

HARDING MAKES COAL PROBLEM SPEECH'S TEXT

Time by which the higher labor costs are made necessary. It is necessary, we shall better guard against inconvenience and hardship if the consuming public will help as best it can without expecting the government to assume all the responsibility.

Government's Limitations.
"If the coal consuming world would buy coal during the periods of scant consumption, it would guard itself against price panics and dangerous shortages when consumption is at the peak. In the case of lowered prices the buying is postponed and that very postponement is liable to add price increases. There is need for some individual initiative and responsibility in preparing for the wintry days to come. There is a mistaken notion that some how the government may wield a magic wand, or strike with iron hands and produce cheap coal. It can do neither. You can no more enforce the mine worker to produce coal than you can enforce the farmer to grow wheat or corn or wool. We saw that enormous herd exploded a year ago.

Nationalizing Not Solution.
"The commonwealth transcends every other interest and puts aside every obstacle. We will find the solution. I hope we shall find it without further hardships on the part of the coal industry. But we shall not find it in nationalizing the mines. That would be only another step to the national paralysis which a state monopoly is oversteeringly avoiding nor shall we solve it by maintaining a basic industry, like that of bituminous production, under a plan of operation which affords the mine workers only a hundred or a hundred and fifty working days a year. The normal man, aspiring for himself and his family, cannot live that way, even though he is paid what is seemingly a generous wage, because his wage days are not ample for a life of honest industry and becoming thrift. "A policy which is inconsistent. It cannot be dodged, nor solved, in demagoguery. It demands ear best thought and all our courage. Let us hope that in the search for a way to full justice in dealing with coal we may find a suggested plan for dealing with kindred problems which are ever menacing our industrial peace and hindering our full development."

Planes Signal Arrival.
The president's arrival at Cheyenne was signaled in advance to the waiting crowds through an aerial escort of five United States mail aeroplanes, which met the train about 10 miles from the city and followed the tracks flying high above the train and dropping bombs about the moving cars.

Crowd Waits at Greeley.
The largest gathering to greet the president at any non-scheduled stop on the trip to date was at Greeley, Colo., where the chief executive made a fifteen-minute talk. Noting that at Utah, where he is scheduled to arrive tomorrow morning for a brief stop before motoring to Salt Lake for an evening speech tomorrow.

Defends Sugar Industry.
"I have not come to talk politics to you, but, as you know, there has been considerable discussion recently as to the high cost of sugar and a good many people have found fault with the president because he did not exercise the authority recently conferred upon him by congress to raise or lower tariff duties to meet existing conditions. I at once enquired as to the cause of the sugar situation and I became persuaded that a modification of the sugar tariff, so far as the president had authority, would have little to do with a decrease of price to the American consumer, but might destroy the American sugar industry itself to which the American consumer must look for stabilized prices in the future. I believe with all my heart in ample protection to the American sugar industry, because, in my opinion American self reliance in the production of sugar will make us free from the greed of great sugar producing countries of the world.

Duplicate Government Aims.
"I am proud of the great development of the sugar industry in the state of Colorado. I need not tell you, my countrymen, that the government is also concerned with the good fortunes of people of the United States. It is not concerned merely with the good for

Challenger Gives Evidence of Speed

Badly Battered Sparring Mate Says "You Can't Telegraph Them" to Gibbons

SHELBY, Mont., June 25 (AP)—The roof was taken off Tom Gibbons' outdoor training ring today and the St. Paul challenger of Jack Dempsey's heavyweight crown went through his afternoon workout under a blazing Montana sun.

Stripped to the waist, his shoulders exposed to the warm rays which have not shone here for nearly 10 days, the title contender battled eight stiff rounds with four sparring partners, among them Mark Moore, Minneapolis fighter, now arrival in the challenger's camp.

Gibbons buffeted his fellow Minnesotan all about the ring and easily evaded the long, slow right frequently shot at him. Within a few moments after they clinched in the first round the challenger snapped a twisting left into Moore's right kidney. Moore flinched, and dropped his guard for an instant, almost to the floor. A few seconds later Gibbons shot over a flashing left to the face, followed by a hard right to the other side of the jaw. He used a right uppercut with telling effect and several times struck Moore with a smashing right to the body which was followed in one-two order with a left to the jaw.

"It is the fastest man I ever met," Moore said after the fracas. "It is hard to get at him. You can't telegraph to him."

Gibbons continued the speedy gauntlet he has set for himself the last 100 days against his other three sparring mates. The fastest bout of the afternoon was between Gibbons and Tillie (Kid) Herman with Johnny Kilbane, ex-champion, as referee. Herman pushed the champion to the limit, but he made few dents in Gibbons' defense. The latter, however, poked his left into Herman's face with surprising rapidity and speed. Kilbane pushed the champion to the limit, but he made few dents in Gibbons' defense. The latter, however, poked his left into Herman's face with surprising rapidity and speed. Willard Passes Tests of Physical Fitness.
JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 25 (AP)—The New Jersey boxing commission today put its official stamp of approval upon the heavyweight match on July 12 between Jess Willard, former champion, and Luis Angel Firpo, from the Argentine, after Willard had passed a special physical examination to determine his fitness as an opponent for the South American.

Three physicians, engaged by the boxing commission, subjected the big Kansan to a searching examination that lasted 45 minutes, after which they signed a brief statement declaring him to be "free from any physical defects."

Willard was characterized as a "remarkable physical specimen" in every respect by Dr. T. H. Lemmerz, at whose office the examination was conducted, in the presence of newspaper men and photographers. The former champion looked to be in excellent condition. He tipped the scales at 216 pounds, two pounds less than when he knocked out Floyd Johnson, the young lion, at the Yankee stadium six weeks ago. He declared he felt in much better trim now when he made his remarkable comeback at the milk fund show, his first ring appearance in four years, since he lost the world's title to Jack Dempsey in the past week in Yonkers, N. Y., where he conditioned himself for the Johnson fight.

DEMPEY ON FINAL

"You guys are fight experts and ought to know more about it than I do," Dempsey said, his white teeth gleaming through a friendly grin. "Some of you have written that I am not in shape and don't know how to box. How do you expect a rough plunger like me to tell you anything?"

Whitcomb Well, who told me he's a fast boxer and can hit like a mule. I hope he can. That will make a fight of it. A fight is a fight—that is all I can say."

In Prison Condition.
The champion declared that he never felt better and he looked and acted as if what he said was the truth. He was deeply tanned as a result of his exposure to the sun and his skin body did not appear to carry an extra pound of weight.

Dempsey indignantly visited the hospital to call on "Big Boy" Wray of Sayre, Okla., who suffered a broken jaw as the result of being knocked out by the champion last Friday, but Wray, in the meantime had left the institution.

The Oklahoma giant, towering seven feet two inches, said he was tired of staying in the hospital and wanted to come down town to get something to eat besides milk and soup. When his manager, Tex McCarthy, found him Wray had removed the plaster cast from his cracked jaw and was in a restaurant dining with light sparring partners, doing just enough exercise to keep in shape. He probably will drop all work with the gloves on Sunday.

McCarthy, in response to questions, declared he would indulge only in light work tomorrow and for the rest of the week. He expects to box four to six rounds daily with light sparring partners, doing just enough exercise to keep in shape. He probably will drop all work with the gloves on Sunday.

McCarthy, manager of the heavy-weight champion, is considerably nettled over the delay in arranging for the disposition of the fight pictures. He said no contract for taking the pictures had yet been made. Dan Tracy, the executive in charge of the fight, before departing from Shelby said he expected to announce tomorrow or Wednesday the financial status of the bout. He said that all tickets in this country and Canada had been recalled from various agencies for a check-up.

WASTED STEEL

The American Institute of Steel Construction finds that more steel is being used in modern buildings than is necessary—that in most cases a somewhat lighter construction can be adapted without danger of collapse.

This is a matter in which it is better to err on the side of safety than on the other side. But the engineering experts doubtless know what they are doing, and it is one of the first principles of efficiency as well as conservation not to use power or weight far in excess of actual requirements.

And it is not only in structural work that steel is being wasted. Various engineers and manufacturers have been pointing out lately the enormous overhead represented in the rolling of steel in American railroads and trolley lines.

There is extra weight in automobiles, ton, and in a hundred other things of extensive use. It is more important just now to eliminate this waste than it is to find new sources of ore, fuel and labor.

Many persons go to the Detroit Public Library to see the new building, according to an assistant librarian. Many go to meet friends. Others go to kill time.

POOR REWARD FOR BRAVERY

Evidently the Police in Some Parts of France Have Queer Notions and Are Not Strong on Common Sense.

Passengers on the Bordeaux-Cette express in France were saved from a holdup by a masked bandit owing to the quick action of a railroad man who happened to be traveling on the train.

It seems that the local police who would not have caught the bandit in a score of years, have few cases in which they can prosecute and are glad to jump at every opportunity to show their zeal.
