HINES SPEAKS TO VETERANS AT SALT LAKE

Disabled Men Cheer General's Tribute to Coolidge as the "Friend of Ex-Service" People; Parade Features.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 24 (AP)—General Franklin T. Hines, director of the United States veterans' bureau, appeared before the annual convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War here today. The legislation recently passed by congress affecting disabled men was thoroughly gone over and a remark by General Hines that not a "doctor" but a "man" should determine a man's disability from a paper report was cheered by the delegates.

HEROES IN HONOR PLACES

Those veterans who lost arms or legs in the world conflict were seated toward the front of the Salt Lake municipal auditorium where General Hines spoke and in addition to cheering his remarks they also threw or waved their crutches or canes in the air.

General Hines said the total number of disabled veterans who have applied for vocational training is 643,626, of which number 328,409 were found eligible for training and of these 174,755 have entered training.

In the morning the veterans held a military parade and marched to meet a military parade and marched to meet a military parade and marched to meet a military parade.

STATE LAND SOLD.

BOISE, June 24 (AP)—Two hundred acres of state grazing land were sold at Fairfield, Camas county, by L. H. Nash, state land commissioner, here today, upon his return to Boise. All the land sold brought the minimum price of $10 an acre except one tract of 40 acres which sold for $12, he said.

FIVE BURNED.

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP)—Five men were believed to have been burned to death today in a fire that followed the explosion of naphtha aboard the British freighter Egremont Castle at her dock in Brooklyn. Seven other men were seriously burned.

Mystery Letters Constitute Sequel To Franks Murder

Chicago Detectives Follow Up Sending of Several Additional Missives Demanding Big Sums of Money.

CHICAGO, June 24 (AP)—Detectives and postal authorities who spent the day investigating threatening letters recently sent to wealthy Chicagoans were undecided tonight whether the missives were the work of cranks with a perverted sense of humor, or a hand of extortionists bent on capitalizing the recent kidnapping and slaying of Robert Franks to frighten wealthy persons into meeting their demands.

One of the letters received by Edward Hines, wealthy lumberman, from a man who signed the missive "Farwell," called upon the recipient to hurry $20,000 under an airtight seal at designated point before July 6 or forfeit his life. The writer represented himself as suffering from tuberculosis and had only five months to live, which he said he expected to make as easy for himself as possible. Numerous warnings were interspersed with bits of poetry and philosophical musings.

ORATORY AND NOISE PREVAIL AS BOURBON CONVENTION BEGINS

WOULD LICENSE BUTCHERS.

BOISE, June 24 (AP)—Boise meat donners, headed by Herbert P. Lempe, appeared before the city council today to urge adoption of a resolution they had prepared, providing for city inspection of meat.

The ordinance, which will be introduced formally next week, would provide for a city meat inspector, require the licensing of persons dealing in meat, prohibit the offering for sale of meat and meat products which are impure, unwholesome or adulterated, regulate the slaughtering of animals, and set forth penalties for violation of its provisions.

DEFEAT MOVE TO CHANGE RULES

Two-Thirds Plan Still Stands as Result of Convention Committee's Action.

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP)—Proposals for abolishing the time-honored two-thirds rule for making nominations in democratic conventions were killed here tonight by the rules committee when it turned down coldly a proposition submitted by Texas that a majority rule be substituted.

The proposition that the custom be changed drew support from only two other states, Florida and Utah. The member from Texas did not urge his motion with any degree of vigor and announced that it was submitted only because his delegation was under instructions to do so from the Texas state convention. His delegation, he said, would not bring the question to the floor.

The committee discussed at some length the subject of bringing in a rule to cover the subject of rule rates among delegations, but finally disposed of it by leaving it altogether out of its reach.

The next order of procedure was changed to allow for nominating speeches ahead of the platform report, the rules committee forcing a long delay over fight to the platform committee over a number of the planks.

Lions Club Delegates Gather for Opening of Annual Convention

Members Divide Day Between Business Sessions and Program of Recreation.

OMAHA, June 24 (AP)—Lions attending the eighth annual convention of the International Association of Lions Clubs here spent the opening day of their meeting in a brief morning business session and an afternoon of play. Opening formalities, including the address of President John S. Noel of Grand Rapids, Mich., were concluded in short order and a wound up in a parade through the city. This afternoon was spent at Ak-Sar-Ben race track, where the "get-away day" program included a special Lions club purse and tonight there was a barbecue where Nebraska beef was fed the Lions.

HAWLEY DENIES CHARGES

BOISE, June 24 (AP)—James H. Hawley, in an answer filed in United States district court to the suit brought May 17 by Harry E. Deardoff and Earl S. Wright in which it is charged that shares of common stock of the Best Growers Sugar company were illegally issued, declares that the stock he now holds was in payment for services, issued in accordance with law, and that no transaction in connection with the business was in secret or the result of an agreement in "fraud of the Best Growers Sugar company or its shareholders." Motion to dismiss the suit was filed a few days ago by Mr. Hawley and arguments probably will be heard at an early date.

POPE CONFERS HONORS ON SALT LAKE WOMAN

SALT LAKE CITY, June 24 (AP)—Pope Pius the Eleventh has conferred the papal decoration of "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice" upon Mrs. Arthur H. Bird of Salt Lake city, says a telegram to the Salt Lake Tribune from Rt. Rev. Jos. S. Glas, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Salt Lake.

Delegates Indulge in Display of Enthusiasm; Opening Program Lined Up; "Pass the Buck" to Committees.

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP)—Forgetful for the moment of its bitter rivalries over candidates and policies, the democratic national convention began its sessions in Madison Square Garden today with a militant demonstration of party enthusiasm.

Meeting only to go through the formalities of effecting a preliminary organization, the delegates indulged in a 20-minute old-time democratic demonstration in honor of Woodrow Wilson and cheered to the echo a keynote speech in which Senator Pat Harrison pleaded for party harmony and a re-consecration to the fundamental principles of democracy.

Hours of oratory. Then, after three hours of oratory and noise making, the convention adjourned until tomorrow, leaving its committee to work out details of its organization while the managers for the score of candidates for the presidency continued their preparations for battle.

Not a single voice was raised in protest or debate at any stage in the proceedings. Picking their words and making their points warily, party officials in democratic conventions were killed here tonight by the rules committee when it turned down coldly a proposition submitted by Texas that a majority rule be substituted.

SECOND HONORS NOT ACCEPTABLE TO INDIANA MAN

"Ralston for President or Nothing," Says Taggart in Answer to Offers of Visiting Delegations.

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP)—Thomas Taggart, pilot of the Ralston candidacy, declared emphatically tonight that the old Illinois-New York-Indiana coalition was not operating at this democratic convention and that under no circumstances would Senator Ralston accept the vice presidential nomination.

"Ralston for president or nothing," Taggart said tonight, "I have entered into no alliance with any one. True, the leaders of the various candidates have called on me, but I have not called on any of them and I have not made any deal of any kind. If the convention should accept to nominate Senator Ralston for vice president, I shall decline in his behalf, as I have been empowered to do."

Taggart, playing a waiting game for Ralston and will continue to do so, he spent all of today except the time he was in convention, at his hotel receiving leaders who came to discuss the Indiana senator's chances and feel out Taggart to a switch of the Indiana delegation and Taggart's personal support.

All of them got the same answer: "I am going to stand up and on Ralston and he is unwilling to concede now that any one else will be nominated." "Therefore, why discuss such a possibility," he asked bluntly. And with that the conversation came to a close.

Taggart explains his strategy to the home folks in language which is easily understood along the Wabash.

"We don't want to work this cold into a matter too soon," he told his wishers today. "We just want to have him well curried and walk him around the track a little bit. Let the other managers breeze their colts all they like. We will play the other game."

Taggart's strategy is to keep his workers quiet for two or three more days in order to permit the outstanding candidates to wear themselves out. He is understood to believe that present outstanding candidates will pass the peak of their strength after a few bad days, and then the drift will start to Ralston, if his supporters do not become too active in the meantime.

No reports of personal injury due to the storm had reached here tonight.

STORM IN IOWA BLOCKS TRAFFIC

Rail Lines Congested and Crops Damaged; Marooned Passengers "Rescued."

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 24 (AP)—Disorganization of railroad service with three trains derailed or marooned in southern and western Iowa, heavy damage to communication lines and considerable crop loss was the result of the severe storm that swept across the state early today.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul were the railroads most seriously affected.

The crop reporting bureau here announced that large areas of corn were washed out or damaged by floods.

Country telephone systems were temporarily put out of business. A power station at Colo was burned out, causing a loss of about $12,000.

The most serious railroad disruption was the stalling of the Pacific limited on the Milwaukee line between Portsmouth and Panama, in the western part of the state. Passengers were removed from early this morning until this afternoon when they were transferred to a relief train sent from Omaha and resumed their journey eastward.

No reports of personal injury due to the storm had reached here tonight.

PREDICTS FARM MEASURES WILL BE ACTED UPON

Representative Longworth Gives Credit to Lower House in Past Session; Criticizes Rules Procedure.

WASHINGTON, June 24 (AP)—Reviewing accomplishments at the last session of congress Representative Longworth of Ohio, the republican leader declared in a statement today that the record of the house was "decidedly creditable and noteworthy." "The house," he added, had "proved itself to be, insofar as fiscal affairs were concerned, as intended by the constitution, the dominant body of the legislative branch of the government."

Predicting speedy enactment at the next regular session of reclamation legislation which was blocked in the senate by the McNary-Haugen measure was due largely "to the fact that farm organizations were unable to come together upon the precise measure which would afford the relief desired," the McNary-Haugen bill he added, "was very far reaching" and the opposition was in no sense partisan.

Referring to farm relief legislation he declared the failure of the McNary-Haugen bill in the senate and rejection by the house of the McNary-Haugen measure was due largely "to the fact that farm organizations were unable to come together upon the precise measure which would afford the relief desired," the McNary-Haugen bill he added, "was very far reaching" and the opposition was in no sense partisan.

Mr. Longworth pointed out that the house passed the Hoch resolution looking to a downward revision of freight rates on agricultural products and an amendment to the packers and stockyards act designed to eliminate discrimination against agricultural co-operative agencies.

The tax bill as passed was a "vast improvement over the tax law it superseded," he asserted while the soldier bonus bill was "not so severe a charge on the revenue as the measure proposed by the last congress."

SIX MEN VICTIMS OF STORM OR EXPLOSION

WINSTON SALEM, N. C., June 24 (AP)—Six men trapped by a thunderstorm in a shed near a quarry, where they were working about five and a half miles south of here, were killed today either by a bolt of lightning or by the explosion of about 150 pounds of dynamite stored there.

Two automobiles in the building were destroyed. The shed was demolished.

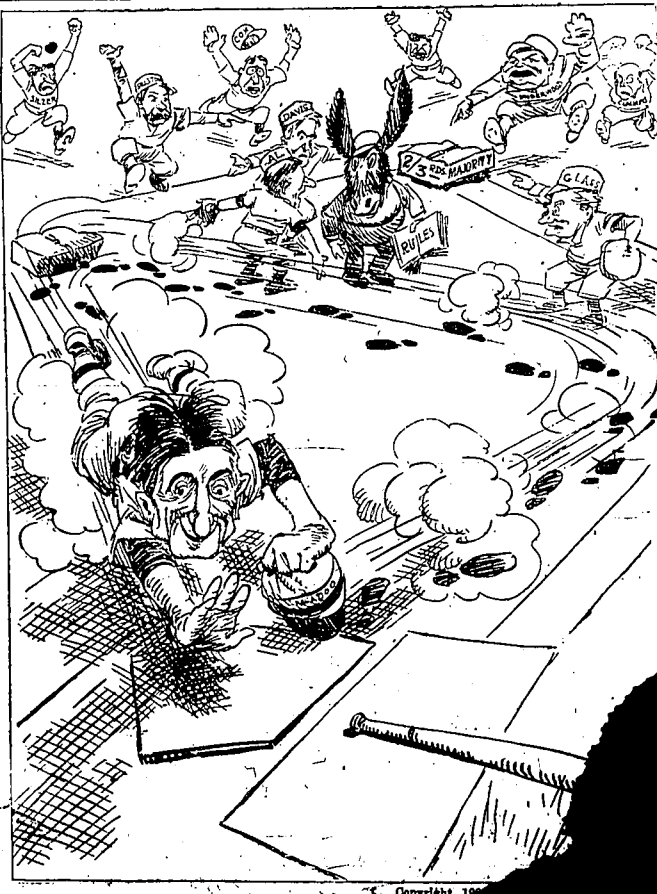

Leaders Differ on Proposed Planks in Party's Platform

Long and Bitter Struggle Ahead as Committee Settles Down to Business; Variety of Subjects Mentioned.

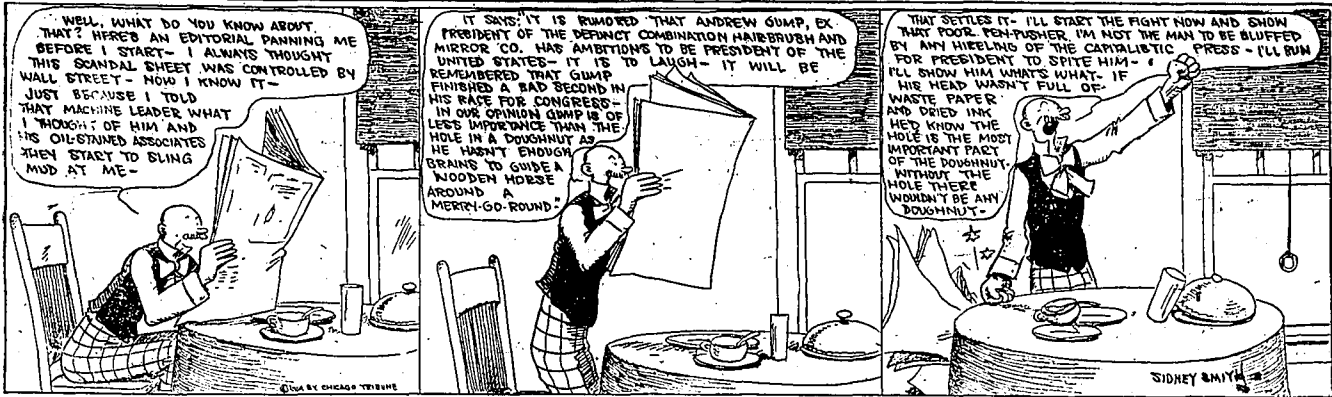

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP)—Facing a long and bitter fight the resolutions committee of the democratic national convention went into session today in an effort to draft a platform upon which the contending forces in the convention might agree.

Wide differences among leaders on four major subjects to be mentioned, Ku Klux Klan, prohibition and farm aid—there were threats of carrying the contents over some of these to the convention floor. Mr. Longworth was hopeful, however, that all difficulties could be ironed out in the committee.

THE GUMPS—THE FIGHT IS ON

Maughan Planning to Fly Back; Is Feted By High Executives

Intrepid Army Lieutenant Rests After Historic Flight Across Continent; Tells Sensations of Trip.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24 (AP)—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan, intrepid airman, quietly revealed at the end of the rainbow today. The spare, smiling army flyer, walked along a path that had been made on fete for him while the city was still vibrant with the realization of his great adventure in spanning the continent in a more or less frail air machine well within the compass of a single day.

Arriving from New York at 9:47 o'clock last night after eighteen hours, and twenty minutes in the air, with a few brief lapses, the doughty lieutenant was "tucked in" at the home of Lt. Colonel William E. Gillmore on the Presidio reservation with the din and chatter of his numerous welcome still ringing in his ears. Colonel Gillmore, who headed the welcoming forces, is chief of his army air forces here. He awoke today at 5:30 o'clock, the melody of strong head winds whining around the struts, the pounding of the motor and the cheering of the crowds remaining in his subconsciousness after sleep had come. He went back to sleep again, however, and finally appeared in both robe and slippers to greet the gathering newspapermen.

Has No "Bad Habits"

Later, attired in his uniform with the Sun Browne belt several sizes too large, his own having been left back in Mincola, he sat down to breakfast with Colonel Gillmore, lingering over a California cantaloupe.

He thrust the coffee aside. He never drinks it, he said. Neither does he smoke nor chew.

A long interview with the newspaper people followed.

"I am going to fly back," he said. "I am going to return by easy stages and expect to stop for a time in Washington."

"It was tough trying to fight sleep. The buzz of the engine synchronizes with the drone of the wind as you go along and they make up a great little lullaby. It's agony—fighting that feeling of drowsiness."

"Then I got sick too. I fought nausea nearly all of the way. It is a peculiarity with me. Few other airmen appear to have it. The machine is not to blame for it. I figure that it cost about $102 for gas and oil for the trip. The plane itself cost about $12,000.

"I circled twice before I landed last night just to take in the whole scene and get the feel" of it. It looked like there were 50,000 people down there waiting to greet me. It sure was a wonderful welcome."

Gets Many Messages

After the interview and a brief period of rest, in which he read many telegrams, one from President Coolidge, and other messages, he was taken by Colonel Gillmore to the Hotel St. Francis where the American Legion received him at luncheon. He then made a brief address on his achievement over one of the big radio stations and thereafter was taken back to the Presidio for more sleep.

"That is what he needs the most—sleep," Colonel Gillmore said.

Tonight he appeared at a banquet of the army and navy club, an organization of reserve officers of both arms of the service. Mayor James Ralph, Jr., Major General Charles Morton, commanding the Ninth corps area, Major General Wendell Neville, commanding the marines on the Pacific coast, Rear Admiral Edward Simpson, commanding the twelfth naval district and many other outstanding figures in the military and civic life here were invited to attend. It is plans for the future are indefinite. But it is proposed to have him remain in San Francisco for at least a week.

Each in His Place

Tolstoy on his farm Milton without his sight. Bynona in his prison. Fast-tur in his laboratory. All did great things for the world. All these had their burdens and their limitations—and who has not? Yet they wrought almightily for the good of mankind. They did it, because I am on a farm, or blind, or in prison, or confined within a workshop, I cannot do anything worth while. Rather did they say: "This is my lot, but I shall not despair. I will make the most of my opportunities, and do my best while I have life." This is the spirit of all those who do great things.

Hard as Rock

Ever try to identify rocks by their sturdiness, color, feel, shape, luster and other marks of identification? That's something else to think about while hiking. A stone is something more than to stumble over or to throw. A cigar box divided into six, or eight sections makes a splendid case in which to place various specimens found along the way and labeled correctly as soon as you learn their right names. Glacial limestones, concretions, fossils in limestone, crystals and staurolites are some of the special things to look for.

Secret of Happiness

To live content with small means—to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion, to be worthy, not respectable, and healthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly, to listen to stars and birds, babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully—do all bravely, await occasion—never hurry; in a word, to let spiritual, hidden and unconscious, triumph through the common—W. Inventor of Locomotive

It is not true that George Stephenson invented the locomotive steam engine. That honor belongs to George Trevithick, a Cornish engineer, whose steam locomotive drew a train on rails from Merthyr Tydfil to Cardiff in 1804. Trevithick was the result of a bet. A local ironmaster, William Gurney, having heard of Trevithick's experiments in Cornwall, made a bet that he would get a steam engine to draw a load of 20 tons on the tramway from Merthyr to Abercromby. He was laughed at, but he sent for Trevithick, who duly fulfilled the conditions of the bet.

Betrothed as Babies

For centuries past it has been the custom in China for the parents of a baby girl to betroth her in infancy to the youthful son of a friendly couple, and there have been numerous cases in which the girl has not seen her husband-to-be until she arrived at the home of his parents for the marriage ceremony. The match was a question solely for the respective parents and the young couple were not consulted. Western civilization, however, is marching on China, and the fact that the old order is changing is proved by four advertisements inserted in the vernacular Press of Peking recently, by which young women have given notice to the world that they decline to recognize the betrothals arranged for them in their infancies, and that they reserve for themselves the right to select their life partners.

The Sun Spot Cycle

Important new knowledge about sun spots was acquired during the year through observations at the Mt. Wilson observatory, although 1923 was the year of minimum sunspotness. These great vortices are centers of magnetic fields, and they are known to pass across the disk of the sun two by two, with each spot of a pair having a different sign, as though they were the two ends of the horseshoe magnet.

Declares Matinee Idol Is Memory of the Past

"Yes," said the old actor reminiscently, "the matinee idol is a thing of the past. He is only a memory. The moving picture hero of the screen has supplanted him. The girls and women have put the film star on a pedestal, and they give him the adoration, no matter whether he is in California, or Algiers, or anywhere else."

A score of years ago the matinee idol was in the zenith of his glory. People of the present day cannot realize how the women used to idolize them. There was Harry Montague, George Rignold, or King Henry V. The Silver King, who started in fame; Osmond Tearle, who started in fame; the old Union Square Theater; Harry Crisp, handsome Jack Burman, who was Adeline Nelson's leading man; Henry Conway, and later Maurice Barrymore and Kyrie Bellew. These men were the pets of the ladies and each one could fill the houses on a Saturday matinee. Not only this, but they were feted and entertained by the men as well.

The most famous was Montague. The girls throughout the country bought his pictures and used to wear their hair in what was known as the Montague curl. What they knew those days can forget when Monty, as he was known, used to take a jaunt down to Long Branch, then the fashionable resort? He was tall, slender, broad shouldered, with a slight, silky mustache, big dreamy eyes, with hands some white teeth. Without being an electric current as a copper wire of the same diameter as long as from the earth to the moon. What makes ordinary water a moderately good conductor is not the water itself, but the material dissolved in it. When, for example, a molecule of salt is put into water, it breaks up into what are known as ions, one positively, the other negatively charged. If then no electric current is given a chance to pass through the water, it rides on the ions which carry the electrical charges through it. If there are no ions, that is, if there are no salts in solution, the current cannot get across. But all water outside of chemical laboratories contains enough dissolved substances to make a fairly good conductor, although chemically pure water is not.

Pure Water Does Not Conduct Electricity

Pure water does not conduct electricity to any appreciable extent. A column of chemically pure water one twenty-fifth of an inch long has as much resistance to the passage of an electric current as a copper wire of the same diameter as long as from the earth to the moon. What makes ordinary water a moderately good conductor is not the water itself, but the material dissolved in it. When, for example, a molecule of salt is put into water, it breaks up into what are known as ions, one positively, the other negatively charged. If then no electric current is given a chance to pass through the water, it rides on the ions which carry the electrical charges through it. But all water outside of chemical laboratories contains enough dissolved substances to make a fairly good conductor, although chemically pure water is not.

"Life" of a Magnet

The life of a permanent magnet magnetized in any manner whatever has never been determined. A magnet made of the best quality steel, properly heat treated and aged and used under the best conditions of service would probably deteriorate only a negligible amount in the lifetime of a single observer.

Device Packs Currents

A machine has been invented for the packing of currents at the Greek ports, whence most of that fruit is sent to the foreign markets.

CHAUTAUQUA ON IN TWIN FALLS

Pitching of Big Brown Tent Marks Hour of Opening of Season's Course.

With the pitching of the big brown tent on the grounds at the corner of Second street and Fifth avenue east just east of the city park, and with the completion by O. G. Price, E. C. White, director in charge and his assistants, of last minute arrangements, the stage will be set for the opening of day of Twin Falls' chautauqua course for this season.

Chautauqua will be opened by the Marimba band, which comes here fresh from many triumphs in the east. The program for Thursday includes the Beach-Freeman duo, high class and versatile artists, in the afternoon, and a lecture by Dr. Arthur Walswyn Evans on "The Little Red Schoolhouse," in the evening.

Programs in the afternoon will begin at 2:30 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock.

In connection with the course, a junior chautauqua is to be conducted for the little folks by Miss Kathryn Brown, junior director, who will arrive here this afternoon. Local supervised play activities will be conducted during chautauqua week in conjunction with the junior chautauqua, according to announcement Tuesday evening by Mrs. J. R. Joslyn, and during this period Mrs. Wynn will continue her work under direction of Miss Brown. Supervised play will be continued after July 4 as before.

Opening of chautauqua brings the last lay, today, for purchase of season tickets. Reserved seats are on sale at the Majestic pharmacy.

SEES AVIATION AS FACTOR IN CITY GROWTH

Speaker at Convention of Building Owners and Managers Predicts Big Advance in Future Flying.

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 24 (AP)—Aerial transportation will cause the doming of American cities, declared George R. McKay of Cleveland in an address delivered at the seventeenth annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, which opened here yesterday.

Representatives of more than $5,000,000 worth of skyscrapers and other business district properties in the principal cities of America are attending the convention.

The two principal topics on the program are "Operation of Old Buildings," and "Operating Methods and Devices."

Predicts Roof Landings.

"The time is not far distant when city skyscrapers will have to provide a landing space on their roofs for airplane or passenger dirigibles," said Mr. McKay. "If I live long enough I expect to see height limits of cities made uniform for the business district, which should require the builder to build up to that limit instead of telling him that he can build no higher than a certain limit."

"Most of the business districts will present a flat appearance to the human eye, thereby making landing much easier. Possibly gliders will be flung across the streets for connecting bridges, so that a portion of the district will be an ideal landing field."

"We must recognize that aerial transportation is coming and that some day it will be as common as motor traffic is today. The speed with which Americans feel they must do business puts suburban landing fields out of the question as terminals for air lines. Delivery of passengers must be made close to the business district."

Must Rebuild.

The operation of old buildings is a matter of civic concern, declared President Earl Shultz, of Chicago, since the coming of skyscrapers was little more than a few years ago and many of the original buildings are becoming obsolete. High wages and high cost of building materials makes it imperative, Mr. Shultz said, that every means possible be exerted to conserve the ancient structures and to rehabilitate them for future service on a par with that of type of service rendered by more up to date buildings.

Who's Who?

The door of the post office opened, and a man whom the postmistress did not recognize as one of the people living in the district walked in. "I am expecting a registered letter to be left here for me," he announced, as he approached the counter.

"What name, please?" asked the postmistress.

The man gave his name and the letter was produced, but the woman had her doubts as to whether she ought to give it up, as she had no means of identifying the caller.

Upon hearing this the stranger took a photograph from his pocket and handed it to the postmistress, remarking:

"I think that ought to satisfy you as to who I am."

She looked long and earnestly at the portrait and then said:

"Yes, that's you, right enough. Here's your letter."

Checkers

In England the game of checkers is known as draughts; in France, jeu des dames; in Italian, dammi; in Spanish, damas; in Arabic, Egypt, damah. The recurrence of the form of "dame" is attributed to the fact that part of the board and some of the draughts of Queen Matilda, daughter of Thimothew, who lived in Egypt 1600 B. C. were found.

INCREASES DAMAGE CLAIM

A. E. Caldwell Asks Rental Value of Land in Addition to Crop Damage From Salmon River Canal Co.

In addition to claims set forth in a suit started in district court here in March of last year, against the Salmon River Canal company for $12,128 on account of alleged crop losses during the seasons of 1921 and 1922, A. E. Caldwell will seek to recover $2400 as the rental value in 1923 of the land on which the crops in question were sown, and for this purpose he filed in district court Tuesday a complaint and supplement setting forth the new claim.

In action against the canal company in this action are based on the company's alleged refusal to deliver water for three years past to the land in question which is outside the patented area of the Salmon River project. Mr. Caldwell is represented in this action by Attorney O. C. Hall of Twin Falls.

Story of Stolen Kiss of Revolutionary Days

From Mount Holly, N. J., comes a story of a kiss snatched from Stephen Girard's pretty young wife by Col. Walter Stewart of the American army, which is a cherished legend of that section and for which there is considerable historic foundation. It is generally known that upon the approach of the British army to Philadelphia in 1777, Stephen Girard, who was in business there and who later became one of the leading financiers of that city, moved to Mount Holly and purchased a small farm. Here he and his wife lived and kept store for two years.

The story of the stolen kiss is told in Stephen Girard's biography of Stephen Girard, published in 1923. During Girard's residence at Mount Holly, the biographer states, the American army encamped in the neighborhood, and Girard's store afforded many moments of hilarity to the soldiers. One afternoon Colonel Stewart and a fellow officer visited the store to purchase a small purchase and to see Girard's pretty wife. Colonel Stewart could not resist the temptation to snatch a kiss from Mrs. Girard while her husband had his back turned. The lady immediately told her husband who forced the colonel to apologize. It is said that the occurrence caused a lot of disturbance at the time.

For many years the story was believed to have originated in the author's imagination for it was known that he had a personal grudge against Girard, but the discovery that Walter Stewart was a colonel in the Continental army and that he spent six days at Mount Holly during Girard's residence there gave the story some credence.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Have at Least Got a Brief Run for His Life

"Talkin' about runnin'," said the second man, "about the finest bit of sprinlin' I ever saw was in the country year before last. I'd been out one day rabbit shootin', and had the most awful luck, when I spied a whoppin' great hare about two hundred yards away. Talkin' a careful sight I let fly, but the instant my bullet touched him, and before I had time to penetrate his skin, that hare was off like a flash."

"I never saw two such evenly matched things as that hare and my bullet. For over half a mile they sped on together, neither gainin' on the other, the bullet just managin' to keep in touch with the hare's skin. At the end of a mile, however, the pace began to tell on the hare and he faltered for a moment."

"'Twas fatal. The bullet sped on and the poor beast was bowled over. He deserved his freedom if ever an animal did. I'd have got it, too, if he could have stuck out another 20 yards, for that's about as far as my rifle carries."—Exchange.

Influenza Old Complaint

Influenza has been known almost as long as man has been known. The word itself is derived from the ancient astrologers, who believed it to be caused by the "influence" of the stars. The disease has been unmistakably traced back to 1550. It was then prevalent in eastern Germany, and was known, curiously enough, as sleeping sickness. It appeared again in the eighteenth century, when epidemics of it were frequent and prolonged in most European countries. Among the famous people of long ago who suffered from it were Sir Isaac Newton, Goethe and Schiller. The great philosopher Kant was attacked by it, and he believed it was caused by noxious insects brought to western Europe as a result of trade with Russia.

IDAHO TOURING BUREAU AT GREEN RIVER, WYOMING

BOISE, June 24.—The Idaho State Automobile (A. A. A.) association announces the establishment of a touring bureau at Green River, Wyo., and of the principal point of tourist diversion at Granger, where there has also been opened an information office for the association. Other bureaus are to be established as fast as memberships will permit, including one at Yellowstone park.

"Idaho has not had its share of auto travel," said the secretary of the association. "Other states have been doing what we should have done. We have no quarrel with them, only self-criticism. We ought to keep busy on this job, which is made possible now as never before by the fact that the association is being conducted on a public service basis."

"The demands for Idaho scenic literature and other information has entirely exhausted our supply of literature. This has been caused largely by the wholesale response to our advertisements in more than 125 newspapers in the east, middle west and south. Fresh supplies will be available in a few days and will be replenished as fast as funds will permit. The Idaho scenic folder will be enlarged by four more views, some additional from north Idaho."

SOCIETY

Edited by Mrs. E. R. Williams Telephone 35.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Roy on Sixth avenue east was the scene of a pretty party Monday evening when their daughter, Miss Dorcas Bridges, entertained a number of her friends with games, music and singing. In a clever floral guessing contest first prize was won by Miss Mary Deagle and consolation by Miss Gertrude McAnulty. Later in the evening a delicious luncheon was served at a beautifully appointed table carrying out a pink and white color scheme. A large pink bell was placed over the table, pink net cups in rose shape with a tiny bell on the handle held the place cards and a small announcing the forthcoming marriage of Miss Roy and Frank Kieffer, Jr., on July 14. Miss Roy was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Frank Kieffer, Sr., and Mrs. Lambert King.

Miss Flo Cook entertained the Tri-C bridge club at her home on Maple avenue Monday evening. There were three tables of players and favor for highest score was won by Miss Jean Emery. Finally, a refreshment was served at the conclusion of the games. The Misses Donna Wyman, Harriet Gapp, Lula Duke and Jerome Krievack were guests.

Before the credentials committee the McAdoo forces won a victory by securing a convention seat for a McAdoo alternate who will vote in the absence of use of the delegates from Oregon. A contest involving 11 delegates from Minnesota was thrown out after only one brief consideration.

TWO OUTLETS TO THE SEA

The proposed deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the sea, via the St. Lawrence river, is looking up.
The republican platform has endorsed
it. The democratic platform is expected to do likewise. Secretary Hoover, speaking not only as a government official but as an expert engineer, declares himself in favor of the project.

Mr. Hoover says that he is sure it will be accomplished sooner or later, by necessity. There is general support given by most other sections on the ground that anything improving transportation facilities in one part of the country benefits the country as a whole. Only New York and New England remain hostile or doubtful.

The New York World, which has never been enthusiastic about the plan, probably expresses the best eastern opinion in refraining from outright opposition, and saying: "If the canal
is undertaken, and if then New York,
with its free-port, its low-gradient feeder railways and the longer open season on its own Barge canal can not meet the competition, that fact will be in itself the most convincing proof that the St. Lawrence project was necessary."

It is quite possible that before an other decade has passed, the swelling traffic between the interior and the eastern seaboard will require both canals.

"BROADCASTING"

It will be a blow to radio fans to learn that the manufacturers of radio supplies have officially abandoned
"broadcasting." The proper term, they insist, is "radio-casting," which they intend to use hereafter.

They were led to make this verbal change by the report of a committee which, searching a dictionary, found "broadcasting" defined as "having to do with the sowing of seed of material substance." Radio waves, they say, are not "material substance,"
and so the term does not fit.

Well, "radio-casting" is probably a good enough word, when you get used to it, provided they don't start saying "radio-cast." But it seems a pity. "Broadcasting" is shorter and handier, and has been a familiar word for several hundred years, and really means something to everybody. There is in it the picturesque figure of the farmer sowing grain. It adds to the understanding of radio itself to the picture the sower as reaching his hand into the entertainment bag and scattering seeds of music, oratory,
etc., to the four winds.

Also, these dictionary-probers may be altogether wrong in their understanding of radio. Scientists mostly regard the ether of space as a material thing, and electric currents themselves as material—made up of electrons. If that is so, then the radio vibrations are as material as water waves, and therefore radio
"has to do with the sowing of material substance" as much as the farmer sowing.

It is only too easy to become in-likely to come in as indifference and ignorance go out, but not much be-uproot the three I's. When this is accomplished there will be a great deal more hope, of the enforcement

"Matrimonially Speaking"

By MRS. HUGH MCKAY

My husband has never lost an argument.

Not according to his way of seeing,
that is. Sometimes he'll admit the result was wrong, but he always gives himself the decision by at least a shade.
He and I have had our little domestic debates about most of the known subjects. Often he's been right—often I've been. But do you think I've ever been able to make him see things that way?

After five talked him up a tree and down a hole and proved to him, for instance, that checked suits are not becoming to him, he waves all my points
aside with:

"But you simply don't know anything about it my dear. And I do.
Now listen—"

It may be politics, or carls, or clothes, or friends—the outcome of our discussion is always the same. If he wins, he wins. If I win, I lose.

The person who got up the saying that a woman always gets the last word ought to be sued for libel, breach of contract and intent to defraud!

Origin of Perfume

To the Greeks, who attributed the origin of perfume to a drop of nectar
spilt at a feast of the gods of Cupid,
and owe the addition of flower fragrance to the list of perfume ingredients, observe the Detroit News. Their refined sense of smell demanded more delicate scents than the strong fragrance of spices and heavy animal odors, as musk, one of the oldest and most known perfumes at that time and still popular in the Orient. Iris, rose, crocus, violet and also the aromatic plants, thyme and marjoram were favorite scents with them.

Then came the Dark Ages—even for perfumers and perfumes, as the natural and inevitable result of Roman extravagance. The art of perfuming was lost, not to have rebirth until Romanesque days and the time of the famed Florentine perfumer, Rendi, who, history tells us, accompanied the fourteen-year-old Catherine de Medici to France as court perfumer.

But One Got Him

"At sixteen the girl is a woman; at twenty-five, if still unmarried, she is a girl," sternly said the philosophical youth, who had devoted much time to thinking. "She will face death without a tremor and swoon at the sight of a mouse. The only time she does what you expect her to do is when you expect her to do what you do not expect her to do. The only reason she does anything is because she doesn't know why she does it. She

Annuity Idea Old

Historically, annuities antedate life insurance by far, says the World's Work. It is thought that the great development of banking facilities in Assyria and Babylonians must have provided annuities.

The first definite mention of them, however, was 40 B. C. in Rome, and it is of such a character as to justify a belief that they had been long in use.
In the Middle Ages kingdoms, municipalities and bankers obtained money by selling annuities for life or terms of years. It is said that England's national existence during the war of William of Orange was largely maintained through the money obtained by selling annuities. At first the values of such contracts were determined without scientific calcula-

Huge Reservoir Built

To Store Flood Waters

The erratic flow of the streams of the Intermountain desert country of the West makes extremely difficult the problem of engineering in that region.
These streams are characterized by extraordinary fluctuations in discharge, varying from dry to enormous floods, and changes occur at irregular intervals. Owing to such fluctuations the constructing engineers who are building large storage works are forced to plan types of structures that are not common in regions where streams are more dependable.

Out in Nevada the government has built a remarkable dam, known as the Lahontan, in Carson river, to store the floods for irrigation. Carson river is subject to sudden floods, which are occasionally repeated at short intervals.
The storage reservoir does not contain the entire flood discharge, so that provision must be made to take care of the surplus.

Enormous spillways are constructed at each end of the dam, which converge toward the middle of the river,
where a circular, stilling pool of concrete has been built.

In the center is a concrete amphitheater into which the floods are turned and still. The wide steps of the spillways serve to check the down-rush of the floods as they are turned out of the reservoir to drop back into the river 100 feet below. The capacity of the spillways is 80,000 cubic feet per second, or the flow of a big river.

The Highgrader

India gave a little exclamation and moved toward the hatrack. Her hand fell upon a second hat, similar to the one she had just removed.

"What now?"

"Three yards from the shore," called
his sister. "There should be a gunny
sack, whatever that is."

"Afraid he's spoiling us," Kilmenny
said with a laugh as he moved out in
his waders against the current. "Here,
I am, the next direction?"

India giggled. She was Irish enough to get the humorous side of things and could not help being frivolous even when she was greatly interested.

"Now you look over your left shoulder
at the moon and wish."

Her brother's high voice cut in. "I say, my sister's kicking something.
Wait a bit."

He braced his feet, dived suddenly down with one arm till his face touched the water, and grappled with his fingers for a hold on something lying between two rocks at the bottom.
Using both hands, he dragged his find
to land.

"It's a sack," India cried excitedly.
The captain's eyes met those of Moya. His face was grave, but she was white to the lips. Both of them felt sure of what they would find in the sack.

"Open it," she told him tensely.

With his pocketknife Kilmenny cut the string that tied the sack. He drew out a heavy valve so full that it gaped.
Silver and gold coins, as well as bills, filled it to the mouth. They had found the money stolen from the treasurer of the Gunnison County Fair association.

All three of them were sick at heart.
Jack Kilmenny then was guilty, after all. The message in the hat had not been intended for them, but had been merely a note of identification of the captain. He had taken the captain's hat merely because he did not want the officers to find the directions under the avant pad.

To Moya the next hour was a nightmare. They returned to the Lodge and slipped into the house by way of a back window, opening up the department north. Kilmenny hit the sack of treasure in his trunk and dis-vested himself of his fishing clothes.
Presently he joined Moya and his sister
on the front porch, where shortly they were discovered by Verlander in search of a fourth at bridge.

India, knowing how greatly her friend was shaken, volunteered to fill the table and maneuver Verlander back into the living room with her.

Captain Kilmenny, left alone with the girl of his dreams, wisely said nothing. He was himself indignant, his family pride stung to the quick. His cousin was not only a thief but a liar.
Born of a race of soldiers, with the traditions of family and of the army
back of him for generations, the latter offense was the greater of the two.
He understood something of how Miss Dwight felt. Openly she had championed his cause. Now her feelings were wounded, her pride hurt, and her anger ablaze. The fellow who had been against her had been so.

"What are you hiding?" Miss Kil-menny asked quickly.

Moya produced from her hatbox a gray sash and put it on the table.

"I didn't know it was yours," Moya said. "He told me it was yours," she explained.

"Why wasn't it to tell Jack Kilmenny
that he had taken Ned's hat by mistake?" India wanted to know.

"Because it wasn't by mistake."

"Not by mistake? What would he want with another man's hat?"

"I'm not sure about that. Perhaps he didn't want his own."

"But why—why?"

"Don't they search prisoners before they lock them up?" Moya asked abruptly. "Suppose there is something about that hat he didn't want to see."

"How do you mean?" India picked up the hat and turned it round slowly.

"It's worn and a bit disreputable, but he wouldn't care for that."

Moya found a pair of scissors in her work basket. With these she ripped off the outer ribbon. This told her nothing. Next she examined the inside. Under the sweat pad was a folded slip of paper. She saved it in excitement.

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"What did it tell you?"

"But—if he is innocent—what could there be he wanted to hide?"

"I don't know. Do you think we ought to read this?"

"I don't know," India repeated in her turn. "Perhaps it may be a message to you."

Moya's face lighted. "Of course that's it. He wanted to tell us something when the rest were not there,
so he used this method."

The crumpled notes were penciled
on the torn fragment of paper.

"At what above camp."

"Twelve steps below big rock."

"In gunny sack three yards from shore."

Two pairs of puzzled eyes looked into each other's.

"What can it mean?" India asked.

"Can it be a direction for finding something?"

"That's what we must find out. At what above camp? That probably means his fishing camp."

"What are you going to do, India?"

"I'm going to get Ned to help me find that gunny sack."

Moya found herself trembling. She did not know why. It was not doubt of her reckless friend, but none the less she was in a panic.

"Do you think we'd better?"

Miss Kilmenny looked at her in surprise. In general nobody came to decision more quickly than Moya.

"Of course. How else can we tell whether it is something he wants us to do for him?"

"When shall we look?"

"The sooner the better—tonight."

answered the other girl immediately.

"Lady Jim," Moya reminded her.
"She doesn't know. She can't object if we take Ned and go fishing
for an hour."

Moya consulted her watch. "Let's go now. We can be back in time for supper."

"Get into your fishing togs. I'll get Ned and we'll meet you on the west porch in a quarter of an hour."

Within the appointed time the three slipped away down the river bank trail
as slightly as conspirators. The captain was rather inclined to pool-pool the whole thing, but he was not at all sorry to share an adventure that brought him into a closer relationship with Moya Dwight.

"Must be this wharf," India said
presently, as a bulky shadow loomed out of the darkness.

"Shouldn't wonder. Here's a big rock just below it. Didn't the paper say something about a rock?" asked the captain.

"Twelve steps below big rock, it says."

The soldier paced off the distance.

"What now?"

"Three yards from the shore," called
his sister. "There should be a gunny
sack, whatever that is."

"Afraid he's spoiling us," Kilmenny
said with a laugh as he moved out in
his waders against the current. "Here,

President Praises Twin Falls Girl

Miss Gladys Terhune Receives Congratulations from White House on Becoming Committee Member.

Miss Gladys Terhune of Twin Falls is in receipt of a personally signed letter from President Coolidge in which the president offers congratulations to Miss Terhune upon her acceptance of the position of member of the new republican national committee from Idaho. The letter follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, D. C., June 18, 1924.

My Dear Miss Terhune: At this earliest opportunity, I want to express my gratification that you are to serve from your state as a member of the new republican national committee. While membership in this important body is a very real distinction, I have always felt that it brings all too little appreciation to the position of member of the national committee. It is scarcely one of the most important instruments that have been devised through our form of government, through which the business conduct of the party, involving a great responsibility. The members of the committee are volunteers, serving from no other motive than devotion to the cause. To them fall the tasks of organization and management, with little of the tangible recognition or official reward. It is therefore fitting that acknowledgment be made of the obligation due to them from both the party and the public. I can not express this often, but I want you to know I always feel it.

The national committee becomes this year a more representative body than ever before, for its membership now comprises both men and women serving on a basis of complete equality, precisely the full duties of citizenship have been conferred upon them. This marks a long advance, and as I wanted it that it brings all too little appreciation to the position of member of the national committee. I can not express this often, but I want you to know I always feel it.

I want you to feel how much I appreciate the services which you are so generously giving.

Very truly yours,
CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Miss Gladys Terhune, Twin Falls, Idaho.
