SIMPLE SERVICE MARKS FUNERAL OF NORTHCLIFFE

Foremost British Publisher is Laid at Rest in Presence of Notable Gathering of Kingdom's First Citizens

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP)—Viscount Northcliffe, England's foremost publisher, was laid at rest today in St. Marybone cemetery in Finchley with services of surpassing simplicity, beauty and solemnity.

The funeral ceremonies in Westminster Abbey were devoid of all pomp usually associated with the last rites to the country's national figure. The ritual consisted of the recitation of Biblical verses and the Psalms, the singing of Lord Northcliffe's favorite hymn and the playing of the "Dead March in Saul," and Chopin's funeral march.

In contrast to previous funerals of illustrious men, there was not a military, naval or other uniform visible. The vast interior of the church was a broad expanse of somber black. Men high in the world of state, church, diplomacy and journalism were present.

Several hundred British newspaper men marched to the cathedral to pay silent tribute to the man who had done so much to raise their status and add to their prestige. American journalists who had enjoyed Northcliffe's acquaintance filled the front rows in the cathedral and joined with their British comrades of the "fourth estate" in offering homage.

No Honorary Pallbearers. There were no honorary pallbearers. The massive open coffin, covered with a pall of silk and gold, was borne into the edifice by eight attendants of the abbey. The funeral cortège filed past the tomb of the Unknown British Soldier on its way to the Catafalque while the organist of the abbey intoned the stately sentences of the burial ritual. "I am the resurrection and the life."

The casket was followed by Lord Northcliffe's widow, who, bowed with emotion, was supported by Lord Rothermere and Cecil Northcroft, brothers of the journalist. Then came relatives and close friends. George Harvey, American ambassador, occupied a pew near the choir. Northcliffe's widow, the most pathetic figure in the cathedral, was Lord Northcliffe's disabled brother, Vivian Harcourt, who was seated to the altar in an invalid's chair.

Sub-Deacon Canon Carnegie's words, "We bring you to the end like a soldier in the field and you must put on immortality," seemed to impart prophetic significance to the obsequies.

Pass Lincoln's Statute.

As the coffin was borne from the great edifice, bells tolled a dirge, sounding that the church had given its blessings to the dead. Immense crowds stood in silence, reverent and uncovered, as the procession moved out and past the steps of Abraham Lincoln. A light but continuous rain and sodden skies lent additional melancholy to the occasion.

King George and Queen Mary were not represented, but the Prince of Wales sent General Corder, Sir Edward Gigg and the bishop of the diocese of Premier Lord George W. E. Stephen was present on behalf of Winston Spencer Churchill, secretary for the colonies. Lord Northcliffe was buried beside his father. The services at the grave were conducted by the Bishop of Birmingham. Over the grave flowers were banked in profusion. One of the most prominent of the offerings came from Lord Northcliffe's mother. It was inscribed: "With everlasting love." King Northcliffe, through Ambassador Harvey today sent a message of grateful thanks to President Harding and Secretary Hughes for their condolences.

"Lulu's the only one in this house who can cook the best as I'll ever see."

"Why? Lulu, don't you think it might be better to keep well-out of sight for a few days?"

"By her husband who has left her," said Dwight andly.

"Is that what it is, papa?" Di asked sternly. For a wretched it was there; the day-most of the time starting, fascinated, at her Aunt Lulu.

"That's what it is, my little girl," said Dwight, and shook his head.

"Well, I think it's a shame," said Di stoutly. "I think Uncle Ninian is a slung."

"I do. And I'd be ashamed to think anything else. I'd like to tell every body."

"No. Don't say anything at all about her."

"But, mamma, what has she done?"

THE MARKETS

Chicago Grain Market

CHICAGO, Aug. 17 (AP)—Options in prices for all grain took place today, owing largely to reports that drought and heat were damaging corn. Dealers who previously had been conspicuous sellers of wheat and corn executed a rapid change of front. Wheat closed firm, 1 7/8 to 2 3/8 net higher, with September 11 1/2 and December 11 1/4 3/8 to 1 1/4 3/8. Corn closed 1 1/4 to 1 3/8 and oats 6 3/4 to 7 1/8. In provisions the outcome ranged from 7 1/2 decline to 1/2 advance.

At first wheat showed a downward tendency, which appeared to be related to adverse European financial conditions. Soon, however, a more powerful influence was the stubbornness of the corn market, guided by persistent damage complaints from states of largest production. Soon wheat began to climb in the with corn. The rise in value continued throughout the day, and wheat closed at the topmost figure.

Export buying of wheat here was estimated at 620,000 bushels, and it was said 700,000 bushels more had been taken up at the seaboard, most of it a red shipment from Gulf ports to Europe. Another bullish factor was a falling off in foreign receipts—partly because of the rail strike here were suggestions current, however, that the crest of the corn movement in the world is likely to be reached later.

Notwithstanding rural offerings of corn increased as prices advanced, the corn market advanced only a few cents of being closed. September 11 1/4 to 1 1/4 3/8; Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio were said to be in need of rain. Oats followed corn. Provisions averaged lower with help.

NOT ENOUGH TO KNOW RULES

Successful Authors Have to Pass Very Far Beyond That Stage of the Writing Game.

"A man," said the Schoolmaster, "may know all the laws of harmony, and never write a poem; know all the rules of art and never paint a picture; know all the laws of grammar, and never write a sentence; know all the rules of a game and never play it; know all the laws of a profession and never practice it; know all the laws of a religion and never believe in it; know all the laws of a country and never obey them; know all the laws of a science and never use them; know all the laws of a life and never live it."

The reason is that these people never progress farther than rules. Knowing rules is but the beginning. Perhaps a man cannot write without having learned certain rules, though that is debatable, but to write well a man must have passed to far beyond rules that he does not think of them. But pardon me for speaking at such length on this subject. I was led to thinking of it by hearing so much talk of what is called newspaper English.

"You have all heard me and women say, and giving an upward tilt to the nose or brow, 'Oh, it is newspaper English!' Sometimes they say with a high air, 'Oh, no, I do not write with the newspaper.' I contribute to the magazines. Why, bless your dear hearts, the best English today is written for newspapers and much of the rottenest written in books and magazines. There is a wider and deeper knowledge of the English language in a newspaper office than in any other kind of office.

"There are too many professors of English bending out bunk to a gullible public."—Boston Herald.
