CONVENTION ON SOLEMN SEARCH FOR CANDIDATE

Ralston Withdraws on Crest of Tide-Running in His Favor, Causing Renewal of Hunt for Compromise Nominee.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, July 8 (AP)—After more than a week of furious warfare over McAdoo and Smith the democratic national convention has begun at last a sober and chastened search for a compromise candidate for the presidency. For a time today it turned its attention to Senator Ralston of Indiana but was told definitely he would not accept. Then, at a night session and in many conversations among the leaders, it reviewed again the claims of John W. Davis, Senator from West Virginia, and others who have remained in the background of the long and bitter fight between the two leading contenders.

Outwardly the McAdoo and Smith managers continued deaf to all suggestions of withdrawal under the surface there were forces at work that carried some hope of a settlement to end the long deadlock now approaching its 100th ballot.

Ralston Draws from McAdoo Mainly by virtue of further defections from the McAdoo strength which dropped to a new low record, Ralston was able during the day to steadily increase his following until he stood in the balloting at a total never approached heretofore by any candidate except McAdoo or Smith. There were definite indications that much of the McAdoo strength might turn to him but when his withdrawal was finally announced there had been no very clear sign whether he could have received eventually the two thirds necessary to nominate.

The refusal of the Indiana senator to accept a nomination should one be tendered him was announced by Thomas Taggart, the ally of the Ralston boom shortly before tonight's session of the convention began. Once before Senator Ralston had requested that his name be withdrawn but this time he told Taggart in much stronger terms that under no circumstances would he consent to the nomination.

Smith Forces Favor Davis The sentiment for Davis appeared to be strongest among some of those who have supported Smith although it was apparent that he had much support from other elements as well.

The talk of Robinson was general and somewhat intangible and there was speculation about the availability of Clara, Homer S. Canning, E. T. Meredith and perhaps a dozen more.

Despite the uncertainty of the situation however the leaders appeared convinced that at last the convention had determined to go out and find a man who could be nominated. They said only time and a trial of strength on the convention floor could tell where the choice might fall, but they appeared certain the decision would not be long delayed.

Delegates Grow Homesick

This sentiment was echoed generally by the delegates themselves. Worn and discouraged by the fury of the Smith-McAdoo fight, many of them were in a frame of mind to go to whatever candidate might be brought before them with any promise of general support. What they wanted more than all else was to get it over with, climb aboard trains for home and have done with the nightmare that made Madison Square Garden forever a thing of terror to their memories.

Whatever the attitude of the campaign managers, there could be no mistaking the conviction of the delegates that both McAdoo and Smith are through. Privately the members of the many delegations admitted that the only remaining issue was selection of a man who would not antagonize either of the factions that have made the convention a battleground from its very beginning.

It was conceded that until such a candidate had rallied a preponderant strength about him, both the McAdoo and Smith supporters would be extremely cautious. Neither side wanted to stake its camp as to invite another result from its traditional enemy. But stripped of all its outward caution and cunning, the dominating urge of the convention tonight was a reaching out for a savior.

Work for Compromise

Coinciding with the inner desire of the convention itself, several strong moves were working for a compromise. One was represented by Senator Walsh of Montana, the convention chairman, who left his gavel in the hands of a substitute and called on Mr. McAdoo and Governor Smith to urge the feasibility of a further struggle. He saw the candidates at their respective hotels and was escorted with each for a long conference. Chairman Hull of the national committee was at work with a similar purpose and James M. Cox of Ohio, the party's standard-bearer, in 1920, saw representatives of almost every element in an effort to convince them

Central Figures in Day's News

Below: MRS. ERNEST THOMPSON SETON; MRS. JULIETTE LOW; COUNT DONAT DE CASTELLANE; WILLIAM H. ANDERSON.

MRS. ERNEST THOMPSON SETON, wife of the naturalist, has returned from a long tour of India with declaration that women there can divorce husbands at will if they prove to be borseome.

MRS. JULIETTE LOW, founder of the Girl Scouts of America, has sailed from New York to attend the international camp of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides at Foxlease, Lyndhurst, England, July 16 to 21.

COUNT DONAT DE CASTELLANE, divorced husband of Anna Gould, of New York, is reported to have declared in Paris the Vatican had annulled his marriage. At the same time Baroness de Forrester, sister of Henry Lottellier, one of France's richest men, denied she was to marry Count Bodi.

THE FORGERY CONVICTION of William H. Anderson, formerly superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League or New York, has been upheld by the Appellate division of the Supreme Court.

WITNESS TO KILLING TO BE INTERROGATED

Long Beach Police to Question Man Alleged to Have Been Staying in Fashionable Apartment House.

LONG BEACH, July 8 (AP)—An eye-witness to the slaying of Henry D. Meyer, Pasadena business man, and Mrs. Theresa Morris in a fashionable apartment here 10 days ago will be questioned by police within the next 12 hours. This assertion was made today by Captain of Detectives J. B. Worley.

Charles W. Dorris, husband of the slain woman and who was rearrested last night following what police said was the discovery of new and damaging evidence, reiterated his protestations of innocence.

Police expected to obtain from a San Francisco firm the name of the person to whom the mystery pistol which figured in the dual shooting was sold.

Hire Whites First

In Queensland the arbitration court has ruled that colored labor is not to be employed in the sugar fields if white labor is available.

A like work of conciliation was being done by some of those who sit in state delegations and control important blocks of votes. George E. Brennan, the Illinois leader, conferred with many of his colleagues and was said by some associates to be inclined to favor a swing from Smith with some he has supported from the start. Taggart, although in charge of the Ralston boom, was declared to be willing to take any other candidate that could unite the warring elements in a common cause.

Ready to Leave McAdoo

Late in today's session, C. M. Hay of Missouri, one of the McAdoo floor managers, echoed the sentiment of many other delegations and was given a resounding demonstration of approval when he told the convention that although he remained a McAdoo man at heart he was for any candidate who could command general support and stand squarely on the party platform.

During the balloting at the day session the McAdoo total which came had stood at 530, dropped to 310, and on the ninety-third roll call the, the last taken before the adjournment, it was 314.

Most of the loss went to Ralston who took the Missouri, Oklahoma, Nevada and Kansas delegations. Heilly and picked up considerable groups of delegates from other McAdoo states.

Ralston Blocks Move

At a conference during the adjournment some of the McAdoo men are understood to have decided to throw another considerable part of the McAdoo strength to Ralston tonight but Taggart's announcement forestalled the move and directed the swing in another direction.

Governor Smith remained in about the same position throughout the day's voting but it was manifest that many of his delegates were staying only long enough to witness the decline of the McAdoo total, a point where he no longer need be considered a dangerous factor and then would go to a compromise candidate.

TOURIST PARK NOTES

L. N. Massey of Pocatello is returning from a business trip through the southern part of the state.

C. S. East and son have been out on the coast, and are now going to Provo, Utah.

M. Eckmeyer and family are returning to Deer Park, Wash., from a sight-seeing trip, including Yellowstone park. J. P. Shen and family from Chicago are going to National City, Cal. Of course they came through the Yellowstone park.

T. Bridge and family are en route to Iowa from Vancouver, B. C. Mr. Bridge came from England 12 years ago, landed at Montreal and went directly to Vancouver. He said that he expected to land in a wilderness, but that his eyes fairly bulged out when he found that there were no Indians, and that Vancouver was an up-to-date city. He was filled with wonder at the size of the British possessions on this continent and said, "Why we have an island up there that would hold all of the British Isles, and then have some room left."

R. E. McOsler is wending his lonely way from Denver to Portland.

G. A. Patten and companion are traveling from Moline, Ill., to the coast. They say that Yellowstone park is crowded with automobiles.

Mrs. D. L. Smythe and family of Roseline, Miss., are making a round trip including the park and the coast cities. They will return by the southern route.

George A. Colby and party are going to Great Falls, Mont. They came from Hollywood, Cal., over the Pacific highway to Portland.

G. C. and J. C. Cannon and families from Fresno, Cal., are going up to the big playground for a change of air. Mr. Cannon Sr. says that the man that made the first Fresno scraper is still there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Christensen from Roberts, Wis., came over the National Park highway to Yellowstone park. They are now going to the coast. Paul Huebner from Long Beach, Cal., has been up in Canada and is now on his way home by way of Salt Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Alexander from Point Richmond, Cal., came over the Columbia highway and the Old Oregon trail, and are going to Winnemucca, Nev.

S. Gullis and party from Cleveland, Ohio, are going to Portland and down the coast.

E. W. Hoffman and party of five from Chicago came in from Oxford, Idaho, and departed for Canada.

W. W. Dana and family of Evanston, Ill., are going to Portland.

E. L. McKee and party of five came from Spokane and after a good long rest, left for Omaha.

They Reel and family from Fort Collins, Colo., are touring the country with no special destination.

Who bought the Brooklyn bridge today?

ALMOST every day the Brooklyn bridge is sold to some gullible visitor to New York. Every day someone is swindled. Selling this famous old bridge has become a national joke.

Suppose, however, the City of New York decided really to sell the Brooklyn bridge—to give the buyer the privilege of placing a toll on all who crossed it. They would advertise it for sale. And the prospective purchaser would know the offer to be genuine.

He would know that the paper would not accept the advertisement if it were intended to defraud. He would know that the advertiser would not dare advertise unless his offer were honest.

The advertisement would give the world confidence in the enterprise.

Just as the advertising of all merchandise gives the world confidence in that merchandise. Only honest products can tell their stories where all may read.

That is why it pays to read advertisements. You can rely on advertised goods. You know that a worthy manufacturer stands back of them. They are a guide to better buying. They teach you to spend wisely—economically—and with the knowledge that you are buying merchandise which is minus all vain regrets or misrepresented values.

Read the advertisements every day.

Advertising is a bridge—spanning the river of doubtful values—to the shore of worthy merchandise.

MAKES ANSWER TO DEMOCRATS

Senator Watson Calls League of Nations Plank Example of Bourbon Inconsistency.

NEWPORT, Ky., July 8 (AP)—The alleged "inconsistency" of the democratic party was assailed last night by Senator James E. Watson of Indiana who offered the latest platform plank on the league of nations as an example of the inconsistent methods of the democrats. The speech of the Indiana senator was an answer to Senator Pat Harrison's keynote address, before the democratic national convention in New York and was delivered at a dinner before the Young Men's League club. It was constructed as the opening salvo in the republican presidential campaign in Kentucky. "Nothing in our political history approaches the backing and filling that were indulged in on the league of nations plank by the democratic national convention that is closing its session in New York," Senator Watson said. "The language of this plank on the league can not be construed in any other light than a repudiation of the league of nations by the very party that proposed it in this country."

Shell Game for Sixty Years. "This," he added, "was but another illustration of the fact that the party has been for 60 years playing a shell racket game with politics and promulgations," for "with the exception of the tariff there is not one single proposition to which they have continuously adhered for any two successive campaigns."

He said that a careful analysis of the convention addresses showed that the republicans were for arousing the delegates to the convention and not for the purpose of convincing the people in the campaign.

Senator Watson alluded but slightly to the alleged misdeeds of the republican cabinet officers. He asserted that the republican party could not be held responsible for their alleged wrongdoings.

SOCIALISTS RAP MASKED ORDER

Convention Condemns Ku-Klux Klan "and Every Other Effort to Divide Workers."

CLEVELAND, July 8 (AP)—The socialist party late today officially condemned the Ku-Klux Klan by name after the sharpest debate in the national convention that had been meeting here for three days.

The resolution said: "We emphatically condemn the Ku-Klux Klan and every other effort to divide the workers on racial and religious lines and to effect political changes by secret or terrorist methods."

Opposition developed on the ground that the party was injecting itself into a religious fight with which it was not concerned and that a pronouncement covering only the party's stand in opposition to attempts to divide the workers was better suited to a socialist declaration.

The substitute was defeated 10 to 53 and the resolution was then passed 66 to 15. This represented less than half the full registration as many of the delegates had departed for their homes.

In Defense of Liberty.
To assuage the feelings kindred by the debate, Morris Hillquit, New York, had passed an instruction to the executive committee to circulate a pamphlet setting forth the party's detailed position on the subject.

"This would have a good effect upon not only the general public but on some of the delegates to this convention," said Hillquit, after George H. Goebel, New Jersey, who moved the substitute had attempted to shut off his talk on a point of order.

"So long as the klanmen merely hate the Jew or the Roman Catholic or the negro, they are merely exercising a personal privilege, but when they put on their pillow slips to intimidate voters and commit murder in opposition to the rule of, for and by the people, then it is time for every socialist to take a stand on the side of civil rights and liberty."

William H. Henry, Indiana, said his state was so permeated with the klan that condemnation of it by the party would require a lot of explaining by socialist organizers.

SORROW HOLDS SWAY IN EXECUTIVE MANSION

Flower, on which the 16-year-old boy, Flower, and six marines alternately stood "at attention."

Officials Pay Tribute.
Floral tributes in great numbers were barked about, while personal friends, "government officials, members of the diplomatic corps, citizens from all sections of the nation and others and high officials of foreign countries' missions came in a steady flood expressive of the common sorrow.

The funeral will be marked as much as possible by the simplicity which the parents desire. A simple service will be held at the White House at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon when the body will be taken to Northampton, Mass., for a second service and then to Plymouth, Vermont, for burial.

The White House services will be attended by intimate friends, cabinet members, military and naval missions and such, justices of the supreme court, members of congress and high officers of the army and navy and marine corps who may be in the city. The Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational church, which the Coolidge family has attended here, will offer prayer and read from the scriptures, and a quartet will sing hymns.

Services at Northampton.
Leaving here tomorrow night, the funeral party will arrive at Northampton Thursday morning and will be held at 10 o'clock in the Edwards Congregational church, of which Calvin was a member. At that time the Rev. Kenneth B. Wells, pastor of the church, will officiate. The party will then proceed to Plymouth, Vt., where the funeral will be in the family lot where his the president's mother and sister. The return to Washington will then be made immediately.

Friends of the family said that both the president and Mrs. Coolidge, although worn by long sleepless nights at the sick bed and bowed by their grief, were bearing up as well as could be expected. Mrs. Stearns remained much with Mrs. Coolidge during the day, while Mr. Stearns and Secretary Clark were with the president.

The executive visited his illness for a short time this morning and was visited by officials who extended sympathy, but he soon withdrew to the mansion where behind closed doors the family remained in closest seclusion. John, the 17-year-old son and inseparable companion of his father Calvin, was with his father and mother, and friends said it was with difficulty that he bore up.

FORMER SECRETARY OF TREASURY GIVES UP FIGHT

big heights by Woodrow Wilson.
"Cordially yours,
"W. G. M'ADOO."

Immediately after the reading of the McAdoo letter an attempt was made to adjourn and it first was defeated on a viva voce vote without a roll call. When McAdoo's letter was read to the convention he stood almost exactly even with Governor Smith after two weeks of battling. McAdoo had 333.5 votes and Smith had 333.

Mr. McAdoo's friends and associates in the convention disclaimed that in releasing his delegates he was making an attempt to say where they should go, but some of the prominent McAdoo people were busy attempting to transfer the McAdoo strength to E. T. Meredith of Iowa, former secretary of agriculture in President Wilson's cabinet. There was a report about that Mr. McAdoo had declared himself to his constituents in favor of Mr. Meredith but that his campaign manager, David L. Rockwell, wanted the McAdoo strength to fall to Senator Walsh, of Montana, permanent chairman of the convention.

But while the balloting had been going on the side of the convention fortune had been sweeping the votes of John W. Davis of West Virginia as they went down for Ballots of Indiana and when the McAdoo release of delegates was announced, Mr. Davis strength stood at 210 votes, its high water mark.

The question to be determined was whether McAdoo strength now at hand could be delivered anywhere and if it could, where it could be made effective against the growing column of votes for Davis.

Climax to Dramatic Session

The collapse of the McAdoo fight came at the end of another dramatic day and night which were the climax to the record-breaking convention of American political history.

After an over-night raid on the McAdoo forces which carried them to a new low level the convention met yesterday morning (Tuesday) and accomplished little in its first session. In the interval before the night session Governor Smith and McAdoo met for a personal conference and discussed the deadlock but it would do no conclusion.

The one result of their meeting was that Governor Smith sent his floor leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt, to the night session of the convention to make a statement declaring that when Mr. McAdoo signified his withdrawal from the contest he would do so likewise. Governor Smith's statement in behalf of the governor was made at the opening of the 20th session of the convention as it was going into its third week with what delegates who remained, weary and worn and many of them broke.

When Mr. Rockwell, Mr. McAdoo's manager, was asked what answer he would make to Governor Smith's proposal he replied:

"Nothing, except more votes."

McAdoo Directs Raid

With that it was evident that the McAdoo forces were out for a night raid. It turned out that McAdoo himself had given orders for it because he wanted his angling-vote to be restored as nearly as possible to its high water mark before he quit the contest. All through the evening session, the McAdoo floor managers conducted a terrific drive which swept Idaho, Mississippi, Nevada and Oklahoma back in the fight. McAdoo had a good vote from Indiana beside, made possible by the new withdrawal of Senator Ralston, and the result was that the McAdoo total at the end of his ballot was 395. McAdoo was not only back in the lead again but he had recovered the lead which he lost in the terrible drubbing the coalition forces had given him the night before.

Idaho Back in Fold

The remainder of that particular ballot was erratic. Delaware after having stuck to Salisbury for 93 ballots went to Senator Robinson of Arkansas to join what is expected to be a "tail" in a runner in the convention. It turned out that the elimination trial never materialized. Idaho which had been flying a kite on Homer Cummings, returned to the McAdoo fold; Indiana on Ralston's withdrawal, gave more of her blood to McAdoo. At the close of the ballot Smith had 393.5 and had lost his own veto power, while McAdoo had regained his.

The next ballot, however—the ninety-fifth—found the McAdoo leaders clutched over the turn in their fortunes. They openly declared they would run Mr. McAdoo's total up to more than 400.

Among the first roll call, McAdoo gathered in Kansas again and despite the fact that a decided drift to Davis had begun to set in, the end of the ballot found the McAdoo total up to 417. At the same time the tide carried Smith upward and left him at 397.5. Thus a veto power was restored to one of the principal contenders and the deadlock was made tighter than ever. Meantime a new high record had been made for John W. Davis and gave him 139.5.

Once more the convention realized that it was struggling hopelessly in deadlock and a variety of attempts to wriggle out were presented in the form of motion to abrogate the two-thirds rule, the unit rule, or some other experiment, all with the same result—that the convention voted them down and went ahead with the balloting.

Adjournment Moves Fast

Some attempts to adjourn and get away from this wrangle were made and all were defeated by rolling choruses of noes. It was obvious that the convention after being held two weeks and being in respect of being held for another was determined to see if it could not get some results out of the night's work. So it plunged into another ballot—the ninety-sixth. Iowa promptly went back to the McAdoo column with her 38 votes and there was great jubilation in the McAdoo camp. Immediately they were reminded of the grip of their opposition upon them when a Massachusetts delegate cast his ballots for Governor Smith "until kingdom come and hell freezes over."

It was beginning to dawn upon the convention more plainly than ever that the election was not going to be reached by balloting. The voting continued and the result was that McAdoo advanced to 421 and Smith slipped back to a point a little below his veto power.

Marshall Gets Into Voting

At the same time John W. Davis slipped up several notches and the count found him with 171.5 votes in the convention the most he ever had had. Then came another motion to adjourn. As usual it was beaten. More resolutions proposing remedies for the situation were voted down and the roll call droned along. Delaware, tired of the fiercer with Robinson and went back to Salisbury. Theodore H. Marshall, the only man who has been twice vice president of the United States, was brought into the voting by Illinois and his home state, Indiana. At times his name had been whispered as a compromise candidate.

The end of the ballot saw McAdoo's strength bettered down a little but not holding at 415.5, while Smith's held firm and Davis of West Virginia had advanced, again. Davis at that point had reached practically the same strength that Ralston had when he had tagged withdraw his name for the last time.

McAdoo Makes Last Stand

While the ninety-ninth ballot was being called the big developments began taking shape. McAdoo, across the street from the convention hall, at the listening post he had established in a little hotel, consulted one and another of his leaders, all of whom advised him of the hopelessness of a fight. They had told him the same thing earlier in the day but he had urged them into making one more drive before they quit. His closest advisers urged him to quit and then finally his delegation capitulated. It was all over. He consulted some closer friends and discussed Chairman Hull of the democratic national committee and E. T. Meredith as prospective recipients of the McAdoo strength in the convention, although it was desired to avoid the appearance of an attempt to name the candidate.

It was decided that while Chairman Hull would be a stronger candidate in the convention, Mr. Meredith would be a stronger candidate before the country because of his interest in agriculture and his agricultural connections.

There was one story that Mr. McAdoo and his campaign manager, Mr. Rockwell, had split on Mr. Rockwell's proposal to pass on the McAdoo strength to Senator Walsh of Montana, because of these close to Mr. McAdoo denied it. At the conclusion of all these conferences he agreed with his lieutenants it was useless and undesirable to continue the struggle but he made it plain that he did not want his action to take the form of a withdrawal which could be interpreted as a dissolution of the faithful delegates who had fought for him and were with him for a hundred ballots.

Wife Approves Decision

Having determined on his action Mr. McAdoo picked up some stray pieces of paper and a stub of a lead pencil and sitting on the edge of a bed in the conference room he scribbled the text of his letter which later was read to the convention. Before putting it in final form he sent a friend to bring Mrs. McAdoo who was in the street in Madison Square Garden in the box she had occupied most of the time during the last three weeks watching the ebb and flow of her husband's political fortunes; cheering the marching hosts that passed and shouted for him and looking brave and undimmed but serious when his vote was falling. Mrs. McAdoo readily approved her husband's action and the letter was dispatched to Madison Square Garden and delivered to Chairman Walsh.

JULY CORN SMASHES SEASON'S TOP RECORD

Broad Active Demand Develops for Both Immediate and Future Delivery; Wheat Values Unsettled.

CHICAGO, July 8 (AP)—Broad active demand for corn today both for immediate and future delivery led to a sharp new advance in price. July corn smashed the season's top record and No. 2 yellow here commanded $1.03 a bushel, likewise a new high record. The corn market closed strong, 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cent higher, July 93 1/2. In wheat the finish was unsettled, 1/2 to 1 1/4 cent higher, with oats 1/2 to 3/4 cent up and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 7c advance.

Scarcity of receipts together with unwelcome showers and relatively low temperature had much to do with the eager buying which sprang up in the corn market. Besides, Texas reported crop damage in some sections and the fact that the government crop report was due after the close tomorrow seemed to operate as an additional stimulus. Sales came almost entirely from holders who wished to realize profits and the close was at the highest point of the day. Shipping business for wheat was the liveliest witnessed in a long while.

Wheat values were heavily affected by increased movement of new wheat in the southwest consequent hedging sales as well as by rains in Canada. Black rust reports from Minnesota and west of damage by hot winds in the Pacific northwest gave the market a good rally at one time, but the effect failed to last, despite evidence that foreigners were purchasing rather freely. Most traders were inclined to an opinion that the government report tomorrow would prove bullish.

Complaints of smut and blight had some bullish influence on the oats market.

Provisions reflected the corn market and the firmness of hog values.
