CUNO PRESENTS GERMAN POLICY ON RESISTANCE

Continuation of Present Regard for Ruhr Occupation Part of Unusual Address of Chancellor at Berlin

BERLIN, Aug. 8 (AP)—Passive resistance will be continued with all the strength of the German people. "Free from all acts of violence and terror," and the people in the unoccupied territory will "support actively," those in the occupied region, Chancellor Cuno asserted in addressing the Reichstag when he convened for a short extraordinary session today.

When the chancellor rose to begin his long address, he was prevented from speaking for some time by the communitas, who greeted him with epithets such as "traitor!" "swindler!" and "the president of the Stinnes companies board is going to speak!" One communist deputy, not very excited, shook his fist at the chancellor and was called to order twice. Herr Cuno was subjected to continual interruption during the speech, which was received somewhat coldly by the house.

"If there is no light on the horizon which promises us speedy help, then it is for us to keep alive by means of our own force determination," said the chancellor in his peroration, "and to make every sacrifice in this we make every sacrifice on ourselves. We stand alone and must and will help ourselves."

Chancellor Cuno reviewed the internal and external situations and, alluding to the British draft reply of the German note, said that his principles upon which Great Britain based her proposals really were not pleasant for Germany.

Criticizes England

There were many suggestions in the draft which appeared impossible to the German government, and Cuno was able to judge without knowledge of the supplementary documents, asserted the chancellor, adding that in an attempt to reach an understanding with her comrade-in-arms of yesterday, England had gone extraordinarily far in her concessions to the French standpoint.

"It is not our business," declared Cuno.

Sees Lower Rates As Crop Solution

Senator Capper Says Roads Can Well Afford Reduction to Save Farmers from Failure

OMAHA, Aug. 8 (AP)—A letter from Senator Arthur Capper, republican of Kansas, to Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad company, in which he said the railroads can "well afford" to grant a 25 per cent emergency freight rate reduction on export wheat and flour as requested by western farmers by some of the Omaha business men who organized a "buy wheat" campaign to aid the farmer, was made public here today.

The railroads, said Senator Capper, by making the reduction which western lines recently declined to approve, would be throwing out the lifeline to the struggling wheat farmer. He also expressed belief such action possibly would benefit general business, and therefore aid the roads themselves.

After asserting that he had directed Mr. Holden to take immediate action, Senator Capper declared:

"The Omaha proposition, if carried out, would enable us to get into foreign markets in a better way, while the psychological effect on business, on markets and on the farmer himself, would be instantaneous and most salutary."

IDAHO CITY OFFICIALS TALK RATE REDUCTIONS

POCATELLO, Aug. 8 (AP)—Lower freight rates and means whereby southern Idaho producers could reach markets with their crops at a reasonable competitive scale was the topic of a conference of mayors held here yesterday in conjunction with a session of railroad officials, headed by H. M. Adams, vice president of the Oregon and Idaho railroad.

FOREIGN NATION MOURNS

BRUSSELS, Aug. 8 (AP)—The government has decided to hold the flag on all public buildings the day of President Harding's funeral, this being the first time such a measure has been taken by Belgium on the death of a foreign chief of state.

Scores Prostrated by Intense Heat at Funeral Ceremony

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—Intense heat caused 170 prostrations today among those in the Harding funeral procession from the White House to the capitol, in the lines of spectators along the route and the crowd awaiting entrance to the rotunda to view the body. First aid stations and hospitals, reporting that this number was given treatment, said none was in serious condition. The heat was particularly oppressive, due to the high humidity.

Counsel for Bucketeers Intimates Startling Revelations Are in Store

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (AP)—Revelations made in reported confessions to Federal Attorney Hayward by E. M. Fuller and William F. McGee, confessed stock bucketeers, are likely to rock the financial section of New York to its foundations. Carl E. Whitney, new counsel for the two former stock brokers, declared today:

"My clients," he said, "are now telling the truth about their affairs—in a thing which, in my opinion, they should have done more than a year ago.

Their disclosures are of a startling nature and are likely to rock the financial section to its foundations. It is a matter of governmental policy, however, in saying it would be unwise at this time to make the Fuller and McGee disclosures public."

POCATELLO CELEBRATES EARLY PIONEER EVENTS

Historical Incidents in Southern Idaho's History Commemorated by Towns in Big Pageant

POCATELLO, Aug. 8 (AP)—Historical incidents of southern Idaho were commemorated today at the first celebration of old pioneers' day. Several thousand persons took part in the pageant.

A feature was a walking race between old settlers, several women taking part in the 200-yard contest. The oldest contestant was 83 years old and the youngest 57.

Among those who attended the pageant were Congressman A. T. Smith, former Governor James H. Hawley and C. E. Arney.

On Strength of Intimation Accredited to Harding, Members of I. W. W. May Remain in United States

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (AP)—Declaring the late President Harding had intimated that wartime prisoners whose sentences he commuted were not to be deported, counsel for the Industrial Workers of the World today obtained writs of habeas corpus from Federal Judge Goddard, staying the deportation of members of the organization who were brought to Ellis Island Monday from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas.

EARTHQUAKE RECORDED

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 8 (AP)—An earthquake of moderate intensity, probably in the vicinity of Japan, was recorded on the seismograph at the Goxalee observatory today. The record lasted two hours. The distance was about 4,600 miles.

Countrymen of Fallen Executive Pay Last Honor in Mute Sorrow

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—Warrior Harding left Washington tonight, forever. His short eventful moment of a nation's heavy care was ended; his sternity of rest began.

World War Veteran Falls in Step with Marching Mourners

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—President Coolidge today rewarded a fighting man's loyalty to a commander-in-chief.

The fighting man was Michael A. Donaldson of Haverhill, N. Y., a congressional medal of honor man, and until recently a sergeant in the 35th infantry. The commander-in-chief was Warren G. Harding. The reward was an unexpected opportunity to attend the funeral services at Marion, the guest of the new president.

Widow Remains Courageous

Harding was gone from Washington, splendidly fittingly gone as was the day that for him and brimmed with honors as brimmed the cup of life, heady with the draft of greatness, gone with the loving care of a brave woman to shelter him on his last journey.

For in this whole day of pomp and ceremony that men have made to surround the great, there was nothing more touching than the quiet courage through which Mrs. Harding carried through the public ordeal. As her black-gowned figure passed out of the crowd, she left with her the funeral rites were held, every glance was for her, every sympathy. There was admiration that brought the clutch of choked-back sobs to many a throat.

His Last Message to the American People Was—

He was carried from the White House, which had witnessed his sleep for those brief hours, with all the pomp and circumstance that dead presidents—such heroes as the unknown soldier alone may know. He in this moment of his life, his last, his freedom symbolized by the flag, the flag of his country, the flag of his people.

MARION PEOPLE AWAIT RETURN OF FAMED SON

Body of Harding Will Rest for Sacred Hour in Old Home while Grief-Burdened City Passes in Mourning

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 8 (AP)—Fair weather with moderate temperature will prevail at Marion Friday afternoon when the body of President Harding is entombed, the United States bureau announced here today in a special forecast.

MARION, O., Aug. 8 (AP)—Warren Gammell Harding is on his last journey home, and Marion, shrouded in mourning, peacefully awaits his coming.

When the nation's funeral train bearing the late president in his flag-draped coffin crosses the Marion county line and heads to traverse the country where he laid to rest a portion for a character which made him the nation's beloved, Marion's bells will begin to peal. They will continue to toll at regular intervals till the body has been set at rest in the home of his father.

As soon as the body is placed in the Harding home the utmost privacy will be maintained there for a few hours. It will be sacred hour in that home in East Center street, for there sits the aged father bowed in grief, who for seven days has been awaiting the time, counting the hours and the minutes when he again might be with his son even though the reception be no spoken greeting, no returned smile, no gentle hand-clasp.

Will View Deed

After this silent communion the doors will be thrown open from 8 to 10 p. m. and friends of the dead president will be permitted to pass by his bier. They will also be permitted to pass again Friday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon. The body of the president to the cemetery for brief funeral services.

Harding Felt Premonition of His Death at Start of Ill Fated Trip

MARION, O., Aug. 8 (AP)—The late President Harding, when he left Washington for his ill-fated trip, confided to some of his close personal friends that he believed he would never live to return to Washington, Brigadier-General G. B. Sawyer, his personal physician, told Marion friends of the late chief executive when they met the funeral train here yesterday. It was learned here today.

Kept Illness Secret

Dr. Sawyer told Marion friends that the president realized the seriousness of his condition before the party left Washington but did not make this known until he was taken sick in San Francisco.

SAW DEATH'S APPROACH

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8 (AP)—An incident of the late President Warren G. Harding's life showing he had a premonition of his death was made known here today by former Congressman Richard Bartholdi. The latter had just returned from Europe when he learned that the president and during their conversation their ages were mentioned, said Mr. Bartholdi.

LONGVIEW NEW CITY OF MAGIC

Modern Structures Mark Area Where Only Trees Stood About a Year Ago

LONGVIEW, Wash., Aug. 8. (AP)—Standing here on a vast plain, which just a year ago was wooded country and farm land are several imposing brick and concrete buildings, the first evidences of the realization of a matter of fact modern "dream" of a model city. A six-story fireproof hotel with every appointment that a luxury-loving traveler could expect; a department store covering about half a city block with a plate glass facade along its entire front and its show window displaying the latest modes in women's apparel; a large bank building rapidly nearing completion, a building under construction to house a daily newspaper which has for some months been established in a temporary structure—these are some of the tangible achievements of Longview. Wide streets, laid out after the plan of Washington, D. C., are rapidly being paved and sidewalks are being put in. Already roses are blooming in park-like spaces. Taxicabs are running on the newly paved thoroughfares. An imposing hotel has the like of which is seen in metropolitan cities, is making trips between the hotel and railroad station in the adjoining town of Kelso. Train service direct into Longview is promised in the near future. Hugo Lumber Mill. Away from the center of the city, a couple of miles or more, work has been started on a huge mill, which inside a year is expected to turn out lumber at a rate of 500,000,000 feet annually. Adjacent to the mill a large colony of neat houses built in various designs with various colored paint; is now ready for the occupancy of the 4000 workmen who are to be employed in the mill. This is the city that was formally dedicated recently. Hundreds of visitors came from nearby states and communities, and there were official delegations and representatives of financial concerns from far cities. The dedication festivities reached a climax two days later at a banquet at which more than 350 people were served at the Hotel Monticello. Was Natural Consequence. That Longview came into being as an afterthought was the explanation given by Robert A. Long, chairman of the board of directors of the Long-Bell Lumber company, in his dedicatory address. He said that his company, which has been operating in southwestern states, was transferring its operations to the Pacific northwest because of the depletion of the timber in the south and southwest. New timber holdings, adjacent to the Columbian river, were obtained, and the next step was to select a site for a mill, and this conflict of the Cowitz and Columbia river was chosen. Model City. Decision to build a modern city, rather than permit the erection of a ramshackle one, was reached, and experts were called in to do the building and planning. Mr. Long introduced each of those to the assembled guests. As soon as the essential construction is finished the city is to be incorporated and turned over to the inhabitants. He disclaimed intention of making it a "company" city. Governor Louis F. Hart of Washington, gave the enthusiastic endorsement. Mayor George L. Baker of Portland; Mayor Edwin J. Brown of Seattle; George S. Long of Tacoma; Edgar B. Piper, editor of the Portland Oregonian; Wood Beal, Chicago timber operator; Colonel Iolan G. Hartley, Everett lumberman; the Rev. Dr. E. H. Miller of Kansas City, and E. A. Booth of Eugene, Ore., all spoke in praise of the work done and the plans for the future. READ THE CLASSIFIED ADS.

WASHINGTON'S TONNAGE OF WHEAT IS INCREASED

SPokane, Aug. 1. (AP)—The Washington Wheat Growers' association this year handled four times the wheat tonnage it handled last year, according to estimates made last week by association officials. "This is the third year of organized pooling," Secretary A. C. Adams reported. "The first year we sold over 7,000,000 bushels of grain for the farmer. Last year we dropped to a little more than a quarter of the first year's business. This year we expect to handle around 9,000,000 bushels of grain and I believe we will need around 9,000,000 dollars to finance the transaction." Get our prices before you buy storage batteries. COMPARISON OF DOLLAR'S VALUE SHOWS DECLINE

Republican Publicity Committee Defends Tariff from Responsibility for Lower Buying Power in 1923

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Contenting that the tariff is not responsible for prices paid by the farmer, the Republican Publicity Association today...

Payne Law Cited "The farmer who bought in 1912 was buying when the republican tariff law of 1909 was in operation (the Payne law)."

the other day the Census Bureau published a summary of the census of manufacturers for the United States, 1921. Among other matters of interest it was noted that in 1914 there were 177,109 manufacturing establishments...

Again, the cost of materials in 1914 was $1,359,000,000 and $25,330,000,000 in 1921. And the manufacturers undoubtedly have been paying fully as much, if not more, for those materials during the past year.

These materials in themselves have increased in value chiefly because of the labor necessary to get them to the factories, for a ton of coal or iron is only potentially valuable until labor has dug it out of the earth and transported it to its destination.

MERCHANTS HEAR SUGGESTIONS ON FARM PROBLEMS

Tire Company Representative Sees Responsibility for Conditions at Door of Individual Americans

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 (AP)—Solution of the agricultural problem must be an ordinarily slow process, and consistent right thinking on the part of the individual Americans will go far toward remedying a situation which has become acute through the rapid elimination of the small land-owning farmer, said A. R. Kroh of the Good-year Tire and Rubber company of Akron, O., addressing the interstate merchants council, which closed a two-day convention here today.

"Agriculture," said Mr. Kroh, "is the mother of civilization and until the $75,000,000 invested in it has become acute through the rapid elimination of the small land-owning farmer, said A. R. Kroh of the Good-year Tire and Rubber company of Akron, O., addressing the interstate merchants council, which closed a two-day convention here today.

"As merchants," asked Mr. Kroh, "how would you like to see the country's basic industry in the hands of the railroad?"

DOGS PROTECT WILD GAME

MOSCOW, Idaho, Aug. 8 (AP)—A good pack of dogs affords the best protection to deer and other game animals and birds, according to Ross Greer, trapper, who has run hunts in Latah county for the past 12 years and claims thereby to be responsible for the destruction of many hundreds of predatory animals.

Since the dogs have been waging war on the coyotes, Mr. Greer says, there are from five to ten times as many deer in the territory. In a recent report to the state game warden he gave 40 as the average number of coyotes, bobcats and lynx killed each year by his dogs, with addition to an occasional bear. With "Japs" being another pioneer rancher, Mr. Greer keeps the dogs primarily for the protection of stock and poultry, which he says fall victim to the same foes as do game birds and animals.

CUNO PRESENTS

Herr Cuny, "to expatiate on what England considers her interests, and we are not so foolish as to imagine sympathies for Germany where there are none."

"Germany must be prepared for a long period of suffering," he added, "and to accommodate itself to such circumstances and not expect to work wonders. We must believe in our selves and manifest that belief not by fatalistic resignation but by determined action."

"The world knows we are ready to take into account French prestige if France consents to impose humiliation merely for the sake of humiliation, but what we cannot and will not do, is to abandon our German land and betray our fellow countrymen."

Adding to France's demand for cessation of passive resistance before he is willing to open negotiations or say what he wants, the chancellor emphatically declared that it was impossible to ask the people of the Ruhr and the Rhineland to abandon their sole weapon unconditionally, and, he contended, even were the German government to attempt to do so, it would be impossible, nothing would be achieved because "behind one impossibility there would soon arise an endless chain of other impossibilities by which French policy blocks the way to understanding."

"What we cannot do and will not do is to abandon German land and betray our countrymen," he repeated.

"With complete and unconditional submission to the French demands, we should merely be buying a document which imposed upon us impossible obligations which the whole world recognizes as absurd."

"The Ruhr is only to be free when the last penny is paid. We are to make impossible payments when the most vital instrument for the realization of such payments, namely the Ruhr, remains covered from us. We must stop these impossible payments, to restore our credit, stabilize our currency and balance our budget while France knowingly and openly by her action in the Ruhr has done everything to prevent Germany's entire economic and political organization."

"Germany must collapse, but she must pay, and if she does not pay as a result of her collapse, she is to be accused of fresh failures and is to be exposed to new persecutions until the work of destruction has been completed."

"It is necessary," he concluded, "to continue with all our strength, passive resistance free from mist acts of violence and terror against the people in the occupied region, and to support actively from the unoccupied territory a population which is persevering in a passive resistance of its own free will."

Favorites Hymns

The hymns to be sung are "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God to Thee." With this simple service concluded, the nation's president will have been laid to rest, and as the world moves on, the only indication that another of the nation's chief executives sleeps in Ohio's bosom will be the military guard stationed there to see that the sleep is not disturbed.

On arrival of the funeral train, scheduled for about 10 a. m. tomorrow, Mrs. Harding will be expected, will go direct to the home of Dr. George T. Harding, 408 East Center street, to which the body will be taken in a hearse.

Marion streets tonight were beginning to seethe with persons coming from distant places to attend the funeral. Every road leading into Marion was thronged by automobiles. The state also will establish patrols along all the principal highways to prevent speeding and to look out for the safety of automobile traffic.

The city tonight wore a pall of mourning. Business houses and homes were draped in black and white crepe from their roofs to the street level. In the display windows of stores and shops, large pictures of the late president, many of which had been pro-

FAVORS WHEAT SHIPMENTS TO SOUTH COAST

New Schedule of Reduced Freight Rates, Announced at Pocatello, Interpreted by Twin Falls Mayor

Shipment of southern Idaho's wheat crop to markets of the southern Pacific coast and northwest will be encouraged, it is the opinion of the government. Twin Falls mayor, by the schedule of freight rate reductions announced by H. M. Adams, vice president of the Pocatello Tuesday with the executive committee of the Southern Idaho Mayors' conference, of which Mr. Hodgkin is a member.

Rate reductions on wheat ranging from 2 to 6 cents per hundred pounds effective August 30, were announced by Mr. Adams.

Where Reductions Apply. The reductions apply to shipments both east and west, but they are greater, so far as Twin Falls is concerned, for shipments to the southwest than to other points, Mr. Hodgkin stated Wednesday.

Under the new schedule, the rate from Twin Falls to Los Angeles and San Francisco is reduced 0 cents; to Omaha, 8 cents, and to Portland 2 cents. The rate from Twin Falls to Los Angeles and San Francisco will be 62 cents, and to Omaha 56 cents. Reduction in rate to other points is made proportionately as the distance from that point decreases.

Fruit and potato rates will remain unchanged, but there is a possibility, providing the demand is strong enough, that the Union Pacific will make a blanket rate covering vegetable shipments, Mr. Adams said. He explained that the present rates were well related to the cost of operation and were the outgrowth of time and experience and made to fit the conditions.

Reaction in the amount of freight assessed against carriers might well be translated into lower freight rates, Mr. Adams told the conference, pointing out that the Union Pacific pays more than $1,000,000 a month for taxes.

Loading of cars to capacity instead of only partially loading them, he said, also would cut the expense of railroad operation. Railroad men claim that an engineer can get more mileage at less expense by hauling a given ton load in 80 many cars all full than when the same load is spread through a third more cars.

Competition Cuts Figure. "There is another way that you can help us reduce costs of operation," Mr. Adams said to the conference, adding with a smile, "but I know you won't do it." That, he said, is to assist in bringing about a situation where the carriers may reduce their rates for hauls to the Pacific coast to a point where they can compete on even terms with water carriers passing through the Panama canal. Under the existing conditions, Mr. Adams said, railroads are compelled to haul empty cars to the coast to carry out loads destined for the east.

The principal drawback to making emergency rates, Mr. Adams said in reply to suggestions of Mayor Sherman of Boise, is that the shipper seldom receives any benefit, because when the freight rate drops the market price drops proportionately. Another difficulty, he said, is the refusal of connecting lines to cooperate because of objections raised by producers of other territories.

Thousands Wait. But along the way, hanked motion less and in silence, were thousands upon thousands who had stood there waiting since daylight to add to the great tribute to the dead. The hushed reverence of these told more strikingly the sorrowful nature of the occasion than even the crops that streamed from the passing standards or the mourning bands of uniform jackets or the knots of black at the sword hilts of the officers.

All the great folk of Washington followed after. Among them were the diplomats who speak here with the voices of their kings or governments to testify that human sympathy to a nation in grief knows no barriers of sea or land. There also were the great judges and the sorrowful cabinet officers. The senators and the members of the house called back from their varied occupations for this sad moment. Again, back after black behind, stretched the ranks of all the civilian organizations of Washington, out in full array, the men who head the bureau and divisions of the federal government; department; the army and navy and marine corps officers serving here and being now ordered lines, their tunics above worn with mourning black.

Coming thus to Capitol hill, the bands ceased for the climb to the top of the hill. There were several presidents take oath. The muffled drums took up the tale as the column climbed the winding, tree-lined plaza of the stone tower.

And it was this distant throbbing of the drums that carried word of their coming to those waiting in the flower-filled chamber beneath the towering column that probably drew nearer and nearer until at last it gave place to the softly rising tones of a great army band that played "Lead, Kindly Light" as the flag-wound, casket was lifted slowly up the long, wide stone steps.

Oasket in Place. Flanked by its honor guard of high generals and admirals, the heavy casket was carried to the place of a single wreath of bright color resting above the quiet sleeper. Then from the center side, the erect, slender figure of the sorrowful widow moved toward the casket. Her eyes were most intimately with the dead chief, tain to a place near the head of the bier. Her face was almost invisible behind the black veil she wore, but no man who saw her carriage could doubt the courage that had brought there, or the bitter weep that filled her heart.

Services Simple. The religious services were striking in their simplicity against the background of military pomp and grandeur given by the funeral parade. Just before the prayers, the murmuring of low voices joined in the old, old words of the Lord's prayer, the scriptural readings and the blending voices of a male quartet in the same hymn tones, the choir sang "Lead, Kindly Light," the hymn best beloved by the dead president, and at the end, "Nearer My God to Thee," with its message of Christian resignation.

Tears flowed freely everywhere among the still audience as the last chord died lingeringly away far above. Benediction. That was all, save the benediction. It was as simple as Warren Harding himself would have had it, for he made no claim of his trust in the goodness of God. And too, he had given himself in life to the service of the people of his country, he was given now in death for a brief hour that they might see him, and that peacefully in that great casket to which tender hands had confided him beside the far golden gate a week ago.

When Mrs. Harding had gone and with her the sympathetic ministrations of those who had briefly glimpsed her triumph over her own sorrow, the new president and his cabinet, the diplomats and general admirals all filed slowly out and the great chamber was cleared except for the armed sentries about the bier and the others who quickly carried away the chairs and set long lines of black, feelings in place to form a broad aisle from east to west across the stone floor. Then the flag was gently drawn back, the heavy veil was set aside, and those who knew him in life again saw the face of Warren Harding.

It was a peaceful face, untouched by the ravages of his brief illness. The broad brow was tranquil and save for the slight pallor death always brings, he might have been asleep there for a moment of rest, to rouse again when duty called. It hardly seemed that the spirit could have fled; that the lids would not lift presently to show the gleam of the eyes beneath. There was very little of death about him, and much of peace and rest.

The eastern doors were thrown open again and waiting at the foot of the long stairway, between ranks of soldiers and other guards, a mile-long column of people stretched through the hot sunlight to wind away out of sight beyond the distant trees across the plaza. They had been ranked four abreast and at the word came trooping slowly up to pass with only the soft rustling of footsteps to mark their coming and going down the flower-woven corridor that had been made for them. The hushed human tide flowed by on both sides of the casket, and each gazed down just a moment before moving on to the west door and thus to the street far beyond the wide grounds.

There were men and women from all the states of the Union in that endless column. There were those from almost every nation in the world. They were of all faiths and of all parties and of every color. They were dressed in all styles. They were a cross section of the mighty people of whom the man they followed had led a free life. Some times there came one who dropped a single flower on the coffin as he passed, and the watchful guards gently removed it after the give had gone by. Some came with weeping; some lifted little children in their arms to clasp them that calm, dead face beneath the kindly, tiny, dead eyes. All came in reverent silence.

Salute Dead Leader. There were many little groups of soldiers and sailors and marines who soiled' the opportunity of their brief rest between the ceremonies that required their service to add hours of waiting and miles of slow marching to the miles the day already had meant for them. They alone passed with caps or jaunty white hats in place; but each gave the dead commander-in-chief a rigid salute as he walked in solidarity with those past the casket. There came also to salute groups of Boy Scouts and there moved in the long lines policemen in uniform but off duty, firemen, motorists, and chauffeurs and a score of others whose uniforms told their calling.

When the moment came that must see the door closed past the casket, there came those who had passed through that corridor of flowers, it was estimated, and as many more were turned back disappointed after hours in the slow moving lines. But the departure for Marion could not wait and the great doors were shut.

President Coolidge and the cabinet officers and the admirals and generals of the honor guard came again in motor car to enter the rotunda for a few minutes, then the casket was borne out and down to the casket while the troopers raised their sabers in salute and the ordered rows of guns, ranked behind them, showed every figure erect in saddle or on limber. Again the slow music of the band marked the slow progress of the casket, playing "Nearer My God, to Thee."

At the station the casket was lifted down to be carried out again and placed in the position where tens of thousands of Americans saw it on the long homeward pilgrimage of sorrow from San Francisco. There were no ceremonies. The nation's forewells had been said except for the last soft strains by the marine bands which played "Lead, Kindly Light" in final parting.

Leave For Marion. Mrs. Harding reached the station soon after the casket had been placed back aboard the funeral car. She came direct from the White House. Other members of the party who traveled with the dead president on his last journey that ended with such suddenness were already aboard the train by Mrs. Harding's personal request, to be with the dead to the last in Marion. The group of official mourners stood bareheaded on the platform and waved in silent salute. Without sound of bell or whistle, the train began to move slowly down the track. It gathered speed as it moved out into the yards and in a moment had dwindled under the watching eyes of the silent group left behind, dwindled as it moved faster and faster over the clicking switches until it faded a curve and vanished from view. Warren Harding was gone from Washington, forever.

WIDOW HARDING BURDEN ON BOARD HARDING FUNERAL TRAIN, Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP)—Having never faltered in her determination to remain calm, although the day was long and most trying, Mrs. Harding retired shortly before the funeral train reached Harrisburg tonight, still entirely self-possessed. PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP)—President Harding's funeral train was running 20 minutes late when it passed Bellwood, five miles east of Altoona, at 1:14 a. m., according to Pennsylvania railroad officials here. The delay was caused by stops along the route. It was expected that the train would leave Altoona at 1:30 a. m. and that the last time would be made up before the arrival at Pittsburgh, scheduled at 4:20 a. m.

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP)—The Harding funeral train left here at 1:54 a. m., 34 minutes behind schedule time. It arrived here 20 minutes late and was halted for 14 minutes for a change of engine. Picture framing done promptly. Prices reasonable. A. H. VINCENT COMPANY. READ THE DAILY NEWS

THE PIONEERS

All honor to the old pioneers who still remain, recalling years when they gave to this desert land their all—
Followed the primitive westland's call,
They know the land when its broad expanse
Sheltered wild tribes' and herds' advance;
Gave it their youth, brave, confident, free;
Nor ever dreamed the greatness to be.
They ne'er thought then of the brave deeds done,
Each did his part, and the wild west won.
'All in the day's work,' dangers braved;
Yet they, the great future's pathway paved.

Perhaps Felix Macarty made a mistake when he laughed thus mockingly. It was not one thing, or another, for which Wrexham held a deep and true affection. It was this schooner that now lay heeled in the mud.

This craft was no ordinary trading schooner, lousy with rotten copra, stinking with melted oil in the bilge, her deck unclean by tropic sun. Not at all. She was a schooner, but a schooner in perfect miniature, incredibly small and perfect to the final detail.

A trader, indeed, yet with rather the look of a yacht. Her brasses were polished, glistening in the sun. Her hull was scrubbed and gleaming white. Even her furled canvas showed immaculate. Her varnished spars shone against the blue sky like streamers of cobweb.

And now this miniature schooner hung in the mud of a Louisiana bayou, her deck unclean by tropic sun. Not at all. She was a schooner, but a schooner in perfect miniature, incredibly small and perfect to the final detail.

With a cry of shrill and startled rage, Felix Macarty leaped upright in the boat, let had splintered the wood under his arm. Wrexham threw out the empty shell, clicked another into place, and fired again. Another splinter of wood flew up. Macarty cursed his negro, and his launch swung out and headed away from the bayou over her rudder.

Wrexham threw the bolt, lifted the rifle again. His protruding eyes were hard and chill. He sighted on the back of Macarty, and his finger drew on the trigger; then he lowered the rifle and shook his head regretfully.

"No—that's enough. I'll learn you things, a—n you!" He handed the rifle to the waiting boy, then looked down at the men below. "Any of you boys know how to handle that mahogany launch and find the way to Latoche?"

"Yes, suh!" shouted several at once. Wrexham picked out one of them, indicating the handsome mahogany launch which Alina had recently bought.

"Fill her with gas and get her ready. I'm going to town in ten minutes." "Suh!" said the boy, and the launch started up.

long-distance threats was followed him from Chuen Yag. It was only an accident, and lay far back in his life. Wrexham had never learned that it is the incidents which lie far back of which one should be afraid. He had never learned even to be afraid.

The launch popped suddenly into a large and open strait, Bayou Latoche. Here were other boats, horses, men; from somewhere the whistle of a locomotive, bringing first wonder to the eyes of Wrexham, then a laugh. A bend in the stream and Latoche appeared, rapidly growing in size. Ten minutes, and Wrexham tossed his boy a dollar, then strode uptown to lunch and attend to business.

After luncheon, Wrexham went to the railroad station and dispatched Philbrick's telegram to Fortier. This accomplished, he sought the post office and went to the general-delivery window.

"I ordered mail forwarded and held here, from San Francisco," he said. "Cap'n Tom Wrexham, schooner Nautlius."

After a slight delay, he was handed a letter, much marked about and forwarded, and a curious glance followed him as he turned away.

When he was out in the street, Wrexham examined the letter curiously. It was from a man in Zamboanga in the Philippines, a former partner of Wrexham in many deals, a man whom Wrexham trusted.

The skipper tore at the envelope. Into his fingers came a letter, and with it a newspaper clipping. His eyes widened on this clipping. His sturdy fingers clutched it fiercely, his figure stiffened as he read the words.

Amusement flooded into his face, followed by a flush that might have come from some inward relief or deep pleasure.

"If this ain't a run go!" he ejaculated with an oath. He lowered the paper and stared blankly before him. "A run go and no mistake! the only time in my life I was guilty of having a conscience—and now to find it's all been wasted!"

He read the clipping again, incredulous. No, there was no error! The two men and a woman, the three whom he had betrayed, had come to no ill end after all. His remorse had been needless. There was nothing for which to blame himself; his action had resulted in no harm at all. The clipping told him all this.

ROTARIANS PAY SOLEMN TRIBUTE

Twin Falls Club Members Hear Life and Work of Late President Extolled

Memorial services in connection with the death of President Harding were held by the Twin Falls Rotary club at its regular weekly luncheon Wednesday with Judge E. A. Walters and Dr. Charles E. Scott as the principal speakers.

The meeting opened with the singing of "America" which prayer was offered by the Rev. A. G. Pearson of the First Presbyterian church and the vocal selection rendered by D. A. Schmeckel.

Jim Nash, stockman, and member of the Reno, Nevada, Rotary club; Ross Johnson, formerly of Twin Falls, and local resident; at President William Macneely, Vernon Walters and the Rev. Tom Blodgett of Mountain Home, were guests of the club.

After reviewing the life history of the late executive Judge Walters paid a splendid tribute to President Harding, both as a citizen and as chief of the nation. Step by step he traced the president's career from his humble beginning as the son of a country doctor, through youth and early manhood into the realm of publisher and statesman.

Spokesman Applauded. Dr. Scott concluded his remarks with the reading of a letter which he addressed to the president at St. Louis. Both speakers were warmly applauded. The club's annual swimming party will be held next Wednesday at the Natatorium arranged for by the hands of a special committee appointed by W. T. Scelley, president of the club.
