PRESIDENT HARDING ANSWERS DEATH'S SUMMONS

GRIEF AFFECTS POPULATION OF CAPITAL CITY

News of President's Death Stuns Washington; Officials Give Statements of Sorrow

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP)—News of the death of President Harding fell with almost paralyzing effect on the nation's capital. Never fully awakened to the seriousness of his illness, officials of the government had been encouraged by the improvement of the past few days and a feeling of confidence that he would recover soon was almost universal.

All of those in high official position, however, had arranged for the notification in case of a relapse, and within a half hour after word of the president's death came, most of them had learned of it. In every case the news was received with expressions of painful shock.

As the news began to reach those on the street there were scenes of sorrow such as have not been witnessed here in many years. Never before had Washington been so unprepared to hear of the death of a chief executive, and the circle of Mr. Harding's friends was one extending down to some of the lowliest of the residents of the capital, for during his two and one-half years in the White House he had made a place in many hearts by his human qualities and his attitude of constant helpfulness toward everyone.

Forget Formalities
In the confusion of the moment there was little thought of the formalities by which Vice-President Coolidge was to be elevated to the presidency. The custom in the past has been for the cabinet to hold a meeting under the chairmanship of the secretary of state and to notify formally the vice president of the new responsibilities devolving automatically upon him under the constitution. Plans for any such action were taking shape but slowly tonight, however, under the overpowering weight of the sudden death of Mr. Harding.

Secretary Hughes and Postmaster General New are the only cabinet officers in Washington. Eight of them, together with the other officials high in the administration, were almost prostrated by the news.

Most members of congress also rose away from the capital but those remaining joined in the general expressions of sorrow and regret. Rudolph Forster, executive secretary at the White House, was first notified of the president's death by the Associated Press, as was Edward T. Clark, secretary to Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Clark immediately took steps to communicate with his chief in Plymouth, Vermont, by telephone.

New Overcome
Postmaster General New, close personal friend of Mr. Harding for many years, was informed of the president's death at his home here.

"I am too overcome to speak of it," he said. Pending further word from San Francisco, Mr. New said he would remain in Washington. As soon as Secretary Hughes heard of the death of the president he drove from his summer home near Washington to the state department and it was indicated that a statement probably would be issued regarding the steps to formally induct Mr. Coolidge into office.

It was the understanding at the White House that the new president would take the oath as soon as he could present himself before a federal judge and would come to Washington tomorrow. Orders detailing secret

Smith Gives Praise of Chief Executive

Congressman Sees Sudden Death of Harding as Severe Blow to True Patriots

Congressman Addison T. Smith, a personal friend of President Harding, gave out the following statement Thursday night, on learning of the death of the president:

"The death of President Harding brings sorrow to the home of every patriot in this country and deprives the nation of a chief executive who led the people, and who devoted himself continuously to the advancement of their best interests and the interests of the government he so nobly served. "He had made a most favorable impression throughout the world as a most wise and able executive of our great country, and his passing is a distinct and irreparable loss, not only to the United States, but to the world at large.

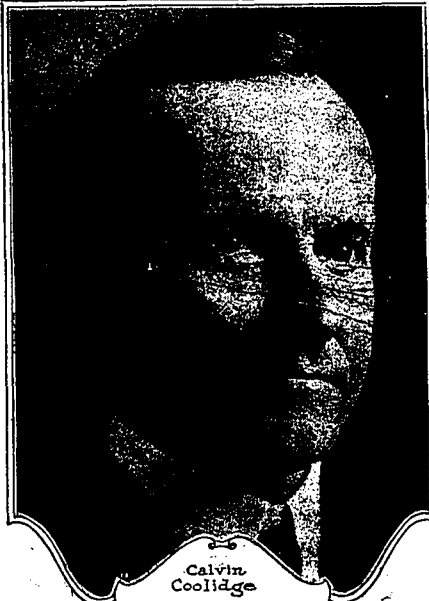

It was my good fortune to know the president personally for many years and I feel the greatest sorrow over his death."

WARREN G. HARDING

WARREN G. HARDING, twenty-ninth president of the United States, died at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night in his suite in the Palace hotel at San Francisco. Death came to the nation's chief executive suddenly, without warning, and at the end of a day during which the president's physicians reported he had been gaining in his battle with the illness which was first noticed on his return trip from Alaska. Mrs. Harding, who was at the bedside of her distinguished husband, was the first to sound the call for medical aid just before his death.

NEW PILOT AT NATION'S HELM

Calvin Coolidge

CALVIN COOLIDGE, former governor of Massachusetts and vice-president of the United States, will assume the office of president as the result of the death of President Harding. A lawyer by profession, Mr. Coolidge entered public service immediately after leaving college. He progressed through the offices of United States representative and senator and lieutenant-governor of his state. He was elected vice-president in 1920.

Kindness Marked Life of Nation's Chief Executive

Warren G. Harding brought to the presidency an infinite patience and kindness in dealing with public questions and men, which enabled him to handle the problems of government without the stress and worry which had hounded many of his predecessors.

Whatever else historians may say of him there probably will be little dispute that few chief executives came to office in peace time facing problems more complex in their nature or greater in number. All international affairs were unbalanced as never before, with many principal settlements of the great war still to be effectuated. As home the work of reconstruction had only just begun with bust-

EXECUTIVE IS SUDDENLY STRICKEN BY APOPLEXY

End Comes Without Warning; Slight Shudder Is Only Notice of Death; Mrs. Harding and Nurses Only Persons at Bedside when Death Came; President's Wife Issues Hurred Call for Assistance

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2 (AP)—President Harding died at 7:30 o'clock tonight, stricken by a stroke of apoplexy after having almost won his fight against broncho-pneumonia and other complications. The end came suddenly and without warning while Mrs. Harding, truly faithful to death, sat by his bedside reading to him. Two nurses were the only other persons in the room, and there was no time for a last word from the nation's leader either to his wife or to the republic he served. A shudder shook his frame, and, weakened by seven days of illness and worn by a trip of 7,500 miles from Washington to Alaska and return as far as this city, he collapsed, and it was over. Mrs. Harding only had time to rush to the door and call "Find Dr. Boone and the others quick," meaning the physician Dr. Sawyer, General Olson to the president, was in a nearby room, but when he hurried into the room medical skill was useless.

Mrs. Harding was as brave and strong after the end as she had been faithful to the end. Although not strong, and still affected by her illness of nearly a year ago, she declined she could not break down and she did not break down in the hour of her greatest grief.

Internment undoubtedly will be at Marlon, the small city where Warren G. Harding struggled determinedly against first a newspaper publisher, then as lieutenant governor, and then as United States senator to the highest office within the gift of the American people.

The news of the president's death, the saddest news that telegraph wires can carry, was flashed at 7:51 o'clock, as soon as a statement could be prepared. It was phoned in this evening. "The president died instantly, and without warning and while conversing with members of his family at 7:30 p. m. Death was apparently due to some brain involvement, probably an apoplexy.

"During the day he had been free from discomfort and there was every justification for anticipating a prompt recovery."

"C. E. SAWYER, M. D.
"RAY WOODRUF, M. D.
"C. W. COOPER, M. D.
"J. T. BOONE, M. D.
"HUBERT WORK, M. D."

Within a few minutes telegrams were sent to Calvin C. Coolidge, vice president of the United States, whom now devolves the duties and responsibilities of government.

The best explanation of the death of the chief executive may be found in a message sent by Lieutenant Commander Joel T. Boone, assistant to Dr. Sawyer, as the president's physician: "The president had a most splendid afternoon," he said. "When I left the room for dinner, I commented, 'Doesn't he look splendid?'"

"Then, all at once, he just went like that—'Dr. Boone snapped his fingers. 'Just like that; something snapped,' that's all."

Last Words
The last words of the president were spoken at instant before the apoplectic shock came to a brain that was tired. Mrs. Harding had been in her reading and her husband glanced up at his head and said: "That's good. Go on. Read some more."

Mrs. Harding appealed to find Dr. Boone and the other physicians and sent secret service men hurrying, and finding none of the physicians about the hotel, for it was the dinner hour, messengers were sent into the streets. Dr. Boone was found in the hotel dining-room and with him, hunched over his typewriter, he was well as Dr. Sawyer, who preceded him, were too late.

One of the representatives of the Associated Press, who have been on duty near the presidential suite ever since the chief executive was brought here, saw the hurrying secret service men, realized from instinct that the president's condition had undergone some sort of change—what change he knew not, ran to a wire and sent the news of the call for doctors and later the announcement that a statement soon would be given out.

Special Editions
It was 11:30 o'clock in New York and some of the other eastern cities and with the receipt of his new editions were held up and editors became alert and waiting. Twenty-one minutes later a small piece of white paper was handed out, containing news that had been feared. It was flashed across the country and around the great blue presidential flag with the gold seal of the United States hauled down and then raised again to half staff.

A minute or two later an assistant manager rushed into the Rose bowl room, where a dinner dance was in progress, raised a hand and stopped the orchestra's playing. Announcement was made that President Harding had died.

The news of President Harding's death reached through his hotel and out of San Francisco with almost electric suddenness. Hotel officials, among the first to whom word of the tragic event was given, immediately had the great blue presidential flag with the gold seal of the United States hauled down and then raised again to half staff.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY BODY

Trip to Be Made Direct to Washington; Mrs. Harding to Accompany Remains

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2 (AP)—The body of President Harding will leave San Francisco on a special train at about 7 o'clock Friday evening and will be directed to Washington by way of Reno, Ogden, Cheyenne, Omaha and Chicago.

This announcement was made tonight after a conference participated in by the four members of the president's official party in San Francisco, and was approved by Mrs. Harding.

The train will make no stops en route, except those necessary for its operation. The body of the president will be borne in the car, probably the same in which he made the trip from the capital to the Pacific coast. The train will carry the presidential party as composed during the trip across the country to Alaska, and also General Penning, Attorney General Daugherty, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Baughman and family, Mrs. Remsburg being a sister of the president.

The body will not be taken from the hotel except to go directly to the train and there will be only the very simplest private ceremony at the hotel before it is removed.

WORD TAKEN TO AGED FATHER.

MAMRON, Ohio, Aug. 2 (AP)—Dr. George T. Harding, aged father of the president, is most prostrated at the death of his son. Just as soon as the news of the president's death reached here a messenger went to the home of the president's father. Dr. Harding had just retired for the night and was only awakened after several minutes. Dr. Harding did not collapse when the news was broken to him. Shortly after the messenger notified the aged father of the president of his son's death, a few friends called and found him sitting in a chair, repeating, "Boy, this is terrible. Warren has gone. Warren and the interest of the country at heart. There never has been a president since Abraham Lincoln that had the interest of the country at heart like Warren."

NEW EXECUTIVE PLEDGES FAITH

Coolidge Gives Policy and Asks for Co-operation of All; Nation Will Carry On WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP)—Calvin Coolidge took the oath as president of the United States at Plymouth at 2:47 a. m. today. The new president was sworn in by his father, who is a notary public, and at whose home he was visiting. The text of the pledge as prescribed by the constitution was telephoned from the White House.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 3 (AP)—Calvin Coolidge, elevated suddenly to the presidency of the United States by the death of President Harding, was sworn in as the nation's chief executive this morning by his father, John Coolidge, in the living room of the latter's home here.

He plans to motor to Boston, taking the train there for the capital. Routes from his bed by a telegram from George B. Christian, secretary to President Harding, apprising him of the tragedy in San Francisco, the new president immediately met the sorrow-stricken John and Mary Coolidge, pledging himself to carry out the policies of his dead chief and friend.

Gives Policy.
Mr. Coolidge issued the following statement early today: "Reports are being spread to which I fear are correct, that President Harding is gone. The world has lost a great and good man. I mourn his loss. He was my chief and my friend."

"I will be glad to have any of the policies which he has begun for the service of the American people and for meeting their responsibilities wherever they may arise. For this reason, I shall ask the cooperation of all those who have been associated with the president during his term of office. Those who have given their efforts to assist him will be glad to retain in force that they may assist me. "I have faith that God will direct the destinies of our nation." President Coolidge sent the following telegrams: "We offer you our deepest sympathy. May God bless you and keep you. (SIGNED) "CALVIN COOLIDGE. "CALVIN COOLIDGE."

It was 11:50 o'clock eastern standard time, when the messenger arrived at the Coolidge house in an automobile from

Nurse Refuses to Leave Her Patient

Ruth Powderly Remained at Bedside of Harding During Five-Day Period

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2 (AP)—For the first time since President Harding's illness developed seriously on Sunday last, Miss Ruth Powderly, nurse in charge, allowed herself to be relieved today. "Miss Powderly was assisted today by Miss Sue Dausler, from the United States naval hospital at Mare Island, Cal., who joined the presidential party aboard the Henderson at Tacoma, on the trip to Alaska, and who later returned to her duties at Mare Island. "Miss Powderly, who is a nurse at the naval dispensary in Washington, came into prominence as nurse for the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. She acted as nurse for President Woodrow Wilson during his serious illness and later assisted in bringing President Harding through a slight attack of influenza, and Mrs. Harding through her serious illness. She is known as an unusually skilled and devoted nurse."

NATIONS SPLIT OVER POLICIES ON REPARATION

France and England Fail to Align on Vexing European Question; Advise Ending Passive Resistance

LONDON, Aug. 2 (AP)—Seldom has parliament separated for a long vacation under such an ominous cloud of difficult relations with an allied power as it did today after grave statements by the prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, in the house of commons, and the secretary for foreign affairs, Marquis Curzon, in the house of lords, revealing an apparently insurmountable divergence of views between England and France as to how to deal with the reparations question.

Although the ministerial statements revealed much more than had been expected of the details of the negotiations with France and Belgium, showing, for instance, that England in her draft note to Germany plainly advised the German government to withdraw her decrees abetting passive resistance in the Ruhr, yet the statements still leave the country in ignorance of the British government's next step and, judging from Lord Curzon's speech, the ministers themselves are not yet definitely decided on this point.

The government clearly hopes that it may still be possible to bring pressure to bear on the French government through an appeal, by laying its case before a new tribunal, namely the civilized world.

Will Disclose Details

It is indicated from Paris tonight that M. Poincare has no objection to the publication of the French side of the case, so that within a short time public opinion will be put in possession of all the details of the recent negotiations. In the comment in political headquarters tonight on the ministerial statements, the worst feature of the position as revealed today was considered to be that France in her reply did not deign even to refer to the draft note to Germany, and this was held to imply that under no circumstances could the French government be induced to consent to a joint reply to Germany as desired by the British government.

This view seems to be confirmed by a semi-official report from Paris to the effect that the French note insisted that the question of passive resistance eclipsed all other questions and must

IDAHO MINES TO START HYDRAULIC OPERATIONS

LEONIA, Idaho, Aug. 2 (AP)—Crowding 14 years of effort, by which seemingly insurmountable difficulties have been overcome, big scale hydraulic mining operations are expected to be started within a few days on the Idaho Gold and Ruby mine, near here. The hydraulic mining adventure is said to be the largest ever attempted in any part of the world.

Twenty miles of road were dug by steam shovel, six miles of ditch were constructed, dams and pipe lines were installed, and a permanent mill was built for receiving fine gold and black sands, in the 14 years of preparation for operations. Shutes have been built in the bedrock in the main canyon, and the bottom of the canyon is being cleaned up from a point about 100 feet upstream from the toe of the big cut in readiness for the expected cleanup of yellow treasure.

Resistance Continues

All advices from Germany recently have indicated that the German government is unlikely to withdraw its resistance decrees, and even if it did, its alleged passive resistance would continue at the same rate. Dr. St. Hamer, the German ambassador, in his latest conference with Lord Curzon, is reported to have laid stress upon the critical condition in Germany and how little it would take to overthrow the present Cuno government.

The British cabinet evidently has not reached a point where it is ready to pursue a separate policy away from France, but in a measure is still waiting on circumstances, this being probably due to the presence in the government of strongly pro-French ministers. The cabinet met today after the political ministerial debate, but it is said that no discussion was reached to dispatch a separate reply to Germany.

Lord Curzon is remaining for the present in London and the other ministers, although on vacation, will remain for the most part within call in the event of some new development in the situation. The foreign secretary received Count de Saint Aulaire, French ambassador, this afternoon, so that the year parties are continuing.

URGE ELIGIBLE BANKS TO JOIN RESERVE BODY

War Finance Official Advances Benefits to Result from Unity; Routs Reports of Poor Crops

CHICAGO, Aug. 2 (AP)—State banks eligible for membership in the federal reserve system were urged to affiliate with the national organization, in a statement made public today by Director Eugene Meyer, jr., of the war finance corporation, summarizing his conclusions from a recent series of conferences with a number of the corporation throughout the middle west. He commented also on what he views as signs of improving conditions in agriculture.

The country's banking situation would be "greatly strengthened" by the addition to the federal reserve system of a number of eligible non-member banks, Mr. Meyer said.

Incorporation of such banks in the national system, he said, would be "to the advantage of the banks themselves, the agricultural interests they serve, and the whole financial structure of the country."

In the six great corn belt states—Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Nebraska and Ohio—there are 3821 banks with aggregate resources of $2,554,000,000, which are eligible for membership, but which have failed to join the system.

He was convinced from recent observations, Mr. Meyer said, that the agricultural industry is not in such a desperate strait as some "friends of the farmer" would have the country believe. With the single exception of the land owner who has devoted his entire acreage to wheat, the industry is in better condition than a year ago.

"Farmers have been gradually liquidating their debts to the banks, and the banks, large and small, in the agricultural sections, have been gradually improving their position."

Director Meyer has consulted during the past week with representatives of the corporation in several western states. As a rule, he said, merchants and manufacturers doing business almost entirely with farmers reported increased sales volumes in the first half of this year as compared with 1922.

MAY URGE PROPOSAL TO CURB POWER OF COURTS

Momentous Matter to Be Considered by Attorneys Attending Bar Association at Minneapolis This Month

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 2 (AP)—Proposals to curb the power of the United States supreme court in the matter of declaring acts of congress unconstitutional by a majority vote are expected to be one of the important questions before the annual convention here of the American Bar association, August 29-31, according to John Farrell, secretary of the convention at arrangements committee.

An elaborate array of legal talent in the United States, England, France, South America and Canada will participate in the sessions, Mr. Farrell said, the foreign representatives being guests.

Lord Birkhead, Lord Chancellor and one of Great Britain's ablest legal minds, will deliver one of the principal addresses. Present and former members of the supreme court have prominent places on the program. Chief Justice Taft, as chairman of the committee on judicial ethics, will read his report August 30.

Among other nationally-known persons to attend will be John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain and president of the American Bar association; Elihu Root, former secretary of state and president of the Council of the American Law Institute; Charles S. Whitman, former governor of New York; George W. Wickersham, former United States attorney general, and William Draper Lewis, secretary of the American Law Institute.

A report on the meeting of the American Law Institute, which will be held in conjunction with the bar convention, will be given August 31 by Mr. Lewis. The institute has for its purpose the clarification and simplification of the legal code and its better adaptation to social needs.

SENATOR TALKS ON CONDITIONS

Copeland Mentions "Revolution" in Discussing Affairs Throughout the U. S.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 2 (AP)—Addressing the Georgia general assembly here today, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, democrat, of New York, declared that the use of the word "revolution" by some of the more extreme leaders was not surprising to him, and that under certain conditions he himself would adopt the word, and expressed the belief that his audience would do the same.

Referring to what he termed the depressing condition of the American farmer, Senator Copeland, speaking of the prevalence of the radical doctrine's advocates, asked:

"Suppose you had to work long hours without reward for your labor; suppose your means of gaining a livelihood were wrested from you; suppose your wife and children were denied all the luxuries and many of the actual necessities of life because of these conditions; suppose in such circumstances statehood failed to give relief. What would you say?"

"Is it any wonder," the senator continued, "that extreme leaders are uttering the word 'revolution'?"

"My friends, if I could not earn a living for my family; if I had no hope of the future; if I found government impotent, I say frankly, I would be ready to use the same word—'revolution'—and so would you."

Quotes Washington
As to the foreign policy of the United States, Senator Copeland quoted an extract from the farewell address of George Washington and told the legislators that in his opinion

Washington's farewell remarks outline the policy that should be adopted by the United States toward its foreign neighbors. Mr. Copeland quoted from the Washington address, laying stress upon the paragraph preceding that in which he said Washington "so touchingly speaks of his advice as the counsel of an old and affectionate friend," and which read in part:

"Harmony and liberal intercourse with all nations are realized by policy, humanity and interest."

Turning to the present republican administration, Mr. Copeland asserted that under the leadership of President Harding the republican party had experienced heavy reverses since the last election. Speaking directly to the president, he said:

"To my mind, the president, sweet and amiable as he is, is palpably lacking in perspicacity. No wonder his great plurality of 7,000,000 votes has been dissipated. Demonstrated by the actual voting power of the nation, there has been a total loss of the republican majority."

The New York senator attributed this alleged deflection to the refusal of the American people to condone "thoughtless neglect of the multitude for the sake of enriching the few."

CLOSE-UP OF EMMETT TEAM SHOWS GLASS

Invaders Turn in Line-up that Resembles Big League Club; Locals Are Working Hard

Only two days remain for the local team to get into fighting condition for the Emmett boys, who will play the Twin Falls club here Sunday afternoon at Athletic park.

Emmett will arrive here Saturday evening and will take things easy preparatory to what promises to be one of the tightest pitchers' battles of the year.

Secretary Buckman of the invaders is very profuse in his adjectives concerning his players, while the Twin Falls management has but little to say concerning the chances of the local ball tossers.

The invaders start their batting order with "Skippy" Stivers, whose given name is Vernon. "Skippy" is conceded to be the fastest piece of machinery that ever graced the shortstop position in semi-pro ball in this state. Besides being one of the best fielders in the business, Stivers hits the ball hard.

Steve Koupal follows Stivers with the willow and is rated a clever hunter, which means that he will be on guard the list must be watched. Steve is the regular second baseman.

Arnold Oobley is the next in line, and is stationed at the initial neck. Oobley comes here with a reputation of being one of the best hitters on the team.

Ashtenfelder With Team.

Jack Ashtenfelder, remembered by the fans here for his great work with the Boise team two years ago, plays third, is captain of the team, and is their cleanup hitter. Jack may find the Twin Falls team a stumbling block, as the boys here know pretty well where Jack likes to hit 'em.

Let Otkins follows Jack with the bludgeon, and is rated a masterful at all times. Lew is the lad in center field.

Elmer Ashton plays right field and is considered the most dangerous hitter on the club. Elmer hit at a terrific clip during the league season just closed.

Joe Brown is the seventh batter on the team, which does not signify that he is one of the weak members, as Joe sends them out with a dull thud and is placed at the tail end of the list for a reason, which no doubt will become known when the fans see him in action Sunday.

Portland Catcher.

Then comes Tom O'Brien, who, like Bench, is also the property of the Portland club. Tom is rated as the best batsman in the state.

Charles Bench, the mainstay in the box, is the last man to face the pitcher, and, like all big league pitchers, plays semi-pro ball, hits the ball hard.

Thus it is seen that Emmett hasn't

ELIMINATION OF 12-HOUR DAY TO BEGIN AT ONCE

Gary Makes Announcement of Intentions of Adjusting Schedule to Equal Increase in Wages

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (AP)—Elimination of the 12-hour day in the steel industry will begin immediately and wages of employees whose hours are reduced from 12 to 8 hours will be adjusted as to afford earnings equivalent to a 25 per cent increase in hourly and base rates, directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute declared today.

Elbert H. Gary, president of the institute and chairman of the United States Steel corporation, in making the formal announcement at the conclusion of today's conference, said the change would be completed, but declared there would be no unnecessary delay on the part of anyone.

It is estimated that the shorter working day will necessitate the employment of between 60,000 and 65,000 additional laborers and will add approximately $45,000,000 to the annual payroll of the industry.

Employees in the continuous process departments, who now receive $4.80 for a 12-hour day, will receive $4 for an 8-hour day under the plan. All other workmen, it was announced, will be on 10 hours or less and their present hourly and base rates will be continued.

Officials of both the independent steel companies represented in the institute, and of United States Steel corporation subsidiaries departed for their homes tonight to begin at once the work of effecting the shift in hours.

Today's action by steel officials representing substantially the entire industry in this country, brought to a favorable conclusion a series of conferences and study of the industry which began when President Harding at a White

Honors dinner, requested Mr. Gary to undertake an investigation to ascertain feasibility of eliminating the long hours.

A committee, appointed by Mr. Gary reported at the May meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute that it would be impossible to reduce hours in the immediate future because of the shortage of labor. President Harding, who expressed his disappointment at the report and subsequently Mr. Gary wrote the president that the industry would begin the elimination of the 12-hour shift "as soon as possible."

The first formal conference on the subject was held in New York last Thursday which expressed his disapproval of the report and subsequently Mr. Gary and the president of the American Iron and Steel Institute took up the matter for the industry as a whole.

Both meetings adjourned over the weekend to permit the presidents of the various companies to return to their homes to learn, if possible, the attitude of the employees who would be affected.

Officials found a majority of the employees agreeable to the changed rate of pay for the shorter hours, although no announcement as to that was made today.

C. G. Cleary, the complaining witness, whose children were in the rig alleged to have been demolished by Kulp's Ford bug, will take the stand when the trial is resumed. The trial is being conducted in the probate court rooms. The case for the state is being prosecuted by J. H. Barnes, assistant prosecuting attorney, while W. Orr, Chapman represents the defendant.

NEW EXECUTIVE

Bridgewater with the telegram announcing the president's death. Mr. Coolidge hastily came downstairs, attired in black. He was very calm and collected.

Mrs. Coolidge came down a moment later, weeping. Her first words were "I am so glad you are here." She spoke of what a great shock it would be to the president's wife, and said that it was wonderful how she stood up under the strain of the crisis.

Express Condolence. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge then sent their telegram of condolence to Mrs. Harding. Immediately afterward, Mr. Coolidge called his secretary, Edwin C. Glessor, into a little room in the farmhouse, where he dictated two statements.

He came out and handed them to Mrs. Coolidge, who distributed them among newspaper men.

Almost immediately after the first messenger arrived, automobiles began to rush into the little village from every direction as newspaper men hastened to the Coolidge house. A number of neighbors also came in when they heard the news. Mr. Coolidge, seeing the house becoming crowded, gave orders that an adjoining house be opened for use as a press headquarters.

HORSEPOWER: The rest of the world likes our automobiles. Exports for the past twelve months gained 59 per cent in quantity...

But Europe, our best customer in this line, does not buy automobiles nowadays in quite the same spirit as does America.

There the papers are full of four, eight and twelve horsepower cars, advertised with what would seem utter shamelessness to the American accustomed to claim twice or three times the actual development...

They must, indeed, practice unusual self-restraint, but that will be worth any advertising man's while.

BUSINESS IN GOVERNMENT: Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of England, has a way of speaking his thoughts which appeals to his American audience.

Whatever the merits of the Capper-Tincher bill, or its faults, the fact remains that although this country must continue to contribute largely to the world's wheat supply, our farmers can never hope for high prices when bumper crops are the rule in competing lands...

Mr. Baldwin did not mean this as an indictment of the ability or honesty of lawyers, politicians or statesmen. He simply pointed out what he believed to be a fact, that business men, approaching such problems with little awe for red tape, tradition of fixed diplomatic procedure, might bring to bear on them more prompt and efficient understanding.

LESS WHEAT: "The farmer should realize that the real solution of his difficulties lies in raising less wheat. In most localities corn can also be raised to advantage since it now carries a price almost as high as in war time."

and goes on to attack the Capper-Tincher bill as having played a large part in forcing prices down by eliminating speculation.

The recent price decline which has carried wheat far below the dollar mark has seriously affected the farmers' buying power when wheat is his one money crop, but it cannot be questioned that other farm products, at the present fairly satisfactory market, will serve in many cases to prevent disaster.

"No disturbance now," commanded Wright sharply. "Don't wake any one. Mr. Fortier, I'll be glad to have you remain, if you will. I believe you're a lawyer?"

"What's this, Wright?" he demanded. "Gros Michel murdered? Why—'Murdered,' Mr. Thompson," said the mate. "I'd like to have you look at the knife that did the work. Do you recognize it?"

"Perhaps you can explain how it got where it is?" said Wright calmly. The second officer stared at him, then swore luridly.

"Here, none of that talk, Mr. Wright! How the devil should I know how it got here? It's my knife, all right—but my name on it. But I lost that cursed knife yesterday! Must have mislaid it somewhere."

"What the devil have I to go along about?" stormed Thompson, perplexed and furious. "Anybody says I'm a murderer it's a cursed lie! Yes, I told the steward I lost the knife—that little fool of a cockney, Solomon! He fooled me to keep a lookout for it."

"Here he is, sir," said somebody. Solomon was pushed forward. An ulster was flung over his night attire, and he blinked stupidly from the body on the deck to the keen scrutiny of Wright.

"See here, steward!" said the latter brusquely. "Did Mr. Thompson have any conversation with you yesterday in regard to a knife?"

"Oh! Yes, sir, it comes back to me now, just like that!" said Solomon. "Why, Mr. Thompson, 'e comes to me and 'e says as 'ow that knife is a werry fine one and 'as 'is name on it, and 'ow 'e is mortal proud of it! Yes, sir, I remember now."

"And," prompted Wright, "he told you about having lost it?"

"No, sir," said Solomon, with a blank stare. "Not at all, sir. 'E asks me to clean it up a bit for 'im, which same I done, sir, and give it back to 'im."

"This is a serious matter, steward," exclaimed Wright sternly. "On you swear to this evidence in court?"

"That's a fact, sir," spoke up one of the men. "But there wasn't no harm in it. They was arguing about what color shirt was best suited to Michel's complexion."

"Carry the body forward and get this deck holystoned before daylight!" Fortier, obeying a sudden impulse, leaped over and touched his fingers to the neck of the corpse.

"Steward, fetch some ice water to my cabin, please."

"Set it down," ordered Fortier. "Shut the door. Now, look here!"

"That man," said Fortier, "was not murdered by the knife. He was killed by being hit a terrific blow at the base of the skull, Solomon. What do you know about it?"

"Confound you!" exclaimed Fortier. "I don't know what to do. I owe you a good turn, but I'm cursed if I'll compound murder! And I don't believe you're half the simpleton you look, Solomon. Where's that knife of yours—the one with the lead hat?"

"After it struck Gros Michel, it went overboard, eh?" Solomon made no response, but stood in placid silence.

"See here," exclaimed Fortier angrily. "I think your testimony 's a mass of lies. You on earth would you swear an innocent man into the noose?"

"Oh! Fortier gasped at the audacity of the little man. "Then you actually confess that you murdered—"

"I don't know if he murdered or not," spoke up Solomon suddenly. "That ere man was not murdered, sir! 'E was killed in self-defense, sir! What's more, nobody can be convicted for a killing of 'im, 'cause why, 'e ain't inside the law! 'E is right name, sir, 'Eneple, and 'e is the brother of that ere Pitt Jean—"

"That's a fact?" he demanded swiftly. "Yes, sir. That ere Thompson is a-goin' to get 'id in jail until they find out that this Gros Michel was an outlaw. That's all, sir. And, if I might make so bold, these 'ere papers was in 'is 'old when 'e was killed, sir."

Solomon held out an envelope, then departed. Fortier did not prevent him. He stood there, staring at those papers like a man paralyzed. For they were the identical ones he had received that afternoon from Althea Lavergne.

"By gad, that man Solomon is a smart one!" murmured Fortier admiringly.

Fortier turned out the lights and lay down again to think it over. The more he thought, however, the more John Solomon became to him nothing but a startling, perplexing question mark. Who and what was this little, pugy man?
