HARDING POINTS WAY TO REDUCED TAXATION

President Says Government Expenditures Can Be Lowered Only by Curtailment of Federal Aid in Various Lines

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—President Harding, in transmitting the annual federal budget for the next fiscal year frankly told congress today that "whether there was to be any material reduction in government expenditures and taxes in future years, would depend largely on whether there was to be a curtailment or contraction of federal aid in lines of research, improvement and development.

Placing the estimated government outlay in 1924, at $2,169,848,234, a decrease of about $1,000,000, as compared with estimates for this fiscal year, Mr. Harding called attention that two-thirds of this total was on account of practically fixed charges, such as the public debt, the national defense, pensions, world war allowances and federal aid. There was left, he said, only about one billion dollars in charges subject to administrative control and against which, he added, the retrenchment policy of the government had been directed.

Expressing the opinion that some further reduction undoubtedly would result from a reorganization of government establishments on a more efficient basis, the president said this also would cut down on the material outlay in operating costs as well as justify the expressions of hope for a considerable lessening of expenditures in the years to come.

Counts Federal Aid Cost

Taking up the question of federal aid, executive decisions that there was a rapidly broadening field of expenditures and that there was a question as to how far the government might participate in the normal functions or operations of the business of the government.

"These extraneous activities," he continued, "have flowed from laws enacted pursuant to popular demand, and I take this occasion to refer to them for the purpose of showing that the nation is not in need of providing funds to meet them in a necessary incident to the fulfillment of the popular demand.

In the errors which have been directed to reduce the public expenditures, I have been much concerned in apparent increasing state, county and municipally indebtedness. The condition may be in part attributable to the expenditures made by the government pursuant to its federal aid programs.

The summary of the budget for 1923 has given us a glimpse of the estimated excess of receipts over expenditures next year of $180,990,125 as compared with an estimated deficit of $379,659,718 for this fiscal year. The president said, however, that he was hopeful that the estimated deficit for 1923 could be reduced in the remaining seven months and that at the close of the year next to 1923 would show a balanced account.

Explains Expenditures
Estimated expenditures of $2,169,848,234, for 1924, which are exclusive of the postal service, compare with estimated expenditures of $2,170,848,234 for this same period. Mr. Harding explained that the expenditures would represent actual cash withdrawals from the treasury, including some in excess of appropriations in previous years.

Another deficit in postal operations was forecast for this year, but Mr. Harding said it would be offset in 1924 through proper readjustments which would be a surplus of postal revenues over expenditures in 1924 amounting to $428,450. For this year postal expenditures were placed at $259,956,941, or an estimated deficiency of $11,000,000, as compared with an actual deficiency in the fiscal year next of $5,000,000. The 1924 costs are given at $284,653,151.

Army and Navy
The president told congress that an appropriation of $53,053,837 was requested for the army would provide a regular force of 18,000 officers and 125,000 enlisted men, exclusive of the Philippine service, which is the strength now authorized by congress, and would enable the militia bureau to increase the strength of the national guard from 100,000 officers and men to 215,000 officers and men. For the army air service, $16,871,500 is proposed as $47,000 above the appropriation of this year. Mr. Harding said this sum would permit the service to operate efficiently in accordance with existing policy.

For the navy $298,880,993 is asked. This amount, the president asserted, would provide for the present enlisted personnel of 80,000 men; maintain all present ships in commission and make provision for continuing all new ship construction in privately owned yards, except for reduction in speed of construction on three light cruisers.

Other Provisions
Provision is made in the budget for $25,000,000 in penalties, $43,764,000 in world war allowances and $20,389,280 in retirement pay. Other items include $41,794,500 for rivers and harbors; $31,480,500 for post roads; $17,918,000 for hospital construction and facilities for war patients; $2,000,000 for railroads in Alaska; $9,899,105 for the Panama canal; $18,853,866 for general law enforcement, including administration and enforcement of the national prohibition and narcotic acts, and the prosecution of fur traders; and $249,000 for the placement of worn out portions of the Alaska cable.

NEW TARIFF INCREASES REVENUES FOR CHINA

Estimates Face Augmented Flow to National Treasury as Between Ten and Twelve Million Dollars

SHANGHAI, Dec. 4 (AP)—China's new tariff schedule drafted by an international commission, that was in session in Shanghai for six months and adopted at its final session in that city last week, will, it is estimated, result in increased revenues for the country, under the old tariff schedule.

It is estimated that under the new tariff schedule China's revenues will be increased between ten and twelve million dollars, Mexican a year. The taxation value of Chinese tariff is in accordance with the program laid down at the Washington disarmament conference. Following the tariff commission's decision that was made in Shanghai, another commission is to sit, probably early next year in Peking with the purpose of effecting a tariff increase of two to three per cent. Eventually, according to the program, a final five per cent increase in the country tariff is to be brought about by other authorities who hold the term applied to interprovincial duties is abolished.

BELGIANS RAISE HOOVER STATUE

Grateful Nation Dedicates Monument Set Up on Stanford Campus

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 4 (AP)—Belgium, through an official representative, formally dedicated here today a bronze statue set up on the Stanford university campus in recognition of the humanitarian services rendered to the Belgian nation during the world war by Secretary Herbert Hoover, a Stanford graduate. The gift was purchased through small contributions from the Belgian people, including children.

The statue, the work of a Belgian sculptor, represents the spirit of motherhood, the growing grain and the beneficent force of humanity eternally in conflict with the forces of darkness. It is placed in a large hall, with her features partly concealed by a veil. The statue was made by Sculper Albert Lamme of Belgium who was designated by his government and came from his native land for this purpose. The statue was carried by Stanford men who saw service in Belgium during the war. The college globe club sang the Belgian national anthem and the American national anthem.

The statue has been placed temporarily in the Stanford art gallery pending the erection of a permanent building where it will be permanently located.

YAKIMA, WASH., Dec. 4 (AP)—

Water in which meat has been washed is used by Mrs. E. B. Wright, local geranium lover, in raising her hot plants. This water, containing a little blood, appears to be most acceptable to the plants, according to Mrs. Wright.

Mrs. Wright's geraniums are known to local residents for their variety and their beautiful bloom. She says the best in which they are raised is just common soil "nursed" with any fertilizer. She attributes the success of her plants to the use of water in which meat has been washed.

Mrs. Wright says that she knows of no one else who makes use of this same device in growing geraniums.

WALLACE RENEWS PLEA FOR AID FOR FARMERS

Secretary of Agriculture Recommends Rural Credits Legislation; Shows Disproportionate Price Relationships

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—American farmers, comprising about one-third of the country's population, find themselves notwithstanding their hard work and large production this year, still being under a serious disadvantage as compared with other groups of workers because of the disproportionate relationship of prices. Secretary Wallace of the department of Agriculture told President Harding and congress today in his annual report.

"There is food in superabundance," Mr. Wallace said, "and this constitutes a threat to the prosperity of the industry for a time, but the inadequate return which the farmer is receiving and has for three years, inevitably must result in a reduction in the number of people on the farms and in the cities, which will not be for the continuing good of the nation."

There has been a greatly accelerated movement of farmers, and especially farmers' sons, from the farms to the cities and industrial centers, the secretary reported, declaring that, best estimates indicate that during July, August and September, twice as many persons left the farms for the cities as normally.

Land Bank Credit Laws

The secretary renewed his recommendation for rural credit legislation, suggesting that such legislation should be promptly introduced in congress, which a farm loan bank may be taken for an individual from $10,000 to $25,000. He advocated such a re-organization of the farm loan bank system which the farmer could borrow for periods of six months to five years. One of the new bills which the secretary recommended was urged by the secretary to enable the department to extend its loans to rural communities.

Forest Reservations

Another problem requiring immediate attention, the secretary said, was the necessity of raising up and applying a comprehensive plan of protection, growing and utilizing our forests. He declared forest legislation should be introduced immediately, and that the states in the protection of forests, coordinating state and federal service in the growing and distribution of seedling plants, and in the purchase of timberland, rapidly as the condition of the treasury will permit, and covering inland national forests, were now completed in Indian reservations.

Price Down Prospect

This winter would be a prosperous year for agriculture and consequently a prosperous year for the nation. If the relationship of prices now was such as to be maintained, the secretary said, there has been some increase in prices of farm products, but there has not been much improvement in the general relationship between the prices of the things the farmer produces and the things he buys.

Among the causes which contribute to the normal relation of prices, the secretary said, are: the cost of production of many farm crops, the maintenance of industrial wages near war time levels, economic depression and disorganization in European countries, and interference with the efficient functioning of necessary industries.

Unreasonably High Cost of Distribution

Unreasonably high cost of distribution of farm products, the secretary said, is another cause which contributes to the present situation.

Some Causes There is so much talk of an overproduction of farm products and can not be so long as there are people in the world who suffer for food and clothing," said Secretary Wallace. "On the same line of reasoning it can be argued that the production of automobiles will be inadequate until every man, woman and child has a car, and that of high school age own one. There is overproduction, as far as the producer is concerned, whenever the quantity produced can not be marketed at a price which will cover all costs and leave the producer enough to tempt him to continue production. And whenever there is such overproduction, the output will be reduced either by conscious effort on the part of the producers or by the operation of economic laws, but of business. The fact is that for three years in succession the farmers of the United States have produced more than they can sell at prices high enough to cover producing costs. It will never be possible for the farmers to reduce their production and farmers to reduce their production with the pleasure of the manufacturer, but because they can not control the elements which influence production and demand, they must demand it closely. Neither will the farmers ever be able to organize to have their labor unions and by rules and regulations and by legislative measures compel obedience to policies adopted. They can, however, bring about a better adjustment of production, and especially of output, to the needs and purchasing ability of possible customers, if they will perfect their organization and call to their aid the skill in interpreting conditions which influence supply and demand. Better adjustment of farm production to worth adjusting for both the farmer and the consumer would be benefited through more stable production and therefore more stable prices."

Illustration of Courage

Picturing the plight of American farmers Secretary Wallace said the production records of this year furnish a vivid illustration of the vitality of American agriculture and of the courage and hopefulness of the American farmer.

"Certainly no other industry could have taken the losses agriculture has taken and maintained production," he said, "and we have no evidence to show that any other group of workers would have taken the reductions in wages in the spirit in which the farmers have taken their reductions. Many thousands of farmers have not been able to weather the storm, notwithstanding their heroic efforts. Thousands who purchased land during the period of high prices have been obliged to give up the struggle, let their land go, and in many cases they paid for it and start anew. Many thousands of renters who had substantial savings invested in farm equipment and livestock have been obliged to let their property and have lost everything."

See Hopeful Aspects

There are some hopeful aspects to the situation, notwithstanding the continued low purchasing power of farm products, the secretary said. "It is fair to say that in general the farmers of the United States are in a better position financially now than they were a year ago. In general, the farmers are selling at considerably higher prices than last year. The aggregate value of the farm products in this year is about $5,000,000,000 more than last year. Considerable quantities of these crops will be fed and the remainder will be sold for the same covered by the farmer, but the bare gain that such a large increase in money will reach the farmer's pockets is not so great as many are assuming."

The Advance in the price of cotton has been most helpful throughout the year, and especially in the higher prices for wool, lambs and sheep. There has been a large increase in money which will reach the farmer's pockets and this is most gratifying and reassuring.

Public Action Changes

The advance in the price of cotton has been most helpful throughout the year, and especially in the higher prices for wool, lambs and sheep. There has been a large increase in money which will reach the farmer's pockets and this is most gratifying and reassuring.

Government owned buildings, he pointed out, are free from taxation, and practically a four per cent basis for overpaying to enable the landlord to meet his tax bills. In the same way he asserted that whereas the government could borrow money for practically a four per cent basis to build postoffices, when it leases it pays a rental sufficient to permit the lessee to borrow money at seven per cent, and in some cases as much as ten per cent.

Other Recommendations

Other legislation recommended by the postmaster general included passage of the bill pending in the house to increase the interest rate on postal savings deposits from two to three per cent and the rate on postal savings bonds from two and a half to three and a half per cent; establishment of a system of pensions for postal employees who have been in the service more than thirty years; reclassification of departmental employees; a salary readjustment to permit full pay for overtime; authorization for motor vehicle rural mail routes up to seven and five miles in length; maintenance

Jeer See For Flight On Women's Colleges

When A. B. See, millinaire president of the A. B. See Elevator company New York, replied to a request for funds to help erect new buildings at Adelphi college, Brooklyn, he brought a hornet's nest down on himself. Mr. See, who left school at 13, declared women's colleges ought to be burned, so women could learn some common sense. These Adelphi girls declared "Them's harsh words, Alonzo," and laughed their scorn. "He's the kind of a man who would make his daughter wear wooden shoes!" was the sarcastic comment of Phyllis Cohen, an Adelphi student.

WOULD RELIEVE POSTOFFICE OF LOAD OF RENTS

Postmaster General Renews Campaign for Government Ownership of Buildings Used in Distribution of Mails

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The campaign for government ownership of postoffice buildings throughout the country was renewed by Postmaster General Work in his annual report to congress.

Not only would a policy of public ownership relieve the government of some of its present housing congestion, the postmaster general said, but it also would make for financial economy since rentals of more than $12,000,000 now being paid over annually for such tangible real estate can be liquidated instead in respect of a permanent value.

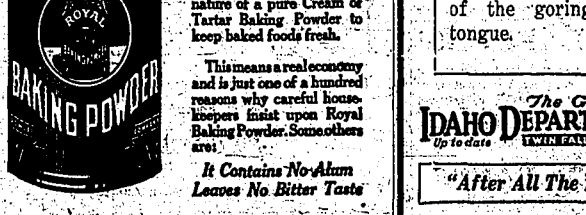

Government owned buildings, he pointed out, are free from taxation, and practically a four per cent basis for overpaying to enable the landlord to meet his tax bills. In the same way he asserted that whereas the government could borrow money for practically a four per cent basis to build postoffices, when it leases it pays a rental sufficient to permit the lessee to borrow money at seven per cent, and in some cases as much as ten per cent.

Mail carried postage free under the franking privileges of the various governmental agencies reached a total of 435,000,000 pieces, and the postmaster general estimated that had they been paid for at the ordinary rates they would have netted an additional income of $10,897,387.

JAPANESE THEATRES ADOPT NEW YORK BAKERY RULES

TOKIO, Dec. 4 (AP)—New York city regulations are to be adopted for Japanese theatres and moving picture halls. Under the new regulations, no moving picture hall will be built in Tokio that does not provide ample exit accommodations, with straight stairways, doors broad and unobscured, exits opening outward in prevent possible panic and with projection boxes absolutely fireproof.

FOR RENT—A house. You move in today. Pay a small sum down and give a mortgage on your furniture and in a year or so you will have the entire amount of money needed by the landlord.

Would you rent a house upon terms like that? Why not? Is this proposition materially different from the buying of a fire policy without knowing exactly what the cost is going to be? By insuring how you pay but one rate and that is low, considering the hazard. You assume no liability—the company takes the risk. So you—that's why. The average fire loss in the United States is $100,000,000 a year. The old established stock fire insurance companies.

Were Worth Waiting For

They came in yesterday. Several people had left their names and asked us to phone them, which we did. But they were so good looking that Mr. Callen, in charge of the shoe department, insisted that we tell all of you this way.

They are an all black suede pump with a large tongue, inlaid with satin. Truly a gorgeous combination, light and flexible and yet heavy enough for street wear.

One thing which we demand in every novelty shoe is a perfect fit. You get it in our Colonials because of the goring underneath the tongue.

This means a real economy and is just one of a hundred reasons why careful housewives insist upon Royal Baking Powder. Some others are:

SETTLEMENT OF IRISH QUESTION WINS APPROVAL

Legislation Giving British Sanction to New Government in Erin is Adopted by House of Lords

LONDON, Dec. 4. (AP)—The centuries old struggle between England and Ireland ended tonight when the legislation giving the sanction of law to the new settlement with Ireland reached its final stage in the house of lords, which for generations has bitterly opposed any accommodation with Ireland.

The constitution bill has gone through both houses of parliament without any amendment and even without a division being challenged. Lord Carson, alone and grandly, was mainly responsible for failure to settle the Irish question in 1914, and who throughout his political career has been the bitterest opponent of home rule, permitted to the very end in his role of "last ditcher," even when such traditional anti-home rulers as the Marquis of Lansdowne and the Duke of Devonshire, gradually yielded to the government view and resolved to give Ireland a chance to prove her sincerity under new conditions.

There now only remains royal assent, which is a pure formality, and everything will be ready for the new Irish government to come into existence, with excellent omens in the expressed desire even of many of the "die hard" statesmen in England to give it every opportunity to succeed in its work, not only unhampered, but aided by England.

Even the appointment of Timothy Healy, as governor general of the new state, which has been officially expected to be abandoned officially, is in reflection recognized as an auspicious event. When Mr. Healy's name was first mentioned, it was received with astonishment and some incredulity. When a governor generalship is in question, the British mind turns naturally to the direction of some titled hereditary. Now it is admitted the appointment of Mr. Healy would be singularly appropriate.

In the Irish plan, Mr. Healy throughout his political career has been one of the strongest opponents of Irish concessions, and therefore cannot be suspected of the slightest sympathy with British views antagonistic to Ireland. Secondly, his appointment would link the free state with all previous phases of the home rule struggle, for, besides being one of the greatest lights of "Irish politics" (not to mention his connection with anti-Irish struggles, by reason of his relationship to T. D. Sullivan, author of "God Save Ireland").

Preparations for the formalities of inaugurating the government and appointing an Irish senate were about to begin today, but it probably will be the end of the week before the senate is completely constituted.

Golden Age of Tapestry Work. It is from the Twelfth century that some of the most interesting tapestries come. The manufacture in art and literature also brought with it the revival of tapestry weaving. The art grew more skillful as time went on, and the tapestries of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries are rich with skill and "metal" richness. Tapestries were woven for all important court occasions. One of the most beautiful is that made in the sixteenth century to commemorate the fetes on the occasion of the marriage of Henry II and Catherine de Medici.

Reveries Near in Winter. Ravens are the first of the birds to nest, and tradition says they choose their nesting sites with the opening of the year. "Haven trees" of England, no doubt were so called from the birds' habit of nesting in them the same nest year after year; the memorable names cling to the trees, although the birds have disappeared to a great extent. In the Highland barrens surviving remnants of the noble broodstock still build their nests in January, the hardy birds sitting on their green eggs in February, undisturbed though snow blizzards rage.

Mystery of Sleep. It is impossible to give any precise explanation of the phenomenon of sleep. Yet many theories have been advanced. Legendre has shown by fairly conclusive arguments that it is the failure of "brain matter" (not to mention its intoxication by carbonic acid, nor to the presence of narcotic substance in the blood—theories that have in turn been advanced. Legendre intimates his preference for the view that sleep is not the result of fatigue, but is an organized instinct designed to protect the organism against the ill effects of fatigue.

How Aluminum Occurs. Aluminum is not found in a pure form, but in combination, chiefly as an oxide in the mineral corundum (ruby, sapphire and emerald); hydrated oxide in bauxite, hydrargillite and diaspor; hydrated phosphate in wavelite; hydrous sulphate in combination with potash in aluminite and in combination with oxygen and silica as staurolite, as in spinel, chrysoberyl and gahnite. It also is found as a silicate in various clays. Its chief ore is bauxite.

CARDINALS IN TRIM FOR TUSSEL WITH PANTHERS

Stanford Rooters Hope Team Will Continue in Pitt Game, Its Bitter Fight With Bears

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 4. (AP)—Light football practice is being continued at Stanford University for the variety's game here against the University of Pittsburgh Panthers December 30.

Stanford rooters are hoping that the team will continue in the Pitt game, the bitter fight it made in the "big game" against the University of California. A determined Cardinal defense kept the Bear score down to 22 points while in the last few minutes the Cards spurred and came close to scoring.

Next year, it is hoped, Stanford will face California on more even terms. Four of the Stanford varsity men will be gone while nine of the California "wonder team" will not be back.

The full strength of the Cardinals will be sent against the invading Panthers, who are coached by Glenn Warner. Warner comes to Stanford soon as head coach. None of the men was injured seriously in the California game.

Scores made by Stanford and Pittsburgh this year follow:

Stanford	Pittsburgh
0 Olympic Club	27
2 Santa Clara	0
9 St. Mary's	0
9 Oregon-Aggies	0
17 Nevada	0
9 Southern California	6

SIKI SAYS FIGHT WITH CHAMPION WAS FRADED

Sensational Englishman's Deputy Expects to Meet Heavyweight Champion After Boxing Ring

PARIS, Dec. 4. (AP)—Declaration that he will fight George Carpentier for the light heavyweight championship of France was "framed," but that during the fight he had a revelation of Carpentier's tactics and decided "to go in and win," was made today by Battling Siki, conqueror of the Frenchman. Siki, whose title has been revoked by the French boxing federation, made this statement before Deputy Blagov and two witnesses. He asserted that once he was in the ring with a crowd of 10,000 people, including him and conscious of his own strength, he was impelled, despite reminders from his own corner during his minute's rest after the third round, to do his best.

WOULD CHANGE GAME CODE

Washington State Sportsman's Association Will Suggest Amendments to Regulations to Legislators

SPokane, Wash., Dec. 4. (AP)—Proposed changes in the state game code will be the chief topic occupying the attention of the annual meeting of the Washington State Sportsman's association, to be held here December 9 and 10. It is estimated that from 75 to 80 delegates, representing all parts of the state, will attend the meeting. It is the plan of the association to present the proposed changes in the game code to the next legislature for ratification according to local members of the association. President Earl Frye of Seattle will preside at the annual meeting.

SPORT BRIEFS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4. JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 4. (AP)—Johnny Shugart, lightweight, stopped Willie Jackson in the tenth round of a 12-round bout here tonight.

DALLAS, Texas, Dec. 4. (AP)—Mickey Roney of Dallas scored a technical knockout over Abe Khatoff of Memphis, Tenn., tonight when Khatoff quit the ring in the seventh round. Roney had been winning since the fifth round. They are lightweight.

CALIFORNIA'S ATHLETES TURN ATTENTION TO BASKETBALL

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 4. (AP)—Football has been laid at rest for another year at the University of California here, the athletes are now turning to basketball and more than seventy-five are out practicing for the coming Pacific Coast Conference season. The turnout is the largest previous showing ever made here.

Seven veterans of the 1921 basketball team are back and Coach Earl Varsity has no easy task picking his varsity squad. With such a large squad to pick from California's prospects are good.

Last year California took third place in the conference race.

IDEALS MUST BE PUT TO USE

It's one thing to produce an ideal. It's more than folly to develop it, and finally let it die there. Ideals to be known must be made tangible. If they remain creatures of our own brains they may help us some, but not much. To be of worth they must become inspirations to others.—Ogilvy

A WORTHY WELLS SUGGESTION. It is not too much to expect that the suggestion for reducing federal taxes that has been made public here by a Twin Falls citizen will be carried to Washington to receive the consideration of the federal tax loving bodies and collectors, or even that it may be carried into execution to the benefit of the nation and its people.

The suggestion is a simple one, and it may be that its very simplicity has caused it to be overlooked in expert search for means and methods of relieving the tax burden. It is, briefly, that the government shall issue new money for gold; that it shall call in all of the money and securities that it has issued and give in return an equivalent in new money and securities. The theory is that an accounting may be made by this means of the vast amounts of money and securities that has been lost or destroyed, so that this amount may be written off the government's books. The transaction would result in the release of funds held in reserve as security for the missing notes and securities, and this reserve would be applied to diminution of the national indebtedness, and consequent reduction of taxes.

There is no doubt that if the proposal is feasible public sentiment will demand its being carried into execution, and if it is not feasible, that the public at large will be vastly interested in learning why not.

THE WAR OF WORDS

In Russia there has been some jubilation at the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Vladivostok. In one report it is said that Japan withdrew because its soldiers were becoming converts of bolshevism through their association with Russians.

To break the morale of the foe, and preserve that of his own troops, is the business of the soldier. During the war it was demonstrated by the allied "nut" speeches and essays could be used to accomplish this result.

The report from Busia, however, sounds like an idle boast or a glibly jibe. The Japanese are shrewd observers and not easily deceived. It is probable that in the selection of a "nut" team they might be induced to accept the impractical fantasy and erudite injustice upon which bolshevism is founded.

The Sultan took only $500,000 with him and those whom he passed on the road say that he must have used up that much gasoline already.

MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter. Illustrations by R. H. Livingston.

(Continued.) Oh, it was lovely! And I cried, and also cried some more, and we kissed each other, and I promised. And after she went away I felt all upraised and holy, like you do when you've been to a beautiful church service with soft music and colored windows, and everybody kneeling. And I felt as if I'd never-be-naughty-or-thoughtless again. And that I'd never mind being Mary now. Why, I'd be glad to be Mary half the time, and when more for Father.

Listen. When you believe it's just that same evening Mother stopped me against laughing too loud and making too much noise playing with Lester; and I felt ever so proud to be inside of me, and said I hated Mary, and that Mother was getting to be just like Aunt Jane. And yet, just that morning—

Oh, if only that hushed, staid, window-soft-music feeling would last! JUNE Well, one more school is done, my trunk is all packed, and I'm ready to go to Andersonville. I leave tomorrow morning. But not as I left last year. Oh, no. It is very, very different. This year, I'm really going, as I say. (Recently, Mother has named me into Mary before I go. Now, what do you think of that? And if I've got to be Mary there and Mary here, too, when can I ever be Marie?) Oh, I know I said I'd be willing to be Mary half, and maybe more than half the time. But when it comes to really being Mary out of turn extra time, that is quite another thing.

And I am Mary. Listen: I've learned to cook. That's Mary. I've been studying astronomy. That's Mary. I've learned to walk quietly, speak softly, laugh not too loudly, and be a lady at all times. That's Mary. And now, to add to all this, Mother has had me dress like Mary. Yes, she began two weeks ago. She came into my room one morning and said she wanted to look over my dresses and things; and I could see, by the way she frowned and bit her lip and tapped her foot on the floor, that she wasn't amused. She said: "I think my dear, that on Saturday we'll have to go in town shopping. Quite a number of these things will not do at all."

And I was so happy! Visions of new dresses and hats and shoes rose before me, and even the pink beaded silk came into my mind—though I didn't really have much hope of that. Saturday we went shopping on Saturday, but—did we get the pink silk? We did not. We did get—you'd never guess what. We got two new gingham dresses, very plain and homely, and a pair of smart, thick, low shoes. Why, I could have cried! I did "most cry" as I exclaimed: "Why Mother, those are Mary things!"

"Of course, they're Mary things," answered Mother, cheerfully. "That's what I meant to buy—Mary things, as you call them. Aren't you going to be Mary just next week? Of course, you are! And didn't you tell me last year, as soon as you got there, Miss Anderson, objected to your 'clothing' and bought new for you? Well, I am trying to see that she does not have to do that this year."

And then she bought me a brown serge suit and a hat, so dreadfully sensible that even Aunt Jane would love them. I know. And tomorrow I've got to put them on to go in. Do you wonder that I say I am Mary already?

CHAPTER VII When I Am Neither One. ANDERSONVILLE Well, I came last night. I had on the brown suit and the sensible hat, and every turn of the wheels all day had been singing: "Mary, Mary, now you're Mary!" Why, Mother even called me Mary when she said good-by. By the time to the junction with me she was the "before," and put her on the other train. "Now, remember, dear, you're to cry very hard to be a joy and a comfort to your father—just the little Mary that he wants you to be. Remember, I'll be very sorry to let you say with me so long."

She cried when she kissed me just as she did before; but she didn't tell me this time to be sure and not love Father better than I did. I noticed that. But, of course, I didn't say anything, though I might have told her easily that I knew nothing could ever make me love him better than I did her.

When we got to Andersonville, and the train rolled into the station, I stepped down from the cars and looked over to where the carriages were to find John and Aunt Jane. But they weren't there. There wasn't even the carriage there. I said to myself: how now just how my heart sort of felt inside of me when I thought that even Aunt Jane had forgotten, and that there wasn't anybody to meet me.

There was a beautiful big green automobile there, and I thought: how I wished that had come to meet me; and I was just wondering what I should do, when all of a sudden somebody spoke my name. And who do you think it was? I stood there, gazed it in a month. It was Father. "Yes, Father!"

Why, I could have hugged him. I was so glad. But of course I didn't, right before all those people. But he was so tall and handsome and open, and I felt as if I could hug him along the platform with him; and setting folks see that he'd come to meet me! But I couldn't say anything—not anything, the way I wanted to; and all I could do was to stammer out: "Why, where's Aunt Jane?"

And that's just the thing I didn't want to say; and I knew it the minute I said it. Why, it sounded as if I'd missed Aunt Jane, and wanted her instead of him, when all the time I was so pleased and excited to see him that I could hardly speak.

He just kind of smiled, and looked queer, and said that Aunt Jane—couldn't come. Then I felt ever so bad, of course, that that was my fault; but because Aunt Jane couldn't, so he had to. And I could have cried, all the while he was fixing it up about my arrival.

He turned then and led the way straight-over to where the carriages were, and the next minute there was John touching his cap to me; only it was a brand-new John looking too sweet for anything in a chauffeur's cap and uniform. And what do you think? He was helping me into that beautiful big green car before I knew it.

"Why, Father, Father!" I cried. "You don't mean that, just couldn't Father, but he finished for me." "It is sure—yes. Do you like it?" "Like it? I guess he didn't need to have me say any more. But I'd say more. I just raved and raved over that car until Father's eyes crinkled all in a little smile wrinkles, and he said: "I'm glad. I hoped you'd like it." "I guess I do like it," I cried. Then I went on to tell him how I thought it was the prettiest one I ever saw, and "way ahead of even Mr. Eastbrook's."

"And pray, who is Mr. Eastbrook?" asked Father then. "The violinist, perhaps—?" Now, wasn't it funny he should have remembered that there was a violinist? But of course, I didn't know it wasn't the violinist. It was another one that Mother told me, the one I told him about in the Christmas letter; and he was very rich, and had two perfectly beautiful cars; and I was going to tell you how—how he didn't take Mother any—but I didn't get a chance, for Father interrupted, and said, "Yes, yes, to be sure." And he showed he wasn't interested, for all the little smile wrinkles were gone, and he looked as if he'd just had a new like he used to. And he went on to say that, as he had almost reached home, he had better explain right away that Aunt Jane was no longer living there; that she came from the West; Mrs. Whitney was keeping house for him now. She was a very nice lady, and he hoped I would like her. And I might call her "Cousin Grace."

truly true—anytime. I didn't realize that it was such a lovely automobile, and the pretty lady in the light blue dress, who kissed me. And when I went downstairs the next morning I found out it was real, specially the pretty lady; for she kissed me again, and said she hoped I'd be happy there. And she told me to say hello to Aunt Jane. Any way I liked, and said, if I wanted to, I might run over to see some of the girls; but not to make any plans for the afternoon, for she was going to take me to see the girls in the morning. Now, what do you think of that? Go to see the girls in the morning and take a ride—an automobile ride!

Why, I couldn't believe my ears. Of course, I was wild and crazy with delight—but it was all so different. Why, I began to think almost that I was Marie, and not Mary at all. And it's been that way the whole week through. I've had a beautiful time. I've been so excited! And Mother is excited, too. Of course, I wrote her and told her all about it right away. And she wrote right back and wanted to know everything—everything I could tell her. All the little things. And she was so interested in Cousin Grace, and wanted to know all about her; and she never heard of her before, and was the Father's own cousin, and how old she was, and was pretty, and was Father about the house more now, and did I see a lot of him? She thought from something I said that I did.

I've just been writing her again, and I could tell her more now, of course, than I could tell her that first letter. I've been here a whole week, and of course, I know more about things, and have done more. I told her that Cousin Grace wasn't really Father's cousin at all, but it was classified advertising, in the cheap set thing you can buy—measured by the pupils it may bring you.

wasn't any wonder she hadn't ever heard of her. She was the wife of Father's third cousin, who went to live in the States after her first car caught fire and she died there. So this Mrs. Whitney isn't really any relation of his at all. But he'd always known her; and he'd married her, and she'd been his wife for years. And she didn't have any home he asked her to come back. I don't know why Aunt Jane went away, but she'd been gone most four months now, they say here. Nellie told me. Nellie is the girl I mentioned last night—her name. (I will keep getting that to Mr. Mary now and must use the Mary words here.) (Continued in Next Issue)

Don't get caught! HE thought all gasolines were alike. He started with twelve gallons, enough for his trip, but the tank is dry and some miles yet to go. Inconvenience and loss of time that could have been avoided. Full mileage is only one of the strong points of CONOCO Gasoline. It is balanced—as dependable in mileage as it is in starting, powerful on the hills and economical in idling; always sure and always satisfactory. And CONOCO doesn't just happen to be balanced. Years of research and study with constant care in refining, have developed its all-round dependability—the necessary groups of boiling-points and what is most important, all of them in the correct proportion, make CONOCO the easy-starting, economical, full-powered motor fuel. There is no disappointment waiting for you in CONOCO. Try it for a month and you'll be done experimenting with other brands. How about oil? COMMISSIONERS HEAR VIEWS ON BUTCHERS RULE

Concession to Small Dealers Is Indicated as Result of Airing Given Proposed Revision of Ordinance

Free discussion of the proposed ordinance on licensing and inspecting dealers and butchers was evident in abundance at the meeting at the city hall Monday night...

Between 30 and 40 butchers, retail dealers and farmers attended. As a result of the discussion it was indicated that the commission would pass the ordinance with some change as to the regular season Tuesday night...

Attorney Turner K. Harrison's usual speech was given, and he outlined in a brief and pointed way the reasons that dealers here will be underlined by Ogden dealers in local price advance.

Dr. E. L. Harrison injected considerable spirit into the gathering when he criticized the proposed ordinance...

It was asserted, however, that the enforcement of the new ordinance would result in better prices...

Thousands - HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the prominent life insurance companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is common to the American people, and the large majority of those who apply, when they are rejected, do not even suspect that they have the disease.
