

BALDWIN NAMED BRITAIN'S NEXT PRIME MINISTER

Chancellor of Exchequer Accepts Premiership Made Vacant by Resignation of Law; Change in Policy Unlikely

LONDON, May 22. (AP)—Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the exchequer, is the British prime minister in succession to Andrew Bonar Law. Having accepted the constitutional practice and ascertained the views of the conservative leaders through the medium of his secretary, Lord Stamfordham, who had been prime minister in 1911, Baldwin came to town today and without further delay offered the vacant premiership to Mr. Baldwin, who accepted.

Labor's Influence Figures

Of necessity the labor party is not represented in the house of lords, unless the presence of peers like Lord Haldane, who has great sympathy with the labor party, may be said to give labor a slight standing in the house.

Graduates From Trade

The new prime minister, like his predecessor, has graduated from trade, and also like Mr. Bonar Law, from the iron trade. Neither of these men was trained for politics, but adopted politics after a successful career in some extent from British traditions.

DAKES FEAR OF WORLD COURT

Senator Fess, Ohio, Marshals Arguments for Support of International Tribunal

SPRINGFIELD, May 22. (AP)—To withhold our support from the proposal for an international court would be to ignore our long standing efforts for peace, and as a party, support our specific political campaign since 1904, United States Senator Simon D. Fess of Ohio, said in an address here tonight before the Illinois statehood association.

Washington Waits in Vain for Word from Captives

Problem Presented by Chinese Bandit Outrage Occupies Attention of Cabinet Meeting but Brings No Decisions

SHANGHAI, May 22. (AP)—Reformer workers at Tsao Chwang, the nearest point to the stronghold of the Suichow train bandits, today reported the arrival of messages from the brigands' mountain retreat with the information that the outlaws had not carried out their daily threat against the foreign captives. The prisoners, however, were stated, are all in good health except G. D. Musso, the Italian lawyer of Shanghai, who had been ill for a number of days.

Relies on Schürman

It was said emphatically at the White House that the administration had full confidence in Mr. Schürman and believed the country was fortunate in having a man of his judgment and experience to represent it on the second day of critical times. The first and only concern of the American government at the moment, it was added, was that the lives of the captives should be saved and their release unharmed, procured.

Despair of Conversations

Earlier dispatches from Mr. Schürman indicated that the affecting news that he had received for the purpose of determining whether direct negotiations should be opened with the bandit leader. The American leaders at Linbeng advanced headquarters of the Suichow bandits, who were liberated, yesterday expressed in an official communication their belief that further conversations between Chinese officials and the brigands would be futile and hopeless.

American Tells of Treatment at Brigands' Hands

THEN TSIN, May 21. (AP)—In a letter to his wife, Major Roland W. Pinger, United States army officer, captured by the Suichow train bandits, describes the removal of three American prisoners, including himself, to the summit of Putauku, where escape was impossible.

On Way to Peace

"If peace is to be desired, if pacific settlements of international disputes is to be sought, if judicial process is to be preferred over war, then we should not hesitate to give our financial as well as moral support to the plan."

Ship Board Auction Seems Likely to Fail

WASHINGTON, May 22. (AP)—Unless there is surprising response, the attempt of the shipping board to dispose of its fleet by auction is doomed to failure, in the opinion of officials in charge. While there have been a number of inquiries from companies serving as operating agents, a few from individual sources, actual bids submitted today offer little hope of the board disposing of sufficient tonnage to justify its investment in retiring from general operation.

CLARA PHILLIPS PUTS UP FIGHT

Murderess Offers Strong Resistance to Transference to Ancient Dungeon

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 22. (AP)—Owing to the fact that Phillips wanted in California to serve out her sentence for murder, might effect her escape from the local jail where she had been confined for some time. She transferred early today from Tegucigalpa to Omoa Castle, 300 miles to the north of the city on the Atlantic seaboard.

Charges Law Overridden

In the appeal to the supreme court for the release of Mrs. Phillips, Senator Zelaya contended that she should be set free because the American minister, who is serving in Tegucigalpa, did not follow the legal procedure of Honduras, that he completely disregarded Honduran procedure and the terms of the extradition treaty between Honduras and the United States.

Hints at Revolt Plot

Prior to being taken to Omoa Castle, Mrs. Phillips said that Jess Carson, who came to Honduras with her and her sister, and who also is under detention, had been plotting to break through the bars of the jail window at Los Angeles and aided her to escape. Carson has denied what she declared to be ramifications of the plot to overthrow the Honduran government. The alleged plot has adherents in New Orleans, Mexico City and Tegucigalpa, according to Carson.

PEACE MAKERS FIND NO WAY TO END DEADLOCK

Greeks and Turks Remain Obdurate on Question of Reparations; Reported British Fleet Movement Creates Stir

LAUSANNE, May 22. (AP)—No compromise on the deadlock on the question of Turk-Greek reparations was found today at the near east peace conference. M. Venizelos, head of the Greek delegation, spent the day consulting with various conference leaders, discussing ways and means in an endeavor to ameliorate the situation.

Ismet Under Guard

Ismet Pasha, chief delegate of the Turks and the hero of many battles, was taken under guard to the conference today by the British. He is being held in a room in the hotel where he will remain in solitary confinement owing to the refusal of the British police, who fear an attempt to assassinate him by mysterious Armenians who are supposed to have reached Lausanne in disguise.

Conferees Fear Break

Meanwhile, the peace conference held no session today, chiefly because the delegates were fearful of taking up great problems on the agenda, preferring to postpone them until after the last moment in the hope that a solution of them may be found in a private conversation, thus avoiding an official rupture.

Church's Bitterest Fight

The fundamentalists, under Mr. Bryan's leadership, went down fighting in the most bitterly waged struggle in the general assembly, as seen according to church historians, since Charles A. Briggs of Calvin Theological seminary was unfrocked more than 30 years ago because of his old testament criticism.

Bryan Defends Gono

"I want to object to the statement made by Brother Baer," the commoner shouted, when the assembly granted him five minutes to reply. "I don't want my democracy used against this cause. I don't want any republicans to appeal to republican prejudices by referring to the democratic belief which helped this nation to freedom."

Gooding's Views Adopted in Fight on Rate Changes

SALT LAKE, May 22. (AP)—Resolutions opposing application by the Interstate Commerce commission for a 10 percent increase in rates on the interstate commerce commission asking permission to violate the four sections of the interstate commerce ruling on long haul rates, were adopted tonight by the intermediate association.

Consider Own Interests

The resolution adopted by the association follows: "The association has considered the arguments presented by the representative of the Transcontinental Freight Bureau and the representative of the western transcontinental railroads, and in a request to the interstate commerce commission for permission to violate the fourth section of the interstate commerce ruling on long haul rates, we would not join in the Pacific coast terminals in order to meet canal competition."

Cave-In and Fire Closes Tunnel to California Travel

Passengers Forced to Make 20 Mile Detour by Stago with 1,000 Feet to be Made Afoot

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22. (AP)—A Southern Pacific tunnel near Geary, Shasta county, was partly destroyed by a fire which started today. It was announced tonight that passengers between California and Oregon points will be forced to make a 20-mile detour, via stago and afoot at this point.

EVOLUTIONISTS DEFEAT BRYAN

INDIANAPOLIS, May 22. (AP)—William Jennings Bryan was defeated and evolutionists scored a victory today when the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States of America defeated a commoner's resolution offered by John Willis Baer whose terms directed synods and presbyteries to withhold their official sanction of educational institutions "where any teaching or instruction is given which seeks to establish a materialistic evolution, phase of life, which disregards or attempts to obstruct the Christian faith."

Commoner Goes Down Fighting in Bitter Struggle at Presbyterian Assembly

The assembly adopted a substitute resolution offered by John Willis Baer whose terms directed synods and presbyteries to withhold their official sanction of educational institutions "where any teaching or instruction is given which seeks to establish a materialistic evolution, phase of life, which disregards or attempts to obstruct the Christian faith."

Jorme Accepts Post

Among the surprises of the day was the announcement that Sir Robert Stevenson-Hart, had consented to become chancellor of the exchequer in the new cabinet, a post he held under Lloyd George. As late as yesterday it was said that Sir Robert had no intention of reentering politics.

Few Changes Expected

Mr. Baldwin is a close friend of Mr. Bonar Law and it is expected, as is expected, that there will be no radical change in policy, but there is undoubtedly a general air of health, from which Mr. Bonar Law suffered, the new prime minister may infuse more vigor into the government policy, particularly with regard to the Ruhr.

LIFE'S LESSON

Lessons in the use of a toothbrush are given in Twin Falls public schools.
Entertainment, instruction and godly moral lessons are poured in upon youth, by the State, the Sunday school teacher, the Boy Scout leader and what-not, all with the idea of inculcating the principles of useful citizenship in the man and woman-to-be.
Earnest men and women give freely of their time to this end, others give just as freely and are paid for the giving. But the end sought is the same. To so educate the growing boy or girl that his or her years of adult life may be successful from an individual, a community and a national standpoint.

No higher type of idealism is presented anywhere, no greater or better work is being performed in any single walk of life than this.

Now here are the facts in the life of men—with respect to their usefulness to themselves and to society, as set forth in cold figures, compiled from government and other records by the American Bankers' Association.
They teach life's greatest lesson, in a material sense, and they stress, as nothing else could, the need of all the aid that can be given towards the building of better citizenship, from the ground up:

THE HOME OWNER

A home owner in a letter to his newspaper, gives an unusually convincing answer to the eternal question, "Does it pay to own your own home?" It may be cheaper to rent, he admits, and yet home-owning pays, financially as well as in other ways.
He explains, from his own experience:
"I found a home owner acquires all most immediately a standing in his neighborhood and community—he loses that nomadic taint which seems to stick to a rent payer. I also found that one becomes more ambitious to have under the altered circumstances—becomes a bit proud of his possession—takes pride in keeping up the property—is interested in civic and community affairs in a very real way as a taxpayer direct, and has a satisfaction that is worth a lot of money even though it cannot be realized in just that way.

"My wife and children have been far happier in their new environment, and if 'dad' has had to hustle a little harder to meet the financial obligations, it has done him good—and he has something very tangible to show for it, whereas before the 'landlord' had it all.

"The home owner has a different slant on the problems and interests of his time, and he gets that way just because he is one."

The Light of Western Stars A Romance By Zane Grey Illustrations by Irwin Myers

With a prospect of fire and warrent, and food and rest, Madeline's enthusiasm revived. What a climb! There was promise in this wild ride and lonely trail and hidden crazy height, not only in the adventure her friends yearned for, but in some nameless joy and spirit for herself.

CHAPTER XV The Crags.

Glad indeed was Madeline to be lifted off her horse beside a roaring fire—to see steaming pots—upon red-hot coals. Except about her shoulders, which had been protectively the slicker, she was wringing wet. The Meeder and woman came quickly to help her change in a tent nearby; but Madeline preferred for the moment to warm her numb feet and hands and to watch the spectacle of her arriving friends.

"Warm clothes—hot drinks and grub swarm blankets" rang out Stewart's sharp order.

Then, with Florence helping the Mexican women, it was not long until Madeline and the fountain side of the party were comfortable, except for the weariness and aches that only rest and sleep could alleviate.

Neither fatigue nor pains, however, nor the strenuousness of being packed in mardineulle under canvas, nor the howls of coyotes, kept Madeline's guests from stretching out with long, grateful sighs, and one by one dropping into deep slumber. Madeline whispered a little to Florence, and laughed with her once or twice, and then the light flickering on the canvas faded and her eyelids closed. Darkness and roar of camp life, low voices of men, thump of horses' hoofs, coyote screams, the sense of warmth and sweet rest—all drifted away.

When she awakened shadows of swaying branches moved on the simple canvas above her. Slow regular breathing attested to the deep slumbers of her tent comrades. She observed presently that Florence was missing from the number. Madeline rose and peeped out between the flaps.

An exquisitely beautiful scene surprised and enthralled her eyes. Eager to get out where she could enjoy an unrestricted view, she crept forward for her pack, found it in a corner, and then hurriedly and quietly dismounted. Her favorite stag-hounds, Russ and Tartar, were asleep before the door.

where they had been chained. She awakened them and loosened them, thinking the while that it must have been Stewart who had chained them near her. Close at hand also was a cowboy's bed rolled up in a tarpaulin.
The cool air, fragrant with pine and spruce and some subtle nameless tang, sweet and tonic, made Madeline stand erect and breathe slowly and deeply.
It was like drinking of a tonic draught.
She felt it in her blood, that it quickly surrounded by lofty crags, but full of crags of lesser height, many lit-tling their heads from dark green covers of trees. The morning sun, not yet above the eastern elevations, sent its rosy and golden shafts in between the towering rocks to tip the pines.

Madeline, with the bundle beside her, walked through the nearest gorge.
The ground was soft and springy and brown with pine-needles. Florence espied her under the trees and came running. She was like a young girl, with life and color and joy. She wore a flannel blouse, corduroy skirt, and moccasins. And her hair was fastened under a band like an Indian's.

"Castleton's gone with a gun, for hours, it seems," said Florence. "Gene just went to hunt him up. The other gentlemen will be here in an hour, they sure will sleep up-hack in this air."

Then, business-like, Florence fell to questioning Madeline about details of camp arrangement which Stewart, and Florence herself, could hardly see to without suggestion.

As the day advanced the charm of the place grew upon Madeline. Even at noon, with the sun beating down, there was comfortable warmth rather than heat. It was the kind of warmth that Madeline liked to feel in the spring.

Presently a chorus of merry calls attracted her attention, and she turned to see Helen limping along with Dorothy, and Mrs. Beck and Edith supporting each other. They were all rotated about lame, and delighted with the plans, particularly Stewart, now awakened from a winter's sleep.

Then they had dinner, sitting on the ground after the manner of Indians; and it was a dinner that lacked merriment only because everybody was too busily appeasing appetite.

For a few days the prevailing feature of camp life for Madeline's guests were sleep and rest. The men were more visibly affected by the mountain air than the women.

This languorous spell disappeared presently, and then the days were full of life and action. Necessarily, of course, Madeline and her guests were now thrown much in company with the cowboys. And the party grew to be like one big family.

Madeline found the situation one of keen and double interest for her. If before she had cared to study her cowboys, particularly Stewart, now, with the contrasts afforded by her guests, she felt by turns she was amused and mystified and perplexed and saddened, and then again subtly pleased.

From the thought of Stewart, and the watchfulness growing out of it, she discovered more about him. He was not happy; he often paced up and down the grove at night; he absented himself from camp sometimes during the afternoon when Nels and Nick and Monty were there; he was always watching the trails, as if he expected to see some one come riding up. He alone of the cowboys did not indulge in the fun and talk about the campfire. He remained preoccupied and sad, and was always looking away into distance. Madeline had a strange sense of his guardianship over her; and, remembering Don Carlos, she imagined he worried a good deal over his charge, and, indeed, over the safety of all the party.

"WE'LL DIVIDE IT BY FOUR"
When you figure how much your painting is going to cost this spring, will you be able to divide the total by four?
HOME OWNERS WHO USE
McMurry Mixed Paints
HAVE THIS ADVANTAGE
They have learned that paint economy is NOT in the cost, but in the length of time that a Paint will last.
McMURRY long-life paints lessen the yearly cost because properly applied, there will be no need to re-paint for many years.
Good painters everywhere will tell you why McMURRY Paints have this lasting quality.

Something to "Bank" On To have something to "bank on," means, in everyday language, something which can be counted on, relied upon in a case of emergency.
The very familiarity of this expression indicates the value to you of a savings account.
To have a growing savings account—one which can be relied upon for aid in any emergency—is something well worth working for.
If you think seriously about this matter, you are certain to come to the conclusion that RIGHT NOW is the time to open such an account. This friendly bank will welcome you and be glad to handle your business—no matter whether your deposits are small or large.
