The utter unreality of that had seemed to blend with the silent, snowy day, with the dulled and dreamy condition of her own brain. Snow was falling gently when she had met Richard Carter at the office, at halfpast ten, and snow lined against the windows of the luncheon as they two, with Irving Fox, Richard's kindly, middle-aged, confidential clerk, were whirled out of the city, and on and on through the bare little wintry town. Fox had some papers to which they occasionally referred; the old clerk was the only person to congratulate Harriet warmly when the brief and by whirling business was over and she had her wedding ring. It was along with Fox that she made the return trip. Richard came back by train, saving an hour, and was at the office when they got there. Harriet did not see him again; he went in conference; and presently she quietly got back into the motorcar, and on her way to meet Nina she slipped the plain circle of gold into her handbag.

Is Money Ever "Spent" for Advertising?

A young and energetic executive took hold of a fine old retail business in New York.

"What this business needs," he told himself, "is a place in the mind of the public."

And deliberately he set out to sacrifice the greater volume of his profits and invest the sacrifice into the building of good will.

He did. And to this old business, advertising was the breath of life.

For six months had not passed before the business had grown so that the advertising cost was a smaller percentage than ever it had been, and, because of a larger volume, the shop effected economies and gave far superior service.

That was five years ago. Today a certain percentage is spent, or supposed to be spent, for advertising. But as fast as the appropriation is spent, the more the business increases; and the more that the business increases, the smaller the percentage becomes.

Opportunity May Be Seriously Impaired if August Finds Lack of Evidence of Support for Proposition Here

Idaho's opportunity for building of the American Falls reservoir may be seriously impaired if July 31 is permitted to pass without something definite to indicate popular interest here in the proposition, according to statement here Tuesday evening of Harry Dibble of American Falls, project manager for the United States reclamation service.

"The situation is just that," Mr. Dibble said. "The reclamation service will close the fiscal year July 1. The whole American Falls project involves co-operation on the part of the reclamation service and the investment of considerable of its money. This money is now available for the project, but, if at the beginning of the fiscal year there is no indication of a movement here among Idaho citizens to co-operate in the undertaking, the probabilities are strong that the reclamation service may transfer its funds to some other project."

Mr. Dibble, with R. M. Patrick, reclamation service attorney, has been in Twin Falls several days, but Tuesday evening he addressed a meeting at the home of Mrs. J. E. O'Connell, which was held at 7 o'clock. He addressed a meeting at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening and spent Tuesday visiting landowners of the west. Only Monday evening and Tuesday morning he will go to Elmer Wednesday to meet with landowners there who have requested the further information on the undertaking.

Situation Hinges Here

The situation with respect to the American Falls project has developed to an extent where every canal project in the state is being included in the proposed big irrigation district to finance the water users share in the cost of the undertaking, has completed circulation of the petition for creation of such district except the county under the Twin Falls canal system.

To meet legal requirements this petition must be signed by landowners representing one-fourth of the area under the Twin Falls canal system, or about 60,000 acres. Up to the present time, according to estimate made by Mr. Dibble, approximately 45,000 acres, including about 10,000 acres in the vicinity of Buhl signed up this week, are represented by signatures of landowners under this system, leaving about 15,000 acres yet to be signed up.

Indications point to the completion of circulation of the petition in the district by Thursday or Friday, Mr. Dibble said.

Revising Efforts

It is believed that the number of signers in the territory immediately adjacent to Twin Falls can be materially increased and Arthur L. Swin, chairman of the chamber of commerce reclamation bureau, who has been requested by the canal company to undertake this work, is making arrangements for a renewal of the campaign here. Murtagh, Hansen and Kimberly districts are said to have made the most thorough canvass of landowners in circulation of the petitions.

Mr. Dibble's resignation over the situation is he had found it here. "The problem appears to be getting out after the signatures," he said. "We have found no opposition to the plan except that resulting from misunderstanding or lack of information."

JUNIOR SWINE BREEDERS LEAD BIG EXCURSION

Organized—Visit to Purebred Herds of County Moves with Clock-like Precision and Sets New Record

With about 250 persons in more than 40 cars in line, the Twin Falls County Junior Swine Breeders' association on Tuesday conducted the largest and most successful livestock excursion in the county's history over a 50 mile trip of inspection of a number of purebred swine breeds including some 740 of the best sows and dams in the northwest and young pigs that had data to make history for the county in livestock circles next fall.

Moves With Precision

The excursionists started from the court house here promptly at 9 o'clock, and with the precision of clockwork, followed the schedule and itinerary worked out by officers and committee members of the junior breeders association. There were no accidents nor delays to mar the success of the occasion, and, although warm, was well suited for the purpose of the excursion.

Twin Falls county breeders, both juniors and seniors, made up the majority of the excursion's numbers, but there were included also delegations of 40 members from Jerome county, 15 from Gooding county, and five from Cassia county, along with E. B. Deacon, Boise, state club leader; Miss Ira Hines, Gooding, district club leader, and W. E. Meyer, O. E. McConnell and J. W. Barber, county agricultural agents respectively of Jerome, Gooding and Cassia counties.

Owners Talk on Herds

At each of the stops along the route the owner of the swine inspected there by the excursionists spoke briefly on the lineage of his animals, cost of feeding and kindred subjects. Milo Davis, president of the junior breeders' association, was master of ceremonies for the day.

Demonstrations in trimming of piglets to assist in development of pastures, conducted at the Davis farm by L. S. Otto, John Owens, R. E. Broadard and W. M. Sanchez, were the center of great interest; while a judging contest at the Rambo farm by L. S. Otto and Milo Davis, each placing two animals, was one of the interesting features of the event.

Refreshments Feature

Twenty gallons of ice cream donated by Twin Falls creameries and an equal quantity of lemonade were consumed with the picnic lunch spread on the grass at Davis grove at the noon hour, and along the route the excursionists were refreshed with ice water at the Rambo farm and with lead-leaf at the farm of Dr. R. S. Arnes.

The excursionists were guests of O. J. Kellina at Buhl at a showing of motion pictures of prize winning animals at the last national swine show.
