STATE RECORD EQUALLED

Prince Loren Wins $5,000 Paper Mills Purse but is Forced to Make Fast Time

KALAMAZOO, July 19, (AP)—Prince Loren, winner of the $5000 Paper Mills purse was obliged to equal the state trotting record of 2:03 3/4, made by Hotel Trank in 1916, to defeat the Great Volo, the favorite in the first heat. The double-gaited champion won against the other two miles and won with the Cox colt a close second in each heat. The three miles were made in the average time of 2:35.

Scott Stash and a head start defeating Hal G. in the 2:17 pace. The Cox entry finished first in the initial heat but was obliged to follow the Canadian mare under the wire in the second. Cox came back and won the third heat in easy fashion with Eata G. finishing way back.

Parker Boy, the favorite in the 2nd pace, had a hard time finishing ahead of Peter Hanley. The latter entry was first under the wire in the second heat, but Berry in winning finishes managed to land the other two.

The 2:14 trot provided the upset of the afternoon. Bill Shuren, the Nova Scotia dash maker, his first start in two years on the Grand Circuit, was the favorite. The $2000 performer finished fifth in the second and third heat, after which he was sent to the barn by Tommy Murphy.

Tommy Todd, the Canadian mare, finished behind Tolson's Hills in the first heat and then came back and took the next two.

Why Be Deprived of the Joy of Electric Cooking?

The Electric Range is one of the modern time and labor saving devices that turns the task of keeping house into a pleasure. It is as essential in the home as the adding machine or typewriter are in the busy office. It means greater efficiency, better food and a great saving of time.

Electric Cooking Is More Economical

The cost of electric fuel is low and there is never a shortage of it. Another material saving is realized, too, in the saving of food—there is so much less shrinkage of meats that are cooked electrically.

But, perhaps the thing that every woman appreciates most of all is the coolness and cleanliness of the Electric Range. Even on the hottest day, your kitchen will be as cool as any other room in the house.

NEW SERVICE TO GATHER DATA OF FARM INTEREST

Livestock Reporting Program for Live-stock Meeting Adopted at Meeting Attended by Live-stock Men of Many States

DENVER, July 19. (AP)—A tentative program for the new Livestock Reporting service for range states under the United States bureau of agricultural economics and agricultural statistics of the department of agriculture was drafted at the close Tuesday night of a two-day session of statisticians, bureau chiefs, representatives of agricultural and livestock men from virtually every state west of the Missouri river. The new reporting service is one provided by recent act of congress. Details for the manner of gathering and disseminating information by the bureau are now being worked out.

Reports, made by month and an annual report, are proposed. The annual report in January will show the head of livestock on farms and ranches, by kind and the average farm value for each class. This is a continuation of the annual report heretofore made by the bureau, but giving further details.

Estimate of number of cattle and sheep (including lambs) to feed this year. Final estimate of calf and lamb crop in range states for preceding year. Revised estimate of wool production for preceding year.

Monthly reports will show railroad movement of stock, pastures and conditions: condition of livestock, expressed in percentage of normal, and available contract prices in territory where there are no central market reports.

Interesting Figures Presented. The July report will estimate the number of grass-fed cattle coming to market from Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Montana, Wyoming, Oregon, Washington, Western North and South Dakota; losses of cattle and sheep from all causes during preceding six months; number of California and Idaho lambs shipped; lamb crops of range states, and average weight per fleece and preliminary estimate of wool production. Information relating to market conditions, supply and demand for livestock and general statistics in the livestock industry will form the basis of the work.

ACCUSED WOMAN IS SILENT

Mrs. Clara Phillips is Warned to Keep Close Mouth on Subject of Killing

LOS ANGELES, July 19. (AP)—An admonition not to talk was imposed today upon Mrs. Clara Phillips, alleged slayer of Mrs. Albert Meadows, by her attorneys. The latter said they had advised their client not to say anything except her relatives unless the lawyers should appear in court. Mrs. Phillips have told her to say absolutely nothing to anyone about the case, "up to the time of the attorneys' advice."

Mrs. Phillips will appear to plead tomorrow in superior court. The attorneys said they expected to present a demurrer to the indictment and if they were overruled, would enter a plea of not guilty.

Mrs. Peggy Caffee, eye-witness of the tragedy, will accompany Mrs. Phillips when leaving for the Meadows home to death with a hammer, was in seclusion today, her whereabouts being kept a close secret by officials.

The identity of another important prosecution witness was being kept a secret. This witness is a lawabiding citizen who was present at the investigation when she sold a hammer the day before the slaying to a woman answering the description of Mrs. Phillips.

The subject, according to deputy sheriff, said the woman who bought the hammer "huffed" it and asked: "Do you think it is heavy enough to kill a man?"

The clerk, thinking this a joke, smiled and answered: "Yes, it is, if you hit him hard enough with it."

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, July 19.—Miss June Andrews of Rigby, Idaho, sister to Miss Genevieve Andrews, a student at the University of Idaho, has been secured as university nurse and instructor in home nursing, according to announcement from the president's office.

Miss Andrews replaces Mrs. Velma V. Franklin, resigned.

The health for at the university will be increased to $2,000 a year, beginning this fall. President A. H. Upham said the financial condition of the health department required such an increase.

NO TRACE OF MISSING MAN

Aviator Lost in Alaska Not Located Notwithstanding Thorough Search of the Country

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, July 19. (AP)—No trace has been found of Clarence O. Frost, the aviator, who started from Eagle for Fairbanks Sunday and has not been heard of since. Searching parties made up of Fairbanks citizens, including skilled mushers and old time prospectors, have scoured two hundred miles of country between the two cities without result. Grave fears for Frost's safety are entertained, so the season is the worst ever known here for missing men and Frost was without food or a blanket.

Perhaps that nickel you give in church makes you feel good. Make it a dollar and you will feel better.
 Money given to a church is well spent—it returns to you many fold.
 Think of the good old days when you were a child in Sunday school, and of the lessons you learned and have never forgotten.
 Others contributed the money then—it is your turn now.
 The church and the Sunday school are doing the same for your children and for all of the children of the community that other churches did for you when you were young.
 Churches can not live on nickels, and communities cannot prosper without churches.

IT TAKES NERVE

According to George Blackstone Irving, professional splitter and conversationalist recent speaker at the anniversary of the recent strip-mining massacre at Herrin, Illinois, did not kill their twenty-seven old victims maliciously—presumably they did it playfully, in a spirit of mischief as a result of mere exuberance of boyish spirits, set in motion by the thought that they were going to lose some of their schoolhouses, city halls and public parks and libraries.

"It is a new and interesting viewpoint, that a breach of law involving the slaying of a murderous attack in which over a score of men were shot down in cold blood is to be condoned on the ground that 'they didn't do it maliciously.' Just how they did it Mr. George Blackstone Irving did not say but he emphasized the fact that there wasn't anything malicious about it.

This reference by the speaker is a first class example of warped thinking. That there can ever be ground for apology for the commission of whole sale murder, no matter what the cause, is unthinkable. That Twin Falls men and women require to be told how to regard an outrage such as the Herrin mining massacre takes more nerve than most people possess.

As to the rest of the lecture there were glittering generalities in quantity and much good advice but as far as any practicable plan for civic development goes, if the lecture contained such a thing it was so thoroughly buried under the avalanche of verbiage as to be lost to the audience.

EVERYBODY MAY OWN ONE

Automobile production reached the peak in June. Advice is that the output of medium and high priced cars will now decline.

That is not to be taken, however, that there will be any less cars made. One concern, that means to contest the field with another that has long enjoyed a monopoly in cheapness has just bought a complete plant, ready for operation, and will at once start out with a capacity of 300,000 a year.

When the figures are discussed there is the usual assertion that horses will become an unknown species, but experience stands solidly against the prediction. When the automobile ceased to be a curiosity this claim was first made and it continued to be heralded and emphasized as the cars came more and more into use, but the horse is still with us and promises to ever continue. The nobility of all beasts has uses where no machine can take his place and his kind is more numerous and commands a higher price than even when the automobile became first generally adopted.

CHAPTER VIII

The Indian boys were plunging into the river when Erskine appeared at the opening of the old chief's tent next morning, and when they came out led by the boy who had been with him he had forgotten the custom and he shrugged his shoulders at his mother's inquiring look. But the next morning when Crooked Lightning's son Black Wolf passed him with a ranting smile he changed his mind.

"Wait!" he said. He turned, striped quickly to a breach-hole, pointed to a beech down and across the river, challenging Black Wolf to a race. To either they plunged in and the boys' white body clove through the water like the arrow that he was. At the beach he whipped about to meet the angry face of his competitor ten yards behind. Half-way back he was more than twenty yards ahead when he heard a strangled cry. Perhaps it was a ruse to cover the humiliation of defeat, but when he saw black rushing for the river bank he knew that the boy who had been with him, the boy who Black Wolf, so he turned, caught the lad by the topknot, towed him shoreward, dropped him contemptuously, and stalked back to his tent. His mother had built a fire for him, and the chief looked pleased and proud.

"My spirit shall not pass," he said, and straightaway he rose and dressed, and to the astonishment of the tribe emerged from his tent and walked firmly about the village until he found Crooked Lightning.

"You would have Black Wolf chief," he said. "Very well. We shall see who can show the better right—your son or White Arrow—a challenge that sent Crooked Lightning to brood awhile in his tent, and then secretly to consult the prophet.

Later the old chief talked to White Arrow. The prophet, he said, had been with them but a little while. He claimed that the Great Spirit had made revelations to him alone. What manner of man was he, questioned the boy—did he have ponies and spears and jerked meat?

"He is poor," said the chief. "He has only a wife and children and the tribe feeds him."
 White Arrow himself granted—it was the first sign of his old life stirring within him.

"Why should the Great Spirit pick out such a man to favor?" he asked. The chief shook his head.

"Crooked Lightning has found much favor with him," and in turn with the others, so that I have not thought it wise to tell Crooked Lightning that he must go. He has stirred up the young men against me—and against you. They were waiting for me to die." The boy looked thoughtful, and the chief waited. He had not reached the aim of his speech and there was no need to put it in words, for White Arrow understood.

"Will you show them," he said quietly. When the two appeared outside many braves had gathered, for the whole village knew what was in the wind. Should it be a horse race first? Crooked Lightning looked at the boy's thoughtful and shook his head. Indian ponies would as well try to outrun an arrow, a bullet, a hurricane.

A foot-race? The old chief smiled when Crooked Lightning shook his head and said he would in the tribe even could match the speed that gave the lad his name. The bow and arrow, the rifle, the tomahawk? Tomahawks and bows and arrows were brought.

"Go get 'em, Hutch" coming to the bluffs next week—now.

out Black Wolf was hit, a head shorter, but stocky and powerfully built. White Arrow's arrows—had strengthened, but he had scarcely had bow and tomahawk since he had left the tribe. He had the power but not the practice, and Black Wolf was with great ease. When they came to the life, Black Wolf was out of the game, for never a bullet-eyed did White Arrow miss.

"Tomorrow," said the old chief, "they shall hunt. Each shall take his bow and the same number of arrows at sunrise and return at sunset. The next day they shall do the same with the rifle. It is enough for today." The first snow fell that night, and at dawn the two lads started out, each with a bow and a dozen arrows. Erskine's woodcraft had not suffered, and the night's story of the wilderness was as plain to his keen eyes as a printed page. For two hours he tramped swiftly, but never sign of deer, elk, bear or buffalo.

And then an hour later he heard a snort from a thick copse and the crash of an unseen body in flight through the brush, and he leaped after its tracks.

Black Wolf came in at sunset with a bear cub which he had found feeding apart from his mother. He was triumphant, and Crooked Lightning was scornful when White Arrow appeared empty-handed. His left wrist was bruised and swollen, and there was a gnash the length of his forehead. "Follow my tracks back," he said, "until you find a deer. A bear, a buffalo, two Indians bounded away and in an hour returned with a buck. "I ran him down," said White Arrow, "and killed him with the knife. He horned me," and went into his tent.

The bruised wrist and wounded forearm made no matter, for the rifle was the weapon next day—but White Arrow went another way to look for game. Each had twelve bullets. Black Wolf came in with a deer and one bullet. White Arrow told them where they could find a deer, a bear, a buffalo and an elk, and he showed eight bullets in the palm of his hand. And he noted now that the Indian girl was always an intent observer of each contest, and that she always went swiftly back to her tent to tell his deeds to the white woman within.

There was a feast and a dance that night, and Kaho-to had come to his father and left the lad, young as he was, a chief, but not yet was he ready, and Crooked Lightning, too, bided his time.
