WILL CLOSE HISTORIC ALLEY. London Pathway Which Figures in Pops' Diary Gives Way to March of Improvements.

Poppe's Head Alley, a turning off Cornhill, a picture of which appeared in the Times on April 11, will shortly disappear. Lloyd's Bank is going to rebuild its premises at the end of Lombard street, between that street and Cornhill, and to make this possible Poppe's Head alley will have to be closed and another thoroughfare constructed in its place, says the London Times.

The alley, which dates back to the days of Henry VI, and is named after a noted tavern, is mentioned several times in the "Diary of Samuel Pepys" in his time the footway was famous for its cutters. Pepys reports that he went to Poppe's Head and "bought an agate, braded knife, which cost me 6c." Another day some one took him into the tavern and gave him wine, when they discussed affairs of state. "So home" writes Pepys again, "on my way calling at Poppe's Head alley and there brought me a pair of scissors and a brass square."

In 1646 it is recorded, wine was being sold at the tavern at a penny a pint. It was at the Poppe's Head tavern that Quin killed Bowen, a first prize actor, in a duel. The first print sellers in London are said to have opened their shops in the alley.

OAKLEY DEFEATS HANSEN. Home Run in Sixth Turns Tide in Favor of Home Team and Game Ends Decisively.

OAKLEY, July 24. (Special to The News).—The Oakley baseball team won from the Hansen ball team Monday afternoon by the score of 8 to 5.

For six innings the local team was able to do a thing with the offerings of "Smiling" Walter of the Hansen club, the visitor leading with a 4 to 2 score. In the last of the sixth Henry Riley came into prominence by sending out a long home run with the bases full. This seemed to take the heart out of the Hansens, as Oakley was able to score four more runs before the game ended.

Fuller, the lad who pitched such a fine game for Hansen Sunday against Twin Falls, took the mound in the seventh and was hit freely.

Hughes, right fielder of the Hansen team, came into the hero class with a terrific home run, in the sixth. The folding fence was furnished by "Slim" Quinn, left fielder of the local team, who pulled down Chamberlain's long drive in deep left, robbing the visiting shortstop of a home run.

LEONARD IS CONFIDENT. Fighter Begins Tapering Off Training for Bout With Philadelphia Boxer.

BUD'S LAKE, N. J., (P)—Benny Leonard believes he is at the biggest level he will attain as a boxer. He writes Lew Tendler a letter much like Rocky Kansas, who was easy for the champion a few weeks ago. He is training as assiduously as he trained for his important match of the next 10 days. "I feel today, as I feel by the way, that I will knock out the Philadelphia before the eighth round of their lightweight championship fight in Jersey City Thursday night."

Leonard today began tapering off for the bout with Tendler. When he finished the champion said he never had a thorough workout on Wednesday through light exercises on Wednesday and do a little read work.

"I'm right hand the champion. I feel that I am at the height of my power—that I will never be better than I am now. This is the best year of my life. I don't know why I have so many bouts this summer and why I am going to have several more after departing of Tendler. I never have 'alibi' but I don't even that I was worried or out form."

"Now Tendler is a good boy and a good boxer. It's his young and uprightness that makes the champion have so many fights made for southpaw. You know I violated all the cautions of boxing when I began fighting with a right hand, right hand that works like a left jab. But that is why I always have it easy with southpaw."

"I am not over-confident and I realize I'll have to fight. I'm tired the hard."

Leonard says he hasn't changed his style for Tendler and this sparring

Machine Can Tell Tobacco From Rope

Here is an ingenious machine that smokes four cigars at a time and can tell the difference between various kinds of tobacco. The cigars must be tested, and there are too many for a man to do the job, so this machine was built. Currents of air are smoked through the glass tubes, at about the human rate of speed. The ash from the cigar is then given the chemist to analyze. This instrument is owned by the Department of Agriculture.

Partridge Chicks Put in Appearance in New Habitation

Broods of downy chicks have made their appearance in the district adjacent to Twin Falls where Hungarian partridges sent here last spring through the state game department, are establishing their new habitations. The birds, both old and young, were sent here upon application of sportsmen in this vicinity through the Twin Falls Park and Game association, which Monday made an appeal to the general public to assist the association in its efforts to protect the birds with especial vigilance during the infancy of the chicks.

The home of Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Grooms, on Poplar avenue, was the scene of a merry gathering, Saturday evening, when the children of the neighborhood and other playmates assembled at a party given for the two little daughters of the house, Janette and Allison, in honor of the birthday of the latter. The party was held on the lawn, and were happily spent playing games on the lawn. Later dainty refreshments were served, among them being a lovely string of cake surrounded with the required number of candles. Miss Helen Warner and Miss Fay Peters, assisted Mrs. Grooms. The guests numbered twenty-five.

Mrs. H. H. Holstrom gave a charming dinner party for her daughter, Dorothy, Monday evening, at her home on Eleventh avenue east. The guests were seated at two tables, a color scheme of pink and white, being carried out in all of the decorative details. The centerpiece was pink and white sweet peas, combined with gypsophila. Courage bouquets of sweet peas in the same colors were placed at each cover, and the nut cups were in pink and white. After dinner the party attended the Orpheum theater. Covers were laid for twelve, the guests being Alma Osgood, Mary Melton, Anabel Ancors, Mary and Jane Ercovot, Julia Hunter, La Mull, Dorothy Channel, Hazel Grimes, Elsie Anderson, Davis Graves and Dorothy Holstrom. There was a large attendance, members of the parish taking with them baskets filled with all the "goodies" of the season, so that the inner man was thoroughly satisfied. There was a short bull game between two local varsity games for the children. While a general good time was had socially, quantities of ice cream and lemonade added to the pleasure of the day.

Friends of Joseph A. Swift, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Swift of this city, will be interested to learn of his recent marriage to Miss Margaret Leuchel of Wallace. Mr. Swift is a graduate of the Twin Falls high school and attended the University of Idaho, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. Mrs. Swift was also a student at Idaho and a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. The young people expect to make their home in Boise.

A bill embodying the ideas of the aircraft producers was recently passed by the senate and is now before the house. Sooner or later regulatory action is certain.

In every other form of passenger carrying for hire the federal, state and local governments co-operate to enforce certain standards of safety and to insure financial responsibility adequate to safeguard the victim of an accident, or his family.

Passenger flying is yet only a novelty, but promises at no distant date to become an established and important method of transportation.

AT THE BRINK... There comes a time in the life of every man when he pauses upon the brink.

If it is face to face with the eternal mystery of his career, when another step forward may mean riches, yet wealth that is stained by the odium of deliberate and intentional wrong.

If he takes the forward step his fate is sealed. If any repent of his act and make restitution, but the memory can not be eradicated from the minds of his generation.

If he retraces his steps and sets a different course he may not achieve the riches that are all but within his grasp. But he retains honor, which wealth can not buy; respect, which integrity alone will command; and contentment, which is the heritage of a clear conscience.

The friend of today whom you admire and welcome to your home did not respond to the stained handshakes of a glittering future. He chose the path of honor.

The man whom you shun, the one to whom your door is ever closed, took the forward step.

Time and repentance may cleanse his soul, but an eternity can not clear his name.

TEXAS SEES THE LIGHT... Texas witnessed something familiar in the flogging of 10 men employed in a railroad job since the strike began, but the sequel was along a different line.

A long time Erskine sat motionless, wondering what all this meant. He had never liked nor trusted Grey; he believed he would have trouble with him some day, but he had other enemies and he did not feel toward them as he did toward this dandy mixing up this beautiful broad path.

When a little straggled turned back along the path, Erskine whistled to him and nipped at him with playful restlessness as though eager to be on his way to the man and his good swills with one arm across his saddle. Once he reached upward to untie the reins, and with another grunt straddled back and went rapidly up the path. Grey and Barbara had disappeared, but a tall youth who sat behind one of the big pillars saw him coming and rose, bewildered, but not for long. Each recognized the other swiftly, and Hugh came with swift courtesy forward. Erskine smiled:

"You don't know me?" Hugh bowed:

"Quite well." The woodman drew himself up with quick breath—puffing without, flaming within—but before he could speak there was a quick step and an astonished cry within the hall and Harry sprang out.

"Erskine! Erskine!" he shouted, and he leaped down the steps with both hands outstretched. "You here! You—you old Indian—how did you get here!" He caught Erskine by both hands and then fell to shaking him by the shoulders. "Where's your horse?"

"He's hitched at the landing," Erskine had to answer, and Harry looked puzzled:

"The landing! Why, what—?" He wheeled and pointed to a darky.

hear and see him through the latticed blinds.

"Hugh," said the lad in a low, cold voice, "I am not here, and if you don't believe me, you can see that you're wrong."

"You are right," was the answer; "but you wait until Uncle Harry gets home."

The matter was quite plain to Erskine within. The presence of Dane Grey made it plain, and an emotion dipped both hands into the cold water he made up his mind to an understanding with that young gentleman that would be complete and final. And so he was ready when he and Harry went on the porch again, and Barbara and Grey emerged from the rose bushes and came slowly up the path.

Harry looked worried, but Erskine sat still, with a faint smile at his mouth and in his eyes. Barbara saw his first and she did not rush forward. Instead, she stopped, with wide eyes, a stifled cry, and lifting one hand toward her heart. Grey saw, too, flushed rather painfully, and calmed himself. Erskine had swung down the steps.

"Why, how I changed so much!" he cried. "Hugh didn't seem to know me, either." His voice was gay, friendly, even affectionate, but his eyes danced with strange lights that puzzled the girl.

"Of course I know you," she faltered, pausing a little, but gathering herself rather haughtily—a fact that Erskine seemed not to notice. "You took me by surprise and you have changed—but I don't know how much. The significance of this too seemed to pass Erskine by, for he bent over Barbara's hand and kissed it.

"Never to you, my dear cousin," he said gallantly, and then he bowed to the girl.

"Early Morn'g—a half-breed—is he dancing still simply?" "Oh!" and Harry questioned no further.

"Early Morn'g was the best-looking Indian I've ever saw," said Erskine, and he brayed. "For the first time I've danced at Indian." "You saved my life," Erskine went on gravely, "and mine is here whenever she needs it."

Harry reached over and gripped his hand.

"I can't see one word but have been said of Grey's unstaid, but Barbara's cool disdain made him shamed and hot, and in her eyes was the sorrow of her injustice to Erskine. In the hallway she excused herself with a courtesy, Hugh went to the stables, Hugh disappeared for a moment, and the two were left alone. With smoldering fire Erskine turned to Grey.

"It seems you have been amusing yourself with my kinspeople at my expense," said Erskine, and he laughed merrily. Erskine went on:

"I have known some lads who were not covards."

"No—nor you."

"You remember a promise I made you once?"

"Twice," corrected Erskine, Grey's eyes flashed upward to the crossed rapiers on the wall.

"Precisely," answered Erskine, "and with that the gentleman was dumfounded in to put it mildly—this wild Indian playing the courtier with exquisite impudence and doing it well! Harry seemed like to burst with indignation, and Barbara was sorely put to it to keep her eye. The great dinner bell from the main hall boomed its summons.

"Come on," called Harry. "I imagine you're hungry, cousin." "I've had nothing to eat since—since early morn'g," Barbara's eyes flashed upward and Grey was plainly started. Was there a slight stress on those two words? Erskine's face was as expressive as a house. Harry had bolted into the hall.

Mrs. Dale was visiting down the river, so Barbara sat in her mother's place, with Erskine at her right, Grey to her left, Hugh next to him, and Harry at the head. Harry did not wait long.

"Now, you White Arrow, you Big Chief, tell us the story. Where have you been, what have you been doing, and what do you mean to do? I've heard a good deal, but I want it all." Grey began to look uncomfortable, and so, in truth, did Barbara.

the Indians. I told the council what I had told the old chief." He paused.

Barbara's face was pale and she was looking at Hugh. He had not looked at Grey, but Harry was looking at him covertly and he did not look comfortable. Erskine paused.

"What?" shouted Harry. "You told both that you would fight with the Indians and that you would not fight with you?"

Erskine smiled.

"Well, here I am. I jumped over the heads of the outer ring and I'm freely heard me calling him. I had left his halter loose. He broke away. I jumped on him, and you know how long he can shoot fire!"

"Didn't they catch at you?" "Of course," again he paused.

"What?" said Harry. "Impatiently, 'I went back to the camp. Crooked Lightning followed me and they tied me and were going to burn me at the stake.'"

"Good heavens!" breathed Barbara. "Erskine had swung down the steps."

"The Indian girl, Early Morn, slipped under the tent and cut me," said Erskine, and he smiled. "You know nothing can catch fire?"

"Erskine had swung down the steps. Barbara was on the porch again, and tears: Harry was triumphant, and Grey was patiently flushed.

"And you want to know what I am going to do now?" Erskine went on. "I'll talk with Capt. George Rogers and Clark—with what command are you, Mr. Grey?"

"That's a secret," he smiled cooly. "I'll talk you later, and Barbara, with an inward sigh of relief, was behind, but would not leave them behind.

"But the white woman?" questioned Harry. "Why doesn't she leave the Indians?"

"Early Morn—a half-breed—is he dancing still simply?" "Oh!" and Harry questioned no further.

"Early Morn was the best-looking Indian I've ever saw," said Erskine, and he brayed. "For the first time I've danced at Indian." "You saved my life," Erskine went on gravely, "and mine is here whenever she needs it."

Harry reached over and gripped his hand.

POSSIBLY SLIM WAS RIGHT

Come to Think of It, Mia Inamorata Hardly Displays the Ardent Love He Had Looked For.

"Punny how a guy makes up his mind, to enlist," remarked Slim, the company clerk, to a bunch of his buddies in the lunchhouse.

"What made you decide to take the big plunge?" asked a buddy.

"It was this way," explained Slim. "I had a little squabble with the girl, and I told her I was going to join the marines. Just to make it sound as if I meant business I wrote a letter to the nearest recruiting station, and before she knew it she was waiting for me."

"Did she say anything?" asked the buddy.

"Not a word. So I went out and posted the letter. A little later I got the answer back, saying I could enlist for two, three or four years, and it shows it to the girl. There you are, says I, 'If you don't treat me different from now on, I'll go straight out and enlist for two years.'"

"Two years," says she. "Two years?" asks he. "I don't be a piker, Slim, why don't you make it four?"

"Come to think of it," concluded Slim. "I don't think that Jane was as business about me as I suspected." The Leatherneck.

HOSE PURCHASE BY CITY LEADS TO BARRAGE

Failure to Permit Local Man to Bid for Business is Basis of Clash Between Mayor and Commissioner All

Storm clouds loomed over the Twin Falls city commission meeting in the proceedings Monday night when Commissioner S. A. All pleaded his colleagues on the defective with the statement, in relation to the contract last week for new hose for the fire department, that "it seems to me that the city has contracted to pay $300 more for the hose than it need have paid and a local man has been denied an opportunity to furnish the hose."

Commissioner J. E. Roberts was placed in a position where explanation was demanded. Mayor Van Deusen stepped to the defense of the commission's action in the matter and sharp interchanges between the mayor and Commissioner All ensued the proceedings.

Introducing the subject with the statement that it seemed to him that an "unfortunate" mistake had been made and if we are to blame we should correct it," Commissioner All said that he had inquired before the award of the contract for the hose for the city if there were any other bidders and had been informed that there were none. Subsequently, he said, he learned that the contractor, Tom H. H. H., had bid and had been given to understand that the matter would be held open until he could present his figures.

Melgs Quotes Less

The contract was awarded for hose to cost $130 a foot and Melgs, who was asked to state his case before the commission, said that his firm would supply the hose himself for $100 a foot and the type and make already in use here for $106 a foot. Melgs said that Commissioner All had told him five days before the contract was awarded the commission would take no action until after his bid was received.

Mayor Melgs said that the matter would be taken up Monday. Roberts said when Melgs had finished presentation of his case, understood that he could not give terms of the city needed of the hose and hadn't the money to pay himself.

Melgs replied that he had told the commission that he would meet competitor's terms.

Is Standard Hose

The mayor, at this point, declared with considerable emphasis, "The hose that we bought is with the best of the Idaho-Bolsa and Wilson. It is standard hose. It is better than any other on Twin Falls. I shan't enter into the merits of the other hose; but when we have reliable information from other cities that the other hose is better than any salesman can give." The mayor then handed to the city clerk a communication which he said was a communication of the contract for the hose.

"Did you write to Bols for information?" All asked the mayor.

"No," the mayor said.

"You took it from the salesman?"

"Yes."

With increasing heat, the mayor said that he had voted for the purchase of the firm that landed the order. "It might have been wise to have bought a cheaper grade of hose— one for cents less than the one we got. Lasting quality and the recommendations we got."

Lots of Recommendations

"The world is full of recommendations," All observed.

"The incident was closed with the mayor declaring that he would like to write and verify the contract, but at liberty to do so and if we have been misled we will rescind the contract. For myself, I have nothing to say. I am satisfied. If no evidence of fraud is presented at the end of a week's time, the contract goes."

The mayor then turned to the city clerk and said that he was very friendly, but that he was not a party to the contract.

Wolfehand to Make Audit

Contract for an audit of Twin Falls municipal affairs covering a two year period was awarded by unanimous vote of the commissioners to John Wolfehand, Twin Falls. The contract was between Wolfehand and the agency of Clarence Van Deusen, former state auditor, a third bid, submitted by Edwin A. White, Twin Falls, was rejected because of the bidder's inability to enter on the work before October 1.

"Van Deusen offered a guarantee that the work would not cost the city more than $2,000, and estimated the cost at $1,800.

Wolfehand offered no guarantee but estimated the cost at $2,000. He advised the commissioners, verbally, that he would install also a perpetual inventory system; that he had worked for Van Deusen for a long time; that on occasion, after the award had been made, to state that Commissioner All had

AMERICAN FALLS PROJECT HANGS IN BALANCE NOW

Representative Smith Tells Klamathians Funds Provided May Go to Another State if Contracts Are Not Validated

Congress is definitely committed to the American Falls reservoir project, but failure of Idaho states to validate their contracts for supplemental water supplies from this source within the next six months probably will cause the undertaking to be held in abeyance for ten years, Representative Addison P. Smith, republican of Klamath county, told the chamber at their weekly luncheon meeting here Monday.

Mr. Smith was introduced by M. J. Swartz, president of the club and "the man who is going to get the money for the American Falls project," Harry Dibble, of American Falls, project manager of the club and "the man who will own the project," and Mr. Fleener, "the man who will build it."

Explains Financial Status

Referring to Mr. Dibble's statement that only about $25,000 has been made available by the reclamation service for the American Falls project this year and that the state of Idaho has advanced on a minor contract in connection with the project the statement that "this is no way commits the government to the project," Representative Smith said that the $25,000 was to be considered as an appropriation, and that Idaho's obligation to contribute the balance of the $250,000 for this project.

The larger amount is now available for construction of the project, Representative Smith said, but before construction will be begun by the government there must be a definite indication on the part of the people who will be benefited by reclamation of the water rights to fulfill their contract obligations.

Unless such an indication is forthcoming, Representative Smith said, this appropriation is likely to be diverted to other reclamation projects outside Idaho.

Idaho Gets Lion's Share

Almost twice as much money as has been turned into the reclamation fund from Idaho lands has been expended by the reclamation service in construction of Idaho projects, Representative Smith said. "The state of Idaho is causing representatives of neighboring states as well as those of the coast to oppose further appropriation of funds for Idaho projects," he said, because it has had more available land with water for its reclamation than any of the other states.

"Both Mr. Dibble and Mr. Pioneer emphasized the desirability of endorsement at forthcoming elections by the voters of the Snake River irrigation district and issuance of its bonds to meet payments on contracts entered into by canal companies with the reclamation service."

ANOTHER STEP IS TAKEN FOR RESERVOIR PROJECT

Twin Falls County Commissioners Issue Notice of Hearing on Petition

Notice of a hearing, Monday, Aug. 28, on a petition for organization of the proposed Snake River irrigation district for the American Falls reservoir project was issued Monday by the board of Twin Falls county commissioners after formal presentation before the board of the petition for this purpose which was filed in the office of the clerk some weeks ago.

Lands in seven Idaho counties are included within the boundaries of the proposed district, and invitations will be extended to the commissioners of each of the other counties to attend and participate in the hearing, which will be held here.

Objects to the formation of the district on proposed boundary lines and petitions for alteration or amendment of the original petition will be received at this hearing.

At the conclusion of the hearing it is expected that the commissioners will call an election for submission of a proposition for creating the district to vote of the resident landholders.

General description of the lands to be included in the proposed district is set forth in the notice of hearing, designating the lands under the following canal systems:

"Twin Falls Canal company, Twin Falls North Side Canal company, Aberdeen-Springfield Canal company, Woodville Canal company, Martin Canal company, and the Snake River Canal company."

Guy Fleener, managing director of the Idaho Reclamation association, and Harry Dibble, project manager for the federal reclamation service, were present when the petition was formally presented to the board Monday.

BURGULARS FAIL TO CRACK SAFE

Break Off Handle and Combination Dial but Take Nothing from Laundry

Using a sledge hammer in an effort to break into the safe at the Troy Laundry and Dry Cleaning company establishment at the corner of Second and Broadway streets, burglars Saturday night broke off and carried away the handle and combination dial on the door but failed in the attempt to reach about $100 in cash and $300 in checks on the inside and also overlooked, Manager Sandholts said, a larger sum of money in a desk within a few minutes of the safe.

"The visit of the intruders was discovered by the manager Sunday morning. The intruders effected their entrance into the building through a transom at the rear after failing to break the lock on the front door.

"Failure of sheriff's office operatives to discover traces of finger prints on the safe, indicates, in the opinion of the laundry manager, that the attempt was made by experienced men, who obtained the lock triges before leaving. The officers on the contrary, being able to work of amateurs.

"The safe was a combination safe, a torch was required on the part of the laundrymen, to enter the safe.

J. W. TAYLOR

Candidate for Republican Nominations for Prosecuting Attorney

Mr. Taylor has for the past six years carried on a very successful practice in the district court of this county and in the supreme court of the state. His friends point to the fact that during this time no attorney in the county has won a larger percentage of his criminal cases. As a recent term of the district court here, with a considerable number of criminal cases were tried, Mr. Taylor was the only defending attorney to secure a verdict of "not guilty" for a client. He is pledged to a program of impartial enforcement of the law against all offenders; and the greatest economy that is possible without loss of efficiency—adv.
