City; Committee Prepares for Big Crowds.

Hundreds of visitors from all parts of southern Idaho are expected to gather in Twin Falls on the Fourth of July to attend the celebration of the centennial of the city's founding. The committee has arranged for a series of events, including a parade, a regatta, and a fireworks display. The celebration is expected to draw a large crowd of visitors to the city.

In addition to the parade, a street party, bucking contests, speeches, music and dancing as well as foot races, there will be swimming races at the Twin Falls natatorium in which a number of Twin Falls and visiting swimmers will compete. Races at the natatorium will start at 11 o'clock. Both expert and amateur swimmers will take part.

There will be no charge made to witness these races. First on the program will be a 50-yard dash and free-for-all with any stroke allowed for prizes of $3 and $1. The second event will be a 100-yard race for ladies. A 100-foot free-for-all with the back stroke used will be the next event while this will be followed by a 50-yard race for boys and girls under 13 years of age. For all of these races there will be prizes of $3 and $1. The last event will be a relay race with four boys to the team. 13 years of age, under swimming 25 yards each. The prizes will be $4 and $2.

To take part in the bucking contest to be held at the Lincoln field will be Miss Alberta LeVerné of Cheyenne, champion woman rider, who will compete with other cowboys and cowgirls here. Miss LeVerné following the contest will compete with the best riders in southern Idaho for further prizes. Miss LeVerné is said to have won many prizes for her riding and the committee feel highly gratified at being able to obtain her for the events here.

The parade in which many organizations will participate will take place at 9 o'clock. During the morning there will be a free ball game, races, an address by President A. H. Upham of the University of Idaho, vocal music under the direction of Mrs. L. H. Masters and other events. During the afternoon there will be another baseball game, races, bucking contest, March Glee in the evening, fireworks and dancing, as well as many other events.

Hot Shoe Games.

Hot shoe pitching will also be held at the park which will be open to all comers. It is expected that games will be played during the entire day. One of the morning ball games will not be allowed on the field, the committee announced. Hansen will meet the sugar factory team at this time while in the afternoon the Western "Optics" will play the Twin Falls Blues.

Plans Only Brief Stops.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 2 (AP)—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan, army aviator who flew from coast to coast in one week in a day-to-day flight, landed at Rosecrans flying field here at 6:42 o'clock tonight. He will hop off for Dayton, Ohio, at 8:15 tomorrow morning and will have only one long enough to refuel flying from there directly to New York.

Maughan hopped off from Salt Lake City at 8:40 o'clock this morning.

MACLAREN AT SHANG HAI

FAST TRAIN IS WRECKED

LANCASTER, Pa., July 2 (AP)—The Broadway Limited, one of the Pennsylvania railroad's fastest passenger trains from New York to Chicago, was wrecked tonight one mile east of this city, eight of the nine cars leaving the rails. Two women passengers and one member of the crew were slightly hurt.

McADOO PASSES 500 MARK
CLOSE OF 42ND BALLOT

Californian's Vote Shows but Slight Change After Reaching New High Total; Bryan's Performance Causes Much Speculation and Apparently Solidifies Both Principal Forces.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—The leaders in the contest stood this way at the close of the forty-second ballot: McAdoo, 503.4; Smith, 318.9; Davis, 67. This was a loss of one chair for McAdoo, while Smith gained one. Davis lost three.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—At the close of its forty-second ballot the democratic national convention just before midnight adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—William Gibbs McAdoo ran to a new high mark in tonight's balloting in the democratic national convention. He passed the much sought after 500 vote by dint of much frantic work and persuasion of managers on the part of his floor managers, who declared they had not finished their work yet.

McADOO TO STAY
TO THE FINISH

Rockwell Still Confident His Candidate Will Win; Says Others to be Eliminated.

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—McAdoo has a "great day" in the expressed opinion of David Ladd Rockwell, his campaign manager.

So fagged out that he could scarcely keep his eyes open, Rockwell, during the evening recess declared the McAdoo lines were stronger than ever that it had been conclusively shown his delegates would not surrender. He pointed to the gain McAdoo made during the day's balloting, predicted he would wear down his opposition and soar above a majority, and asserted emphatically that he was authorized to speak for McAdoo in conferring with leaders in other camps in an effort to agree on a compromise candidate and thus end the deadlock. Declaring there was no possibility of McAdoo releasing his delegates, even if the tide should turn strongly against him, Rockwell said the candidate had no intention of withdrawing from the race.

MEANS GOES TO PRISON

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—Sentenced to serve two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta and fined $10,000 and $5000 respectively for conspiracy to receive stolen goods, Elmer W. Means, former department of justice agent, and Elmer W. Jarnecker, his secretary, tonight were sent back to Tomb, unable to furnish bail.

Overruling motion for a new trial, Federal Judge Wolverton imposed the maximum penalty. Counsel for Means at Jarnecker then filed a writ of error.

URGES RALSTON
AS BEST CHOICE
ON COMPROMISE

Taggart Emphasizes Merits of Indiana Senator; Points to Economy; Not Hostile to Any Other Candidate, He Says.

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—The merits of Senator Ralston of Indiana as a compromise candidate for the democratic presidential nomination were pointed to by Thomas Taggart, the Hoover state political leader, in a statement issued late today after the recess of the national convention.

Taggart emphasized that the senator made a good record for economy while chief executive of Indiana and declared that the Indiana delegation had no hostility toward any other candidate. He said informally that he did not believe William Jennings Bryan's address, to the convention, mentioning Ralston as an acceptable candidate, had either injured or aided the senator's chances.

EDUCATORS IN SESSION

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—Nomination of Jess H. Newton, superintendent of schools of Denver, for president of the National Education Association and of other officers including twelve vice presidents and a director of education for each state was the principal item today at the association's convention.

Mr. Newton was chosen to succeed Miss Olive M. Jones, New York City school principal, who will become vice president. Other vice presidents designated include Mary P. Mooney, San Francisco; W. O. Welsh, Globe, Ariz.; and A. A. Shady, Casper, Wyo.

Veteran Democrat Finds Thrills in Present Sessions

Iowa Banker, Age 81, Recalls Chicago Meet in 1892 and Attack on Cleveland.

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—Parsley Sheldon, Ames, Iowa, banker, 81 years of age, and veteran of every democratic convention since '84, finds in the present gathering the best thrill of his experience.

The nearest thing to this we ever had," he reminisced, between ballots, "was at Chicago in 1892, when Bourke Cochrane talked all night against Grover Cleveland. We had a good fight at Baltimore and we made history there, but I would put this meeting right here down for the classic example of a deadlocked convention. Some of those young fellows don't know yet what they are in for."

BORAH REQUESTS
EXPENSE FIGURE

Sends Letter to Butler Outlining Facts to be Submitted as to Campaign Costs.

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—Chairman Borah of the senate committee authorized to maintain a continuing investigation into political expenditures during the presidential election, addressed a letter today to William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee, outlining the first formal inquiry on the subject.

The committee chairman asked for the amount of cash the republican organization had on hand July 1, plans it might have to meet projected expenses, how much it proposed to raise and expend, the limit it would place upon campaign contributions, any facts it had as to money expenditures contemplated or in progress by its opponents and whether the republican national committee would be willing to begin on September 1, reporting to the senate the total of funds received, and the names of subscribers.

Similar inquiry will be made of the national chairman of each of the other political parties.

FORECAST VOTE
OF CONFERENCE
FOR LAFOLLETTE

National Committee of Progressives Scorns Platforms of Major Parties; Convention to Start Friday.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 2 (AP)—Declaring that neither the republican nor the democratic platforms was acceptable to them, the national committee in charge of the conference for progressive political action, today drew up plans for the convention of the organization in this city July 4 and 5.

William H. Johnston, chairman of the committee, who will also deliver the keynote speech Friday, said that there was no doubt but that a national ticket would be placed in the field to run independently.

"Virtually all of the delegates who are here are favorable to the presidential candidacy of Senator Robert L. LaFollette, and are insistent upon his running," he said.

This sentiment was echoed by J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman of the committee of 48 Ohio leaders, who predicted that the conference would not only nominate LaFollette, but would adopt the platform which his followers offered in vain in the recent republican national convention.

"The old parties have done exactly what we expected them to do and have really advanced our cause rather than their own," said Mr. Hopkins.

Reports to the committee indicated, it was said, that at least 700 delegates would attend the conference. Arthur H. Heller, executive secretary, was authorized for a statement that 32 states had been organized under the banner of the conference.

CONVICTION IS AFFIRMED

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—The conviction of William H. Anderson, former state superintendent of the national league, who is serving one to two years at Sing Sing prison for third degree forgery, was affirmed today by the second appellate division of the supreme court.

HAITI ORATOR IS SPEAKER

LYONS, July 2 (AP)—The final act of the congress of the International Federation of League of Nations Societies tonight was to listen to two dramatic addresses concerning the American occupation of Haiti—one a moving appeal for "justice and liberation" by Dantes Bellegarde, the Haitian leader and orator, and the other a statement of defense of American action by C. A. Dunaway, head of the American delegation.

AVIATORS DOUBT

MONTEREY, Cal., July 2 (AP)—The pilot and observer of a seaplane attached to the battleship Mississippi, who were rescued in the sea when their craft went into a nose dive off Point Monte last night, were rescued by the crew of a second plane late today. A small boat from the Mississippi assisted in the rescue.

Japanese Youth
Is Charged With Insult to Flag

Okada Under Arrest and Is Alleged to be Culprit Who Cut Down U. S. Colors; Two Were Taken Yesterday.

TOKIO, July 2 (AP)—Rihei Okada, aged 21, was arrested today under a charge of cutting down the flag of the United States at the American embassy here yesterday.

Tokio police asserted that Okada was a member of a society for the prevention of bolshevism and that he had been identified as a member of the gang which mobbed Viscount Goto's residence last December 27.

The two young men arrested yesterday, the police said, are members of the same society, which is said to be made up mostly of young radicals with ruffianly tendencies. They are still in custody and will be tried tomorrow before the fact. All three lived in a lodging house, which the society maintained near the American embassy, it was announced. It was there that the mutilated flag was found.

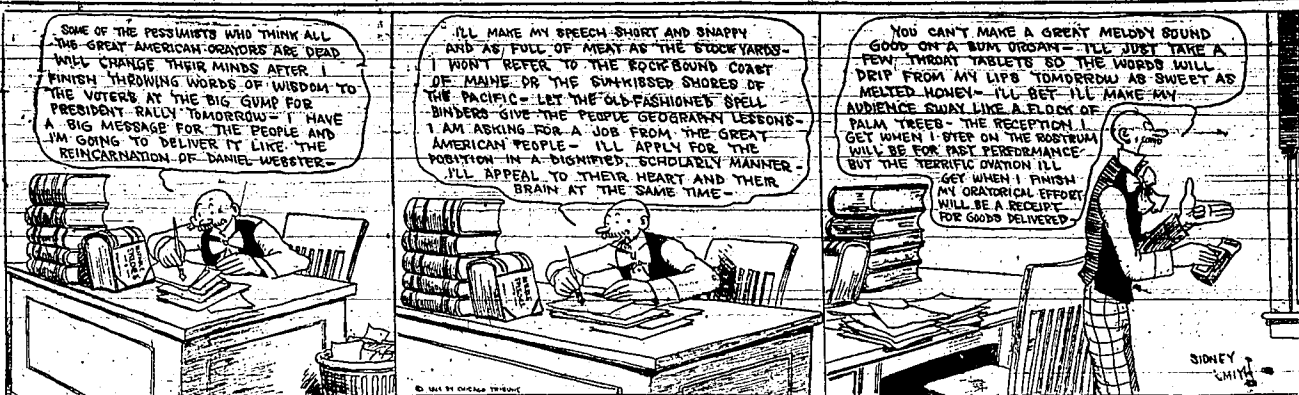

The criminal code prescribes a maximum of two years imprisonment for a crime such as that Okada is charged with committing, and the authorities intended to ask that Okada be given the limit.

Interpellations of the government in regard to the cutting down by an unidentified Japanese of the flag occupied virtually the entire attention of the house of peers at its session today.

Baron Yoshiko Sukutani made the interpellation and Baron Kijuro Shidehara, minister of foreign affairs, responded. The foreign minister recounted the measures taken to suppress the crime, United States the regret of the Japanese government for the incident.

THE GUMPS—SWEET TOMORROW

BRYAN THROWS SESSION INTO NEAR STAMPEDE

Appearance of Commoner Before Convention in Behalf of McDoo Signal for Sharp Rejoinder from Smith Men.

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—That stormy petrel of Democratic politics, William Jennings Bryan, added another tumultuous chapter to his long career today when he went before the democratic convention in an attempt to stem the tide of opposition to William G. McDoo.

Interrupting an all-day succession of inconclusive ballots for a nominee for the presidency, the three times candidate of his party plunged the convention into a near riot and finally was all but driven from the platform by heckling delegates and booing galleries.

Besides Mr. McDoo, he mentioned seven other presidential aspirants who would be satisfactory to him, but none of them aroused more than momentary enthusiasm and when the balloting was resumed scarcely a vote had been changed.

Neither did the conferences of the leaders during an ensuing recess materially alter the situation, and the convention went on into another night session with its disagreement over the nomination still in a jumble. McDoo and Smith, both unable to make material headway, kept their relative places at the head of the list. Davis of West Virginia lost a few votes, but remained in third place, and the supporters of Ralston of Indiana became more active in presenting the qualifications of their candidate as a compromise selection.

The entire effect of Mr. Bryan's appearance before the convention was not immediately apparent. The McDoo men declared the incident would stimulate a new rally in the lagging fortunes of the former treasury secretary, but the Smith supporters said Bryan had turned the trick for which they had been waiting and relegated the McDoo candidacy definitely to the limbo.

The speaker began with a plea for party harmony and moved on amid applause to declare he would name none of the men to whom he objected and wanted only to call attention to several he considered eminently qualified.

Mentions Meredith.

The first name he mentioned was that of Dr. A. A. Meredith of Florida State University. Meredith—among the floor and galleries and a few good natured gibes were shouted at the commoner. There were ripples of applause as he presented in turn the names of Joseph Daniels of North Carolina, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Senator Ralston of Indiana, Senator Walsh of Montana and E. T. Meredith of Iowa. Both applause and laughter answered a presentation of the qualifications of Mr. Bryan's brother, the governor of Nebraska.

Know Lot About Men

A little crowd was gathered in the great man's studio to see his pictures before they were sent to the academy. A girl standing around turned to the artist and asked:

"Strange—that angels are always women, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the artist, with a twinkle. "Shows artists don't know much about women, doesn't it?"

"That he is," retorted the girl quietly. "But he certainly showed that they know a lot about men."—Modern Art.

Giant Daffodil

After thirty-five years of experimenting, a Lincolnshire (Eng.) florist has produced a new variety of daffodil bulb, named the "Olympic" which stands about one foot higher than other daffodils. It has flowers more than two inches across the trumpet and five across the petals.

TWENTY-FIVE IN SUMMER SESSION AT U. OF IDAHO

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, July 2.—Twenty-five students registered in the summer session of the University of Idaho, all of whom are teachers of experience or students planning to teach next year, are enrolled in a special summer school course in play production and stage management under Professor J. H. Cushman, head of the course in dramatics.

The work is offered especially for those who plan to coach dramatics in Idaho high schools and the students themselves, under the supervision of Professor Cushman, coach their own plays, arrange their own settings and pick their characters.

Six one-act plays are being given this summer. The first group of three has been given in Moscow and Deary. The plays are such as are adaptable easily to high school talent.

His Hard Luck

"Take a chance on a raffle, will ya?" asked the stranger.

"No, sir," replied Levi. "I never took but one chance on a raffle and I lost that time."

"Well, if you are lucky, why don't you take another chance?" asked the stranger.

"Never will I take another chance on a raffle," announced Levi. "The time I took the chance a man raffled off a house, a lot, a horse, a wagon, a cow and a hog. And I won the hog."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Cured the Pop

"'E's a nice pup, isn't 'e?" said Jim, the village idiot, gazing proudly at his pet ferret. "I 'avert 'ad 'im long. I seed Farmer Giles one day takin' 'im to 'is pond, and I says to 'im, I says, 'What be ye goin' to do with that pup, Farmer Giles?' 'I'm goin' to drown 'im,' 'e says, sorrowful like: 'e's a'n 'wags 'is chertle, the point of the legs of 'is tail."

"Ohi, don't drown 'im, mister! I says, 'I've 'im to me. I'll cure 'im.' And I did cure 'im, too; I did that. I saved 'is life off 'is tail!"—London Advertiser.

To Irrigate Arid Land

The Caylon government has adopted an irrigation scheme which it is claimed will convert 10,000 acres of arid lands into valuable sugar cane land.

Mice Answer Dinner Bell

White mice have been taught the meaning of the dinner bell. What is more, they have been able to transmit some sense of its significance to their offspring so that they may more easily be taught to jump for the table when the bell rings. The experiments are described in Science by Prof. Ivan P. Pavlov, the Russian physiologist.

The first generation of white mice required 800 lessons before they realized that the ringing of an electric bell meant that dinner was ready. After that they quickly trotted to the feeding place when they heard it tinkle.

Their young ones caught on to the trick after only 100 lessons, while their offspring in turn learned after only 30. The fifth generation had apparently so well inherited the tendency to "obey that impulse" that after only five trials they were ready and waiting.

Professor Pavlov hopes that future generations will know the meaning of an electric bell, just as surely as a newborn chick knows the meaning of a fragment of grain.

Dress of Jap Women

The dress of Japanese women is regulated by their age and condition. One can tell at a glance, if one knows the rules, whether any woman is married or single, and how old she is.

Love of Flowers

Rude sketches of flowers appear in prehistoric caves, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Flowers have been represented over by painter, musician, poet and prose writer from the days when the first glimmerings of intelligence, and therefore of beauty, were beginning to penetrate the thick skulls of our ancestors. And that great love has been carried down the corridors of the centuries.

Early these flaming masses of nature's loveliness were transplanted from the sunny meadow and the shadows of woodland to the gardens of men. Men and women wanted them before their eyes without taking the trouble to go far from their homes. Kings and queens filled their palaces. Wives of humble peasants brought them from the wild places and set them out around their cottages.

Many Flying Animals

In Australia there are at least twenty species of animals which are flyers. Among them are flying squirrels, flying opossums, flying mice and even flying bears.

The name which applies to them all is "phalanger." This means that they have, extending from the front to the hind legs, a membrane which enables them to float in quite a graceful way from tree to tree. They are not really flying animals, but gliders.

The flying squirrel is said to be the most beautiful mammal in the world. It is a little bit like a mouse, but its limbs are practically wingless, and have to depend upon their long and strong legs to escape from their enemies.

No Sore Throats in Oil Fields

Sore throats, diphtheria and many similar complaints are practically unknown among those employed in the oil fields, refineries and other branches of the petroleum industry.

CHICAGO SENDS MANY PROGRAMS OVER THE RADIO

Windy City Has Ten Active Stations; Receives News of Arctic Expedition and Other Important Events.

CHICAGO, July 2 (AP)—The broadcasting of entertainment with the radio-phonograph, one of the greatest achievements of the day, finds Chicago near the top of the list of cities. While not claiming the most powerful, its 10 active broadcasting stations give it a distinction in numbers and variety of programs.

Including the stations that have passed out of existence, among them WBB, operated by the city of Chicago, there have been 16 working in Chicago and its suburbs within the short time broadcasting has become popular.

The city's pioneer in the radiocast field, KYW, is still in operation. It probably has shown less change than any of the others, as it was the first to be concerned. However, it has been greatly improved in all respects.

Rapid Improvement.
The former station WJAZ, now WGN, and owned by the Chicago Tribune, grew from the dreams of two amateurs.

At the start a low-powered transmitter, it has advanced to a station that can reach Australia. It previously was owned by the Chicago Board of Trade.

Station WJAP, owned by the Chicago Drivers' Association, has its principal broadcasting period devoted to the distribution of livestock markets. It too is one of the city's older stations.

The first station to be operated here exclusively by a newspaper, WJAZ, owned by the Chicago Daily News, also is an "old timer." It has been improved until now it has a record of many long-distance listeners.

Following in the list of stations is WEBB, formerly WJAZ, which is now partly maintained by the Chicago Evening Post. One of its principal achievements has been the transmission of the news of the McMillan Arctic expedition. The call letters WJAZ are to be given to a new station to be created here.

Other stations are WYAT at Oak Park, WTAS at Elgin, official American Region station, and WOOD at Zion, located in the Chicago district. WTAS is being improved to make it the most powerful station maintained and operated exclusively by an amateur. WOOD is owned and operated by Wilbur Oleson Voliva, overseer of Christ Catholic Apostolic church.

The youngest station WQJ, was preceded by WLS, in which the Chicago Herald and Examiner cooperates. Of the newer stations, WLS is the most powerful and in its brief existence has piled up a lengthy distance record.

War Mothers Hear National Head in All Day Meeting

Mrs. Margaret McClure Tells of Work Now Being Undertaken at District Meeting Wednesday.

War mothers of the southwestern county chapters held a district meeting in Twin Falls Wednesday at which time the outstanding features were the election of officers for the coming year and an address by Mrs. Margaret McClure of Kansas City, national war mother, who arrived to attend the meeting which closed Wednesday evening in company with Mrs. Frank DeKay, state war mother.

Mrs. Gross of Shoshone was re-elected district war mother and Mrs. David Brown of Twin Falls, vice war mother, at the business session which was held in the morning. Plans at this time were also made for holding the next meeting of War Mothers at Shoshone. Religious services were in charge of the meeting from Shoshone, Mountain Home and Twin Falls, the three chapters in the district.

Forty-five members were present at a luncheon held at the Regency cafe Wednesday noon at 1 o'clock at which time Mrs. McClure, who arrived on the noon train, was the guest of honor as Mrs. M. DeKay. The afternoon session was taken up with an address by Mrs. McClure, who told of the work that is being done by war mothers to aid disabled war veterans, and of the attempts that are being made to obtain the release of 100 boys in federal prisons who are being held there for offenses committed during the war. Mrs. DeKay also gave a short address in which she introduced the national war mother.

Mrs. W. H. Dwight gave several vocal numbers, accompanied by Miss Clara Kail.

Twin Falls Schools Head Finished Work

M. C. Mitchell, for 10 Years
Teacher, Principal and Superintendent, Going East to University.

M. C. Mitchell, for 10 years past teacher, principal and superintendent of Twin Falls schools, and Mrs. Mitchell expect to leave Twin Falls today, going to Cambridge, Mass., where Mr. Mitchell will enter upon post-graduate study with view to further advancement as an educator. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will leave here immediately for Cambridge, where Mr. Mitchell will take over teaching of classes in the Idaho State Technical Institute, which up to this time have been taught by Ernest D. Bloom, former superintendent of Twin Falls schools, who has been elected to succeed Mr. Mitchell as superintendent of schools here. Mr. and Mrs. Bloom and children are expected to arrive here this week.

Under the administration of Mr. Mitchell as superintendent there has been established in Twin Falls schools the junior high school which includes the seventh, eighth and ninth grades and forms a connecting link between the elementary grades and senior high school. Mr. Mitchell entered upon his superintendency at a time when rigorous economy was imperative and successfully maintained the system with radically reduced expenditures. During his first year as superintendent, Mr. Mitchell devoted a part of his time to teaching high school classes. During the past two years he has served in the dual capacity of superintendent and principal of the high school.

He has been actively identified with the work of civic organizations, serving as a director of the chamber of commerce and being a member of the Rotary club. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have been active members of the Presbyterian church.

250 CHILDREN IN 'CIRCUS' PARADE

Awards Made Six Boys and Girls with Best Costumes in Procession.

In costumes of bright colors and many kinds, approximately 250 children paraded through the business streets of Twin Falls Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the opening feature of "Circus day" at Chautauqua. In the parade, on horses, on cars and on foot were children dressed in costumes and masquerades many of which were exceptionally clever and surprisingly original.

Three ribbon prizes were awarded girls for best costumes in the parade and three for boys. Girls who won ribbon prizes were Gwendolyn Thomas, first, dressed as the Goddess of Liberty; Esther Jocelyn, second, dressed as a rose; Grace Glenney, third, dressed as a gypsy. Boys who won ribbon prizes were Arthur Bliffer, first, dressed as an Indian; Robert Shankel, second, dressed as a Spanish foreman; Howard Reed, third, dressed as a pirate.

The parade drew applause from citizens who lined the streets on both sides as it came up Shoshone street headed by the Regency band of 15 pieces, with Miss Kathryn Brown, junior Chautauqua director, leading the way on a horse. Miss Della Wyman, local school play supervisor, assisted in staging the parade, also mounted. What probably was the greatest amount of applause was the case of boys dressed as monkeys in a wire delivery wagon. Two tiny tots dressed as policemen just in front of the band also brought applause from the crowds.

Judging from the number of children in the parade, the applause they got, and of the number of children who packed the Chautauqua tent following the parade to watch the antics of Herbert A. Taylor, clown, juggler and ventriloquist, "Circus day" was a huge success. Children, almost 1000 of them, sat on benches Wednesday afternoon of the closing day of Chautauqua and roared with mirth at Taylor, who is said to be exceptionally clever.

Wessling Death at Nat Was Accidental

William Wessling, 34, who drowned last Saturday night at Shoshone naturatorium, came to his death accidentally and not as the result of being hit over the head and pushed into the plunge as was rumored. P. J. Grossman, county coroner, announced late Wednesday evening following his return from Buhl, where he investigated rumors to that effect. Bruises about the head and shoulders and a gash on the forehead were received in the pool in getting the body out, it was found, and not as the result of a fight or attempted murder.

Coroner Grossman was accompanied to Buhl Wednesday morning by Deputy Sheriff C. E. Jones and a thorough investigation made. It was found that Wessling had been swimming at the naturatorium and using the slide and it was thought that he had fallen over either from that cause or as a result of attempts made in getting the body out of the water. The body is being held at Buhl pending completion of funeral arrangements.

It's Too Bad, But: Lawns and shrubbery in the residence district of Twin Falls are suffering these days. Grass patches which in previous years have defied the mantle of verdant green and carried it unscathed through until Fall are now of a dusty brown hue—not all, of course, but far too many.

This Spring there was practically no moisture in the ground when the first signs of approaching Spring in the shape of buds and flowers began to make their appearance, in sharp distinction to other years when during the irrigating season, so to speak, began with the soil carrying a very actual moisture content. This is the real reason of the trouble. One hose out let working from six to eight hours a day is not sufficient to irrigate one fifty-foot city lot in days like these and many lots are not equipped with more.

There is another reason as well, namely, the fact that a good many people are apparently failing to use as much water this Summer as in former years. The records at the water office show this, and it is a pity. But the main reason is due to general conditions to a greater extent than to deliberate refusal to spend the money for an adequate water allowance.

This is poor economy from the standpoint of the city, to be sure, but all the water which could be poured out through the outlets on all the lots of the City would still be inadequate to keep the lawns and gardens in their old-time form.

Not better than a policy which would take away in the slightest degree from the available supply for crop irrigation.

Taxless Bonds Widely Held: Tax-free securities are not so plutocratic as has been supposed. A report of the investigation made by the Federal Trade Commission shows that as a matter of fact, such securities are distributed widely and rather democratically.

There are about thirty-two billions of securities either wholly or partially exempt. Of these, one-half are held by people of relatively small means. There are twelve billions held by corporations—which in turn are largely owned by people of moderate means.

The totally exempt securities amount to about twelve billions, of which only one-third are in the hands of very wealthy persons.

The multimillionaire, to be sure, derives greater benefit proportionately from his untaxed bond investment than does the man of small income, because the income tax rate of the former is higher. Therefore the argument remains for limiting the issuance of tax-free securities because it is playing into the hands of the very rich. But that argument is weakened by the evident fact that the thrifty folks of low wealth have invested in such securities and are still investing in them, according to their means, and are reaping some advantage from them.

Perhaps the strongest objection, after all, to such exemption, is that by creating an unreasonably good market for all classes for public loans, it encourages public extravagance and leads cities and states unduly into debt, and that in turn checks prosperity and injures every body.

Yet this evil, like most other economic evils, tends to correct itself. The interest rate on tax-exempt securities is low.

Breakfast Food "Matrimonially Speaking"

By Hugh McKay.

My Wife Tazes Me Calling in the Evening. She never means to, of course. She knows that I don't like it, and she always insists that a man's evenings ought to be his own. But somehow we're calling all the same.

It generally begins with her saying after dinner that she'd like to walk around a little and get some air. "We won't stop in anywhere," she assures me. "I'm too tired to have to make conversation with anybody—even my best friend."

"We won't be strolling around the neighborhood. And—pretty—soon—a friendly voice hails us from a porch. "Why, there's Ella Thompson!" my wife says. "She's been away for a month. We almost must go in and speak to her. We won't have to sit down, though."

And so we spend an hour with the Thompsons. And then, on the way home, we run into the Carltons, and they insist on showing us their new porch furniture, and there goes another hour!

After this when my wife wants a little air in the evening, she can go out let it single-handed and alone, or else try to get along without it. Tomorrow—My Husband and My Best Hours Don't Connect.

curtles slowly sinks, because of the competitive demand for them, until eventually they may be no more profitable than taxed bonds or stocks, and so will be no more in demand.

BOOKLESS TOWNS: One of this year's crop of college graduates, did not want to go back to his home town because "there aren't any books!" The map to whom he told his tale of woe happened to know that there are books in the town, but of an assortment so limited that the complaint was quite understandable.

There is a library which contains a few hundred reference books, not too up-to-date, and several sets of classics. It has some novels, many of which were given to it by people who liked them so little they did not want them on their own bookshelves. The books purchased by the librarian are usually selected to meet the needs of the local women's club.

There are also a drug store that carries reprint novels and a small book store which handles books only as a sideline to stationery, picture frames and so on.

There is no place in the town where the reading tastes of the boys and girls who have gone to college are considered.

A prominent publishing house feels that this lack is typical of small towns, but it looks forward to the day when "no young person can give us his excuse for not going back home the fact that there are not any books there."

Not all towns are really so devoid of inspiring literature; but for those that are, this tale should serve as a hint. If the townsfolk want their college-educated children to come home to work and live, let them live up a little as to good books and music. And if the college youngsters feel the call to service, let them take a little of their inspiration back home. Neither task is easy, but everybody concerned would profit by the honest effort.

GERM OF FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE REPORTED FOUND: BERLIN, July 2 (AP)—Bacteriologists throughout Europe have been interested in the recent announcement here of the discovery of a bacillus capable of reproducing the hoof and mouth disease.

Dr. G. G. Berlin to investigate further, while there have been many letters and cablegrams from the United States and England, where there have been epidemics this spring. News of the discovery came from Professor Paul Frosch, of the Royal Veterinary College, who has been working on the problem several years in conjunction with Professor Dahmer.

The bacillus has not yet been subjected to sufficient confirmatory tests to make it possible to say positively that it is the final solution of the difficulty, but medical journals all over Germany are publishing enthusiastic articles about it, and various authorities have ventured to predict that this enthusiasm has not been misplaced.

According to writers on veterinary subjects in those periodicals, the hoof and mouth disease is supposed to have been a European plague for more than 2,000 years, though it was not until the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries that positive proof of its presence was found.

little dog as was Snowball. He went for a long run and walk with Tony and he didn't believe he had ever enjoyed a walk so much.

Snowball liked to eat. He was very fond of food. If a caller came to the house he would sniff about to see if the caller possibly had a piece of candy in his or her pocket.

When dinner was being prepared Snowball would watch what was going on and he would enjoy a little taste of something new and again.

When the potatoes were being peeled he liked to have a taste of potato—just plain. It made him feel so much a part of the family.

Whenever anyone spoke to him he wagged his tail, and if he happened to be sitting on the floor his tail would thump thump against the floor.

He used to speak in this way and he never forgot to speak when someone spoke to him.

What a splendid life he led! Plenty of food, plenty of fresh air, a loving family, good walks, delicious bones, little Tony who loved him.

And, too, Tony's mother, who had been so sick and over whom he had watched, was now well again.

When Tony's mother was ill Snowball was very sad. For Snowball loved all of the family.

He sat by Tony's mother's chair and put his little shaggy head over her foot and looked at her so sorrowfully. "You're sorry I'm sick, aren't you, Snowball?" Tony's mother asked him. "You know something is wrong and that I'm not well, don't you?"

And Snowball knew. For he was quite contented to sit like that and to stay in Tony's room.

He was a little dog when a member of his own family was ill. But Tony's mother was all well again before long, and oh, such a gay, happy again.

little dog as was Snowball. He went for a long run and walk with Tony and he didn't believe he had ever enjoyed a walk so much.

Snowball liked to eat. He was very fond of food. If a caller came to the house he would sniff about to see if the caller possibly had a piece of candy in his or her pocket.

When dinner was being prepared Snowball would watch what was going on and he would enjoy a little taste of something new and again.

When the potatoes were being peeled he liked to have a taste of potato—just plain. It made him feel so much a part of the family.

Whenever anyone spoke to him he wagged his tail, and if he happened to be sitting on the floor his tail would thump thump against the floor.

He used to speak in this way and he never forgot to speak when someone spoke to him.

What a splendid life he led! Plenty of food, plenty of fresh air, a loving family, good walks, delicious bones, little Tony who loved him.

And, too, Tony's mother, who had been so sick and over whom he had watched, was now well again.

When Tony's mother was ill Snowball was very sad. For Snowball loved all of the family.

He sat by Tony's mother's chair and put his little shaggy head over her foot and looked at her so sorrowfully. "You're sorry I'm sick, aren't you, Snowball?" Tony's mother asked him. "You know something is wrong and that I'm not well, don't you?"

And Snowball knew. For he was quite contented to sit like that and to stay in Tony's room.

A CLOTHIER APPEARS A NEW ACQUAINTANCE

the horses moved faster, with more certainty, so that Moysa felt they had struck a familiar trail. But in her heart she doubted whether either of the riders would come to shelter alive. The ponies traveled upward into the hills.

Joyce, lying forward helpless across the saddle horn, slid gently to the ground. Her friend stopped. What could she do? Once she had descended, it would be impossible to get back into the saddle.

Searching the hillside, the girl's glance was arrested by a light. She could not at first believe her good fortune. From the saddle she slipped to the ground in a huddle, still found her feet again, and began to clamber up the steep incline. Presently she made out a hut. Stumblingly, she staggered up till she reached the door and fell heavily against it, clutching at the latch so that it gave to her hand and sent her flying into the room. Her knees doubled under her and she sank at the feet of one of two men who sat beside a table playing cards.

"The man looked up as if he had seen a ghost. 'Goodness! It's a woman!'"

"My friend—she's outside—at the foot of the hill—save her," the girl's white lips framed.

"They slipped on mackinaw coats and disappeared into the white swirling night. Moysa crouched beside the bed-stove, and her hands tingled through her frozen veins, filling her with sharp pain. To keep back the groans she had to set her teeth. It seemed to her that she had never endured such agony.

After a time the men returned, carrying Joyce between them. They put her on the bed at the far corner of the room—and one of the men poured from a bottle on the table some whiskey. This they forced between her unconscious lips. With a shivering sigh she came back to her surroundings.

Moysa moved across to the group by the fire.

"I'll take care of her if you'll look after the horses," she told the men. One of them answered roughly. "The horses will have to rough it. This ain't no night for humans to be hunting horses."

"They can't be far," Moysa pleaded. Gradually the second man spoke. "Once we better get them. Dave. They were down where we found the girl. We can stable them in the tunnel."

Left to herself, Moysa unlaced the shoes of Miss Seldin. Vigorously she rubbed her feet and limbs till the circulation began to be restored. Joyce cried and writhed with the pain, while the other young woman massaged and cuddled her in turn. The worst of the suffering was past before the men returned, stamping snow from their feet and shaking it from their garments over the floor.

"A—of a night to be out in the snow—called Dave growled to his fellow."

"Did you get the horses?" Moysa asked timidly. "They're in the tunnel." The ungracious answer was given without a glance in her direction.

"They were a black and white, ill-favored pair, these miners upon whose hospitality fate had thrown them. Foreboding of some sort they were. Cornishmen, Moysa guessed. But whatever their nationality they were primitive savages untouched by the fourteen centuries of civilized influences since their forebears wandered England."

the superstitious minds of these ex-

hunted young woman there was a suggestion of apes in the long, awkward shoulders and the great, rough hands at the ends of long, gaunt arms. Small shiny black eyes, rimmed with red, from drink, suggested cunning; while the loose-lipped heavy mouth added more than a hint of brutality. It lent no suggestion to the study of them that the large whisky bottle was two-thirds empty.

They slouched back to their cards and their bottle. It had been hard enough to find them sullen and inhospitable, but as the liquor stimulated their unhealthy imaginations it was worse to feel the covert looks stealing now and again toward them. Joyce, sleeping fitfully in the arms of Moysa, woke with a start to see them drinking together at the table.

"I don't like them," she said to them, she whispered. "We've never known—"

Moysa whispered in her ear. "For an hour she had been racked by fears, and faced unflinchingly their low laughs and futile games. Now one of the men spoke. 'From Goldhanks?'"

"You don't live there." "No, we belong to the English party—Mr. Verinder's friends."

"Oh, Verinder's friends. And which of you is his particular friend?" The sneer was unmistakable. "We've started out this afternoon for wild flowers and the storm caught us," Moysa hurried on.

"So you, Verinder's friends, are you? Well, we don't think a whole lot of Mr. Verinder out here."

Moysa knew now that the mention of Verinder's name had been a mistake. The relations between the mine owners and the workmen in the camp were strained, and as a foreign non-resident capitalist the English millionaire was especially obnoxious. Moreover, his "superficial manners had not helped to endear him since his arrival.

The man called Dave got to his feet with a reckless laugh. "No free lodgings here for Mr. Verinder's friends. You've got to pay for your keep, my dears."

Miss Dwight looked at him with an flushed eyes which refused to understand his meaning. "Well, pay whatever you ask and double the amount after we reach camp."

"Don't want your dirty money. Give us a kiss, lass. That's fair pay. We ain't above kissing Verinder's friends if it is a rotten piece of silver."

Moysa rose to her slender height, and the flash of courage blazed in her eyes. "Sit down," she ordered. The man stopped in his tracks, amazed at the resolution of the slim girl.

"Go on, Dave. Don't let her bluff you," his companion urged. The miner laughed and moved forward.

"You coward, to take advantage of two girls driven to you by the storm. I didn't think you'd lived that would do it," panted Moysa.

"You've got a bit to learn, miss. What's the use of kettin' your Dutch up? I ain't good enough for 'ee, like enough."

The girl held up a hand. "Listen! They ought to be only the wild roar of the storm outside and the low sob of Joyce as she lay crouched on the bed."

"Well?" he growled. "I'm listenin'. What then?"

"I'd rather go out into that white death than stay here with such creatures as you are."

"Don't be a fool, lass. You've not hurt 'ee any," the second man reassured roughly.

"You'll stay here where it's warm. But you'll remember, that we're boss in this shack. I'm d—d if you'll ride your horse out of here."

"Go on, Dave. Tell your lass, man." Then the miracle happened. The door opened, and out of the swirling wind-blown snow came a man.

Two Claim Quotation

In her book entitled "Borrowings," Mrs. Sarah Yule credits the quotation "If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door." to Emerson. She said she copied it in a notebook from a lecture delivered by the great philosopher. But the quotation was the occasion of a long controversy, owing to Elbert Hubbard's claim to its authorship.

TELLS OF PLAN FOR CLUB UNION

C. D. Thomas, Guest of Rotarians, Discusses General Organization of Civic Bodies

Details of a plan for the organization under one head of all local clubs together with the chamber of commerce as worked out in cities of the northwest were described to the Twin Falls Rotary club by C. D. Thomas, who has recently returned from an extensive tour of Puget Sound and other northwestern cities.

Mr. Thomas was the guest of D. D. Alvord, president of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. Referring to general conditions in the country which he visited, Mr. Thomas declared that Twin Falls had abundant reason to congratulate itself upon the general crop situation in these parts. He described whole areas of land upon which crops were practically a total loss due to water shortage and stated that in many places where harvesting was going forward the actual result was such as to bring into question the advisability of attempting any harvest whatever. Referring specifically to the matter of general organization of clubs in Tacoma, Mr. Thomas stated that the idea had been well received and quickly adopted in Tacoma. The plan provides for a whole-hearted uniting of the chamber of commerce or local commercial club as the head and front of civic activity, with the Rotary, Kiwanis and similar luncheon clubs actively back of the chamber. Matters of public interest initiated in any of the clubs come before the chamber for action, the membership of which is general and includes all members of all other clubs as well.

The plan has always been regarded as a sound one in that it makes of the chamber of commerce an active functioning institution on all public questions and delegates the activities of the other clubs to the realm of discussion of all such matters with action of any sort in the hands of the central body.

M. C. Mitchell, superintendent of schools in this district, delivered a brief speech of farewell in anticipation of his leaving Twin Falls within the next week. He spoke at length of his work here during the past 10 years and stated that he left with feelings of keen regret because of the severance of the many friendships formed by himself and family. C. E. Booth, president, voiced the general regret of the membership in connection with Mr. Mitchell's leaving.

Edward Amherst Ott, Chautauqua lecturer, was introduced by Martin E. Morse. Mr. Ott delivered a highly interesting analysis of the aims and the program of International Rotary.
