Idaho's Supreme Court Renders Decision on Rehearing Upholding Validity of Big District Proceedings.

BOISE, July 23 (AP)—Final approval of the proposed bond issue of $2,700,000 for the initial work on the American Falls reservoir was given Wednesday by the supreme court.

The tribunal passed on the statutory validity of the bonds recently, but the bonding company which proposes to purchase the bonds questioned the validity on constitutional grounds, and a petition for rehearing was filed. The decision Wednesday is rendered on rehearing.

In addition to holding the bonds legal, the opinion holds also that the organization of the proposed American Falls reservoir district knowing as the "big district," and covering lands in several southern Idaho counties, is in accordance with Idaho irrigation district law.

Holds Contract Binding
A district so formed, the court says, can levy assessments on the lands therein for the purpose of giving benefits to all the owners thereof, and the legislature was within its constitutional power when it gave a district such authority. It is held also that any contract made by the district binds all the lands within the district and the owners thereof.

The case was initiated by the American Falls reservoir district on a petition to the district court for approval and confirmation of the appointment of benefits and costs of construction of the American Falls reservoir by the United States, and for the purchase of a proportionate share of the storage capacity thereof, and of the water available therein, by the American Falls reservoir district, from the United States, and for the approval of the resolution of the board of directors to issue $2,700,000 of the bonds of the district for the payment thereof.

In the first presentation of the case neither side questioned the statutory validity of the bonds or proceedings taken by the district board of directors, it being taken for granted that as neither side questioned this point, there was no issue on which the court was to pass. The court did not raise the question, and on rehearing it was suggested that because the court did not raise it, there was some question as to its constitutionality. This is an unwarranted assumption, the court says.

Intermountain Area
Scores Victory in Freight Rate Fight

Interstate Commerce Commission Denies Application of Transcontinental Carriers for Lower Rate to Coast.

BOISE, July 23 (AP)—Idaho, as well as all the intermountain territory, has gained a victory against transcontinental carriers in the recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that the application of the carriers for lower freight rates to the coast than to the intermediate points be denied. Will H. Gibson of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Wednesday. The Idaho commission was informed by telegram of the federal board's action.

For several years the transcontinental carriers have been seeking to establish rates to the Pacific coast that were lower than rates to intermediate points, in order to compete with water transportation through the Panama canal.

A continual fight has been waged against such action by the state public service regulatory bodies of the intermediate territory, and particularly the intermountain states, where no association known as the Intermediate Rate association was formed to combat the carriers.

In seeking to establish these rates, the carriers are, in effect, trying to violate the fourth section of the interstate commerce act, which says that no carrier shall charge a less rate for hauling the same commodity a greater distance where the route is the same.

Leopold and Loeb Face
Parents of Boy Victim
With No Show of Emotion

Witnesses' Stories Forging Links in State's Chain of Evidence and Prosecutor's Demand for Death Penalty Leave Young Slayers Apparently Unmoved.

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb faced the sorrowing parents of their boy victim today at the bar of justice.

They watched them on the witness stand as they told with tear-moist eyes the story of their son's disappearance and heard sob-choked voices whisper affirmative answers to the state's proffered exhibits of the little fellow's clothing.

On the part of the paradoxically brilliant but criminal young defendants there was no display of emotion.

Only Casual Interest.

Leopold, motionless and with an expression of casual interest on his features, watched the mother of young Robert Franks with scarcely the blinking of an eye.

Loeb, his companion, gave little outward sign of perturbation. Throughout the day, however, Loeb showed some reaction to the proceedings. He came into court with eyes staring and jaw pendulous and frequently licked his lips or picked at threads on his sleeve.

Loeb leaned forward in his chair, Leopold slouched down on his shoulder blades.

The two young intellectuals whose academic achievements branded them in their university standings as endowed geniuses, were in court today in the first day's hearings before Judge Caverly, chief justice of the criminal court of Cook county, in the somewhat unorthodox legal proceedings which is to determine the fate of the confessed slayers.

STOCKYARDS AT PORTLAND BURN

Flames Spread From Hay Barn and Sheds to Livestock Exposition Building.

PORTLAND, July 23 (AP)—The Portland Union Stock Yards, owned by Swift and Company, caught on fire here this afternoon. The flames spread to the Pacific International Livestock Exposition building.

All available city fire apparatus was sent to the Kenton district in which the stockyards are located. The fire fighters were hampered in reaching the fire by a wall of flame across the only available road to the stockyards.

The loss on the pavilion was estimated at $500,000 and it was stated that the total loss at the stock yards would probably amount to about $700,000.

High Wind Fans Flames

The flames razed the livestock building within 20 minutes. The hay barn of Swift and Company, and two smaller sheds also were burned.

The exposition building was insured for $350,000. According to O. M. Plummer, manager of the building, the structure will be rebuilt in time for the exposition which usually is held annually in November.

The fire started from a refuse burner in the single mill, it was believed, and its spread was hastened by a high wind.

CANADA'S CROP
DAMAGE SENDS
PRICE SKYWARD

Black Rust Threat in Drought-Stricken Region Adds Millions to Values of American Farm Products.

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Black rust reported threatening to wreck much of what has been left of the drought-stricken Canadian wheat crop adds many millions of dollars today to the speculative value of farm products in the United States—roughly almost 3 cents a bushel. Such increase of price within 24 hours for about the entire wheat production of this country was shown by the action of the Chicago market.

Prices for corn, oats, rye and provisions followed wheat upward and closed with big gains. Both in giant volume of trading and degree of excitement in the pits as well as in steep climbing of values the day on the board of trade here rivaled earlier occasions of the world war.

Sets Market Afire
Bernard W. Snow, former assistant secretary of agriculture, sent the news from Winnipeg that set the market here afire. Mr. Snow is widely known as one of the leading crop authorities of the United States on crop conditions and the fact that his telegraphed personally saying widespread black rust infection had developed in Manitoba came with thunderbolt effect to the wheat trade. It was on the basis

POCATELLO, July 23 (AP)—An unidentified negro man late today engaged in a pistol battle with police on East Wyeth street and was killed by a bullet from the pistol of Chief of Police L. A. Lehrbas, but not before he had shot down and killed City Detective Sam Garbett, and seriously wounded Lehrbas.

Word of their father's injury came to the young men in a telephone call from the younger brother soon after the opening of a baseball game here this afternoon in which he was playing as shortstop for the Twin Falls club against the Idaho team. The older brother was among the spectators. Without pausing for the younger brother to change clothes, both hurried to the railway station, arriving just a few moments after the last train for Pocatello had departed. They then made hurried arrangements for the overland trip. They expressed the hope that they would reach Pocatello before the time for an operation to which, they were told, their father was to submit.

Word received here was that the Pocatello police chief had been shot in the face and it was believed that the bullet was lodged back of the nose.

COMMISSION KNOCKS OUT
RECONSIGNMENT ORDER

Disallows Union Pacific Proposal for Limiting of Free Movement of Products.

BOISE, July 23 (AP)—The interstate commerce commission has disallowed the rule promulgated by the Union Pacific system, denying shippers of potatoes more than two free reconsignments of diversions of their products moving in ear lots. Will H. Gibson, member of the public utilities commission, was informed Wednesday. The rule was to have gone into effect today.

As soon as the rule was announced, protests were filed against its operation, declaring that because of unsteadiness of the potato market during shipping season, growers of potatoes needed the privilege of diverting their products many times in order to find a market that was not overburdened. The potato growers' organizations at Twin Falls and Idaho Falls both protested the rule.

Under the provisions of the proposed order, growers would be permitted two free diversions, and after that they would have to pay at the rate of 34 cents per hundred pounds, or a minimum of $10 per car, for each diversion above two.

HEARING IS ORDERED ON RATES FOR TETON MINES

Idaho Utilities Commission Rules Carriers Charge Excessive and Unreasonable; Will Investigate.

BOISE, July 23 (AP)—Rates on coal from the Teton mines in eastern Idaho under lease by H. F. Samuels and others are unreasonable and excessive and will be investigated by the public utilities commission, according to an order issued by that body Monday.

The rates were filed July 14 by the Oregon Short Line Railroad company in compliance with a commission order requiring them to repair the tracks leading to the mine so coal could be moved and further to file a schedule of rates from the mine to Idaho points. The rates have been set for August 4 at Pocatello, in which evidence will be taken concerning the rates. The commission invites all persons interested in the reasonableness of the rates to be present in person or by counsel and present evidence.

ADDITIONS TO LINEUP BRING BLUES VICTORY

Ericson Pitches No-Hit Ball for Seven Innings of 6 to 2 Battle; Whitel Leads Scoring With Double and Home Run.

With the addition of Bob Whitel and Lefty Ericson to the Blues' lineup, Twin Falls had little difficulty in trimming Grinnell's Buhl Grays Wednesday evening on the local lot by a score of 6 to 2.

Ericson held the Buhl batsmen at his mercy while Whitel drove in the needed runs on Faux's pitching to cinch the game for Grinnell's team.

The largest crowd of the season filled the local park with Buhl and Twin Falls rooters.

Ericson disappointed the local fans when he walked the first man to the plate and a second later Fuller drove out a two-base hit, scoring Buhl's first run. A second hit in the inning scored Buhl's second and last run. In the second inning Ericson allowed one hit, walked a man and Mullen filled the bases when he fumbled Boston's grounder. Local stock fell to a low point when Fuller came to the plate.

The Gray's left fielder brought the Buhl fans to their feet when he sent the ball high to center field, but a running catch by Ostrander saved the Blues from being scored upon and drew a reward for the Twin Falls gardner who was met on the way into the bench by "Rabbit" Myers, who presented him with an 18-inch trout. For the next seven innings Ericson pitched no-hit ball, fanning three men in the third inning and only once allowing the ball to be batted beyond second base. With that work from the pitching and the Blues found their only worry in driving in enough runs to cinch the game.

In this capacity Whitel showed his value after both Watson and Mullen had reached base and effected a double steal in the first inning, the first sacker drove out a two-bagger, scoring two runs for the Blues and bringing in a third when Seilly singled. The second inning passed dully enough but in the third Whitel once more proved his worth. Watson reached first with a single in this inning and Whitel with a high fly over the left field fence drew a second reward for the Blues in the form of fish from the Twin Falls angler, Myers, as he rounded the third sack of his circuit club. Whitel with this display accounted for five of the local scores. The sixth counter came in the fifth inning when Ericson singled, advanced to second on Watson's sacrifice and scored on Mullen's single.

Buhl too shared the fishy rewards for remarkable catches and home runs when Ed Young found his foot and a half trout awaiting him after his sensational catch of Whitel's drive in the eighth inning.

Double plays livedened matters at two stages of the game, the first coming in the first inning when L. Young caught Richardson's drive at third and caught Seilly off first with a fast peg to Kovan. Twin Falls was responsible for the second which came in the seventh inning on Simpson's grounder which Watson sent to Mullen, who completed the play to Whitel.

Good sportsmanship prevailed during

MELLON'S HELP IS INVOKED TO BREAK IMPASSE

Interallied Conference at a Standstill With French Delegates and Financiers Insistent on Opposing Views.

LONDON, July 23 (AP)—With the French maintaining the sanctity of the interallied conference, the bankers equally firm in their demands for definite guarantees to satisfy investors in America and elsewhere will be asked to support a German loan necessary to launch the Dawes plan, the interallied conference has resolved itself into a delicate waiting game.

The question of Germany's presence at the conference table was discussed and was virtually the only advance made at the second plenary session held in the foreign office this afternoon. The committee appointed a week ago without their reports because it is impossible to make any real progress until the existing deadlock between the bankers and the French are ironed out.

Mellon's Aid Invoked
Both are unyielding, but the British, Belgian and American delegates are striving to reach a compromise, the good offices of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon were having been invoked at the Downing street breakfast this morning when he was the guest of Premier MacDonald.

Later Mr. Mellon conferred at No. 19 with Mr. MacDonald, Thomas Lamont, Sir Montagu Morton and Sir Robert Klondyke. It is stated that Mr. Mellon in an official way had contributed a suggestion which was likely to be of great assistance in finding a way out of the present deadlock.

The French delegates take the view that the bankers are interlopers in the London conference, which should be a wholly political nature. But the bankers maintain that they are merely interpreting their investing markets so that the needed loan will be readily subscribed when the German government asks for it.

Hardt Between Two Fires
It was authoritatively stated tonight that the French have verbally indicated their willingness to pursue a policy with regard to default and sanctions under the Dawes plan, that the bankers could wholeheartedly recommend the Dawes plan. The problem is to reduce the verbal pledges to an acceptable written formula which would satisfy the bankers and at the same time keep the French parliament. It was to this end that ambassador Kellogg and Lord D'Abernon assumed the role of mediators yesterday.

CANADA'S CROP DAMAGE SENDS PRICES SKYWARD

of his word about black rust that the wheat-pit went wild, and duplicated what was seen.

R. O. Cromwell, R. W. Kinyon and George M. LeConte were largely responsible for part of the day's advance in the wheat-pit market. All of them were seasoned crop experts, and all of them sent dispatches early in the day indicating that drought conditions in Canada had heretofore been underestimated. Mr. LeConte figured that owing to drought the crop in the province of Alberta this year would total only 40,000,000 bushels as compared to last year's aggregate of 160,000,000 bushels.

It was with something like dramatic suddenness, however, that the black rust news struck the wheat pit as the day was approaching an end. There have heretofore been news that black rust had appeared in the spring wheat territory south of the Canadian boundary, but the conditions there had been such that the peril to the United States wheat seemed in the last few days to have been averted.

Black rust at this time in Canada, however, was taken as a radically different matter, especially in view of the havoc already wrought in Canada by drought. The maturing of wheat in Canada is later than in the United States, and as pointed out by Mr. Snow the menace from widespread infection would depend upon weather conditions. Today's conditions in Manitoba as reported by him were the worst possible—hot and moist.

Under such circumstances, buying of wheat was on a tremendous scale. Both here at Winnipeg, European and American wheat merchants heavily, and despite heavy profit-taking, the close was at but relatively slight reaction from the day's top figures, net gains being 6 1/8 to 7 1/4 cents.

Today's advance in wheat prices was all the more remarkable as coming on the heels of estimates that the wheat crop in the United States is 30,000,000 bushels larger for Kansas alone than was figured a month ago, and that the United States is about on a shipping basis for Europe as compared with Canada or Argentina.

CAMPERS MUST HAVE PERMIT.
BOISE, July 23 (AP)—Orders closing the Boise national forest to campers, unless permits are secured, were in effect Monday and were "working quite satisfactorily," said the forestry office here.

LEOPOLD AND LOEB FACE VICTIM'S PARENTS

jurisprudence," the 19-year-old defendants apparently found mental stimulus in the oratorical effort of the prosecutor.

In a brief pause which followed this climax in Mr. Crowe's opening statement, the defendants whispered to each other words afterwards described by Loeb as "really funny."

After hearing a detailed recital of their carefully laid plans, their execution and finding of the "silly body" of the 14-year-old victim in a water-filled culvert beneath a railroad crossing in a double-deck railroad station once described by Leopold as an ideal spot for ornithological field work, the young defendants left the courtroom jauntily. As they entered an elevator to return to their guarded cells, they laughed audibly at each other's twittings.

Affirm Plans of Guilt.
The proceedings are designed to inform the court exactly on "the evidence in the case," assist him in fixing a just sentence.

Formal pleas of guilty to two indictments for kidnapping for ransom and for first degree murder were entered Monday, reversing previous pleas of not guilty.

Today, in firm voices the youths once more affirmed their pleas of guilty. Their fate now rests in the language of Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the defense, in "the mercy of the court."

Both prisoners were pointed out in court today by various witnesses as principals in activities described by the state's attorney in his two-hour opening presentation as the execution of their carefully laid plans for their crime.

Demands Death Penalty.
Twice during the day did the state's attorney demand the death penalty for the boys—once "in the name of the parenthood and the childhood of the state" in his opening statement. Again it was demanded late in the day when the defense tried to shorten the testimony by Mr. Crowe said he needed it to support his request for a death sentence.

The defense strategy was almost cryptic. There was but a brief response to the lengthy statement of Mr. Crowe. "It was in conventional pitch, directly to the court and ended with a clear-cut appeal for the superlatives of the prosecution. There was no cross-examination of the state's witnesses."

Attorneys Clash.
At one point in a brief exchange between counsel, Darrow reiterated that the defense case rested "in the judgment, the wisdom and the mercy of this court," and frequently disagreed with the agent of his colleague, Benjamin Hachrach, his willingness to accept direct and leading questions of the state's witnesses. At several points the defense attorneys evaded a disposition to allow the proceedings to go on as quickly as possible. But in reply to every effort of the court or the defense to shorten the proceedings, Mr. Crowe repeated his determination to bring every point of evidence into the court.

Asked after the session what would be the action of the defense in the event of a death sentence, Mr. Darrow said:

"Certainly I will never permit any man to hang so long as there is anything in the world I can do to save him."

Nathan Leopold, Sr., surviving parent of one of the boys, was in court all day, his face creased deeply by the lines of his grief. Neither parents of Loeb were present, but his uncle, Jacob Loeb, wealthy lawyer and former president of the Chicago board of education, a close observer of the proceedings.

Fifteen witnesses were presented at today's session. They laid a foundation which directly connected both Leopold and Loeb with the ingenious preliminaries to their crime and by repeated identification linked them with the "Morton D. Ballard" who hired the automobile in which young Franks was done to death.

Parents Tell Story.
Jacob and Flora Franks, parents of the boy and victim of the plot by which Leopold and Loeb sought to obtain $100,000, told of their last experiences with their son. The father bade him goodbye at 8 a. m., May 21, and went to his business office. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Franks saw him trudge away to the private school, from whose yard later in the day, he was enticed to sneak parents' identified shoes.

One stocking, a necktie, a belt buckle and a school pin worn by their "baby," the youngest of three children, on his last day of life.

These objects were spared from the furnace in which the robes of Robert's clothes were burned chiefly because they would not yield readily to the flames. They were thrown later from an automobile at widely scattered points and only the abnormally keen memories of the defendants for every detail, permitted their recovery when they led police back over the route of their flight from the crime.

KIMBERLY WILL CELEBRATE DAY OF THE PIONEER

Old-Time Stage Coach, Indian Raid and All Planned Today; Mayor Hodgkin of This City to Speak.

KIMBERLY, July 23.—An old-time stage coach with thrilling Indian raid, scalping and war dances are to open the program of events arranged for Kimberly's Pioneer day celebration Thursday according to the program arranged by the committee in charge, says the Kimberly Tribune.

Nothing has been spared to make this one of the biggest events ever staged this side of the Snake river, committee members assert. More real pep and enthusiasm is being shown than could have been imagined, they say.

The queen of the day, band, several covered wagons, old stage coach, Indians, "hand-cart party," national guard, boy scouts, children's bicycle section, Dee Hives girls' float, hospital float, comic section, large business men's float section assure one of the most unique parades ever seen in this section.

Many Will Attend.
People from various towns as far away as Buhl, Wendell and Ellettsville are expected to attend the day's celebration and everything points to a large crowd. It is understood that large delegations from Rosworth, Eden, Burley and other neighboring towns will be in Kimberly for the celebration.

Both Twin Falls and Murtugah are assisting with the program and parade. "Street dancing and a dance in Legion hall in the evening, which conclude the day's events, are creating interest among the younger sets, while varied events in the day's program including the pioneers' parade and picnic dinner command the attention of older folks.

Shad L. Hodgkin, Twin Falls mayor, and W. F. Whitaker, former mayor of Pocatello, are to be the speakers of the day.

Ball Game.
A baseball game between Wendell and Kimberly teams is proving a drawing card. Fans are anxious to see these two teams meet in what will be their first encounter of the season.

The detailed program is as follows: 10 a. m., Indian holiday; 10:30 a. m., patriotic program; 12 picnic dinner; 1 p. m., pioneer parade; 2:30 p. m., baseball game; 6 p. m., sports; 8 p. m., street dancing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.
The Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church will meet in the church parlors Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. H. G. Duke as hostess. Mrs. T. K. Hackman will be program leader.

WARRANT CALL.
July 10, 1924. Warrants of the American Falls reservoir district, numbers 301 to 360, both inclusive, will be paid if presented at the office of the district on July 27, 1924. Interest on the warrants ceases July 27, 1924. W. H. Spence, treasurer American Falls reservoir district.—adv.

JURY AWARDS TIMES $109 IN JUDGMENT

Judgment in the sum of $100 and costs were allowed I. H. Masters, an publisher and owner of the Twin Falls Times, said in probate court of Judge O. P. Duvall by Professor Augustin Levinson. The trial, in which Professor Levinson sought the return of $400 made as a deposit on a job of printing to be done there, was held before a jury of six men and after a short deliberation, after listening the greater part of the day to testimony, found for the defendant.

It was alleged in the complaint that Professor Levinson deposited $400 for a job of printing of 100,000 wrappers and 100,000 copies of a four-page pamphlet. The entire cost of the work was to be between $800 and $900, it was testified and after 30,000 wrappers of the 100,000 ordered had been printed and 10,000 delivered, the order was cancelled.

The plaintiff then sought the return of his deposit. The publishing company offered to return all of this amount but $84 for the work done which the professor refused. Suit was then started and the publishing company asked for $184 for the work done, that filed by Professor Levinson.

The jury awarded the original amount asked and $25 besides. Members of the jury were J. P. Avant, Carl Hahn, E. M. Jamison, R. M. Strohbecker, Fred Blackburn and Fred McRoberts, postmaster; R. A. Reid, Paul Cowgill, I. H. Masters and Professor Levinson. Attorney for Professor Levinson was Homer C. Mills and J. P. Barry for the publishing company.

BAR COMMISSION ACT AGAIN UP TO HIGH COURT

BOISE, July 23 (AP)—Declaring that the constitutionality of the Idaho bar commission act passed by the 1923 legislature is still undetermined, a petition for rehearing in the case was filed in the supreme court Monday.

In a recent opinion of the court it was held that the law was unconstitutional in so far as an appropriation was concerned. The case was taken to the court on the application for a writ of mandate to compel the state auditor to pay a travel expense claim of N. D. Jackson, St. Anthony attorney, and a member of the commission created under the law.

According to the petition members of the commission want the constitutionality of the law determined aside from the appropriation feature. They are concerned about the disciplinary measures of the law.

FRANK DISCUSSION OF LAWS

The proposed Child Labor Amendment to the federal Constitution is before the state legislatures and consequently before the citizens of this country. Those organizations and individuals who believe that it is right and needed are doing everything in their power to advance its cause. The secretary of the National Child Labor Committee puts the question up to the whole public thus:

"If you favor the Amendment, you ought to see that it is frankly and dispassionately discussed in the churches, clubs, associations and public press of your state or your community."

"If you are opposed to it, it is like duty rests upon you. Not even the most ardent advocates of this Amendment wish to disguise or escape any fair argument that can be launched against it. We have no confidence in the virtue of laws which run counter to an overwhelming public sentiment."

"That is the kind of consideration proposed laws should receive at the hands of all honest, intelligent citizens. Dishonest or ignorant citizens make themselves heard only too readily. It is up to the other sort to take their share in the work of government."

THE RIGHT TO DRIVE

The seventeen-year-old boy driver who caused the death of a pedestrian in Kansas City a few days ago is held on a charge of manslaughter. His youthful companions testified that they urged him to stop after the automobile had struck the man.

They report that he replied: "I'm sorry, folks, but I've already got a $75,000 damage suit against me. I can't stop." And again, to another plea, "I've had another accident and I've got to go on."

Apparently the only lesson that young man had learned from his first accident was that he'd better dodge capture when committing other offenses against traffic regulations and human decency. The other accident, involving the damage suit to which he referred, occurred a whole year ago. In the meantime, friends say, he has continued driving and has always been rather keen on speed and recklessness.

All the sound traffic rules in the world wouldn't have met this situation. Prompt punishment for his first offense, however, and denial to him of the right to drive a motor car, might have helped some. Certainly boys with his attitude toward the matter have no right to drive automobiles.

BILL HAYWOOD AS LECTURER

"Big Bill" Haywood, former American I. W. W. leader, has been in obscurity for sometime, since he jumped bail in Chicago and fled to the glorious land of Bolivia. It was revealed, a year or two ago, how his Bolivian hopes had been disappointed. The Russian Reds refused to take his brand of radicalism seriously, or else they were jealous. Threatened with arrest by the Soviet government, he undertook to establish a self-supporting communist colony in the Ural mountains. That project failed, either because it was no good or because of Bolshevik opposition. So Bill, unable to return to his beloved America—like Emma Goldman—he wishes he could, has gone on the lecture platform.

He travels from city to city, telling the Russians about social, economic and political conditions in America. He is handicapped by his ignorance of Russian, and has to speak

This generally happens whenever he goes out to get something at the grocery or attend to some errand for me. "I'll be back in five minutes," he says as he hurries off.

And about thirty-five minutes later he comes looking as though nothing out of the ordinary had happened. "Do you realize?" I ask him, "that you've held up our dinner exactly one-half hour and probably ruined it?"

"You're only joking, aren't you?" he replies. "Why, I just happened to meet Joe McPherson and we got talking about his new car—but I couldn't possibly have been out more than ten minutes."

It would be interesting, though probably irritating, to know just what this particular interpreter of American life is telling the Russians about us. It must be a weird account. Yet it may not be any more weird than some of the accounts we get of Russian life, and even, from similar adventures in this country.

INDIGO BUNTING'S SONG

Mr. Indigo Bunting was very fond of singing. He also had a very lovely voice.

That, as you may have noticed, isn't always the case. Some of us love to sing when we really can't sing at all. There is no harm in it, of course—but neither is there any beauty.

Mr. Indigo Bunting, though, has a beautiful voice. It is very much like the voice of a cuckoo, except Mr. Indigo Bunting does not tell us a story.

He is not unwilling to sing. You know how often singers who really sing beautifully will not feel like singing for you? They will tell you they have a slight cold, or they beg you to excuse them and they tell you they will sing for you another time.

But that is not Mr. Indigo Bunting's way. He will sing for you all through the summer time.

He not only has a beautiful voice—he is a very beautiful bird.

Ah, yes, Mr. Indigo Bunting is very fortunate.

He is not very big, but oh, the color of his blue suit is wonderful beyond compare. It is something of the deep, magnificent shade of blue that you sometimes see in the sky at night. His feathers also have some of the color of his waistcoat are more of the greenish blue peacock colors.

His tail and his wings are of black with blue feathers mixed in with the black.

Mr. Indigo Bunting will sit upon a spruce tree or a birch tree and will sing for hours and hours. Now and again even as he flies he will sing you a little song.

And nothing in the world is any lovelier than to catch a glimpse of Mr. Indigo Bunting as he flies in the summer sunlight, and as he flies to hear him sing a lovely song.

He is not very shy. Often he will become quite friendly.

If he sees that you are a friend of his he will become a friend of yours, for he is so generous in the way he has of wanting to share his song with you.

He doesn't make excuses. He doesn't say that he has to be excused.

He doesn't say that he has had a cold, or that he is a bit hoarse, and would rather not.

"No, Mr. Indigo Bunting pours forth his song for the world to hear—all those who wish to hear him may."

"I love the summer time, and the sunlight and the trees," Mr. Indigo Bunting said. "It is then that I dress up in all my best and do honor to Madame Summer."

"She is so handsomely gowned herself that I want to look my best, too."

"Of course, when the early autumn comes I have to start on my journey south."

"Then I wear a quieter suit for traveling. I think it is best not to wear one's very best suit traveling, though it is nice to look neat and nicely dressed."

"I always find a brown suit with touches of blue makes a nice traveling suit."

"So I always change that to before I start off on my journey."

"I don't think about that until the time comes. I enjoy myself singing and having a good time and I try to give others any pleasure they may have from my song."

And Mr. Indigo Bunting succeeds in this. If you have never seen him, watch for him on a summer's day and when you see him in his beautiful blue suit flying through the woods or over a meadow and when you hear his voice you will say:

"Oh, what a beautiful bird! What a beautiful voice!"

And as you say this I think you will feel a little happier. For Indigo Bunting adds his share of beauty and of happiness to the world.

INDIGO BUNTING'S SONG

Mr. Indigo Bunting was very fond of singing. He also had a very lovely voice.

That, as you may have noticed, isn't always the case. Some of us love to sing when we really can't sing at all. There is no harm in it, of course—but neither is there any beauty.

Mr. Indigo Bunting, though, has a beautiful voice. It is very much like the voice of a cuckoo, except Mr. Indigo Bunting does not tell us a story.

He is not unwilling to sing. You know how often singers who really sing beautifully will not feel like singing for you? They will tell you they have a slight cold, or they beg you to excuse them and they tell you they will sing for you another time.

But that is not Mr. Indigo Bunting's way. He will sing for you all through the summer time.

He not only has a beautiful voice—he is a very beautiful bird.

Ah, yes, Mr. Indigo Bunting is very fortunate.

He is not very big, but oh, the color of his blue suit is wonderful beyond compare. It is something of the deep, magnificent shade of blue that you sometimes see in the sky at night. His feathers also have some of the

CHAPTER XVI

Captain Kilmeny Retires

A voice calling his name from the top of the shaft brought Jack Kilmeny back to consciousness. He answered.

A shout of joy boomed down to him in Colter's heavy bass. He could hear, too, the sweet troubled tones of a woman.

"Hurry, please, hurry. . . . Thank God, we're in time."

"Got that breakfast with you, little neighbor," Jack called up weakly. He did not need to be told that Moya Dwyght was above, and since she was there, Colter should have brought him the breakfast that he had ordered from the Silver Dollar.

"Get back into the tunnel, Jack," Colter presently shouted.

"What for?"

"We're lowering someone to you. The timbers are rotten and they might fall on you. Get back."

"All right."

Five minutes later the rescuer reached the foot of the shaft. He stood for a moment with a minor's lamp above his head and peered into the gloom.

"Where away, Jack?"

The captain had insisted—all the more because there was some danger in it—that he should be the man lowered to the aid of his cousin.

"Bring that breakfast?" Jack snapped, testily.

"Yes, old man. It's waiting up above. Brought some soup down with me."

"I ordered two hours ago. What's been keeping you? I'm going to complain of the service."

The captain saw at once that Jack was light-headed and he humored him.

"Yes, I would. Now drink this soup."

The imprisoned man drained the bucket to the last drop.

Colter loosened the rope from his own body and fastened it about the neck of his cousin. He gave the signal and Jack was hauled very carefully to the surface in such a way as not to collide with the jammed timbers near the top.

Colter and Hoyer lifted the highgrader, over the edge of the well, where he collapsed at once into the arms of his friends.

Moya, a flank in her hand, stooped over the sick man where he lay on the grass. Her face was full of poignant sympathy.

Kilmeny's mind was quite clear now. The man was gazing at a face labeled wolf. Hidden deep into his face were the lines that showed how close he had shaved lately. But in his eyes was the gay inextinguishable gleam of the thoroughbred.

"Ain't I the gutler, Mr. Dwyght? Keel over just like a sick baby?"

The young woman choked over her answer. "You mustn't talk yet. Drink this, please."

He drank, and later he ate sparingly of the food she had hastily gathered from the dinner table and brought with her. That's a big enough thing. But add to it his game leg and his wound and starvation on top of that. I'll give it to him for the gamest fellow that ever went down into a mine.

Beyer, himself a game man, could not withhold his admiration after he had heard Captain Kilmeny's story of what he had done for his cousin. The two with Moya were riding behind the wagon in which the rescued man lay.

"Think of the luck of the fellow—horing away at that cave-in when any minute a million tons of rock and dirt might tumble down and crush the life out of him. That's a big enough thing. But add to it his game leg and his wound and starvation on top of that. I'll give it to him for the gamest fellow that ever went down into a mine."

"That's not all," the captain added quietly. "The cave-in must have tumbled in about twenty-five feet when the roof caved in. Plain blown over as he was, Jack tackled the job a second time."

Moya could not think of what had taken over her eyes and a sob choking her throat. A shudder and a groan he might be, but Jack Kilmeny held her love beyond recall. It was useless to remail herself that he was unworthy. None the less, she gloried in the splendid courage of the man. Whatever else he might be, Jack Kilmeny was every inch a man.

There was a little discussion between Colter and Captain Kilmeny as to which of them should take care of the invalid. The captain urged that he would get better care at the hotel, where Lady Farquhar and India could look after him. Colter referred the matter to Jack.

"I'm not going to burden Lady Farquhar or India. Colter can look out for me," the sick man said.

"It's no trouble. India won't be satisfied unless you come to the hotel," Moya said in a low voice.

He looked at her with about to deny and changed his mind. The appeal in her eyes was too potent.

"I'm in the hands of my friends. Settle it any way you like, Miss Dwyght. Do whatever you want with me, except put me back in that hell."

After a doctor had seen Jack and taken care of his ankle, after the trained nurse had arrived and been put in charge of the sick room, Captain Kilmeny made a report to Moya and his sister.

"He's gone to sleep already. The doctor says he'll probably be as well as ever in a few days, thanks to you, Moya."

"Thanks to you, Ned," she amended. "He spent his time with me and it might amuse you."

The captain looked straight at her as he spoke it.

"Do. You'll find something on the last page of the little book. Now, I'm going to say good-night. It's time little girls were in bed."

He kissed his sister and Moya, rather to the surprise of the latter, for Captain Kilmeny never insisted upon the rights of a lover. There was something on his face she did not quite understand. It was as if he were saying good-by instead of good-night.

She understood it presently. Ned had written a note and Moya had read the last page of the little book. She read it twice, and then she read it a third time. It told her that the soldier had found truly the secret her anxiety had haunted in the face of all her friends.

"It's no go, dear girl. You've done your best, but you don't love me. You never will. A afraid there's no way left for me to save you. So you're free again, little sweetheart."

"I know you won't misunderstand. Never in my life have I cared for you so much as I do tonight. But caring isn't enough. I've had my chance and couldn't win out. May you have good hunting wherever you go."

"Will you write to me?"

Her betrothal had played the game like the gentleman he was to a losing finish. She knew he would not whipper or complain, that he would meet her tomorrow cheerfully and easily, bringing over from her his wound in his heart. He was a better man than his cousin. She could not tell to herself that his gallantry had a finer edge. His sense of right was better developed and his courage quite as steady. Ned Kilmeny had won his V. G. but he was twenty-five. He had carried her to a sacred issue one of the most delicate diplomatic missions of recent years. Everybody conceded that he had a future. If Jack had never appeared on her horizon she would have married Ned and been his loving wife. But the baroness's cousin had made this impossible.

Why? Why had her loving heart gone out to this attractive scamp who did not want her love or care for it? She did not know. The thing was as clear as daylight. He was in love with her. All the training of her life had shaped her to other ends. Lady Farquhar would explain it as a glamor cast by a foolish girl's fancy. But Moya knew the "fate" of feeling—raced through her was born not of fancy but of the true romance.

CHAPTER XVII

Two in a Bucket

Jack heard the very first rescue from India. He surprised her alone in the breakfast-room by hobnobbing one morning after the rest had gone.

She popped a question directly at him. "Did the doctor say you could get up?"

"Don't ask him," he answered with a laugh, and dropped into a seat across the table.

Shaven, and dressed in a clean freshly pressed suit, he looked a different man from the haggard gray vagabond Captain Kilmeny had brought back with him three days earlier. The eyes were still rather watery and the face a bit drawn, but otherwise he was his very competent and debonair self. His "Good morning, India," was as cheery and mirthful of fact as if those five days of horror had never existed.

"Don't believe it will hurt you," Her bright eyes were warm in their approval of him. "You took a lot better than you did even yesterday. It's awfully jolly to see you around again, Cousin Jack."

"I'm enjoying it myself," he conceded. "Anything of importance in that covered by there?"

"Tell me all about it," she ordered, handing him the bacon. Then, with a shudder, she added: "Must have been rather awful down there."

"Bad enough," he admitted lightly. "Well, Moya," he leaned forward, chin in hand.

"What's the use? Those fellows put me down. Your brother took me up. That's all."

"It isn't all. Ned says it is perfectly marvelous the way you dug that tunnel and escaped from being crushed, and then dug it again after it had caved."

"Couldn't lie down and quit, could I? A man in the hole I can't pick and choose." He smiled lazily at her and took a muffin from a plate handed him by the waiter. "My turn to ask you a question. Tell me the full story of how you guessed where the west shaft of the Golden Nugget?"

"Haven't you heard? It was Moya guessed it—from the tapping on the pipe. You know."

Report of Rust in Canadian Crop—Stains—Stamps—Market Closes 6 1/8 to 7 1/4 Cents Higher

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Wheat went whirling upward today as a bushel. News of black rust in Canada set loose an extraordinary buying stampede which was helped along by the Canadian wheat crop would amount to more than half as much as last year's total Canadian harvest. The wheat market closed excited, 6 1/8 to 7 1/4 cents higher, September $1.30 to $1.31, and December $1.28 to $1.29. Corn finished 2 1/4 to 3 1/4 cents up, oats showing 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents gain and provisions at 15c to 60c advance.

All previous top prices reached for wheat this season were eclipsed as the market went skyward. Strangely in contrast, considerable uncertainty had been shown at the opening, first trades varying from a full cent decline to an equal uptick. The initial weakness was ascribed to eleventh-hour liquidating sales on the part of holders, apparently believing that an account of recent rains in Canada the rise in values had reached the maximum. At this juncture, however, became known that advice from Chicago experts investigating drought damage in Alberta pointed to conditions far worse than any heretofore published, one authority estimating the Alberta yield this season at only 400,000 bushels compared with 100,000,000 bushels last year.

The nearly critical rise began that suddenly became a warning reminder when a half hour before the close of the wheat market the trade was apprised that serious black rust infection was menacing the crop in Manitoba where the Canadian drought had done relatively little harm. The fact that this came from one of the most experienced crop observers in the United States left virtually no room for doubt so far as Chicago traders were concerned, and the soaring of prices reached a stage seldom equaled.

Purchasing attained mammoth proportions and the market climbed exactly 8 cents from the day's low point early in the morning. The profit-taking and the execution of numerous stop loss orders, however, checked the advance.

High 1924

Low 1924

Total sales, 1,241,000 shares.

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP)—Heavy profit-taking sales impeded, but failed to halt the upward movement of prices in the stock market, which was featured by the revival of speculative interest in the public utility shares. More than 40 stocks, half of them rails, soared to new high levels for the year. Total sales exceeded the million share mark for the seventh consecutive full session.

Some irregularity developed at the opening when selling broke out in the steel shares as a result of the federal trade commission's decision against the Pittsburgh-plus-price system of the United States Steel corporation. These shares stiffened later when the weekly steel trade reviews appeared and revealed an unmet demand for steel products from the mill centers, but they sagged again in the realizing movement at the close.

United States Steel common opened quarter down at 10 1/2, advanced to 10 3/4 and then fell back to 10 1/4 at the close. United States Steel preferred touched a new 1924 top at 12 1/2.

A bull-dog demonstration in the public utility shares was featured by an eight-point jump in American Waterworks common to 49. West Penn Power advanced four points and American Waterworks to 50.

MORSE ELECTED HEAD OF GROUP FOR RECREATION

First Steps Toward Supervised Play Taken With Formation of Twin Falls Recreational Association.

Burton L. Morse, Twin Falls architect, active in physical and recreational work in this city, was elected by unanimous vote Wednesday evening temporary president of the Twin Falls Recreational association, constitution and by laws of which were adopted and other officers elected following a brief outline of plans as presented by W. C. Bradford, field agent for the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

Between 75 and 100 citizens of Twin Falls and representatives of various churches, lodges and civic organizations of the city were present at the meeting which was the first and only of its kind in this city. Plans for a community playground and plans for recreation for men, women and children. The association was formed following addresses by several local speakers interested in work of this sort and a musical program which many pronounced equal to entertainments for which a charge was made.

As temporary officers of the association those elected will act as a board of directors who will make a survey of civic, commercial, recreational, industrial, religious, fraternal and other organizations with the view of selecting one representative from each to constitute a central committee. This committee will hold its meeting within the next 60 days at which time the council will elect permanent officers who will serve for a period of one year.

Officers Elected.
To aid Mr. Morse, the selection of four other officers was made at the meeting each being chosen by unanimous consent. They are Mrs. I. E. Joslyn, first vice president; Arthur J. Peavey, second vice president; Miss Mary H. Robinson, secretary, and Judge O. P. Duval, treasurer.

The association as outlined in the constitution and by laws will have as its object "promotion of unity and good citizenship by encouraging the constructive use of leisure time through wholesome recreation and neighborliness throughout the entire year. The association shall prepare and carry out a year round program of activities utilizing all existing efforts and facilities and developing all talents of the community through service; and shall keep in touch through the National Playground and Recreation Association of America with the leisure time doings of the entire country."

Membership in the association is open to any citizen of Twin Falls who declares himself interested in the work of the association and who will work for it.

Chairman of the following committees are to be elected: Playgrounds, athletics, finance, contests, music, dramatics, public relations and publicity.

It is also proposed to obtain an executive secretary who shall be a year round worker. It will be his duty to carry out the instructions of the central council.

Mayor Presides.
Mayor Stuart L. Hodgkin presided as chairman of the meeting and told of the purposes planned. He also introduced the speakers. Preceding the first speaker of the evening were several solos by Mrs. O. P. Duval. She also acted as accompanist for W. C. Bradford in songs he sang.

Mr. Bradford sang a number of songs and explained how each came to be written. He has spent many years in cultivating his voice and is said to be one of the best singers in the United States off the concert stage.

Judge O. P. Duval of the probate court was the first speaker. He told of his work among juveniles in juvenile court and of the efforts made in arriving at a fair understanding of each case. He declared that so far this year but five children had been sent to St. Anthony industrial school. He said he hoped to get the number below that of last year which was 11. Ninety per cent of those sent to the school are sent there with parents' consent. He told of the need for some method of getting the children's minds on the right sort of play. This he said has an almost illimitable value towards making better citizens of the United States.

Guests Not Evident.
Mrs. Joslyn was the second speaker. She told of the work that has been done in getting playground equipment for the use of the children and of success after many obstacles were overcome. Mrs. Joslyn praised the work being done by young women who are directors of supervised play at the park.

INCREASED RATE ON SPUDS IS WITHDRAWN

Action of Central Western Regional Board at Salt Lake Brings Results, Telegram to DeLong Declares.

Through the efforts of the central western regional advisory board in its meeting at Salt Lake and July 17, permission has been given by the United Pacific system by the interstate commerce commission to withdraw applications for increased tariffs on recognition and diversion rates, it was learned Wednesday by Carl DeLong, manager of the Boyle commission company here in a telegram.

Had the new tariff gone into effect it would have cost potato shippers in Idaho from $2.10 to $2.25 cent more on Idaho shipped out of this state. At the meeting held at Salt Lake on July 17, the board, of which Mr. DeLong is a member, took up the discussion of the proposed changes which were to have gone into effect July 21. It was found that it would have been injurious to Idaho to the advantage of other states and for this reason attempts were made to have it killed which were successful.

Action by the interstate commerce commission on the application is thought to be almost a record in so far as work of the commission is concerned. But four days elapsed between the time of application and granting of permission.

Each week day between 9 and 12 o'clock in the morning. She also praised the work of Judge Duval, who, she said, during his eight years among juveniles had done excellent work. "She declared that it was a real honor for an association such as suggested."

The Rev. Charles E. Winning was the third speaker and declared that while he was not the official representative of all the churches he was sure that he could speak for them in their desire to aid in the work as outlined. "Agriculture is a real industry of this section. It is its greatest asset," he declared. He hoped to see about 300 and 400 each day at a playground such as that contemplated.
