STATE'S 'AGE' IN MURDER CASE GIVES OPINION

Leopold and Loeb Normal When Murder of Franks Boy Was Committed, Says Alienist; Last of Witnesses.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18 (AP)—The judicial hearing by which it is to be determined the fate of Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. Loeb, confessed murderers of Robert Franks, went from the serious to the comic today and wound up in laughter. Throughout the morning session Clarence S. Darrow, chief of defense counsel, matched his wits with Dr. H. Douglas Bengler, alienist for the state and tried to obtain from the expert admissions that "schizophrenic" or "split" personalities were necessarily subjects of mental disease. This afternoon Dr. William O. Krohn, last witness for the state and probably for the hearing, testified that through the observations and reasons for declaring the defendants mentally sound and then got into a hammer and tong exchange with Benjamin Bachrich of defense counsel, and started his cross examination of the state's see.

Guess on Decision.

Judge Caverly has given no indication as to when he would render his judgment. Guesses about the court room ranged from five to ten days before the time the court would take to consider the facts and theories of state and defense. The court fans failed to hear pyrotechnics this morning but relieved their feelings by snickering at the glib exchanges between Mr. Darrow and Mr. Singer. The attorney showed satisfaction when he finally drew from Dr. Singer an admission that the endocrine glands are affected by emotions. It has been the theory of the defense that Loeb's pineal gland, an endocrine gland of the brain has calcified prematurely and affected his mind. The state has asserted there is no way to determine the mental effect of such a condition.

Flight Planes Are Damaged When Two Attempt Hop Off

World Flies Hold Up at Iceland; Crusier Steaming to Their Base for Repair Parts Needed.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 18 (AP)—Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith and Lieutenant Erik Nelson suffered another setback in their world flight today when they attempted to start on the long deferred flight from Reykjavik to Greenland. Both their planes were so badly damaged as to necessitate at least three more days delay.

Carrying heavy loads of fuel, as it was the intention to fly more than 800 miles across the ice infested north Atlantic, the "Hercules" machines refused to leave the water. Repeated efforts were made to rise and the strain caused the breaking of the spreader bar on Lieutenant Smith's plane while the propeller of Lieutenant Nelson's plane was shattered.

Already chafing under their enforced stay at Reykjavik, this misfortune came as a heavy blow to the aviators, but, accustomed to the uncertainty of flying they soon became reconciled to further delay and are now anxiously awaiting the arrival of the repair Richmond which is hurrying here with spare parts for the plane.

LESTER ALBERT GETS CITATION

Adjutant of the Idaho American Legion and Former Resident Honored.

BOISE, Aug. 18 (AP)—His picture in the American Legion Weekly, was the means by which Lester F. Albert, Idaho American Legion adjutant and a national vice commander-in-the-same organization, received Monday a citation, naming him for "distinguished and exceptional gallantry in action," in the world war, May 27 and 28, 1918. The citation was awarded Mr. Albert March 27, 1919, by General John J. Pershing, and bears the signature of the American general.

Mistake Made.

Because of a mistake in the war department, it was assumed that Lester F. Albert, there happening to be a man by that name in the army. It went to France, came back to this country, and finally got to Lester F. Albert's home at Shennandoah, Pa., before he got home from France. His wife didn't know what it meant and when he got home he tried to find out who it belonged to, knowing he was not the man.

Finally he saw a picture of Lester F. Albert in the Legion Weekly, and having seen in the casualty lists the name of Lester F. Albert as a wounded man, he communicated with Mr. Albert, with the result that the citation arrived Monday.

REDUCED VALUE JEROME COUNTY IS CONSIDERED

State Equalization Board Hears Request of Commissioners That Reduction Stand; Be Under Last Year.

BOISE, Aug. 18 (AP)—"We didn't do anything but hear a world of grief," said Governor C. C. Moore when asked what progress the board of equalization made Monday toward arriving at state property values. Commissioners of Jerome county appeared before the board arguing that the 40 per cent reduction made in the valuation of that county by the assessor should be allowed to stand. When asked if the board had considered Jerome property values, the governor said it had and that it was probable a reduction would be made under last year but not the 40 per cent asked by the commissioners. John McIntyre and Howard Bodebaugh, commissioners, appeared before the board, supported by H. D. Cook, assessor.

Cripple Schools

It has been argued before the board by members of the school board in Jerome county that the requested reduction would cripple the schools that they could not operate. The county commissioners told the board Monday that they wanted to cut down the school expenses, saying that they were too high in comparison with other county expenses. John P. Gray, Coeur d'Alene attorney for the Washington Water Power company, appeared before the board explaining statements made before the same body last week by Ed Crane, former tax agent of the company, to the effect that the company was evaluating the payment of tax on approximately $13,000,000.

31,000 Acres

The property involved is 31,000 acres of land which is alleged by the company has been maintained by raising the level of lake Court d'Alene, Mr. Gray told the board that the stream flow of the St. Marias, St. Joe and Coeur d'Alene rivers was the reason for the height of the lake; that the water held back by a dam at the outlet belonged to the company by an old right and that it, the company, was already paying taxes on a fairly high assessment of its property.

Mount Shasta Mud Flow Breaks Water Mains in McCloid

Absence of Usual Blanket of Snow Causes Trouble in California City; Closes Highway

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 18 (AP)—Absence of the usual blanket of snow has caused such rapid melting of a glacier on Mount Shasta this year that a flow of mud from one to three feet in depth was swept down one of the mountain valleys, broken water mains of the town of McCloid, covered roads and discolored the waters of the McCloid river for many miles. While annual flow of mud, brought down by the melting of the glacier, are usual, the present one is the heaviest for some years past.

The breaking of the water pipes is attributed to broken off masses of rock which have been swept down with the mud. Repairs now have been made, however. Generally, men are kept on watch at the town's water intake to prevent just such occurrences, but this year none was posted there. At present travel is suspended on the road around the base of Mount Shasta.

HUGE BUILDING GUTTED BY FIRE

Mystery Blaze Does $200,000 Damage to 8-Story Structure at Houston.

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 18 (AP)—Cause of the fire that early this morning gutted the eight story Settegast building here with a loss of more than $200,000, is a mystery according to city officials. The first three floors and the two upper stories were badly damaged by the flames, which smoldered all day. No fire had been started in the building Sunday and only a few of the tenants are believed to have visited it all day. The possibility that a candle left burning might have caused the blaze was the only explanation advanced by officials. No investigation will be made, it was said. Five firemen were injured. Three were badly cut when a large plate glass window fell on them, and two were burned when the came in contact with live wires.

BRYAN ACCEPTS NOMINATION IN LINCOLN SPEECH

Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Promises Progressive Farmers and Wage Earners Assistance.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 18 (AP)—Before a large and colorful gathering of long time friends and supporters and national and sectional party leaders, Governor Charles W. Bryan tonight formally accepted the nomination for vice president by the democratic party and said in unmistakable terms the principles and issues upon which he will go before the people for victory at the polls. In the center of the football field at the University of Nebraska memorial stadium, Governor Bryan made his speech of acceptance, following theoretical of his party's standard bearer, John W. Davis, who a week ago chose the open-air for launching the democratic campaign at Clarkburg, W. Va.

Will Aid Farmer

Governor Bryan definitely opened his campaign with a promise—to the progressive farmers and wage earners that the democratic party would stand up to its task in seeking a solution of their difficulties. Governor Bryan, of Mississippi, who delivered the modification address, also proclaimed the democratic organization as the only one to which the progressive elements could look for direction and leadership and asserted the presidential race would be between the two major parties.

The vice presidential candidate praised his party's platform as a "broad, strong and progressive enough to justify support of those who believe in equality before the law" and declared the democrats have presented a program of progressive policies "for which the party stand as a unit without the intervention of faction, bloc or section."

Support to Davis

He pledged his full support to Mr. Davis and declared that he and the presidential candidate are in harmony with the platform upon which they will fight the election support. "By the selection of me from the front of the great middle west as its candidate, the democratic party recognizes the importance of agriculture as one of the basic industries of the nation," Mr. Bryan asserted, adding that "we have the assurance that our party is in direct sympathy with the needs and advancement of the farmers of the country."

Welfare of Country

"It is unthinkable," he said at another point, "that the great host of progressive farmers and wage earners, both organized and unorganized, who know from intimate association and cooperation in service for many years, having this great party organization presented now as if it instrument through which to work their will, should permit a division of strength

HUNGER DRIVES MANY TO KILL IN RED RUSSIA

Civil War, Revolution and Famine Have Made Life Cheap; Papers Full of Murder Reports Every Day.

MOSCOW, Aug. 18 (AP)—Civil war, revolution and famine have made life cheap in Russia. Every day the papers are full of accounts of men and women who either have killed themselves or murdered others for the most trivial causes. Hunger and poverty often furnish the chief motives for the constantly recurring murders. One of the most striking cases recently was that of Douza Golovkina, a beautiful girl of 17, who killed her girl companion in order to realize $5 on the sale of her clothing. This was the second instance within a week where a woman murdered another in order to get her clothing.

No Remorse
Without the slightest trace of emotion or remorse, Miss Golovkina explained to the judge of the Moscow criminal court that she had borrowed $5 from a woman acquaintance to give to her lover, a youth of 19, and as she found it impossible to meet the debt, she entered her girl companion's home, while her parents were out. She directed her previously to dress in her best clothes as they were "going to a ball," and then killed her.

BEST RESULTS IN IRRIGATING ARE DETAILED

Associate Professor of Agriculture at University Tells How to Obtain Good Results With Little Water.

It is true that there is a very great loss of irrigation water between the diversion from the river and the farmer's headgate, according to M. R. Lewis, associate professor of agricultural engineering at the University of Idaho. Nevertheless, the best chance for increasing the useful results from the use of a limited quantity of water during an emergency is in the irrigation of the fields. For each irrigation of each field there is a definite quantity of water which will give the best results—use of any other than the correct amount will result in waste.

There are three principal ways in which water is lost from the irrigated field. Under the usual conditions in Idaho the most important loss is that by deep percolation. By this is meant the water which passes down through the soil and sub-soil to the groundwater. Under certain rather unusual conditions a part of this water is brought up by capillary action to the zone of plant roots and is used by the crops.

Loss Water
As a general rule, however, the water which passes down below the reach of the crop roots is lost so far as that crop is concerned. More often than not it appears on some lower land as harmful seepage water. Whenever too much water is applied to a portion of a field some of the water will pass down to the groundwater. In some cases three-fourths of the water applied to the fields is lost in this way.

Evaporation from the surface of the soil is another cause of loss of moisture. By far the largest part of this loss occurs during the irrigation and within the first few days thereafter. The loss will be practically the same after each application so that the total loss during the season will depend on the number of irrigations applied.

Long Intervals
If too small an amount of water is applied at a time the crop will begin to suffer for water within a short time and another wetting will be required with its attendant loss by evaporation. In order to save this loss as well as to economize on the labor required in irrigation, it is best to apply irrigation water at as long intervals as the crop and soil will permit without injury.

The third important loss is by surface waste. It is estimated that the usual amount of water wasted from the surface of Idaho-irrigated lands is very great. It is lost in the furrows of the irrigator. This loss, however, is so easily seen that it is generally pretty thoroughly prevented during times of shortage. Waste of water from irrigated fields is ordinarily caused by allowing the water to run too long in one place.

Big Danger
With most of Idaho soils there is more danger of applying more than the correct amount of water in single irrigations than there is of applying too little. One reason for this is that it requires very well prepared fields and very skillful work to apply a little irrigation water as the farmer soils can hold. Another is that most irrigators fail to realize that the water applied to the surface of the soil keeps on moving down through the soil for hours, in fact, for days after it has disappeared from the surface.

Life Is All Too Short
The trouble with spending our lives looking for "not" places is that when we have found them there is no time left in which to enjoy them.

JURY UNDECIDED HOW GIRL DIED

Father of Young Woman Says She Was Despondent When Leaving Home.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 18 (AP)—Lillian McKinney, Herrick, S. D. girl whose body was found under a bridge near Bedford, Iowa, was in "low spirits," and appeared quite despondent when she left home August 5 with Carl Hough, Elmer McKinney of Herrick, who identified the body as that of his daughter, testified today at the inquest at Bedford. The inquest was continued until Wednesday.

An account of the inquest to determine by what means the girl came to her death as given in a special dispatch to the Omaha Bee, disclosed through McKinney's testimony that "Hough's father was 'through with him,'" and could not get along with his son. Police of the central west are searching for Hough who is said to have started westward in an automobile. Norfolk, Nebraska, police however, declared tonight that they have identified an automobile, stolen from a Norfolk man as the automobile which Hough drove when he stopped at a gasoline station at Newmarket, Ia., from a description given by Newmarket police.

Happy Men
I had been working in my garden. The sun was just below the horizon and the dew was already on the smooth green walks bordered by sweet-smelling roses and carnations. The stillness of the evening was broken only by the whistling of a blackbird. I sat down on a ripe seat I had formed beneath an old tree, and as I thought of the fruits and seeds that were ripening around me, I exclaimed to myself, "How happy if they knew it, are they that till the ground."

The Salesman Who is Acquainted with All of the Buyers

The man who is acquainted with all of the purchasers—not the man simply with a large acquaintance, but the man who knows the buyers of his line, is a very, very valuable asset to his firm.

Just so with a Newspaper.

When a newspaper reaches the buyer, it becomes, in effect the salesman of its advertisers. It not only tells the story of the Business Man's offerings to the Buyers, but it tells it in the places where it will do the most good, namely in the homes of the great majority of those people who are in the market for the best the market affords and who have the money with which to pay for it.

The News is sold on its merits as a newspaper to people who buy and pay for it, primarily, because they consider it worth the money.

U. S. CHAMBER COMMERCE TO GET NEW HOME

American Business to Move Into $2,500,000 Edifice Oct. 1 in Washington, D. C. Imposing Structure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. (AP)—The new $2,500,000 home of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, toward which business men in all parts of the country have contributed, is nearing completion and will be thrown open October 1.

Standing on the site of the Washington home of Daniel Webster, the imposing structure, which faces south on Lafayette Square toward the White House, is built of Indiana limestone and is a duplication, in the main, of the Treasury annex facing the opposite corner of the square. It was designed by the same architect, Cass Gilbert, of New York.

Where in the main of yore stood Webster's home, with its rich political and social associations, and its rambling garden, a fountain will play in the courtyard in the center of the building. The historical aspect will be preserved in decorative details throughout the building. The architect's office is in the office of the president of the chamber.

RHODESIA GOLD HUNTING ACTIVE

Sleep on Claim in Freezing Cold to be First to Stake Property.

BULAWAYO, Southern Rhodesia, Aug. 18 (AP)—Gold prospecting is very active throughout Rhodesia and so keen are the prospectors in peering out claims that eight of them slept through the freezing cold night on the site of a dead-miner's forgotten gold claim, known as Mick's Luck, near Esex Vale, at one time the home of the famous explorer F. C. Selous.

As soon as it was daylight there was a wild stampede among the men to reach the claims first. Motor cars had arrived for two of the competing amateurs, who apparently thought that first registration of a claim at the mines office in Bulawayo established a prior right to them. These two men had a furious race to Bulawayo, covering the distance of 20 miles over the rough walled road in 45 minutes.

Louisiana Purchase. The United States government paid France nearly $15,000,000 for Louisiana, although it was at the time still in the possession of Spain. Spain transferred Louisiana to France on the specific condition that she would never transfer it to any other government. England notified the United States that she would never consent to French occupation of any part of North America. Napoleon sold Louisiana to the United States to prevent it from falling into the hands of England. Technically speaking, France did not have a transferable title, and the territory was still occupied by Spain, but the latter country was in the position to object and so the bargain was made.

Mother killed a valuable vitamin when she made apple sauce by the old recipe, Edward F. Kohnag, Walter H. Eddy and Victoria O'Connell stated in a joint paper recently presented before the American Chemical society. Vitamin C, the vitamin which prevents scurvy, was the one destroyed. The experts told how the fruit should be prepared to preserve this vitamin. They said that the best method of curing of skins after cuttings, says the Kansas City Star, All fruits use oxygen in a breathing process not unlike the breathing of animals. It is this oxygen in the fruit which destroys the vitamin and the way to prevent the destruction is to get the oxygen out of the apples before the cooking starts. This can be done by peeling and quartering the apples and keeping them overnight under water containing ferrous sulfate. Deposited oxygen supply from the air in this way, the apples use up the oxygen in their tissues. This drawing of the apples saves vitamin C. Railroad Consolidation: A great new railroad system seems to be developing. But it is not really new.

It is an interesting development in two respects. For one thing, it is evidence of a fresh, vital movement in American railroading.

Not long ago, such a merger would have been fought in the courts as a combination in restraint of trade.

The old idea was universal competition, every railroad, large or small, fighting every other.

This is a compromise between competition and public control. Any lessening of competition in such a public utility is only tolerable.

It may be that the compromise is destined to lead gradually to complete abolishment of competition among the railroads.

Presently Gibbs' mind had seized strongly upon the idea. He would go to New York, and find a studio, and see what the prospect was of painting portraits there.

Now Gibbs began to think he would like to show his father the stalwart Tommy, who spoke two languages at five, and played his little violin so nicely.

Then, abruptly, it was settled, and they began to wonder how they had managed to stay away so long.

And then came the memory of fifth avenue in spring sunshine, and the sound of the first of the city.

"I've packed everything," he accused her.

"I've been waiting for you to be free to see the very first of the city," she answered eagerly.

"It is darned thrilling!" Gibbs said, smiling, as they leaned on the rail.

"Isn't this darling?" Gibbs exulted, when the younger Josselyns were alone.

"Well, Gibbs, it's much fun! And aren't they dear to do it all—and aren't you glad now that I made you write when Tom was born?"

"We've missed all the ugly, hard part," Ellen exulted, "and we'll get all the glory of the spring!"

"I wrote the old man we'd go to the Brevoort," Gibbs said. "I bet what he'll say is—'Go on, my boy!'" remember the English for things, or they'll not like you." Five minutes later they were all together in a jumble of landing.

She was dressed with great severity, and everything she wore was fitted and made to order.

She had been beautiful seven years ago; she was more than that now.

"You must help me get some new clothes," she said, looking back over her first time in seven years that courtesy really were important.

"Well, I did get an evening gown, and an afternoon dress," Ellen said, "Gibbs and I tried to pick out something smart. But really it is hard."

"I've been waiting for you to be free to see the very first of the city," she answered eagerly.

DELEGATES OF THREE PARTIES ASSEMBLE HERE

Day to Name Delegates to State Conventions and Choose Committeemen.

Republicans, democrats and progressives will hold county conventions here today to elect delegates to their respective state conventions August 26, at which candidates for congress and state officers will be nominated and state platforms promulgated.

Each county convention will also elect a number of the state committee which will select the state convention.

With six votes in the state convention which will be held in Idaho Falls, the Republicans of Twin Falls county through their county convention are expected to elect twice or three times that many delegates giving to each a proportionate share in the voting strength.

A similar course is expected to be followed by the democrats who are confident of necessity for placing a limit somewhere on the number of the county's authorized delegates in view of the fact that the state convention this year will be held in Twin Falls and thereon as a delegate to this convention there seems to be much sought after by democrats of this county.

The "progressive" county convention will elect delegates to cast the four votes allotted to the county at the state convention to be held in Boise.

The republican convention will elect a state committee member successor to Shad L. Hodgkin, who is not a candidate for re-election after serving in that position during the last two years.

Chief of a successor to J. M. Shank, formerly of Buhl and now a resident of California, as state committee member will be made by the democratic convention.

The republican delegates will convene at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Parish hall, and the democratic convention will open at the same hour in the district court room.
