THREE GIRLS VICTIMS OF FIRE FIEND

Two Leap to Death and Third Dies from Burns Suffered When Flames Destroy Celluloid Factory

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP)—Three young girls died today, victims of a fire which broke out in an East Thirteenth street celluloid factory, and six of their companions and one man were burned and injured as they sought to escape.

One of the girls victim died in a hospital tonight. Firemen had carried her from the building, but after she had been trapped in a second story work room.

Within inches of escape. The other two victims were within inches of rescue when they fell from third story windows. Firemen had to stand on a coping, facing the street while the flames reached for her. As a fireman reached her, the coping gave way and she disappeared with a shriek to the sidewalk.

Shouting to the other to retain her grip on the sill from which she hung, she said to the other: "If they could reach their arms to her, she falls."

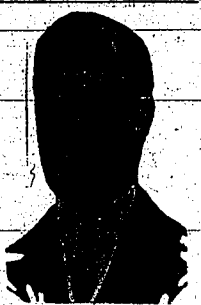

Flames trap workers. The fire, starting on the second floor, occupied by Henry Schroeder & Co., makers of celluloid hat ornaments, trapped half a dozen girl workers who had just returned from lunch, and swept into the third story where a number of workers were being turned out by the firemen.

Fireman battling their way through the flames as streams of water were poured on them, affected hardly more than a third, losing her balance, fell and carried Maria, who was standing by her side, to the street. Both were badly injured.

Chief Fire Marshal Bly, after an investigation, declared the fire started by a quantity of celluloid hat ornaments ignited by some one heating artificial gems over an electric stove preparatory to putting them in a comb.

GERMANS MAKE NO PROPOSALS ON INDEMNITY

Finance Minister Presents a Long Academic Discussion, But Avoids Reference to Questions at Issue

BERLIN, Nov. 3 (AP)—Finance Minister Hoesneke this afternoon placed before the Reichstag a bill of memorials containing an elaborate presentation of German official views on the question of stabilization of the mark and the problem of reparations.

The absence of any specific proposals by the German government is accounted for in the alleged desire of obtaining in official quarters to await the findings of the neutral experts who are conducting an inquiry into the stabilization of the mark.

Surprise was expressed today at the continued delay in the negotiations. The All-Union Central, organ of the Soviet government, is talking of what it calls the "impossibility" of negotiations. It attributes the decline in the mark to the "impossible" nature of the reparations commission.

FORMER KAISER BRINGS BRIDE TO PUBLIC EYE

Princess Hermine, Almost-Unknown in Native Country Now Conspicuous Among Women of Europe

THE HAGUE, Nov. 3 (AP)—Princess Hermine of Reuss, almost unknown even in her native Germany two months ago, is today one of the most conspicuous women in Europe...

The new chapter in Princess Hermine's life commences her second matrimonial venture, and comes after she has struggled for more than 20 years through the vicissitudes of a royal court...

Long Life of Troubles. Political troubles, however, have not been the only clouds hovering over the ancient Reuss major. Financial reverses and family dissensions and insanity have been familiar shadows to the five daughters and one son that greeted the birth of Prince Henry of Reuss...

The father of Princess Hermine, Emperor William, was a man of a different type from the Kaiser. He was a man of a different type from the Kaiser...

Rejects Modern Comforts. His gloomy place at Gries was devoid of every modern comfort, for the old prince believed it would be a good enough for his ancestors. There was no running water, no bath tubs, and no military equipment of any kind...

While the old prince was so busy with what he believed to be "affairs of state," his children had little to do but to be obedient in his capital or to be cut down without his official sanction...

The child, despite the fact that he was deaf and dumb, was idolized by his mother, Princess Ida of Schaumburg-Lippe, and when it was decided that he should undergo an operation to correct some defect of the eyes, she insisted upon holding him on her knees while the surgeon worked...

Remorse Precursor to Death. Princess Ida, overcome with remorse, died soon afterward, while the father was so sensitive regarding the affliction of his only son that he decreed against any medical being made of it, and even prohibited the churches from making special prayers for his recovery...

The five daughters of Prince Henry married in quick succession following the death of their father, two of them becoming the wives of Austrian counts. Princess Hermine received her first proposal of marriage when she was 18. It seems that she had volunteered to act as peace-maker in the ruffled domestic affairs of her sister, Princess Carolina...

grand duke found that he was in love with the intersection. Hermine consented to marry him on condition that he disengage a certain major-domo from his staff...

Children to Stay Outside. Two years later she married Prince von Schoenich-Carolath, an officer of the Uhlan guards, who died a few years later. The prince had two children by that marriage, the oldest of whom is 15. She had intended taking them to Doorn to reside with her in her new home, but arrangements have since been made to have them live in a specially built house outside the ex-emperor's estate...

The meeting between ex-Emperor William and the princess occurred more than a year ago. She was then through public "moral" circumstances, it is said that her young son wrote a letter of condolence to Doorn following the death of the former emperor. The reply was written by William and addressed to the boy's mother, and thus their correspondence began...

State Paid $2,000 for a Scrap of Paper

Here is a transaction by Moses Alexander, while Governor, and put through the defunct Overland National bank:

Quintus & Nat. Bank. Please place two thousand dollars to the credit of Adm. General Crow and Governor Alexander & the State of Idaho will favor etc. the payment. W. Alexander Governor. June 23rd 1916.

WHAT BECAME OF THIS $2,000? Two thousand dollars of the taxpayers' money was used to pay an unauthorized item, and there is not a scratch of a pen to show its legitimacy, or that it was a legal charge.

By what authority did Mr. Alexander issue a warrant in payment of this loan, and why was not a voucher filed if it was a proper charge? What kind of a deal was this and what became of the money?

The cancelled checks carrying no explanation which were turned over by the Overland National bank to the auditor's office and a claim by the bank for money furnished is the only evidence on file in connection with this affair.

The money was drawn without warrant of law and is clearly an illegal act. It is of such things that the joint legislative investigating committee criticizes the former governor in very drastic language.

Emotional Insanity Plea Wins Exoneration for Mrs. Roster, Charged with Double Killing

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Catherine Beckler was acquitted by the jury which tried her for killing Miss Mildred Geraldine Beckitt, her husband's stenographer, and soon afterward for the slaying of her husband, Oscar Roster, at the same time.

As the foreman pronounced the verdict of "not guilty," the 25-year-old defendant uttered a piercing shriek and fainted. She was quickly revived. Verdict Brings Cheers. Tremendous applause swept the crowded room on the announcement of the verdict and the cheering continued despite frantic efforts of court attendants to restore order.

NAVY'S VICTORY SPOILS RECORD FOR PENN STATE

Midshipmen Stage Effective Comeback After Football Drubbing of a Year Ago

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Pennsylvania's midshipmen staged a first football defeat today in three years, going down before the powerful Navy eleven.

In making up a 14 to 0 score, the midshipmen carried a comeback over their beating by the University of Pennsylvania last week and evaded the count following their defeat by the Military Academy just a year ago.

In the hot and sultry weather, both teams got away to a ragged start, but after that, each side displayed a dash and a line of brilliant play that furnished plenty of excitement for the largest and most distinguished crowd that ever attended a football game in Washington.

TURKS ASSERT INDEPENDENCE OF SULTANATE

Angora Assembly Announces Purpose to Name New Caliph; Disclaims Constantinople's Treaties

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 3.—An end to the sultanate in Turkey has been unanimously declared by the national assembly sitting at Angora.

A caliph is to be chosen by the assembly from a member of the Ottoman dynasty to succeed the sultan, but the resolution of the assembly announced that the Turkish government would remain the keystone of the caliphate. The choice of caliph is to be that member of the imperial family who is the best instructed, the best educated, the most honest and the wisest.

Nullifies Recent Treaties

The assembly also decided that all treaties entered into by the Constantinople government since March 16, 1920, were null and void. The decision of the assembly was followed by the proclamation of a national holiday and the firing of a salute of 101 guns.

Notwithstanding the assembly's decree that the era of liberation had at least been entered into, the sultan presided this afternoon at an extraordinary council of his ministers. The grand vizier, Tewfik Pasha, and his colleagues kissed the sultan's hand on the occasion of the prophet's birthday, renewed their pledge of loyalty and expressed the utmost indignation at what was termed the rash action of the Angora government in proclaiming an end to the sultanate.

Sultan's Opposition Rumored

While nothing definite can be ascertained regarding the sultan's attitude at the council today, it was reported in high quarters that there was good reason to believe the sultan had disapproved the legal action of the national assembly's decision, it being declared the assembly was elected under abnormal circumstances.

Some of the Turkish afternoon newspapers today announced that the abdication of the sultan was only a question of hours, but the ministers of the sultan's palace apparently take no such pessimistic view of the situation. The sultan's resignation, according to tradition, would be handed to the members of the imperial family, and no crowd would be called today at the Yildiz palace.

Force Internal Unity

Monarchist and Turkish moderate circles anticipate internal dissension in view of the action of the national assembly. They express the view that the step of the Angora government is a triumph for the secular policy of the Near East and a prelude to the socialization of Turkey.

Grand Vizier Tewfik Pasha has telegraphed Kemal Pasha, the sultan's minister, that any measure contemplated by the assembly affecting the sultan's status would weaken Turkey's position abroad. Tewfik added that the allies would benefit at the expense of Turkey at the forthcoming Lausanne conference in case of division between the national assembly and the palace and would endeavor to pose as protectors of the caliphate. In conclusion, Tewfik called the Angora government's attention to the possibility of action which the assembly's attitude might cause in Mohammedan countries, thus jeopardizing the fruits of the victory of the Turks over the Greeks.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Friday evening in the gymnasium the juniors entertained the freshmen at the annual freshmen reception. This year they held a hard time party. The first part of the program was given in the auditorium where rules and regulations for the freshmen to follow were read. This afforded a good deal of amusement. They then went to the gymnasium where a carnival was staged. With beans which they scrambled for, they were able to buy coffee, candy and various other things.

Friday morning during the third period the students went to the gym to practice yells for the Jerome-Twin Falls game.

Miss Geophray, northwest field secretary of the Y. W. C. A., was a visitor to the Blue Triangle club. She told the club girls about the work of the different girls' clubs in the northwest.

Hill, former representative, and Michigan, where Newcomb, republican, is opposed by former Governor Ferris.

Twenty-Six Seek Re-election

There are 26 senators who are candidates for continued service. Three, Senator McCumber, republican, North Dakota; New, republican, Indiana, and Harrison, republican, Texas, were defeated for re-nomination in recent primaries, while three more whose terms expire March 3, next, Senators Page, republican, West Virginia, democrat, Montana, and Williams, democrat, Mississippi, are retiring and did not stand for re-nomination.

There are two women candidates for the senate from Minnesota and Wisconsin, and a score for the house, with many others for municipal and other local offices. The present and first woman senator, Mrs. W. H. Feltner of Georgia, appointed to succeed the late Senator Watson, is not a candidate for reelection, while the first woman house member, Miss Alice Robertson of Oklahoma, is fighting for re-election in a normally democratic district.

Of the 435 house seats there are 308 candidates, including 370 present members—249 republicans, 120 democrats and one socialist. Fifty-seven incumbent members, 40 republicans and 17 democrats, did not seek re-election. Prominent among these are "Uncle Joe" Cannon and Representative Eubank of Michigan, chairman of the ways and means committee.

Fifty-seven house candidates are sure of winning Tuesday, being without opposition and some holding majority in congress are protected. While the solid democratic contingent from southern states are expected to show little change, democratic leaders are welcoming break in the solid republican ranks now coming from Ohio, Nebraska, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota and possibly Oregon, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

MRS. PHILLIPS RETELLS STORY

Adheres to Assertion That Peggy Caffee Assailed Murder Victim With Hammer

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Clara Phillips today retold her story of the slaying of Mrs. Alberta Meadows for which she is on trial for murder, under cross-examination by Deputy District Attorney Charles W. Fricks. She adhered to her assertion that Peggy Caffee assaulted Mrs. Meadows with a hammer. She also insisted that Mrs. Meadows had admitted intimacy with her husband, Arthur Meadows, at the time of the slaying.

Defense Attorney Bertram Herrington announced he would not call Phillips as a witness and that he expected to be able to rest his case Monday.

Circa Performance Sources

Fricks asked Mrs. Phillips who gave her the information on which she based the charge she said she made to Mrs. Meadows that Phillips bought the latter a wrist watch and a set of automobile tires.

"Must I answer that?" Mrs. Phillips asked the attorney.

"Yes," replied Herrington. "Why did you hesitate in answering?" Fricks asked.

"Well, Mrs. McElroy had the name of being a gossip in the neighborhood, and I consider her a good friend of mine."

Reverting to the time of the slaying, July 12, last, Mrs. Phillips said she and Mrs. Meadows struck and kicked and wrestled with each other and she was struck so many times she could not remember the number. She said she was sure Mrs. Caffee struck Mrs. Meadows more than once on the head with the hammer and that she blew her hand open.

Memory Is Blank

The defendant also had no remembrance of going to her apartment after the slaying and then, with the assistance of her husband, removing the stains of the battle. Her cross-examination was completed with the statement that she did not remember accompanying Mrs. Phillips to Pomona the next day in the Meadows coupe and on the trip throwing away the head of the hammer which killed the dead woman had been broken.

The defense then read into the record the testimony of Peggy Caffee, given at the coroner's inquest that she stayed in the car when it stopped on Montecito drive just before the killing, because she thought "Gars and Alberta wanted to be alone."

An early adjournment of court was taken upon the statement of Attorney Herrington that his case was completed with the exception of the testimony of several alibis.

The trial will be resumed Monday.

Irish Republicans' Assault on Military Quarters Falls Because Walls Are Thick; Bank Office Wrecked

BELFAST, Nov. 3 (AP)—The military barracks at Ardoy, County Lond., were fiercely attacked by republicans today, but owing to the great strength of the building, the walls of which are five feet thick, the main office was saved.

The office of the Ulster bank was wrecked by bombs.

FOUR DEAD; FOUR HURT IN UNDERGROUND BLAST

Explosion of Unexploded Gun in Pennsylvania Mine Deals Death and Wounds to Miners

SARANTON, Pa., Nov. 3 (AP)—Four men were killed and four others injured in an explosion at the Elders Eye Slips of the Oliphant mine of the Hudson Coal company, at Throop, near here this afternoon.

The death of a fifth man was expected momentarily tonight, hospital physicians stating that he was internally injured.

Company officials were unable to explain the cause of the accident. The eight men were employed in driving a rock tunnel from one vein to another, and were blowing out the solid face of the rock. Powder was used in the tunnel which had been drilled and one of the men began to make the wire connections by which the blast is fired. A moment later came the explosion.

The dead are: George Bingham of this city, William Murray of Throop; George Ganswiler of Oliphant, and Jean Crane of Dunmore.

GERMANS BOLT LABOR SESSION

Differences Over Use of Teutonic Tongue Results in the Withdrawal of Delegation

GENEVA, Nov. 3 (AP)—The sessions of the international labor conference ended this evening. During the day, prior to adjournment, the German representatives left the conference, owing to differences arising over the use of the German language in the deliberations and the Swiss government spokesmen, Dr. Filtzer and Professor Delagny, also departed for home, pleading pressing business at Bern. The representatives of the Swiss employers and workers, however, remained to the end of the conference.

Restroverts Issue

Although the question of the use of the German language was supposed to have been settled so far as the present conference was concerned, it was brought up today by a motion inviting the international labor bureau to investigate the financial cost involved in the adoption of another official language. Herr Wassner, a German workers' delegate, in a strongly worded speech, declared that millions of German workers were unambled because their representatives were unable to make their voices heard at Geneva on questions of the utmost interest to them.

The German delegation then rose, took up their papers and solemnly filed out of the room, leaving those in the meeting overcome with surprise. The Ardian de Agostini, vice-president of Cuba, vice-president of the conference, spoke in condemnation of the authors of the incident and reproached them for abandoning their posts. He was loudly applauded.

Swiss Nurses Sore Spot

It had been palpable that the Swiss government delegation was not satisfied with the treatment it had received at the conference, particularly because Switzerland had been replaced on the council by Finland.

"The Most Versatile Cleaner Made"

That is the description applied to the ROYAL ELECTRIC CLEANER by an expert who had studied its effective and thorough cleaning action on furniture, draperies, walls, mouldings, radiators—on deep velvet carpets, and on concrete floors.

A complete cleaner does more than clean and renovate rugs and carpets. The Royal does that, of course—does it thoroughly and rapidly—but in addition, the Royal boasts an attachment for every cleaning need, providing through its powerful suction the one safe and sure method of reaching out-of-the-way places.

When the Royal starts to hum in your home, it is singing the "swan song" of dirt, dust and drudgery.

Methodical Tarboer: Of course, partisan campaigns must have something to talk about, but why presume that the rates of the Republican protective tariff are too high, when the people know that if any of those rates prove too high the act authorizes their reduction?

Flexibility of the new tariff insures the nation and its interests against injustice in the application of protective rates. If any interest is agreed, it will have abundant opportunity to procure relief through the executive if it can prove its case. Therefore talk of excessive rates is distinctly out of order. If rates are too high the remedy is not in forcing the electorate to change its political sympathy, but in showing that they are above the warranted level and letting the adjustment machinery of the act take its course. The provision for elasticity assures all concerned of adjustment to meet changed conditions, and that promptly.

But this provision for dealing with such rates as may prove too high does not suit parliamentarians. Without alleged high subsidies against which to level their rhetorical volleys their occupation would be gone. Hence they shoot, although the flexibility provision has made the target a myth.

AFTER TAX DODGERS

Internal revenue officials declare that a million persons have evaded income tax payments to the federal government. If the situation is as bad as serious, all the resources of administration should be brought to bear upon the shirkers to compel restitution.

Universal participation in the burdens of government is one of the bases of the republic. Just as all citizens share in the benefits of popular rule, so they must divide the responsibilities and costs as equitably as possible.

That's why I've decided to make a book of it—that is, it really will be a book, only I shall not call it a book, on account of Father's wrath. Won't it be funny when I don't have to do things on account of Father? I won't, of course, the six months I'm living with Mother in Boston. But, oh, my—!—the six months I'm living here with him—oh! I can stand it. I may even like it some. Anyhow, I'll be different. And that's something.

PREFACE

Which Explains Things. Father calls me Mary. Older folks call me Marie. Everybody else calls me Mary Marie. The rest of my name is Anderson. I'm thirteen years old, and I'm a cross-current and a contradiction. That is, Sarah says I'm that. (Sarah is my old nurse.) She says she read it once—(that the children of impiles were all cross-current and contradiction.) And my father and mother are unlikes, and I'm the children. That is, I'm the child. I'm all there, and now I'm going to be a bigger cross-current and contradiction than ever.

I'm terribly excited over it. None of the other girls get a divorce in their families, and I always did like to be different. Besides, it ought to be awfully interesting, more so than just living along, common, with your father and mother in the same house all the time—especially if it has been so long like my house with my father and mother in it!

Well, about making this into a book. As I started to write, I thought I'd know he would be different. He says novels are a silly waste of time. It's not absolutely wicked. But, a diary—oh, he loves diaries. He keeps one himself, and he told me it would be an excellent and interesting thing for me to do it, too—set down the weather and what I did every day.

And So That's Why I've Decided to Write It into a Book

I'm young—only thirteen. But I feel really awfully old, and you know a woman is as old as she feels. Besides, Nurse Sarah says I'm old for my age, and that's no wonder, the kind of a life I've lived. And maybe that is so. For of course it has been different, living with a father and mother that are getting ready to be divorced, from what I would have been living with the forlorn, happy-ever-after kind. Nurse Sarah says it's a shame and a pity, and that it's the children that always suffer. But I'm not suffering—not a mite. I'm just enjoying it. It's so exciting.

Of course if I was going to lose either one, it would be different. But I'm not, for I am to live with Mother six months, then with Father. So, I still have them both. And, really, when you come right down to it, I'd rather take them separate that way. Why separate they're just perfectly all right. Like that—that "what do you call it" powder—settler, or something like that. "Anyhow," it's that white powder that you mix in two glasses, and that looks just like water. I suppose it's called "settler" and that's oh, my! such a fuss and fix and splutter! Well, it's that with Father and Mother. It'll be lots easier to take them separate, I know. For now I can't do it. I'm to live with Mother six months, and not try to be both at once, with maybe only five minutes between them.

I think I shall love both Father and Mother better separate, too. Of course I love Mother, and I know I'd just adore Father if he'd let me—be so tall and fine and splendid! when he's out among folks. All the girls are simply crazy over him. And I am, too, only, at home—well, it's hard to be Mary always. And that's me, he named me.

CHAPTER I

I Am Born. The sun was slowly setting in the west, casting golden beams of light into the smoky old room. That's the way it ought to begin, I know, and I'd like to do it, but I can't. I'm beginning with my being born, of course, and Nurse Sarah says the sun wasn't shining at all. It was bright and clear, and she remembers particularly about the stars. For Father was in the observatory, and couldn't be disturbed. (We never disturb Father when he's there, you know.) And so he did not even know he had a daughter until the next morning when he came out to breakfast. And he was late to that, for he supposed to write down something he had found out about one of the constellations in the night. He's always finding out something about those old stars, just when we want him to pay attention to something else. I don't know what that meant! I know it's "constellation," and not "consternation." But I used to call them that when I was a little girl, and Mother said that was a good name for them anyway, for they were a constellation of all the good things, said right off afterward that a constellated man, and that I must forget she said it. Mother's always saying that about things she says.

Well, I was saying, Father didn't know that he had a daughter, but I showed a little daughter. (I never tell him anything, exciting things just before meals.) And then Nurse told him. I asked what he said, and Nurse laughed and gave her funny little shrug to her shoulders. "Well, I just guess! Well, I just guess! how all the girls would care—and they just living along with their husbands, everyday existences with fathers and mothers already married and living together, and nothing exciting to look forward to. For really, you know, when you come right down to it, there aren't many girls who get the chance I've got."

And so that's why I've decided to write it into a book. Oh, yes, I know I'm young—only thirteen. But I feel really awfully old, and you know a woman is as old as she feels. Besides, Nurse Sarah says I'm old for my age, and that's no wonder, the kind of a life I've lived. And maybe that is so. I Am Born. The sun was slowly setting in the west, casting golden beams of light into the smoky old room. That's the way it ought to begin, I know, and I'd like to do it, but I can't. I'm beginning with my being born, of course, and Nurse Sarah says the sun wasn't shining at all. It was bright and clear, and she remembers particularly about the stars. For Father was in the observatory, and couldn't be disturbed. (We never disturb Father when he's there, you know.) And so he did not even know he had a daughter until the next morning when he came out to breakfast. And he was late to that, for he supposed to write down something he had found out about one of the constellations in the night. He's always finding out something about those old stars, just when we want him to pay attention to something else. I don't know what that meant! I know it's "constellation," and not "consternation." But I used to call them that when I was a little girl, and Mother said that was a good name for them anyway, for they were a constellation of all the good things, said right off afterward that a constellated man, and that I must forget she said it. Mother's always saying that about things she says.

Well, I was saying, Father didn't know that he had a daughter, but I showed a little daughter. (I never tell him anything, exciting things just before meals.) And then Nurse told him. I asked what he said, and Nurse laughed and gave her funny little shrug to her shoulders. "Well, I just guess! Well, I just guess! how all the girls would care—and they just living along with their husbands, everyday existences with fathers and mothers already married and living together, and nothing exciting to look forward to. For really, you know, when you come right down to it, there aren't many girls who get the chance I've got."

And so that's why I've decided to write it into a book. Oh, yes, I know I'm young—only thirteen. But I feel really awfully old, and you know a woman is as old as she feels. Besides, Nurse Sarah says I'm old for my age, and that's no wonder, the kind of a life I've lived. And maybe that is so. For of course it has been different, living with a father and mother that are getting ready to be divorced, from what I would have been living with the forlorn, happy-ever-after kind. Nurse Sarah says it's a shame and a pity, and that it's the children that always suffer. But I'm not suffering—not a mite. I'm just enjoying it. It's so exciting.

Well, I was saying, Father didn't know that he had a daughter, but I showed a little daughter. (I never tell him anything, exciting things just before meals.) And then Nurse told him. And so that's why I've decided to write it into a book. Oh, yes, I know I'm young—only thirteen. But I feel really awfully old, and you know a woman is as old as she feels. Besides, Nurse Sarah says I'm old for my age, and that's no wonder, the kind of a life I've lived. And maybe that is so. For of course it has been different, living with a father and mother that are getting ready to be divorced, from what I would have been living with the forlorn, happy-ever-after kind. Nurse Sarah says it's a shame and a pity, and that it's the children that always suffer. But I'm not suffering—not a mite. I'm just enjoying it. It's so exciting.

I asked her why, and what she meant to do. "Oh, I did you know that she demanded with the quick look over her shoulder that she always gives when she's talking about Father and Mother. "Well, little pitchers do have big ears, you see enough!"

"Little pitchers," indeed! As if I didn't know what that meant! I'm no child to be kept in the dark concerning things I ought to know. And I told her so, sweetly and pleasantly, but with firmness and dignity. I made her tell me all the good things, said right off afterward that a constellated man, and that I must forget she said it. Mother's always saying that about things she says.

Well, I was saying, Father didn't know that he had a daughter, but I showed a little daughter. (I never tell him anything, exciting things just before meals.) And then Nurse told him. Of course if I was going to lose either one, it would be different. But I'm not, for I am to live with Mother six months, then with Father. So, I still have them both. And, really, when you come right down to it, I'd rather take them separate that way. Why separate they're just perfectly all right. Like that—that "what do you call it" powder—settler, or something like that. "Anyhow," it's that white powder that you mix in two glasses, and that looks just like water. I suppose it's called "settler" and that's oh, my! such a fuss and fix and splutter! Well, it's that with Father and Mother. It'll be lots easier to take them separate, I know. For now I can't do it. I'm to live with Mother six months, and not try to be both at once, with maybe only five minutes between them.
