BALLOONS FROM SEVEN NATIONS READY TO START

Gordon Bennett Race Scheduled for Today in Belgium; U. S. and Belgian Expected to Place High.

BRUSSELS, June 14.—Seventeen balloons representing seven nations are being made ready for the take-off at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the 14th renewal of the Gordon Bennett cup race for lighter than air balloons. Electrical storms—the bugbear of balloonists—threatened for a time, but tonight the weather had cleared somewhat and the latest report from the Belgian aéro club is that in all probability the race will be started according to schedule. If there is a continuance of the wind prevailing tonight the balloons will be carried toward central Europe, perhaps Russia.

According to the drawings made at the aéro club tonight the balloon Belgien, piloted by Lieutenant E. DeMuyter of Belgium, will be the first to take off at 4 o'clock. Then, at five minute intervals, the balloons will start as follows:

The Picardie, France, with Maurice Bionnino; Helvetia, Switzerland, Captain Paul Ambruster; Goolycar, United States, W. G. Vanormann; Australia, Lady Grant; Margaret, Great Britain, E. Allen; Magdeleine, Spain, Perundez; Duro, Ville de Bruxelles, Belgium, Lieutenant Labrousse; Ville de Bordeaux, France, LaPorte; Uncle Sam, United States, Captain E. H. Honeywell; Crampino, Italy, Major Valle; Bransher, II, Great Britain, Major Baldwin; Captain, Spain, Penarandus; Leopold, Belgium, Yverstraete; D'unjon, France, Georges Gormier; S-14, United States, Major Peck; Hesperio, Spain, Casas.

Belgian Confident
Lieutenant DeMuyter and Captain Honeywell are favorites to win the race. The Belgians said tonight: "I am confident of winning the race for the third time in succession in bringing the cup home to Belgium for good. If any one of my sixteen competitors defeat me, I will have no cause."

Captain Honeywell said: "In 21 years of ballooning I have not had an accident. I am confident of finishing this race too without any trouble. My balloon is the safest type absolutely incombustible and lightning cannot hurt me. I am afraid, rather of a cold bath in the Baltic or the Polish or Lithuanian lakes."

CASTLEFORD

CASTLEFORD—On Thursday afternoon the Everywoman's club held a most interesting meeting. This was their literary day and a splendid program had been arranged by Mrs. H. A. Kinyon. The program included three vocal numbers, "The Birds and the Bees," "Gypsy," and "Just a Wearyin' for You," by Mrs. Frank Atkins; violin solos by Miss Marion Ward, accompanied by Miss Emily Ward, were "Venezian Love Song" and "The Angel's Hymn." Mrs. Martin Miller sang three lovely songs, "Just a Wearyin' for You," "From the Land of the Sky Blue Waters" and "Marchetta." The Misses Elanore and Melba Thomas played two duets, "Pure as Snow" and "Gypsy Waltz." Miss Marjorie Miller gave two clever readings. All these numbers were exceptionally well rendered and greatly appreciated by the club members. A debate followed, the question being, "Resolved, That the Japanese Exclusion Bill as Passed is Right." Mrs. Frank Hastings and Mrs. H. Fryer, who argued the negative, were victorious over Mrs. Gordon P. Bennett and Mrs. T. A. Sanderson, affirmative. The hostesses of the afternoon were Mesdames W. C. Brown, Olaf Halverson and Rankin Rutherford, and the meeting was held in the high school building. The next meeting of the club will be two weeks from now, and this will be election of officers for the ensuing year. All members are urged to be present.

At the last meeting of the Camp Fire girls officers were elected. Carrie Gross is president, Minnie Goff, vice president; Ruth Hunk, secretary; Vay Haiden, corresponding secretary, and Minnie Gager, treasurer. The girls will soon make application for their charter and their camp will be called Kew Wee Wolelo. This work has been under the direction of Mrs. Gladys Simms and Mrs. H. Fryer, and at present there are 20 girls in this group.

Bill Roberts is now hauling sand for new sidewalks to be laid at the Poplar Grove and Sunset schools. As soon as he has this done he will begin grading the high school yard here in Castleford and prepare it for a lawn.

Fifteen Years Ago in Twin Falls

Hon. James H. Hawley of Boise has accepted the invitation of the Fourth annual entertainment committee to deliver the address of the day in Twin Falls on the "Gull-orious Fourth." Mr. Hawley is one of the foremost speakers in the west. He has lived in Idaho all his life and the history of the state is to him an open book. His address of Twin Falls will be an attraction in itself sufficient to draw all patriots to the county seat on the national holiday.

The Snake river is carrying at present more water than it has for eight years and from indications it will not subside for at least three weeks. Tourists who have visited the Yellowstone park and the latest report from the mountains for this season of the year and those who have watched the Snake for a decade say it will not recede until about the first of July. # Why Face Still Warmer Weather over a Hot Stove?

You'll Be Proud of Your Cooking and Enjoy Doing it On An Electric Range

There are so many desirable features about Electric Cooking that it is difficult to say which are the most appreciated by the housewife.

Of course, during the Summer months, when the weather is hot and stuffy and it is almost unbearable to stand over a sizzling coal stove, the Electric Range is perhaps appreciated most. No matter how warm the day, you can prepare your meals electrically with comparative comfort because your kitchen will be but little hotter than any other room of your home.

Next, perhaps, the convenience of electric cooking is to be considered. At the snap of the switch your fire is started—one or more heating elements, as required, are red hot. Then when you're through cooking, snap goes the switch and the fire is out. No coal, ashes or kindling to handle.

Another big feature is the fact that the foods you prepare on an Electric Range are more delicious tasting. Economy is possible, too, because there is less shrinkage of foods.

Your Electric Range will prepare your dinner while you are attending to other household duties. The automatic models have temperature and time control.

The two splendid models illustrated below are now offered on terms of $5 down and $5 a month. Other styles are also offered at special terms, according to price.

LAFOLLETTE MAY BE NOMINATED BY THIRD PARTY

Program Being Arranged for National Gathering Tuesday at St. Paul; W. Z. Foster on Committee.

ST. PAUL, June 14 (AP)—The program for the national farmer-labor, progressive convention, or third party gathering, will be completed Monday at a meeting of the arrangements committee, William Mahoney, St. Paul labor leader and chairman of the committee announced tonight.

The committee met here today and sub-committees were appointed to take up various details of the program for the convention which will begin here Tuesday and which is expected to place a third party ticket in the field for the fall elections.

Many Expected.

Arrangements have been complicated by uncertainty as to the number of delegates who will attend. Credentials for approximately 700 delegates have been received but whether all or more will come was not certain tonight, according to Mr. Mahoney.

Although Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin has repudiated the convention to be held here, Mr. Mahoney said resolutions probably would be passed instructing the executive committee to endorse LaFollette for president if he is chosen to run for that office by the conference for progressive political action to be held in Cleveland early in July.

Name Sub-Committee.

The arrangements committee named the following sub-committees on rules and temporary organization:

HARDING MEMORIAL STAMPS MUCH SOUGHT BY COLLECTORS

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)—The Harding Memorial postage stamp seems to be much in demand by stamp collectors throughout the country. The most office department has been compelled to enjoin postmasters from selling or otherwise furnishing postmaster stamps of that and other issues to persons or concerns not authorized to use postmaster stamps. The conditions governing the use of which specifically provide they can be furnished by postmasters only after special authority in each instance has been obtained from the department.

Postmaster stamps are those furnished larger users of second, third, and fourth class mails bearing across their face the printed name of the post office where they must be used. When ignited it does not melt, but burns like wood or coal.

SPANISH ANTI-KISSING LEAGUE TO STOP FEMININE SALUTES

MADRID, June 15 (AP)—Kissing is going out of favor among Spaniards. The league against the promiscuous kissing of children, formed some years ago, has decided to extend its efforts and to start a campaign against the kissing prevalent among women when they meet or take leave of each other. The leaders of the movement assert that much hygienic good has been done by the restriction of the osculation of children, and they express the opinion that women generally will welcome a similar measure, for, as they argue, in most instances kissing does not mean friendship.

LOW WAGES IN GERMANY

NEW PARTY TO OFFER TICKET

Progressives Decide to Name Candidates for Legislature and County Offices.

The progressive party in Twin Falls county will participate in primary elections to nominate a full ticket of candidates for state legislature and county and precinct officers, according to Saturday evening of almost 100 members and adherents of the party, including a number of its precinct committeemen.

The meeting took action in this regard after hearing addresses by Ed Kirkpatrick, state senator from Minidoka county; and Ray McKaig of Boise, national committeeman for the progressive party in Idaho, both of whom predicted success for candidates of the party at the coming general election.

A petition for nomination of Senator LaFollette as president was circulated and signed by many persons at the meeting. Existing governmental and political situations were arraigned by P. W. Monahan of Buhl, who counseled the progressives against perils attending political success such as had caused the downfall of the populist party.

The meeting was presided over by L. Walton of Kimberly, chairman of the county organization.

AUTHORIZE SLAUGHTER AND SALE OF BISON

MISSOULA, Mont., June 14 (AP)—The slaughter and sale of 100 bison and 200 elk on the bison range west of Missoula has been authorized by the bureau of biological survey for the coming season, on account of the shortage of feed on the 18,000 acre range. It is believed that this will reduce the herds, which now number some 1200, big game animals, including buffalo, elk, deer and mountain sheep, so that there will be sufficient forage for all. The animals to be butchered will be picked from 400 buffalo now penned in corrals and being fed on alfalfa hay, later to be turned back on the range to fatten on the accumulated forage. These buffaloes now are keeping "open house" to visitors on Sundays and Wednesdays. Many tourists make the trip into the range to see the bison at close view.

FORESTS FOR EVERYBODY

The fact that some states, such as Pennsylvania, have already undertaken timber cultivation by conserving forests and planting new ones, should hasten the work throughout the country. Authorities state that there are now approximately four hundred million acres of cut-over lands in the United States, most of which should be used for timber growing. Only twenty-one per cent of such land has been set aside by the federal government for this purpose. Who states should map up the rest.

The government forest service knows what should be done and is ready to direct any community or state that wants intelligent help in renewing its forests. Timber-lands call for special tax arrangements in order to encourage forestry, but that should be a simple matter for interested state legislatures.

There is a great deal more to the conservation of forests than the assurance of a permanent timber supply.
The conservation of water sources and the prevention of floods and drought are very important by-products. Here is a crop which an intelligent community can grow with profit to itself when it harvests the current crop, and with indirect profit to itself all the time the forest is maintained, for it is possible to have your forest and sell your timber, too.

ABRAHAM'S REAL ESTATE.

The patriarch Abraham is usually regarded, like his successors, as a pretty good business man. Yet a professor of Semitic literature in Chicago university told an audience of realists that Abraham was badly cheated in real estate deals. When his wife Sarah died in a strange land, Abraham paid forty to fifty times as much as the land was worth, to provide a burial lot for her. The professor knows because he has read the real estate laws laid down by Ham-murabi, king of Babylon.

The plain people could not have been badly oppressed by landlords in those times. A man could buy a home for one year's earnings and rent one for about three per cent of his income.
In these expensive days a household budget will probably tell you that on an average income you can afford to pay twenty per cent of your income for rent, and a little more in yearly payments on a purchased home.

It is an appalling difference. But then, our homes are a good deal more comfortable than the stone huts of Hammurabi's time, which lacked glass windows, wall paper, open plumbing, wooden floors, gas, electricity and numerous other essentials.

THE WIRELESS TELEPHONE

Marconi, inventor of wireless, says we shall have wireless telephony very soon, available for the public as wire telephony is now.

He has the prediction especially on the discovery that wireless waves can be sent out in "beams", with definite direction and great intensity.
The beams will spread somewhat, as searchlight beams do, but he believes their spread can be confined to five degrees. With such concentration of wireless energy, which in the usual sending is scattered in all directions, he says less than one per cent of the present power will be required to send a message to a given point.

Remarkable results have been attained already in the sending of long-distance directional messages. The short wave, from one hundred to two hundred meters, is found very useful for this purpose, its intensity giving it a great carrying power. We may be able yet to talk familiarly with the galaxies by radio.

Breakfast Food "Matrimonially Speaking"

By Hugh McKay.

My Wife Specializes in "Warm-Weather" Dishes.
As soon as the mercury begins to go up, she begins to cut down on our food.
"Nothing heavy to eat these hot days," she says, quoting from memory from the June number of the Woman's Home Companion. "You'd be sick if I weren't careful to see that you get the right kind of food."

And then we have a hearty dinner of jellied soup, stuffed tomatoes, lettuce, potato chips and orange ice.
"You'll be sick if I weren't careful to see that you get the right kind of food," she says.

All I know is that I'd like to meet the author of some of this lightening prose.

I tell you, I'm half starved these days and I'm ready to fight for my right to eat what I want, and lots of it.
The best meal I know of—for June or January—is roast beef and mashed potatoes and vegetables, and a good piece of pie to ring down the curtain!

At a horse race in Dublin one of the animals proved refractory and, de-get him into the line. The patience of the starter became exhausted as he shouted for the tenth time: "Bring

"I can't," said the rider, "he's the winner of the sublimity equine." "This horse's he hears the door shut, and I ain't got

In Bad Condition

A man who was now to go to turn to his caddie and said: "I say, why couldn't that fellow get his ball into the hole?"
"He was stymied, sir," was the reply.
"He was what?"
"He was stymied, sir."
"Oh, was he?" replied the other; "I thought he looked rather funny at lunch."

Dog's Value in Alaska

In Alaska, where the trackless wilderness and the gigantic snow fields are the general order for the greater part of the year, the principal means of conveyance is the snow sled which is drawn by the malemute, or the husky, as the Alaskan dog is commonly called, says the Detroit News.

Strong and apparently oblivious to the raging of the elements, these brave and hardy dogs are the pride of the Alaskan, who without them would be in even worse straits than we would be without railroads or automobiles.
No matter how cold, these dogs are always ready and willing to obey their masters, and even after hundreds of miles of snow-covered waste have been traveled they are ever ready to be up and going at the beck of their two-legged companion, who is usually their friend as well as master.

"Any names?" asked Colter.

"Names to burn," returned the native. "A whole herd of names, honest to God. I'll give you the A B C of it.
The old parties are Lord James and Lady Jim Farquhar, leastways I heard one of the young ladies call her Lady Jim. The dude has Verinder burnt on about eight trunks, set me. Then there's a Miss Dwight and a Miss Joyce Seldon—and, oh yes! a Captain Kilmeny, and an Honorable Miss Kilmeny, by giner."

Colter flashed a quick look at Crumba. A change had come over that young man's face. His blue eyes had grown hard and frosty.
"It's a plumb waste of money to take a newspaper when you're around, Steve," drawled Colter in amiable derision. "Happen to notice the color of the ladies' eyes?"

The garrulous cowpuncher was on the spot once more. "Sure, I did. leastways one of them. I wote to tell you that that Miss Joyce Seldon is the prettiest skink that ever hit this neck of the woods—and her eyes, and they're like panicles, soft and deep and kindly velvet."

The fishermen shouted. Their mirth was hearty and uncontained.
"Go to it, Steve. Tell us some more," they demanded joyously.
Crumba, generally the leader in all the camp fun, had not joined in the laughter. He had been drawing on his waders and buckling on his creel. Now he slipped the loop of the landing net over his head.
"We want a full bill of particulars, Steve. You go back and size up the eyes of the lady lord and the other female Brits," ordered Oorly slyly.
"Go yore own self, kid. I ain't roundin' up trouble for no babe just out of the cradle," retorted the grin-ing rider. "What's yore hurry, Crumba?"
The young man addressed had started away but now turned. "No hurry, I reckon, but I'm going fishing."

Steve chuckled. "You're headed in a bee line for Old Man Trouble. The dude you meant by kicking up such an

CHAPTER I

The Campers

Inside the cabin a man was baking biscuits and singing joyously. "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary." Outside, another whistled softly to himself while he arranged his fishing tackle.
The cook having put his biscuits in the oven, flung the doorway. He was a big, strong-set man, with a face of leather. Rolled-up sleeves showed knotted brown arms white to the wrists with flour.

"First call to dinner in the dining car," he boomed out in a heavy bass.
Two men lounging under a cottonwood beside the river showed signs of life. One of them was scarcely more than a boy, perhaps twenty, a pleasant amiable youth, with a weak chin and eyes that held no steel. His companion was nearer forty than thirty, a hard-faced caddy who chewed tobacco and said little.

"Where you going to fish tonight, Crumba?" the cook asked of the man busied with the tackle.
"Think I'll try up the river, Colter—start in above the Narrows and work down, mebbe. Where you going?"
"Me for the Meadows. I'm after the big fellows."

The man who had been called Crumba put his rod against the side of the house and washed his hands in a tin pan resting on a stump. He was a slender young fellow with lean, muscular shoulders and a fine head, many desert sons on his cheeks and neck.

They ate in their shirt sleeves, camp fashion, on an oilcloth scarred with the marks left by many hot dishes.
Their talk was strong and crisp, after the fashion of the mining West. It could not be written without editing, yet in that atmosphere it was without effort. There is a time for all things, even for the "elemental" talk of frontiermen on a holiday.

Dinner finished, the fishermen lolled on the grass and smoked.
A man entered out of the patch of woods above and drew up at the cabin, disposing himself for leisurely gossip.
"Evening, gentlemen. Heard the latest?" He drew a match across his chaps and lit the cigarette he had rolled.

"Well, know after you've told us what it is," Colter suggested.
"The Gunnison country certainly is being honored, boys. A party of effete Britishers are staying at the Lodge.
Got in last night. I seen them when they got off the train—me lad and me lad, three young ladies that grade up Al, a Johnnie boy with an regent, and another lad who looks like an man from the ground up. Also, and moreover, there's a cook, a hawes wangler, a hired girl to button the ladies up the back, and a valley chapp to say 'Yes, sir, coming, sir' to the dude."

"Any names?" asked Colter.
"You know so much about it, Curly.
I'll not butt in with any more misinformation," he answered with obvious sarcasm.

Curly flushed. "I'd ought to know.
Jack's father and mine were friends, so's he and me."
"How come you to call him Crumba?"

"That's a joke, Steve. Jack's no ordinary rip-roaring, hell-raiser' under.
He knows what's what. That's why we call him Crumba—because he's been bred. Pun, see. Fine bred—crumba.
Get it?"

"Sure I get it, kid. I ain't no Englishman. You don't need a two-by-four to pound a Josh into my coconut," the rider remonstrated.

Jack Kilmeny followed the pathway which wound through the woods along the bank of the river. Beyond the trees lay a clearing. At the back of this, facing the river, was a large fishing lodge built of logs and finished artistically in rustic style. It was a two-story building spread over a good deal of ground space. A wide porch ran round the front and both sides.
Upon the porch were a man in an armchair and a girl seated on the top step with her head against the corner post.
A voice hailed Kilmeny. "I say, my man."

The fisherman turned, discovered that he was the party addressed, and waited.
"Come here, you!" The man in the armchair had taken the cigar from his mouth and was beckoning to him.
"Meaning me?" inquired Kilmeny.
"Of course I mean you. Who else could it mean?"

The fisherman drew near. In his eyes sparkled a light that belied his acquiescence.
"Do you belong to the party camped below?" inquired he of the rocking chair, one eyelash fixed in the complacent face.

The guilty man confessed.
"Then I want to know what the dude you meant by kicking up such an

Johnnie boy up at the Lodge is plumb sore on this outfit. Seems that you lads raised ructions last night and broke his sweet slumbers. Why can't you will infuna behave proper?"

"We only gave Curly a chapping because he let the flapjacks burn," returned Crumba with a smile. "You see, he's come of age most, Oorly has.
He'd ought to be responsible now, but he ain't." So we gave him what was coming to him."

"Well, you explain that to Mr.
Verinder if he sees you. He's sure on his hind legs about it."
"I expect he'll get over it in time," Crumba said dryly. "Well, so-long, boys. Good fishing tonight."

"Same to you," they called after him.
"Some man, Crumba," commented Steve.

"He'll stand the acid," agreed Colter briefly.
"What's his last name? I ain't heard none."

"The eyes of the young woman sparkled. The fisherman thought he had never seen a face more vivid.
Such a gleam as it held too irregular for beauty, but the spirit that broke through interested by reason of its hint of freedom. She might be a caged bird, but her wings beat for the open spaces.

"Were they getting good last night?"
she mocked playfully.
"You feel good, m'am. You see, we had no town to shoot up, so we just punctured the scenery. If we had known you were here—"

"You would have come and shot us up," she charged gayly.
Kilmeny laughed. "You're a good worry." He let his eyes admire her lazily. "Young ladies are too seldom in this neck of the woods for the boys they would be real good to you."

His audacity delighted Moya Dwight.

PROTESTORS OF WATER TRADING DEMAND CHANGE

Exchange of Natural Flow for Stored Water Comes in for Thorough Airing at Meeting of Canal Stockholders.

Twenty-nine persons cast the unanimous vote of a meeting here Saturday afternoon of about 50 Twin Falls Canal company stockholders to request the canal company directors to make formal protest to the state commissioner of reclamation against a policy adopted by the "committee of nine" providing for exchange of natural flow waters of Snake river in return, later in the season, for stored waters in Jackson Lake reservoir.

Action of the meeting in this regard was predicated on the opinion that the exchange plan works to the advantage of decreed natural flow water users of the upper valley at the expense of the lower valley further down the stream. This opinion was expressed by Carl J. Miller, president of the Twin Falls Canal company; P. C. Davis of Castleford, Luke V. Sonner of Buhl, and others.

Meeting Members Demand

Having voted the protest, the meeting modified its action by authorization, on motion of B. F. McPherson, of the designation of a committee to make inquiry as to whether the Twin Falls Canal company actually was injured by operation of the exchange policy. Mr. Miller objected to postponement of the protest to such time as the committee might complete its investigation and report, and Mr. Davis, author of the motion for the protest, suggested that the protest be voted at once.

Since its purpose was to safeguard Twin Falls Canal company's rights if they were in jeopardy, and not to cause controversy with water users of the upper river.

As members of the committee to make the investigation which was authorized, there were designated Mr. Miller, Burton Smith, president of the canal company, and J. A. Cron, former canal company director.

The meeting's decision was reached after an exhaustive discussion in which Clyde Baldwin of Idaho Falls, watermaster in charge of the distribution of Snake river waters, and John E. Kiley of Shoshone, E. B. Decker of Burley, and T. M. Baird of Twin Falls, members of the "committee of nine," and Frank Bower, Twin Falls Canal company director, as well as Miller and other advocates of the protest participated.

Caution in view of possibility of occasioning rupture of harmonious relations with upper valley water users and of occasioning long continued and expensive litigation, was counseled by Mr. Cron, who served as chairman of the meeting; Ivan Lincoln and W. F. Alworth, canal company directors; C. E. McClain of Twin Falls, and others.

Early in the season Mr. Miller referred to reports made by Watermaster Baldwin showing that natural flow of Snake river available at Milner to the Twin Falls company had averaged 30 per cent of the natural flow passing the upstream measuring station on the river during the week of June 3-10 this year, as compared with 51 per cent available at Milner during the corresponding week of 1919. He attributed the diminished amount available at Milner this year to operation of the exchange policy under which, he said, upper river users turn into the river their surplus of water at a time when it is not required by them and in return receive stored water later in the season.

Mr. Miller pointed out that decreed natural flow users of the upper river have not participated in the cost of construction and maintenance of Jackson Lake reservoir, although, he said, under the exchange policy, they participate largely in its benefits.

"I would rather give up Jackson Lake altogether," Mr. Miller said, "than to have works to the detriment of the natural flow rights of the Twin Falls company."

Scouts Pay Tribute To National Emblem

Impressive Ceremonial in Connection With Flag Raising Marks Observance of Day.

Standing in salute, an assemblage of nearly 100 boy scouts with their leaders, members of scout council and troop committees and a number of citizens on the high school campus at 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning witnessed the raising of the flag and heard the address delivered by Captain E. M. Sweezy in connection with the boy scouts' observance of Flag Day in Twin Falls.

Two of the older scouts, Dale Gullison and Paul McClellan, raised the flag to the top of its staff while Eugene Taylor, boy scout bugler, sounded "To the Colors."

Pointing to the flag as the symbol of American citizenship and its duties, Captain Sweezy declared:

"An American citizen has a two-fold duty. We give up certain of our rights so that the nation may have the power to do its work; but we hold all the rest of our rights to ourselves. So, one who fills his own place must be 'strong' enough to support the nation and, at the same time, he must have the strength and spirit to do the share that goes with his reserved rights."

"In the last few years there has been a movement of a disintegration of the individual's share. When the going gets hard and the work heavy for us we have seemed more and more ready to turn to the state or the nation for help. No true American can permit the state or nation to take over any part of our share. That would be giving up our liberty, and securing to us a liberty not of our own making. It is the duty of each of us to stand for the rights of the individual. If we are not strong enough in our own part, if each of us does not fill his place, we will lose our liberty and the disintegration of the cluster of stars on the field of blue, there will be need for only one big star to fill the place. The flag would not then be our symbol, but would represent something that we in weakness had allowed to grow."

Closing the address with an appeal for help us out in the future, Captain Sweezy said:

"The flag is at full staff. Keep it there always in your heart, and keep it in your hands. It is a fitting place for your flag. Keep your flag sacred, for it is sacred; keep it clean, so that no stain of dishonor or of weakness can ever mar its symbol; treat it reverently, for it represents the principles that Americans have given their lives to preserve. Your flag stands for all that is best in you, for all that makes you a citizen. It is the symbol of your best self. Hold it as such."

correct in themselves, do not accurately reflect conditions according to statement of Mr. Baldwin in reply to the Twin Falls Canal company executive.

He suggested that the directors of this meeting choose representatives to make inquiry into the actual situation and volunteered his assistance in such an investigation. Important advantages resulting from the exchange policy, Mr. Baldwin said, are establishment of harmonious relations between Snake river water users generally and the fringing about of conditions that facilitate regulation of the distribution of the river's waters among its several users.

Statement to similar effect was made by Mr. Burlington, representative of the federal reclamation service at Burley; while Mr. Kiley, who is a director of one of the upper valley canal companies, explained apparent discrepancy in the figures cited by Mr. Miller with the statement that a number of upper valley users in the spring of 1919 were not prepared for the season of water shortage and had turned water back into the river while making repairs or for other purposes, but that, on the contrary, this year they had made draft upon the river for the full amount of their rights throughout the early season.

It was pointed out by Mr. Baldwin that the exchange policy this season could not have worked to the disadvantage of the Twin Falls company except for three days; that the period during which exchange privilege would be sought is practically concluded for this season, and that the exchange policy which was in effect last year, would, in practice, be inoperative except in season.

ADKINS AWAITS DECISION AS TO MURDER CHARGE

Alleged Slayer of Francisco Marguregia, Testifying in Own Behalf at Preliminary Hearing, Reviews Encounter.

Decision as to whether John W. Adkins of Castleford should be held to answer in district court to charge of first degree murder in connection with the death June 5, last, of Francisco Marguregia was taken under advisement until Monday by Judge O. P. Duvall at the conclusion Saturday of a preliminary hearing in the case which was begun Friday morning.

Circumstances under which he dealt the blow are alleged to have caused Marguregia's death were related by Adkins, who testified Saturday in his own behalf, seeking exoneration from the murder charge. His testimony confirmed closely to the story he previously had told county authorities. The fatal blow, he said, were dealt during an argument over handling of sheep in which both Adkins and Marguregia were engaged near the Salmon River dam west of Rogerson when the fatal encounter occurred, Sunday evening, June 1.

Recounts Dead Man's Rage

Marguregia, he said, became angry when Adkins questioned his directions as to where the sheep should be halted for the night, and came toward Adkins with a rock in his hand repeating excitedly, "Who's herding these sheep?" Adkins raised the hand in which he held the rock, Adkins testified, and Marguregia at the same time lifted the stick that he had carried for a day or two following injury to his knee. He struck once and Marguregia dropped to his knees and was attempting to rise again when Adkins struck the second time. Marguregia remained prostrate, Adkins said that thereafter he went to the camp wagon and told Ventura Escobar of the occurrence.

Adkins testified that he had been scared by his employer, John Konce, to hold the rock, Adkins testified, a few days before the fatal encounter; that he had been afraid of Marguregia and that fellow employees had assured him they would not let Marguregia attack him.

Adkins' story was briefly told in response to questions by his attorney, Ben Huesman of Buhl. Searching cross-examination by Prosecuting Attorney J. W. Taylor occupied much longer time.

Sees Solution at American Falls

Declaring that the discussion dealt with a highly "dangerous" subject, Mr. Cron, in argument against precipitate action, suggested probability that completion of the American Falls reservoir before another season of water shortage would effectively remove all basis for controversy on this issue. He referred to the arrangement under which it is expected the Twin Falls Canal company will exchange its storage rights in Jackson Lake for storage rights in the American Falls reservoir.

Difference between members of the canal company board over the water exchange question was indicated by statement of Mr. Bower that "so far as the board is concerned, it has been unable to determine on statements of particular position to know that the Twin Falls company has been injured by the exchange plan." In reply Mr. Miller stated that a majority of the board felt that the Twin Falls company's natural flow rights had been impaired by adoption of the policy.
