COLLAPSE ENDS CONFERENCE ON UNION DEMANDS

Final Break Reached in Negotiations Between Coal Miners and Operators in Bitterly Fought Contest

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 27 (AP)—Refusal of anthracite operators to grant the demand of the United Mine Workers of America for installation of the check-off dues paying system throughout the industry resulted today in the sudden collapse of contract negotiations.

After a bitter contest of words in which each side charged the other with responsibility for the state of affairs and declared its opponent was making an unfair bid for public support of an unjust cause, the joint committee of eight adjourned sine die. At the last moment a resolution was passed authorizing the secretary to reconvene the committee if either side indicated it had anything worth while to concede.

Deadlock Reached There was no indication, however, that miners or operators saw any weak spots in their own armor or that of their opponents which would be apt to justify a resumption of negotiations. Since the union already had publicly declared it would not submit to arbitration the only possible peace agency seen in the way of the threatened strike on September 1 was a government intervention. The final break was preceded 24 hours by the miners' ultimatum demanding to know the operators' attitude toward "complete recognition of the union," including the closed shop and check-off system, before they would proceed with the discussion of their demands for higher wages and improved working conditions. The operators, as promptly, made plain that they would refuse to grant such "complete recognition."

Urging that the facility of further conference warranted immediate adjournment, the miners finally agreed to 24 hour truce, which ended this afternoon. Today's session lasted 90 minutes. Mr. Lewis announced he and his staff would remain at the Ambassador hotel "for important conferences."

Most of the miners' scale committee of 36 members, also summoned here, made ready to carry the news of the break to the Pennsylvania locals.

AERIAL EXPERT IS KILLED

Kenneth Kell, Known as "Diavolo," Meets Death in 1500 Foot Fall; Parachute Fails to Open

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 27 (AP)—Kenneth Kell, 24, of Denver, known as "Diavolo," parachute jumper and "stunt" man with the Gates flying circus of Denver, was killed here this afternoon while performing at the Frontier Day program. Kell made a parachute jump from an airplane at a height of 1500 feet. The parachute failed to open. He left the plane head first, contrary to his usual custom of jumping feet first, and it is thought this caused the ropes of the parachute to become entangled.

AVIATORS TAKE TRAINING

Fourteen Reserve Military Pilots of Three States to Begin Fifteen-Day Course at Ordway Field

SALT LAKE, July 27 (AP)—Fifteen reserve military aviators of Utah, Montana and Idaho will begin a 15-day "refresher" course consisting of training at Ordway field, Presidio, San Francisco, July 29. Salt Lake fliers left at noon yesterday for the coast city, with the exception of First Lieutenant Claron Nelson, superintendent of the western division air mail service, who left last week. Second Lieutenant William H. Hickey, Missoula, Idaho, is one of the 14 who will go to the Presidio.

RAIL EARNINGS INCREASE

Revenues for Great Northern and Northern Pacific Nearly $5,000,000 Greater than Period Last Year

ST. PAUL, July 27 (AP)—Improved earnings compared with the first half of 1922 are shown by the June reports of major northwest railroads to the interstate commerce commission. Public here today. Revenues for the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern were nearly $5,000,000 greater than for the first half of last year, despite larger outlays for maintenance and road and equipment, tax and reduced rates.

"Passive Sabotage" Advanced as Scheme of I. W. W. Gangs

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—"Passive sabotage" have been adopted by the Industrial Workers of the World to make lumber production unprofitable, the National Lumber Manufacturers association asserted in a statement today, quoting an order it said had gone out in a bulletin to the lumber workers in a Chicago I. W. W. publication.

"Everybody on the job—but everybody least" was an admonition in the order as quoted in the statement.

"The employing class lives on our labor," it continued. "It has to pay us wages, which are a part of what we produce, and everything else we make for it is profit on which it exists. It is not necessary to break any laws to do this! Figure out just how little work you can do and get by. Do that and nothing more."

THREE HELD FOR SHORT ACCOUNTS

Sum of $440,000 Found to Be Missing in Records of Denver Institution

DENVER, Colo., July 27 (AP)—Three men were under arrest tonight following discovery of an admitted shortage of $440,000 in the accounts of the Hibernian Bank and Trust company, an institution with deposits of $1,373,729, which closed its doors here today and surrendered itself to the state bank commission. Those arrested were Leo P. Floyd, secretary of the bank; John Harrington, teller, and Maurice Mandell, a Denver broker.

Floyd according to his alleged confession, admitted juggling money, and bonds over a period of three years in such a manner that bank examiners were unable to detect the reported defalcations.

Informations making formal charges against Floyd and Harrington probably will be filed tomorrow. It was said by a member of the district attorney's staff, but what steps will be

SPECIAL VOTE CRITERION OF 1924 CONTEST

Senator LaFollette Predicts Entrance of Third Party if "Reactionaries" Are Given the Nomination

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Asserting that "the conditions which insured the election of Magnus Johnson to the senate from Minnesota exist generally throughout the nation, United States Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, predicted today that in event "reactionaries" are nominated for the presidency next year by the major parties, a third political party movement may result.

"The Wisconsin senator declared that President Harding's administration had been a reactionary administration. He insisted, however, that it still was too early to predict with certainty whether a third party movement in 1924 would occur.

Because he is conceded to be the leader of the "progressive bloc" in congress and to have a vast following among the people of the northwest, a pronouncement by Mr. LaFollette regarding his attitude toward 1924, has been awaited with unusual interest by republican and democratic leaders alike. He indicated today, however, that he would not be in a position to make his intentions known until after he returns from his forthcoming trip abroad.

Qualifies Prediction

"I think we must await developments," he said. "I do not think it humbly possible for anybody at this time with any degree of certainty. If liberal men should be nominated by both of the two old parties, I should doubt very much that there would be a third party movement at all. It would not be such. But if plainly indiscreet or reactionary politicians are selected on either side, something in the way of a third party may develop. "Whenever anything of that kind comes to stay it comes from a noble movement or because any body of men have decided to avail themselves of an opportunity. It develops because the peoples are insistent upon

Brother of Former Secretary Of War Fails as Booze Runner

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Julian B. Baker, brother of the former secretary of war, Newton D. Baker, today confessed himself a failure as an amateur rum runner and was fined $1000. Meanwhile, his 30-foot cabin cruiser, Moseley, and six cases of whiskey it carried are being held by the government.

"I had never even thought of trying to bring in any liquor until the opportunity and the temptation presented themselves together," said Mr. Baker. "Yesterday I was preparing to set a new anchor I had bought for my yacht, and just as I was starting out my friend, Harry Hyatt, came along. So I asked him to go with me.

"We cruised around for a while and presently found we were in the midst of a rum fleet. At that moment, never before, it occurred to me that the yacht club was giving a shirt waist dance tomorrow night and here was a chance to make it a merry one by getting a supply of liquor without paying the exorbitant prices of the bootleggers on land.

Bought six cases. "I bought six cases of Scotch at "$7 a case and we started back." About this time, 100 yards from the schooner, J. B. Young, from which the purchase was made, the Moseley encountered the coast guard cutter Manhattan, accompanied by Captain Michael J. Ryan. Captain Ryan displays great curiosity whenever he finds yachts cruising around the Jersey rum fleet. "What's that?" he asked, pointing to the cases. "Scotch."

Wet Party Off

That ended all hope of the Tamara yacht club in Sheepshead bay of which Mr. Baker is a member, having a wet social time tomorrow night. Today Baker took all the blame and Hyatt took all the responsibility. Baker was charged with transporting liquor within the 12-mile limit. He was not charged with criminally violating the prohibition laws, inasmuch as Edward Barnes, assistant United States collector, held there was no evidence of conspiracy and the seizures were made outside the three-mile limit.

ONE DOLLAR EQUAL TO 900,000 MARKS

BERLIN, July 27 (AP)—Berlin is a city of penniless billionaires tonight. Bank deposits and foreign bills of exchange were useless, as the banks had only small amounts of currency, which were paid out today in small bills, and rationed until the supply was exhausted. Many tourists were unable to get money enough to continue their journeys. The banks promise to have currency tomorrow, but no large bills are yet available in Berlin and foreign monies are entirely out of circulation.

The food shops in various parts of the city have exhausted their supplies of sugar, flour, rice and other staples and the police have been ordered to prevent further hoarding. The situation will probably bring any new quotation on mark exchange until Monday. The present official rate is 700,000 marks to the dollar, but speculators today were giving 900,000.

ALASKAN POLICY IS OUTLINED BY NATION'S CHIEF

Harding Makes Glowing Report on North Trip; Delivers Address to Capacity Crowds at Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash., July 27 (AP)—The longest speech of his north-west-Alaska tour was completed today by President Harding in the great University of Washington stadium at 3:30 p. m. He spoke exactly an hour. The stadium, seating about 30,000, was crowded with every seat occupied and many standing when the chief executive began speaking. He was introduced by Governor Hart of Washington.

Despite the delay in the arrival of President Harding in Seattle, he was at the stadium scarcely more than 15 minutes before he had begun speaking. He had gone through his program quickly, without eliminating any of the principal features.

The president reported to the American people that he had found nothing with their great northern territory; that there is no broad "problem of Alaska," and that Alaska is "all right and is doing well." "If I do not believe Alaska can be forced, or that it should be," he added.

"There is no need of government managed, federally-paid-for, hothouse development. There must be no reckless sacrificing of resources which ought to be held permanent in order to turn them into immediate profits. Where there is possibility of betterment in the federal machinery of administration, improvements should and will be effected. But there is NO NEED for sweeping reorganization."

The president enumerated a number of ways in which the development of the territory should be accelerated. He declared against ruthless exploitation of natural resources and urged "a development of Alaska for Alaskans." He recommended more restrictions on salmon fishing, the territory's greatest industry, and promised that if congress was unable to agree on a program of helpful legislation, he, by executive order, would extend the present restrictions and their regulations.

Restrictions with respect to utilization of the forests, he said, might well be lightened. Development of Alaska's coal mines must await time and the first would amount to approximately 20 per cent. Other estimates of the net result of the curtailment run as high as 80,000 barrels daily. The runs for the field for the first six months of 1923 have averaged between 300,000 and 350,000 barrels.

Suspended operations are looked to as the only means of relief by the refiners of the Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas fields.

CANAL COMPANY SEEKS TO STAY PROCEEDINGS

Attorney for Salmon River Director Asks Court Order Fixing Account of Undertaking

Application for a court order fixing the amount of an undertaking which the Salmon River Canal company desires to give for a stay in the proceedings in the case of K. Glavin against the company, was filed Friday in district court here by James R. Bothwell, attorney for the company.

In this case Glavin was upheld by District Judge P. Butler in his attack on the method of delivering irrigation water adopted by the company which gives credit to individual water-users for water unused by them in previous seasons. Appeal from the judgment has been taken by the company to the supreme court.

Dam with Capacity of 13,500 Acres Foot to Be Built in Blaine County; Canal Nine Miles Long

BOISE, July 27 (AP)—Construction of a reservoir with a capacity of 13,500 acre feet of water, at a cost of approximately $500,000, in Blaine county, Idaho, has been approved by the state. The main canal of the reservoir will be nine miles long, and there will be several tunnels through which the water will be conveyed to farm lands. The project, according to state officials, is one of the most complete irrigation plans undertaken in the state.

SHIP CARRYING HARDING PARTY HITS DESTROYER

Sellin, Escort to President's Transport, Is Rammed and Narrowly Escapes Sinking Before Making Port

SEATTLE, Wash., July 27 (AP)—President Harding and his official party returned today to the continental United States from their visit to Alaska and Vancouver, and their ship narrowly escaped sinking the destroyer Zella, one of the escort ships which, blinded by fog and battling with strong currents in the channel of Port Townsend, was thrown off its course and into the path of the navy transport Henderson, bearing the chief executive and Mrs. Harding on their way home. The destroyer was seriously damaged and when the Henderson continued its way to port the destroyer was left listing heavily to port, a hole torn into its side and three of its sister ships holding fast with tow lines.

Officers on the bridge when the ships collided give full credit to the quick orders of Captain Allen Buchanan, commanding the Henderson, which they declared averted an even more serious damage to the destroyer and probably prevented it being cut in half by the big transport.

Hit Amidship
According to witnesses on the Henderson, the destroyer was first sighted crossing the transport's bow, in a position to be rammed amidship and too close to the approaching ship for it to avoid hitting.

Captain Buchanan was on the bridge at the time. His ship also was laboring against tide, smothered by the fog and running steadily ahead with fog horns open to full blast. One of the Henderson's pilots, familiar with the waters by 30 years' experience, said Captain Buchanan's orders were given in advance of his and caused the ship's engines to be reversed to full speed astern, throwing the bow off its course and, at the grip of the tide, swinging it to a degree sufficient to prevent it from crashing squarely into the side of the destroyer.

Called for Aid.
The radio telephones of the Henderson were immediately put into use, summoning the other destroyers to the assistance of the Zella. The Corry was the first to respond and reported that the crippled vessel had listed badly to port, but no casualties had resulted, all its officers and enlisted personnel being safe. Later word said the Zella had been beached near Port Townsend, it having been found impossible for the ships standing by to tow it to the Bremerton navy yard.

The president had not left his cabin when the jolt of the collision was felt by the Henderson's passengers and few knew of the accident until some time later. There was no alarm sounded and no confusion to disturb those on the transport. Some had not heard of the collision when the Henderson several hours later steamed into the smelt harbor of Seattle and revealed in the distance the hulls of the battle ships lying at anchor, their crews manning the masts and full dress pennants waving in colorful effect across the blue waters.

Ships Pass in Review
President and Mrs. Harding had taken their places on the flying bridge of the Henderson for the review and both declared their enthusiasm for the scene before them. To their left and well in advance were the battleships California, Maryland, Tennessee, Idaho, Arizona, New Mississippi, Pennsylvania, Texas and Oklahoma, with the cruiser, flagship of Admiral Hilary P. Jones, in the foreground. On the right the auxiliary ships rested at anchor. They included 11 destroyers, moored by the tender Melville, commanded by Rear Admiral Kittelle. The fleet repair and hospital ships swung with them in the line.

The Henderson's crew also had manned the rail and gave the service gray of that vessel a touch of color in harmony with the gayety of the warships.

They, meanwhile, had thundered out their first greeting, each firing 21 guns, the national salute, as the president steamed by. The Henderson, in keeping with the naval custom, did not return the salutes, but received them silently, in honor of the commander-in-chief of the navy. He stood at attention, had heard and had covering his eyes, receiving the honors in deep thought of the spectacle before him.

The president's landing in Seattle was given a military tone by the presence in the parade of the marine and sailor detachments from the warships.

DENY CLAIMS OF 1924 LANDSLIDE

Alleged Boast of Easy Victory at Polls Refuted by Johnson and Harvey

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Colonel George Harvey tonight were agreed that the ambassador to the court of St. James had been misquoted when certain morning papers made him say that the Californian had predicted a landslide for himself in 1924, if he got the republican nomination for the presidency.

Mr. Johnson, who planned tonight to leave for Washington, awoke this morning to find in the public prints a statement by Mr. Harvey in Long Branch, N. J., to the effect that Mr. Johnson was a bit previous in his prediction, which, the article said had been made in a conversation last Wednesday night, when Mr. Johnson made his first public address since returning from Europe.

In a formal statement Mr. Johnson promptly denied that he had made any such prediction, and when newspaper men got in touch with Mr. Harvey at his New Jersey summer home he promptly denied it, too. He said he was talking about Henry Ford's presidential chances, concerning which he expressed himself in pessimistic tones.

HALF OF UNITED STATES TIMBER HAS BEEN CUT
SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., July 27 (AP)—A severe timber shortage in the United States is inevitable, according to the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, in a statement issued here. The timber of the country is more than half cut, the forest service points out. Of the original 882,000,000 acres of timber lands, only 470,000,000 acres stand today.

TALK PLANS FOR SHORTER HOURS

Steel Corporations Favor Tentative Scheme to Abolish 12-Hour Day

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Readjustment problems involved in the program of the steel industry to abolish the 15-hour day were the subject of two more conferences of heads of steel manufacturing plants today.

In the forenoon officials of the United States Steel corporation again considered ways and means to change the hours of its 65,000 12-hour day laborers, and in the afternoon directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute discussed the problem as it affects the industry as a whole.

Formal announcement was withheld at the conclusion of both meetings, but it was learned that directors of the institute decided to renew their discussions in New York again probably next Thursday.

Steel corporation subsidiary heads will continue their conferences tomorrow in the offices of Chairman Elbert H. Gary, with the possibility that further meetings will be held next week.

The readjustment of wages, which is necessary if hours are reduced, is understood to be the chief obstacle to immediate elimination of the much criticized 12-hour shift. Not only will it be necessary, officials point out, to increase the pay of the men now employed at 40 cents an hour for 12 hours, but employees who are now working eight, nine and ten hour shifts must also be considered in any wage readjustment.

Mystery Shrouds Construction of Costly Building

TONOPAH, Nevada, July 27 (AP)—Walter Scott, better known as "Death Valley Scotty," is constructing a $150,000 concrete building in a canyon in Death Valley. The purpose for which the building is being erected in the isolated region of the desert is unknown, and Scott's answers to questions are: "I'm putting up a girls' academy," or "I'm building a home for worn-out newspaper men."

Nothing but the finest material is being used in the building, the lumber for which is being shipped from Portland, Ore., to San Pedro, Calif., and then sent to Death Valley by train, truck and tractor. In addition to the large building, the windows of which are protected by heavy steel bars, there are several smaller buildings being erected by Scott.

It is believed here that Scott's millionaire Chicago friend, a Mr. Johnson, is backing him for the purpose of establishing a college for boys, similar to that maintained by L. L. Nunn of Colorado at Deep Springs, on the Nevada-California border in Inyo county, California.

OPEN HOME FOR ORPHANS

Institution at Corvallis, Oregon, Built by W. C. T. U., is Thrown Open for Reception of Orphans

EUGENE, Ore., July 27 (AP)—The home for orphaned children built by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon near Corvallis, has been formally opened. This home was built entirely from funds donated by the people of Oregon at the solicitation of the members of the W. C. T. U., and most of the contributions were in small sums. One large one of $50,000 was recently reported as having been made by the Ku Klux Klan.

Two of the several "cottages" planned and have been completed and will be occupied at once, according to an announcement of those in charge. These "cottages" are really large houses, each to accommodate 20 homeless children. More than enough children to fill these two houses have applied for admission, according to Mrs. Lena M. Wally, who is home mother of one of them. It is planned to erect two more this summer.

The home is located on a farm of 350 acres, amid beautiful and healthful surroundings.

Cleanliness--A Modern Idea

SHORTLY before the Civil War, Boston made it a prison offense to take a bath except on the advice of a physician. The Philadelphia Council tried to make it illegal to bathe between November 1 and March 15 and failed by one vote. Virginia placed a luxury tax of $30 on each bathtub in the state.

Ideas regarding cleanliness have changed materially since then. In fact, ideas on almost everything have undergone something of a metamorphosis. Today these changes are taking place more rapidly than ever before. There has never been a time when evolution hit such a furious pace—when conditions changed so quickly—when standards of living were raised so consistently.

You may not realize it, but advertising is responsible for much of this improvement. Advertising has taken its place as a leading force in solving the wants of the people.

Stop and think how many of the appliances you use, the foods you eat, the clothes you wear and other articles entering into your daily life, were popularized through newspaper advertising.

Then you will realize what a debt you owe to advertising.

ONE-SIDED GAME WON BY BAPTISTS

Bob Nicholson Pitches No-Hit Game Against Invaders, and Receives Fine Support

Bob Nicholson pitched himself into the hall of fame Friday evening at Lincoln field, when he left the Knoll team down without a hit, the Baptists winning, 9 to 1, in five innings of play.

Nicholson's great pitching and his deal of home in the second inning were easily the features of the game.

The one run scored by the visitors was the result of Nicholson's wildness in the first frame. Truesdell being in mid-air, going to second and third on a wild pitch, and scoring on an out.

The Baptists started out in the first inning with six runs the result of three errors by Atkinson, a walk, two hit pitches and a single by Masters.

Two more were added in the second after Atkinson took the mound, a single, two steals and an error doing the work.

The last run of the game came in the fourth, when the church lads scored on Knoll, and a single by Masters.

Fourteen, and a single by Masters.

Vanderbilt, eldest son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who perished on the Lusitania, marries Miss Emily O'Neill, of New York, in London. Base on balls—off Nicholson 1, off Lancaster 1, off Atkinson 1. Left on bases—Knoll 1, Baptists 1. Wild pitch—Nicholson 2, Lancaster 2. Doubtful plays—Huntsman to Jackson. Hit by pitcher—Truesdell, Shirlock. Umpire—Oral Tucker. Time of game—1 hour 30 minutes.

NOTES OF THE GAME

The crowd enjoyed the game until the Baptists made their six runs, and then he went home.

"Stew" Robinson played a nice game at second base, accepting four chances without a bobble.

Kenny Atkinson messed things up around short in the first inning, missing every ball that came his way.

I. H. Masters didn't make an error, and he ran the bases like an old-timer.

Bob Nicholson stole home in the second while Atkinson was fiddling the pellet. Kenny thought that the church lads wouldn't think of stealing anything, but he found out that stealing bases is one of their best traits.

After the third inning it became so dark that one player didn't know whether his team was at bat or in the field, and roll call had to be taken every so often to see that everyone was present.

Hits were few and far between, but the Knoll team lived things up with five errors.

The church lads made but one miscue, that being a wild throw to Shirlock (no relation to Holmes).

Yankees Make Clean Sweep of Series with Athletics; Senators Beat Red Sox

PHILADELPHIA, July 27 (AP)—New York made a clean sweep of the series with Philadelphia, taking the final game today, 7 to 2. Ruth hit his twenty-fourth home run of the season in the first inning. No man was on base. Walker, pinch hitting in the ninth, hit a home run into the bleachers.

Six runs off Ehmeck in the first and one in the second inning gave the visitors a lead that proved enough to carry them through, although Boston made six runs off Zahnke in the seventh. A dugout battle, mostly of words, between Foster and Feinick immediately preceded the Boston rally, but Chance later compelled the players to shake hands.

RUN MOTOR FIRE PATROL

Northern Pacific Employe Union of Men in Northern Idaho to Assist in Combating Fires

SPOKANE, July 25 (AP)—Operations of a daily motor car fire patrol over the line of the Northern Pacific railway between Athol, Idaho, and Thompson Falls, Mont., throughout the forest fire season, has been announced by Superintendent W. C. Showalter of the Idaho division of the road.

The three or four men of the patrol are charged with the duty of putting out any fire they may find before it ordinarily would have time to spread to a large and costly blaze. The rail line between these points extends through portions of the Coeur d'Alene, Kankiku and Cabinet national forests. Trainmen on the Northern Pacific are ordered to carry a barrel of water, many snakes and shovels and other fire fighting equipment in each caboose until the forest fire hazard will have passed with the coming of the fall rains. Section foremen are being instructed that throughout the fire season they must inform agents and operators in which direction they are to work each day that they may be reached with all possible speed in case of fire. The Northern Pacific is under agreement with the forestry department to cooperate in every manner possible for fire protection.

Boston Professor Points Out Menace in College Control; Makes Plea for More Coordinated Action

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 27 (AP)—Cooperation between national societies representing college teachers on the one hand and the college administrative officers on the other as a means of arriving at a better understanding and better methods in American colleges and universities is suggested by Professor Harry W. Tyler. Professor Tyler is head of the mathematics department at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and secretary of the American Association of University Professors.

Referring to the recent enforced resignation of President Alexander Meiklejohn of Amherst college and the resignation of several Clark university professors accompanied by statements protesting against the methods of President Wallace W. Atwood, he says:

Defects Fundamental. "These events cannot be regarded as merely local in their significance. Quite regardless of the faults or merits of individuals is there not reason to infer that the events are merely symptoms of some more fundamental defect in the organizations of our higher institutions?"

Remarking that the college president is expected to make more or less successful appeal to all these groups, Professor Tyler says: "Under present conditions in this country each institution is left unto itself. Interesting and valuable experiments are easily tried here and there but with no certainty of permanence or imitation.

Gives Remedy "The way out to a better understanding and better method necessarily lies ultimately with the individual college but much will depend on organized and concerted action. The possibility of this new rests in such national societies as the American Association of University Professors on the one hand, representing the college teachers, and the Association of American Colleges, the Association of State Colleges, etc., on the other, representing administrative officers and to some extent trustees. Through the co-operation of these bodies it should for the first time in our educational history, be possible to deal with a national problem in a national way, establishing standards which may count on progressive acceptance by the colleges."

Arkansas Mountaineer Died in Electric Chair for Murder of Neighbor Known as "Moonshine King"

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 27 (AP)—Herbert Senese, Baxter county mountaineer, died in the electric chair for the state prison here this morning for the murder of R. S. Davidson, a neighbor, in the mountains in which Senese was said to have been a "moonshine king."

His execution marked the end of a long continued legal struggle, the first death having been met three times before. Each-time legal maneuvers had delayed the penalty.

THREE HELD

"I had knowledge of what was going on. I did that I did to cover up my friend, Floyd. I never received one cent out of it."

Floyd was quoted as saying: "I was not in this alone," and Vice President Harrington made a statement saying that Floyd had revealed to the bank directors that the shortage had begun three years ago when, he said, Mandell "put through some short checks," which the bank secretary had covered because of his friendship for the broker. Mandell, according to Vice President Harrington's version of Floyd's alleged confession, "proceeded to take advantage of him and induced him to advance money for various of Mandell's speculations."

Hid Activities

"By a very clever plan," Mr. Harrington said, "the secretary had kept the shortages from the knowledge of the bank officials and examiners."

Mandell gave himself up at the office of the district attorney late today with the declaration that he had "done nothing criminal."

Attempt to Cover Loss

E. F. Ryan, president of the bank, was on the way from Spokane, Wash., with securities, and Mrs. Josephine Leonard, one of the principal stockholders, was hastening from Washington, D. C., with more securities in an effort to meet the losses. Earlier in the day, when it was believed the shortages would not exceed $200,000, hope was expressed that the bank would be able to open Monday under a new charter. Whether this hope still prevails was not revealed, pending the arrival tomorrow of President Ryan. One bank official, nevertheless, pointed out that both Mr. Ryan and Mrs. Leonard "are very rich people and no doubt will replace the embezzled securities."

HARRY PIDGEON SAILS Thirty-Six Foot Yawl from Los Angeles to Islands of Marquessa

LOS ANGELES, July 27 (AP)—Harry Pidgeon, 46-year-old mariner, who sailed alone from Los Angeles harbor eighteen months ago for the Marquessa islands in a 36-foot yawl, has decided to extend his trip to a voyage around the world, a 33,000 mile voyage, according to a letter received from him at the New Hebrides. Since he visited the Marquessa islands 12 months ago Pidgeon is called at Tahiti, Society Islands, Samoa, Fiji Islands, and the New Hebrides.

Pidgeon is now on the way to Australia and New Zealand. From there he plans to sail to the East Indies, China and Japan, thence south and westward to the east coast of Africa. From the Cape of Good Hope he plans to attempt the dangerous direct route to Cape Horn and then up the west coast of South America, he says.

In the letter Pidgeon describes the hardships he went through in his lone voyage in the small craft he built here. The letter tells of numerous battles with the elements, of careful measures taken to obtain food and water, of dangers met in fever-infested villages and of the savages with whom he made acquaintance.

Fiji Islanders, said to be the most feared cannibals of the south seas, proved friendly to Pidgeon, whose previous opinion of the Fijians, obtained from reading novels of the South Seas, materially improved.

TREATS POLICE ON BOGUS BILL

HONOLULU, T. H., July 27 (AP)—Frank Louis, prisoner in the city jail, was to have been released at the conclusion of his term recently. He gave a party to his languishing comrades to celebrate the event. Louis gave Ah (King) a trusty, a $20 bill and told him to bring back sufficient ice cream and cake to satisfy everyone in the jail, including police and detectives.

The joy was short-lived, however. The proprietor of the confectionery store who had furnished the edibles appeared, waving the $20 bill, which had been tendered by Louis. It was a counterfeit. It then developed that the bill had been stolen from a package kept in the jail office as evidence in a case.

Louis today celebrates in the city bastille.

ALASKAN POLICY

might be with Mrs. Harding and by train to spend a week in California, beginning a visit Sunday and Monday to Yosemite national park. Prinsie was bestowed on the people of Alaska as the finest, most hospitable people in all the world.

Preliminary Report

"Let me say that I shall undertake no more than a preliminary report at this time," he continued. "He who is the future of Alaska and formulate a program for its realization, on the strength of such a fleeting glimpse as has been permitted to us, will be a wiser, and a far bolder man than I. We have seen, much, but it is only a little of the stupendous whole."

More than that, we have earnestly strengthened our faith in the future of Alaska as the home of a great state in the American commonwealth.

"There has been a disposition in many quarters to assume that Alaska has been lately experiencing a serious setback. This seems to be based on a loss of rather less than 15 per cent in population from 1910 to 1920, and on some curtailment of the territory's production of wealth. Judgments adverse to Alaska will not be based on such conditions, save by the unintelligent cry down the country's ability as a land of homes, in the hope of getting it turned over to wholesale exploitation on a scale that would ruin it for all the future. Against a program of vicious exploitation we must stand firmly. Our program must be a development of Alaska for Alaskans."

No Panacea.

"It may be said now, as well as later, that there is no panacea for Alaska; largely because Alaska needs none, but also because Alaskan troubles flow from the same general causes which make troubles elsewhere. The world has turned up so much of its capital that there is not enough to go around. When the stocks of liquid capital are restored, Alaska will come in for a better share than ever before has fallen to its lot, simply because our country, if it clings to stable ways, will be the greatest capital in the world. It imposes an onerous duty to believe that when that time comes Alaska will go forward at lost will soon be more than regained. "The greatest Alaskan industry stands in an entirely different relation than either gold or copper. I refer to the fisheries which in present wealth producing potency far exceed the mines. In fact, the fisheries product is now in value more than double that of all the metals and minerals. It is too great for the good of the territory for it shall continue without more general and effective regulation than is now imposed, it will presently exhaust the fish and leave no basis for the industry."

"I have alluded to threatened destruction of the fisheries, due to admitted lack of regulation and protection. We have begun on the safe plan with the forests, even though we may have erred in excessive restrictions. With the lesson of forest destruction we have learned, with the nation wide call for forestation throughout the states, which will require generations and vast painstaking, it has been thought to provide utilization of the Alaskan forests and at the same time provide their perpetuation through reforestation."

The president detailed the government plan for production of pulp wood and added:

"A cord of wood produces about three-fourths of a ton of paper, that is, the manufacturer pays 35 cents for wood and water power rights to make a ton of paper worth about $70. Can it be charged that three-fourths of one per cent for those two raw materials is so heavy a tax as to paralyze industry? I reply it is not, and that so such charges as actually made by intelligent and sincere people."

"Red Tape"

"But there is also a protest that the red tape of departmental regulations and interference makes it impossible to enlist enterprise which the government in any wise supervises. At this point the answer is easy. This very type of contract is made by the government with the timbering interests in the national forests in both Alaska and the states, and the manufacturers have been working under it for more than a decade with entire satisfaction."

"There is petroleum in the territory. A small production is already affording a profitable return, refined in Alaska for Alaskan consumption. There are developments now in process by some of the larger commercial oil interests, and there are dreams of measureless oil resources in the most northerly sections which are expressed in terms which sound more fabulous than real."

capital which the ordinarily justifiable

"I have left agriculture to the last in this consideration of Alaska's leading resources and possibilities. That is because of the conviction that an examination of the others was necessary to understand the agricultural problem. Our policy toward agriculture must depend largely on the attitude we shall adopt toward these other resources. If we are to turn Alaska over to the exploiters, to have one after another of its resources wrenched out of it by the ruthless means of mass efficiency, we will never create or need a real agriculture there. If, for example, we shall go on denuding the fisheries year by year till they have been ruined; and if, then, because a strike in the price of paper shall have made it profitable, we shall turn over the forest for a like exploitation and a like destruction, if in short, we are to lose Alaska as the possibility of profit arises, now in one direction, now in another, then we shall never have a state in Alaska; we shall never have a community of stabilized society and home people."

"If that is to be the Alaskan policy, we need not concern ourselves about agriculture. The adventurers and casual laborers, the masters of exploitation and agents of privilege, will be satisfied to live on canned vegetables and cold storage meat during the brief periods of their temporary stays. The slow processes and modest returns of agriculture will not appeal to them."

"But if on the other hand, we are to make a state of law, healthy and permanent community, we shall have to place its star on our flag, to shine for a land of hope and homes and opportunity for the average man, then we must commit ourselves to a program of moderation, of control, of rounded and uniform development. We must encourage the present tendency to make homes."

TALKS REVOLUTION.

ST. PAUL, July 27 (AP)—"Armed revolution" is among the possibilities the United States faces "unless conditions are changed," declared Magnus Johnson, farmer-labor senator-elect today, reiterating his statement made to the Associated Press yesterday. "I intended to emphasize," Mr. Johnson said, "that this country should not consider itself immune from armed revolution, although naturally all other means would be exhausted before the people of the United States would resort to arms."

"I am not a 'red' or an I. W. W., but there is no use disguising the fact that serious unrest is manifest throughout the country. # NEW LIGHT ON PEST'S TRAITS IS DISCOVERED

Ralph H. Smith, Entomologist, Tells Fruit Growers Here of Interesting Results of Investigators' Work

Lately discovered traits of the codling moth—that it troubles and extends its range—is responsible for the worms in apples—was revealed at a meeting held under auspices of the Twin Falls County Horticultural society in Parish hall here Friday evening by Ralph H. Smith, entomologist, who for some time up through years ago, conducted research investigations in Twin Falls for the state university extension division, and who now is employed in similar work by California creamery interests. Mr. Smith appeared before his hearers as an old friend, at the conclusion of the meeting mutual esteem found expression in a vote of thanks on the part of the fruit growers and response by Mr. Smith.

Codling; Doesn't Eat

"The codling moth worm digs into the apple; it does not actually eat through the skin, as is almost universally believed," Mr. Smith announced. "This explains why worms may enter unharmed directly through deposits of poison and why complete coverage of arsenate of lead will not give complete protection against worms and stings." Let us watch a newly hatched worm. Even before it has hatched, we see the tiny sharp jaws moving inside the egg shell. Soon the very small baby worm emerges. It crawls, sometimes for a few seconds, but often for several minutes and even for an hour or more, over the surface of the apple, apparently exploring for a place to hide or for a suitable place to make its nest. Here and there it may stop for a few seconds to deposit its delicate little jaws on the tough, hard apple skin. Finally we see it grasping almost frantically at the surface of the apple with its six tiny feet; the whole force of the body is thrown into the head and the jaws are gouging and twisting in a strenuous effort to penetrate the skin. Bit by bit the skin and underlying tissue is torn away, but so far as one can observe under a high power microscope, every bit is thrown to one side of the hole into the surface of the apple. If the thing is actually swallowed, it happens purely in an incidental manner. This instinct of the worm in rejecting the skin is a thoughtful provision of nature. Nature would not be so rude as to provide that a tough, hard piece of apple skin also be the first bit of food that is taken into the stomach of a newly hatched baby worm.

Gets Poison Incidentally.

"If the worm digs into the apple, how, then, does it become poisoned at all? This question cannot be answered with certainty. Perhaps in crawling about on the surface of the apple and in trying its jaws, some poison is taken into the mouth. In digging through the skin some particles of arsenate of lead probably are gathered on the jaws and on other parts of the mouth, which come into contact with the surface of the apple, and in this manner are swallowed. If we consider the fact that the baby worm is taken into an empty stomach, probably before a single bite of food has been eaten, we will readily understand why even the very small est trace of poison may prove fatal.

Affects Control Methods.

"These facts just mentioned have a very important bearing on the practical control of the codling moth. We will only say in brief that in spraying, with the promise that a more complete discussion, together with experimental data, will appear later. Passing by the problem of applying arsenate and the technique of spraying, we would first state our observations that there are three most important facts which govern the efficiency of arsenate of lead in protecting apples against worm injury. First in importance is the completeness with which the surface of the apple is covered with the poison; second, the thickness of the arsenate of lead covering on the apple; and third, the toxicity of the poison itself. It is easy to understand that, for the most effective control of worms, the apple should be completely covered throughout the worm season by an unbroken coating of poison. The important advances of sprayers of the past few years afford a solution of the problem of accomplishing this complete coverage. The second factor of the thickness of the spray covering, is the one which we call particular attention to.

Thick Coating Essential.

"A comparative thick coating of arsenate of lead on the apple is essential for the greatest protection against worms and stings. The thicker the covering of poison is, the less chance the worm has of getting through the skin without getting poisoned. This, of course, brings into question the recommendation repeatedly made that there is no advantage in applying more than a few ounces of arsenate of lead to one hundred gallons. The writer has made this recommendation a number of times, but studies which have been made for the past two or three years has convinced him beyond all question of doubt that under certain circumstances the use of arsenate of lead stronger than two pounds to one hundred gallons is absolutely necessary for satisfactory control of worms. Take, for example, the case of the codling moth last year or in any season when an unusually large number of eggs result from the first brood of moths, or let us take western Colorado, where the average loss from codling moth the past two or three years has been about 50 per cent of the total crop. Here, we believe, the use of an increased dosage of arsenate of lead, especially in the first and second cover sprays, to be essential to satisfactory control."

Urges Economy In Spraying.

Many growers, Mr. Smith told his audience, waste more spray than is actually required to cover the trees. Under conditions prevailing here he advised use of a nozzle discharging three gallons of water to 300 pounds of pressure. With this equipment, he said, he had Friday conducted some experiments in an orchard here and found that trees with an average spread of 21 feet and from 18 to 20 feet high could be covered thoroughly in not more than two minutes' time.

In reply to question, Mr. Smith touched upon methods of control of some of the insect pests found in orchards here, and introduced some insect friends of the fruit grower.

Buffalo tree hoppers, that have become more numerous in the past three years, he said, fed on alfalfa and the only way to get rid of them is to get rid of alfalfa between the trees.

Leaf hister mites yield to the application of lime and sulphur spray early in the spring.

The apple webber worm, that attacks fruit as well as leaves on the ends of boughs, and that soon will be laying its eggs on the bark of the trees, is most effectively attacked by use of miscible oil late in the spring, just before the buds open. If, of oil, Mr. Smith advised, has become more general since oil for the purpose have been better perfected, and may be applied without danger of injury to trees.

Introduces Insect Friends.

Among the insect friends introduced by Mr. Smith were the aphid lion, an alligator like worm that hatches from white eggs suspended at the end of hairs on fruit or branches and feeds on the woolly aphid. The lady beetle also came in for high praise from the insect specialist.

Mr. Smith demonstrated the operation of the codling moth trap by means of which development of the pest may be observed and the proper time for spraying determined, and exhibited specimens of the pest in various stages of development of the pest.

DENIES GOD'S PURPOSE IS VENGEANCE UPON MAN

Salvation Army Crusader, in Telling Appears, Declares His Alone Divides Humanity from Its Maker

According to Lieutenant Colonel Davis, Salvation Army crusader, who is conducting a revival campaign in the Lavinger theater here, God is not an avenging person constantly on the watch to execute judgment on wrongdoers, that many have considered him to be, but His greatest desire is to do men good, to help and bless and save them.

"The only thing that can separate God and man and keep them apart is sin," the crusader stated in his sermon Friday evening. "and the distance between God and man is only as great as man's sin. Men sin themselves further way from God every day, then continue to live in sin, and the distance between man and God is obliterated when he reaches the place where he determines to denounce and be done with sin forever."

"Insign, the man who wrote the words of the text, was an old fashioned preacher and he did not believe in calling a spade anything else than a spade. He spoke plain unvarnished truth, and if he did not get four to see the blood," the crusader stated, "a physician does not hesitate to bring blood if it is necessary for the well being of the patient. He must be brought to a realization of his true condition before God, and when he does reach that place he is concluded."

Another meeting will be held Saturday night at 8 o'clock, according to Captain Houghton.

Circus Bills Bring Joy to Youngsters

Coming of Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Aggregation to Twin Falls Is Announced

Small boys and girls and even adults in Twin Falls are happy today. Everywhere the bright and gay lithographs and posters, telling of the wonders of the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace circus meet the eye. This city as well as surrounding countryside for 50 miles have been covered with bills announcing the coming of the world's greatest wild animal show on Friday, August 10th, for afternoon and night performance with a mile long street parade at 11 a. m.

"In the old days, the circus bills were made to catch the eye, and frequently the show did not have what was advertised. But all that is changed now, and no longer do the big circuses advertise something that they do not carry."

"Truth" in advertising is one of the slogans of the Hagenbeck organization. When the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus comes here the circus patrons will find under the "big top" everything that has been advertised, and when they read the "world's greatest wild animal show," that is just the real facts. The Hagenbeck reputation on both sides of the Atlantic for trained animals is established, and this year more wild animal acts are carried than in past seasons.

Big feature acts, gathered from the four corners of the globe, exactly as they played in the best cities last winter, on the first metropolitan tour ever played by a circus, are what make the Hagenbeck-Wallace a real circus in every way.

Heading this great galaxy of stars will be found the world's greatest riding clown, "Orin" Davenport, and the Riding Davenport, the premier act of the circus world. "Orin" is the best riding clown in the world, and he will prove a joy to the kiddies, whether their age be six or sixty.

A total of 200 performers, 150 wild animal acts; 100 domestic animals and 50 clowns, not counting the thoroughbred horses, take part in the performance, which is offered in three rings, a steel arena and on the Roman hippodrome track.

Hansen Span Outstanding Scenic Feature of Twin Falls Country

The tourists' park on Friday presented a very different appearance from that of Thursday, there being only eight cars parked, and the number of passengers was less in each car. The following states were represented: Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Nebraska, California and New York.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Glescock and Leroy Grant of Salem, Oregon, made a short stop on their way to Okla-homa.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Inselman of Fort Collins, Colorado, left home June 14 and are just wandering around. They are much pleased with this part of Idaho.

J. A. Ferguson, John White and A. C. Bledsoe from North Platte, Nebraska, compose another roving party with no particular destination. They will go to Boise for their next stop. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ward of Elmira, N. Y., accompanied by Misses Mildred Ward and Frances Carpenter, are strolling around with Ford and then somewhere else as their destination. Miss Carpenter is traveling for her health, and she says that she is much better than when she started.

In answer to the inquiry as to what impressed them most on their trip, several said that the Hansen bridge took first place. They say that coming to it so unexpectedly, looking down into the canyon, is an experience long to be remembered.

All are loud in their praise of our crops and fine farms, but they are slow to believe that less than 20 years ago this was a sage brush desert.

LOS ANGELES, July 27 (AP)—Dogs are more popular than cats, according to the Los Angeles Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which reports that of 149 dogs received recently homes were found for 78, while of 545 cats only 61 have found refuge. Three homeless weasels were still homeless.

THE WHEAT SITUATION

On the face of the matter it would seem that it is up to somebody to do something about the wheat market, at least that is the view of the average man. The present price of wheat is such as to result in a loss rather than a profit to the farmers as a whole.

In high places and in low the demand for action is general, but just what sort of action can be taken that will really benefit the farmer or anybody else remains to be seen.

For the government to guarantee the price of wheat, that is to say, make itself responsible for the price which the grower shall receive, would merely be to put the Government in the wheat business. There is, however, another way which might offer a solution, namely, that Government aid be given the growers to enable them to hold their wheat for a time.

Whether a plan of this sort could be worked out or not, whether such plan would be economically sound if it were worked out are matters which would require a degree of investigation perhaps over a long period of time.

By and large, the proposition of organized co-operation among the farmers themselves seems to promise the best way of out-difficulty. Over-production may be one of the factors in the case; so, too, may be the elimination of competition for the grain as brought about, through recent Congressional action. Be that as it may, if a degree of organization could be effected which would enable the farmer to hold his wheat instead of being compelled to dispose of it immediately the harvest is over no matter what the price, it is a question if there would be any real basis for the over-production idea.

TRADE PEACE WITH CANADA

Canada's recently authorized embargo on pulpwood from freehold lands may seem to invade trade war between the two countries. This nation might begin its retaliatory measures with embargoes on coal, oil, sulphur and other products greatly needed by the Canadian mills.

But where would it all lead to? Who would profit by it? Certainly neither Canada nor the United States would profit. Whatever the immediate cause provoking Canada's action, it would seem to be up to the United States to try conciliation rather than retaliation. Friendly concessions from this side of the border should lead to concessions from the other side. Peace in trade and prosperity between these two great democracies is as possible as their long-standing and noteworthy peace in all other matters.

FORTY PER CENT WASTE

War-time surveys, made by engineers of national reputation, revealed that in six industries—the metal trades, books, textiles, building, printing and men's clothing—the individual percentages of waste ran from twenty to sixty-four per cent, and averaged more than forty per cent.

The statement comes from Frederick M. Folker of the United States Department of Commerce, who adds that, if the correctness of the estimate be assumed, and the average holds throughout the nation's industries, the annual loss in labor, capital, time, thought and effort approaches twenty million dollars. The figures are appalling, but the department makes plain that the fault is not primarily that of the manufacturer.

Maximilian's Widow Is Reported Dying

Former Empress Charlotte, widow of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico and aunt of the King of the Belgians, King Albert, is reported dying in her chateau at Bouffontaine, Belgium. Charlotte is 63 and has been insane since the execution of her husband in 1867. She is known as "The Mad Empress of Mexico," suffering from hallucinations that she is still in Mexico City, in control of the Mexican nation.

Buyers control production, and waste cannot be eliminated simply by efficiency in manufacture and distribution. Intelligent buying is essential also, for supply always waits upon demand. There is, really, no reason why there should be as many kinds of axes, for instance, as there are women's hats, but three American manufacturers are turning out six thousand, one hundred eighteen different kinds. We cite this one industry, not as a horrible example, but as indicating the national trend.

Too many enterprises are seeking business on the theory of something new every year. They should be interested in something better.

THE WILL AND THE WAY

The misunderstood flapper who says she cannot get ahead with her music because of her un sympathetic surroundings and who longs for a musical atmosphere may take heart from Schumann-Hoink's statement quoted in a recent book on "The Art of the Prima Donna." "When I hear young girls complain of a lack of 'artistic environment' I look back on the days when I studied my Wagnerian roles while I was watching the children's dinner cook on the kitchen stove."

"Exactly," Fortier made a gesture. "You see? The power plant is a blind! It will never be anything except a dam. Now, then, why did your uncle obtain the right to dam that bayou? Because, in so doing, he would check the overflow of water which made the lower portion of Cypressport island the richest bit of rice land in the state!"

The girl nodded. She regarded him gravely, trouble lying deep in her clear eyes. "Now let us digress a moment," pursued Fortier. "I must pry into your personal affairs before going on with this story of the dam. If you were wealthy, the dam could not hurt you. But you told me that you were not. Is your land mortgaged?"

She Regarded Him Gravely.

"I suspect nobody," returned Fortier, "and least of all, Philbrick. Perhaps he let a poor manager, a poor overseer. Fortier nodded. He perceived only too well how things had gone. "Did your uncle encourage this expenditure? Or was he ignorant of it?" The gray eyes flashed suddenly. "Oh! That is true! I remember now—and it was Felix who said he could get it for me at a low price. "How much?" queried Fortier dryly. "Let me see—I think fifteen hundred."

"Very well. Now I can understand things much better," said Fortier. "Let me show you now, just what can be done by your uncle. When or before the dam is completed, he will order Philbrick to install an irrigation system. If Philbrick neglects to do it, and the rice crop falls, Macarty can obtain a judgment against you in the courts. I suppose you have no idea what such a system would cost?"

"Yes," said the girl unexpectedly, and drew a card from her pocketbook. "There are the figures. I obtained them yesterday. Pumping system and all. "Have you sufficient money to install it?" "Not by half. Unless we mortgage the island." Fortier made a comprehensive gesture, and turned back in his chair.

"There is the whole thing in a nutshell. Miss Lavergne. All is perfectly legal. We cannot proceed against your uncle in any way, shape or fashion. The damage has been done, and there is nothing to do but to pay the piper. That is correct. If Philbrick is ordered to install an irrigation system—we shall know that the suspicion is true. But we can prove no conspiracy or other wrong."

"I believe that you have diagnosed the whole matter correctly," said the girl calmly. "Surely there must be some way of escape!" Fortier nodded, drumming on the desk-top with his fingers. "None. We haven't finished our diagnosis yet, however. Why is your uncle doing this? Let us say, to get control of Cypressport plantation. Then, for what reason? He is wealthy enough. At least, he is comfortably well off. Why does he want that island?"

"Alone shook her head. "I do not know. He has never said that he wanted it." "Of course. Is anything there of some great value?" "The house and its contents, yes. Otherwise, nothing." "The eyes of Fortier searched her face. "Pardon me, Miss Lavergne—but has your cousin ever proposed marriage?" "The question brought no confusion to her eyes. She nodded quietly. "Yes, several times. I do not care for him, however. You mean, that if I were to marry him, that the thing would be solved? Yes, I understand. But that is entirely out of the question, Mr. Fortier!"

"Good!" exclaimed Fortier. Her eyes widened. "Why do you say that?" Fortier laughed suddenly, boyishly. "Because I'm pleased that you've escaped! From what I have learned, it does not believe your cousin to be entirely honorable—to be the sort of man for whom you would care. So, for your sake, I'm pleased!"

"Now, indeed, a slight change of color crept into the girl's cheeks. "There is absolutely nothing to be done at present," pursued Fortier quickly. "But I would suggest that you write Philbrick, tell him that you have wakened to the truth, tell him all about your talks with me. If he is served with a notice to irrigate the island, that will mean open war with your uncle." "In the meantime, I would suggest no open break with the Macarty's—at least, not until you get home again. Keep everything pleasant, if possible, at any price. I want to learn everything that I can about David Macarty, here in the city and about his son. Then, when it is time to go down to Cypressport and make an investigation on the spot."

"To what end?" queried the girl. "You say there is no hope—?" "No, not I said there was no escape," Fortier laughed. "There is always hope, Miss Lavergne! If I go down there, it will be fight. I tell you I will fight it. It is a chance of continuing matters with Macarty is a legal battle—as things now stand. Down there, on the ground, I may find many loopholes."

"She regarded him steadily for a moment. "Shall I give you a note to Philbrick, then?" Fortier shook his head. "Let us wait. I shall be busy here for several days, in any case, and there is no immediate hurry. When I shall go to the island is uncertain. One must first go to Latouche!" "That is the end of the railroad," she assented. "You had better write Philbrick with a check, now, so that he can meet you with a launch. But he, Fortier, if you are going to give your time to such an investigation, I wish that you would have some agreed compensation with me. You understand, I am thinking hard about money these days, when I should have been doing it in past months and years!"

"The calm gray eyes of the girl, kindled for a moment—kindled into a swift flame that came and went again. Then she turned to the door. "Very well. Au revoir!" Fortier showed her out. When the door of the outer office had closed behind her, he turned and met the gaze of the typist. Miss Smith smiled at him.

"What a beautiful gown!" said the little stenographer. "Yes!" murmured Fortier. "I didn't observe it." "A gentleman was here a few moments ago. He refused to give his name or to wait, but said he would be back shortly."

"With a bill to collect!" and Fortier's lips curled whimsically. "Still, I can pay it!" "No, sir—I think he was a client." "Impossible! Well, if he comes, bring him in." Fortier returned to his desk and forgot the new client. His thoughts were of Aline Lavergne. Everything in him revolted against the chance of that rare flower being stripped and plundered by the Macarty's. Either plot or circumstances had placed her in their power; but she could see no logical way of working out her salvation. Yet he knew that somehow, somewhere, he must find a way.

"And what about the motive?" he reflected, puzzled by this point. "They're spending a lot of time and money to work it adroitly—why? Merely to get hold of her plantation? I hardly think so. There must be something behind it all." Miss Smith knocked and came into the office. She closed the door behind her. "He's here again!" she exclaimed eagerly. "He has no card. His name is Thompson."

Fortier nodded and gestured assent. Miss Smith showed in the caller. He was a tall, stooping man with mournful eyes and large hands. He was dressed in dark blue, and his yachting cap bore the insignia of some craft. "You're Mr. Fortier?" he said. "My name's Thompson. I've just heard that a relative of mine has died in San Francisco, leaving me some money. I'm a seaman—second mate on a craft here in harbor—and I'm tied up. Can I hire you to go to Frisco and get my money?"

Fortier shook his head. "I'm afraid not, Mr. Thompson. I'm quite busy, and can't very well—?" "Oh, there's money in it for you!" interjected Thompson quickly. "Maybe you think I'm poor? But I ain't. I got a thousand in my pocket to advance you—a thousand in cash. Then I'll give you a percentage on the estate. It ain't an immense sum—about thirty thousand all told. It's worth it to me to have it attended to."

"It's quite impossible," said Fortier curtly. "If you'll step to the office of Gray & Fortier, on the floor above, you'll be able to get your case handled—and you'll not have to pay out so large a fee. Good day." Thompson, with a growl, departed. The man seemed ill pleased. Lighting a cigar, Fortier stood looking out the window, over the array of roofs and office buildings opposite. How he would have jumped at this client, only a few days ago! How the very thought of a thousand-dollar fee would have made him pulse leap! And now he had turned down the man with scant courtesy. Why? A tap on the door. Miss Smith, sager in her employer's behalf, entered. "Was it another client?" she exclaimed. Fortier turned, removed the cigar from his lips, and smiled. He knew and appreciated the kindly quality of her curiosity—was aware that it held no impertinence.

"No," he said whimsically. "It was a gentleman who had a bribe in his pocket, Miss Smith. The next caller, I presume, will carry a blackjack!" She stared at him, wide-eyed. "I don't understand, Mr. Fortier!" "Unfortunately, Miss Smith, I cannot explain. But don't be alarmed—and don't take my words literally. By the way, I shouldn't be here until noon tomorrow. And if any other clients show up, turn 'em over to Gray & Fortier, upstairs." Miss Smith looked horrified.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Are Female Feet Proper Subject of Discussion?

When George Du Maurier wrote "Trilby," he did not, it seems, dispose for all time of the question of female feet. In the Latin quarter of Paris in the Victorian age there was much ado about them, as Little Billie very well knew. In New York they are probably not as much discussed but much more commercially important. In the first place, it is doubtful if the Paris of "Trilby" time ever boasted such a thing as a chiropodist. Times have changed a little since then, but not much. One is not more likely to mention one's "great toe" in this year of 1923 than one's grandmother was on the day of her wedding anniversary in 1823.

W. J. Bryant, who denials absolutely that intimate relations exist between us and the monkeys never—and this can be said without contradiction—studied in the Latin quarter of Paris, where it is said upon the authority of many great artists that the ugliness of the average woman's foot is only exceeded by the ugliness of the rear view of the average woman's knees. Some one who has lived long in the upper reaches of Manhattan island has discovered that there are more chiropodists in that region than any place else. He has wondered why. The answer, which has been supplied, correct or not, is that the Jews are an Oriental people and that the Oriental people are notoriously troubled with ailments of the foot.

The story of the American Expeditionary forces in France can, according to a great many of our greatest generals, be written in terms of feet. These feet were at times incased in socks; at times were covered with blisters; at times were naked. It is said to have been Napoleon who announced the proclamation that "an army travels on its stomach," but modern warfare has shown that an army travels on its feet, French railway cars to the contrary notwithstanding.

As a noted chiropodist was recently quoted, "There is nothing to show where the brains have been used, but on the foot there grows a callous." No one shivers when a woman removes her hat, but it is customary to turn one's head when she takes off her shoes. Her head is apt to be sleek, well rounded—rather glossy, in fact—but her feet—well, one does not look directly at them. A beautiful woman cherishes her hand as a part of her beauty. It can be seen in its graceful lines even within the confines of her glove—its long, tapering fingers, its oval nails, its supple strength and all the rest of its beauty. You can't see that in the foot. You can't see through the shoe the arched instep, the pink toes, the velvety skin, the well-chiro-podized nails—you can't see any of that. In fact, in a shoe you can't see anything at all except the size of a woman's foot, and that doesn't tell anything about it. Size of a woman's shoe does not mean anything, chiropodists say, but those amateur mathematicians who pick out wives for husbands and husbands for prospective wives look a whole lot at the feet of boys and girls. "Look at the size of her feet, and you'll know what kind of a woman she is. You don't want to marry a chronic case of corns and bunions, do you? Then see if he (or she) has well-shaped, healthy feet. Naturally it is not a subject of polite conversation, but there are ways of finding out."

RECORDS GIVEN OF NEW SUCCESS OF CHAUTAQUA

Association Re-elects Its Officials and Begins Work Looking Toward Return of Institution Next Year

Detailed records of the most successful Chautauqua in Twin Falls history which was closed Thursday evening, were laid before members of the Twin Falls Chautauqua association at a meeting in the high school auditorium Friday evening, by the secretary in a report showing aggregate receipts in the sum of $2113.50, with a surplus to divide equally between the Chautauqua system and the local association amounting to $113.50.

In appreciation of the success attained in this year's Chautauqua, members of the association re-elected all of the association officers, as follows: Chairman, M. C. Mitchell; vice chairman, Mrs. B. E. Morse; recording secretary, Dr. G. H. Caldwell; corresponding secretary, Miss Jewel Fraser; treasurer, James Fitzgerald.

Director Wins Praise. Miss Letha Chapman, director of Twin Falls Chautauqua, came in for high praise, and the members at Friday evening's meeting directed the secretary to dispatch letters of appreciation to Miss Chapman and to the Chautauqua system by which she is employed.

The association cast its vote for Charles Wesley Tenney of Gooding college, as Chautauqua trustee for this district, and nominated Mrs. B. E. Morse as candidate for the position at next year's election.

Discussion with respect to this year's Chautauqua program and possible improvements in the course for next season, and in relation to grounds for Chautauqua site, occupied considerable time.

Individual views varied as to merits or demerits of this year's program, and there was no general agreement in any specific instance. The secretary, however, was directed to communicate to the Chautauqua system a summary of individual views expressed.

Site Presented Problem. Discussion relative to a Chautauqua site, brought into relief again the controversy over use of the city park for this purpose, while numerous other sites were suggested. A committee to confer with the board of education relative to possible use of the school grounds for this purpose was named, as well as a committee on grounds.

C. B. Stevens, C. E. Blisbee and Dr. Caldwell were named as members of the grounds committee, and O. W. Witham, W. H. Wild and F. W. Meech, as members of the committee to interview the board of education.

It was suggested that the contract committee, headed by C. B. Stevens, to whom principal credit was ascribed for the signing on the second day of this year's course of the contract for next year's Chautauqua, be continued as a permanent committee.

The secretary's report on Chautauqua receipts showed sale of 690 adult tickets, 140 students tickets and 281 children's tickets.

The meeting Friday evening was presided over, in the absence of M. C. Mitchell, chairman, by Mrs. B. E. Morse, upon whom much of the responsibility resting upon the association in connection with this year's Chautauqua had devolved.

Warrants Out For Delinquent Realtors

State Law Enforcement Agent Charges Failure on Part of 14 Here to Obtain Licenses

Warrants for the arrest of 14 real estate dealers in Twin Falls on charges of failure to obtain current licenses required under provisions of state law, were issued Friday by Kennedy Packard, justice of the peace, upon application of Charles Laurence, agent of the state department of law enforcement.

Realtors upon whom service of the warrants were obtained Friday evening, were ordered to appear for trial in the justice court Saturday evening.

Proceedings were instituted here, Mr. Laurence said, in connection with a state-wide drive to enforce compliance with the law requiring license, which was adopted by the state legislature in 1921, with the sanction of the request of numerous real estate brokers who sought thereby to eliminate cut-throats brokers.

Sees Prospect For Lower Freight Rate

Twin Falls Mayor Takes Optimistic View of Farmers' Considered at Boise

Optimism over the prospect for freight rate reduction downward was expressed Friday by Ehad L. Hodgkin, Twin Falls mayor, upon his return from Boise, where he participated Thursday in a conference of mayors of southern Idaho towns from Weiser to Blackfoot, which launched a concerted effort toward effecting lower transportation charges for Idaho products.

Following the perfection of an organization and the selection of an executive committee composed of Mayor Hodgkin of Twin Falls, Mayor C. Bon Ross of Pocatello, Mayor J. B. Woodward of Payette, E. T. Peck of Blackfoot, and Mayor Sherman of Boise, a resolution was passed declaring the purpose of the conference to seek emergency freight rates that will enable farmers of the state "to pass the peak of 1923." To this end the resolution declared, cooperation of the officials of the Union Pacific will be sought.

Toward the close of the meeting Joel Priest, general agent of the Union Pacific system; J. A. Beavers of Salt Lake, general freight agent of the Oregon Short Line, and A. E. Hobbs, also of the Short Line, joined the meeting. If the company could be assured that reduction would go to the producer it might be more readily obtained, Mr. Beavers declared, pointing out the Union Pacific building program in Idaho this year and asserting that any rate reductions would be continued on the basis of reduction in the company's expenses.

Continuing Trip—Ralph H. Smith, formerly Idaho extension division agent, now in the employ of California creamery interests, who spent Friday here visiting friends among fruit growers of this region, will leave Saturday evening for Grand Junction, Colorado, where he will engage in research investigations in cooperation with the Colorado experiment station.

Females Accused and Accused—On the theory that accused and accuser in the case were equally guilty, Police Magistrate D. Davis, at the conclusion of a trial Friday, sentenced Clifford Zacharias, 18, to pay a fine of $10 and costs of $5, and imposed an equal penalty against Hazel White, 22, who preferred charges of simple assault against the youth. The fine in both cases was remitted and both principals in the case were paroled.

Dr. White Dangoously Ill—Dr. John E. White, pioneer resident and prominent farmer of the Twin Falls district, is a patient at the county general hospital, suffering from an unknown affection that has been pronounced critical by Dr. John E. Coughlin, the attending physician. Some weeks ago Dr. White was kicked on the calf of the leg by a colt, and it is feared that as a result a blood clot has entered the circulatory system.

COUNTER-CLAIM ON NOTE FIGURES IN LAW SUIT

Conflicting Claims as to Financing of Milner Low Lift Pumps Operation Are Aired in Day-Long Trial

Conflicting claims in connection with a note for $258 given last spring by W. M. Pearis to D. B. Moorman as collateral security for payment advanced by Moorman to the Idaho Power company to secure electric current for operation of the Milner Low Lift Irrigation District's pumps this season were aired at a trial before Judge O. P. Davall in probate court here Friday. The trial occupied the entire day, and at its conclusion judgment was taken under advisement by the court.

Pearis claimed set-offs against the note on account of alleged overcharge for maintenance assessment made by the district's directors and for labor performed for the district. The alleged set-offs, if allowed would leave only about $11.50 payable to Moorman on the note.

H. J. Benoit represented Mr. Moorman and T. K. Hackman appeared as counsel for Mr. Pearis.

Friday Was Warm But Did Not Break Record

Mercury's climb Friday to a high point of 90 degrees, along with remains evidence of abnormal humidity for this region, by contrast with previously prevailing maximum temperatures, brought about a pretty general impression (horobouts that a new heat record for the season had been attained. Records of the government observatory's station, however, show that the reading would have had to be some five or six points higher to set such a record. Minimum for the 24-hour period was recorded at 54 degrees.

WOOD RIVER CLOUDBURST PUTS BARRIERS IN ROAD

Twin Falls Men Tell of Experiences in Deluge on Little Wood River—Bridges and Fences Across Roads

Bridges, fences and other debris were swept across roads by a cloudburst Wednesday in the Little Wood river country, interfering with traveling and rendering detours necessary, according to reports brought back by Ed. Minnerly and A. Erickson, who, with their families, returned Thursday evening from a few days' camping trip to the vicinity of Muldoon.

"A wall of water four feet high came down the canyon after the cloudburst," Mr. Minnerly said. "It swept fences and other obstructions aside. Luckily" we were camped at a point beyond the reach of the water, and the flood turned aside down a ravine just before it reached our camp. A terrific thunderbolt struck a tree not 200 yards away from our camp."
