

ADMITTS KILLING KENTUCKY MAN

Patient at Denver Service Hospital Confesses to Murder on Operating Table.

DENVER, Dec. 20 (AP)—Because he believed he was dying as he went under the influence of ether for tonsillitis operation here November 27, John W. Hayes, a patient at Fitzsimons hospital here, revealed a shying at Hueyville, Ky., to Captain R. G. Kirkwood, the army physician attending him. It became known today.

"Don't give me any more ether yet, doc," Hayes pleaded as he was stretched out on an operating table. "I've killed a man and I've got to tell you about it in case I don't pull through," he was quoted as saying.

Hayes then confessed, it was said, that in October he killed Jim Castle at Hueyville, when attacked by Castle, as he attempted to eject him from his brother's house. Hayes declared he fled from the state and came to Denver, where he suffered a severe hemorrhage and was taken to the hospital. He has a wife and child living in Hueyville, he said.

According to District Attorney Van Cise here with whom hospital authorities took up the matter, Hayes is under bond for his appearance in Hueyville in January before a grand jury. He still is in the service men's hospital here.

COLD WEATHER BREAKS WATER MAINS AT EDEN

EDEN, Dec. 20.—(Special to The News)—The people of Eden and surrounding country are experiencing some of the most severe cold weather here for a number of years. The lowest temperature reported was Saturday morning when 24 degrees below zero was recorded. The city water works were put out of commission when a water main froze and burst early Friday morning, leaving the water supply short. It will require several days to make the repair as some repairs had to be ordered from Salt Lake. A large per cent of the school children living in the country were absent from school Friday. Farmers and others who have potatoes stored are having to keep fires in their cellars to keep the temperature above freezing. It is the coldest weather experienced here since January 18th, 1922, when the thermometer reached the low mark of 23 below zero.

Mute Talks After Airplane Dive

Gwendolyn Caswell, pretty 22-year-old Chicago girl, dumb since she was a child, was taken in an airplane to the height of a mile above the Chicago Aero club's field, where the pilot shot his machine straight for the earth in a nose dive with motor running. When she reached the earth it was found she could talk again. "The motor makes lots of noise," were her first words. At 10 feet she could hear distinctly, though she had never heard before. There were tears in her eyes as she thanked the pilot, Burr G. Hurley.

WHEAT SHORTAGE AFFECTS NATION

War Bread in Use in Bulgaria as Result of Grain Scarcity; Food Dictator Directs.

SOFIA, Dec. 20 (AP)—Owing to the shortage of wheat, war bread is the rule in Bulgaria. White bread is almost prohibitive in price. Under the direction of the food dictator, re-established in Bulgaria six years after the war, the black bread is a mixture of wheat, rye and corn.

The scarcity of wheat is due in a large measure to the large amount of wheat turned over to Yugoslavia under the recent agreement to pay to that country 200,000,000 leva in addition to the Yugoslavian share in the general reparations for military requisitions. When it appeared a few weeks ago that Bulgaria would be unable to pay half of that amount in kind without running the risk of depriving her own population of the necessary amount of bread, Yugoslavia consented to accept half of that amount in kind in currency.

The feeding of the cities is placed under the charge of a food dictator in Sofia, who has subordinate food administrators in all the cities.

Under an order just published, the subordinate food administrators are instructed to provide for the feeding of their respective cities, even if they are obliged to purchase grain supplies at a price fixed by them, especially in cases where the dealers refuse to sell at the market prices.

Bread is sold at about twice the price which it brought when the present government came into power.

STEEL CREW LAYS HALF MILE DAILY

Work on Rogerson-Wells Line Continues Without Interrup- tion During Severe Cold.

A crew of about 50 workmen in the employ of the Oregon Short Line, is laying steel at Rogerson on the Rogerson-Wells line at the rate of one-half mile daily, according to word brought here Saturday evening by one of the workmen, who came here for medical attention for slight injury suffered in a minor accident Saturday afternoon.

The track now has been built to a point seven and one-half miles south of Rogerson, and, according to this workman, Engineer Elliott in charge of the work, has given assurance that the work will be continued without interruption provided the cost involved is not increased exorbitantly by reason of severe weather. Work is in progress on two rock cuts between Contact and the present terminus of the line, and rock work at the summit between Contact and Wells is in progress.

Laying of steel continued throughout last week in spite of severe weather, temperatures being recorded Thursday morning at 12 below and Friday morning at 22 below zero.

STUDEBAKER CORPORATION HAS INTERESTING STORY

An interesting story is that of the establishment, growth and development of the Studebaker Corporation from the humble beginning in 1852 to the present time as dealt with in a published volume, copies of which have recently been received in Twin Falls by the J. A. Barrett Auto company, local representatives, and others.

The Studebaker brothers and their father before them were wagon makers, blacksmiths and wood workers. They began business in a very small way at Ashland, Ohio, in 1852, later moving to South Bend, Indiana, at which place the house of Studebaker was permanently established and there is no doubt ever since.

The story of the trials and tribulations of the early life of the men who founded the business which has since developed into one of the great corporations of America, reads more like a page of fiction than a recital of cold facts. Hard work, frugal living, personal integrity and a horror of debt loom up as among the main characteristics of the forebears of the business. But, consistently and steadily, the business grew and with the entry of the corporation into the manufacture of automobiles its progress became an impetus which established new records almost from day to day.

When in 1892 the brothers, Harry and Clem Studebaker, opened for business in South Bend the plant equipment consisted of two forges and a cash capital of $68. Their first carriage was built in 1896. In 1898 they owned a building which was at once residence and factory, and which for those days was well equipped. From this point on their progress appears to have been steady, until today, while the Studebaker brothers have been dead, the corporation to which their name is attached has attained a development which renders the Studebaker name one of the best known in America.

OOMPHERS.

All classes, all sections, all racial strains, have joined in paying honor to Sam Gompers, the English Jew, American elgar maker and veteran labor leader. It is a deserved tribute to his character and usefulness.

Of Gompers' brains there is no question. His bitterest enemies will grant that, most recently. In him, often, America's foremost captains of industry met their intellectual match.

But brains alone, unsupported by moral qualities, are of little use. It was the will, the determination, the fighting power and the essential integrity back of those brains that made them effective. Gompers was a fiery idealist, fighting for labor as many a man of his type, in former ages, fought for a religious faith. Many have questioned the wisdom of Gompers' opinions and methods, but few who knew him have questioned his honesty and devotion to duty as he saw it.

There should be no question, at this time, when it is possible to take a calm survey of the leader's work during a remarkable period of industrial and social progress, that on the whole, Gompers' work has been useful and valuable.

He helped along a movement for labor organization which was probably inevitable, in some form or other, as was the business organization accompanying it. And he did much to give organized labor in America a form and spirit agreeable to American democracy and individualism, in contrast to the Socialistic form assumed by the movement in so many foreign countries.

It is due to him, more than to any other man, that American labor on the whole has yielded so little to the forces of destructive radicalism.

NAVAL COMPETITION.

There is a frenzied competition again in the building of warships, however that fact may be disguised. And thus the very thing aimed at, and until recently supposed achieved, by the Washington Arms Conference, is jeopardized.

Does all this elaborate discussion of navies in Congress and in the newspapers and magazines do any good? Apparently it only serves to inflame the spirit of competition. The public is told fervently how much stronger the Japanese navy and the British navy are than they ought to be, and how much weaker our navy is. The same sort of debate goes on in Japan and Great Britain, with regard to our navy and the navies of other nations. It is all "big armament" talk, and the method is precisely that by which the pre-war competition was fanned. If continued, it can lead only to far larger expenditures by tax-wary nations, to more ill-feeling on the part of nations now too friendly now, and possibly to new wars.

The American navy should be kept effective, or at reasonably near the size set by the agreed ratio. Our naval authorities say that the other powers have not exceeded their ratio. It should be, then, simply a matter of calm building on our part of such vessels as we need and as are permissible by the terms of the five-power naval treaty. Why all the excitement? If there is any question about the ratios being carried out in good faith, or if this frenzied argument and re-orientation continues, there should be another conference called to settle the matter. If feeling is developing now, and ill feeling is more dangerous than hostile warships, because it is the seed of wars.

FRENCH AND BRITISH DEBTS.

Regarding the proposed payment of the French debt to America, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the British Exchequer, says:

"Any payments made by our debtors in Europe to their creditors, in the United States should be accompanied by proportionate payments to Britain."

able criticism in the United States.

Whether this criticism is called for is questionable. It is to be remembered that Britain lent the other more money than America lent her, that France is Britain's chief debtor, that Britain alone of our big debtors has already settled with America, and that it will be hard for her to meet her obligations if her debtors ignore their obligations to her.

"These are matters of conscience for the United States," remarks the London Daily Mail. "The British people hate the whole controversy. But it is vital for them to raise it for their very existence is at stake. If we pay one billion pounds that we owe and lose two billion pounds that we are owed, then for every man here, as Mr. Bonar Law predicted on the eve of his death, the standard of living will be lowered for a generation."

It is awkward, however, for the United States government to take of ficial notice of such a controversy between Britain and France. It looks like a matter for the conscience of France, rather than America. All that may be reasonably expected of America is not to encourage France in doing anything which would cheat Britain out of payment.

Men and Women in the News of the Day

Above: MRS. MADELINE G. POLLACK; MARTIN H. GLYNN, Del.; C. T. JENKINS; & DISHOT C. H. DEESKE, etc.

MARTIN H. GLYNN, ex-governor of the state of New York, died suddenly at his home in Albany, following a brief visit to Boston.

BISHOP HENRY BRENT of the Protestant Episcopal church, who has devoted most of his life to fighting narcotics, has quit Geneva, Switzerland, in disgust, declaring the international conference on drugs was a disgraceful exhibition.

MRS. MADELINE OILDERSLIEVE POLLACK of New York, model for celebrated artist who married Leonard W. Pollack following love at first sight, will face her husband in court next month during her suit for separation and his for divorce.

PHOTOGRAPHS by radio have been sent from Washington to Medford Hills, Mass., on apparatus invented by O. Francis Jenkins.

"SINNERS IN HEAVEN"

(Conclusion.)

Barbara raised her head again. "Ah! Dear old Hugh! He has been splendid. Ah, his friendship—his struggle to—believe—His voice quavered.

"I know. And he, of everybody concerned, might with justice have been condemned."

They fell silent awhile, each knowing by their own joy, what it all meant to the friend who had lost.

A realization of what this return would mean to Mrs. Field combined with her own overwhelming joy to draw from the very depths of her heart a voiceless prayer not thanksgiving. In the hazy, darkened eyes that met her own, she saw the same look of almost reverent awe. Never had he seemed so gloriously alive, so radiant in spirit. Again she raised her hands to feel the features she had never thought to see again; then drew the dear head, with passionate tenderness, down to her breast, and clasped it there.

To both of them, beneath the superficial lightness of talk, this hour equalled in sacredness that of their marriage morning in the dawn. This held in it, also, the half-fearful joy of a resurrection. The past darkness, with the struggle towards the light, had left ineffaceable marks upon each soul.

"Can't we go back to the island?" she whispered at last.

"Some day." He raised his head and smiled. "Well, there, now and then, and live it all again! But our first jump is to Australia. I've been commissioned to rebuild the old bus. There's been an awful lot of interviewing and publicity since I got back ten days ago."

"Only ten days? And you've been to Darbury?"

"That's not all."

He looked at her with eyes which held something of their old inscrutability.

"Your relations showed unflattering surprise at what they termed my 'constancy' now we are rescued. Oh, how glad!"

"They would!" she cried, with indignation.

"The fear that we meant brazenly to defy the English law possessed them. They besought me to marry you 'properly, in a church.' Your aunt particularly insisted upon a Protestant church."

"Just like Aunt Mary!" She laughed rather bitterly. "I couldn't feel—more married!," she added, with the quick eye look he loved.

His gray eyes darkened, with a little catch of the breath his arms tightened. "There's one thing, therefore, which held him should arrive at his own death, the standard of living will be lowered for a generation."

passionate, dominating love, which had so often swept her away, poured forth and surrounded her; so that, panting and glowing, her individuality, after all the lonely travail, once more transfused, transformed into its own.

"So," he whispered, "we must have another wedding, my Beloved! But it cannot be more beautiful—more real—than the other in the dawn."

"With a little sobbing, tremulous kiss, she clung close. "If we had only every year in every land and every tongue," she murmured whimsically, "they would all seem beautiful to me."

The husband discreetly entered at last to lay the supper. She cast one comprehensive glance at the armchair, and her smiling face grew more radiant.

"We are to be married in the morning," Alan remarked.

Cornish people take life calmly. They do not lose their heads or forget their duties in any crisis.

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Treghern agreed brightly. "I'm sure I do hope you will both be happy. And—will you have eggs to breakfast, sir—or bacon?"

"Both—both!"

They smiled at each other when she left the room.

"Somebody must feed us," he observed, passing his fingers through her wavy curls. "Every little note has its niche."

Hugh sat long over a lonely breakfast, a few days later. The "old people" were away. The London paper, with its list of marriages, lay upon the table before him; but he stared away absently, through the window, without turning the pages.

Precisely, with gun and dogs, he stepped out into the raw February air, turning slowly down a lane. . . .

An hour later, followed closely by six puzzled brown eyes, he walked slowly up the pathway in the little wood where—some ago—he and Barbara had discussed their honeymoon. The gun still rested unwieldy within his arm, the cartridges untouched within their bag. . . .

Underfoot, the fir needles lay soft and damp with here and there fronds of sudden dead branches drooping upon them.

They turned their backs away a little, whispering their broken, murmuring, song; dropping, sometimes, splashes from their wet leaves, like tears, upon the drenched below. . . .

The world appeared gloomy, dead, sorrowful. It seemed impossible that, soon, the sap would run in the tall trees, the young green shoots, forth upon the hedger, spring—with its first myriad life—awake with the "singing of birds."

The unbidden gun dropped unheeded to the ground. . . . The six brown eyes questioned one another wonderingly; then looked back at the tweed-clad figure lying face downward, with head buried in his arms. . . .

At last Hugh, his favorite treacher, the most tender-hearted of friends, approached cautiously; sniffed; then gently licked what was visible of a much-loved cheek.

Great French Dictator Typical of His Race

Napoleon's character and personality are still under the microscope. One of the best of recent analysis of the great commander is "Napoleon," by the late minister of education, Mr. Flahar. He has made the French dictator illustrious by his phrases. Here, for instance, is a passage on Napoleon as a young man, portraying him as a turbulent example of the people from which he sprang.

"The Corsican bore a character for sobriety, courage and hardihood. Hate was for him a virtue, vengeance a duty, pardon an infamy. He felt the call of the clan like a Highlander, an Albanian or a Zulu, and was full of the pride and self-assurance common to all militant men who have never met a superior."

"Vigilant and astute in his judgment of character, he was a master of dissimulation save where passion broke in and spoiled the reckoning."

"His standard of honor forbade that, enjoyed hospitality and to the woman as the drudge of the household and field. In general his deportment was noted as grave and social. He was sparing of amusement, would sit at cards without a word and suffer torture without a cry; but when the seal of silence was once broken, language would stream from him like a torrent, an index of that uneasy, impatient, quarrelsome energy which was a common attribute of the race."

Probably Girl Never Forgot That Lesson

Stories have a way of accumulating about the memory of famous wife, and Donna Swift was no exception in this general rule, according to the San Francisco Argonaut. A board of Swift anecdotes recently unearthed includes the illustration of the dean's mania for closed doors. Swift's household hired his servants, but when they came into his employ he always told them there were only two rules to observe. One was always to shut the door after entering a room, the other, always to close the door after leaving the room.

On one occasion a maid asked the dean's permission to attend her sister's wedding, when he not only gave her permission, but lent her a horse upon which to make the journey, and another servant to accompany her. In the excitement of the moment the unfortunate girl forgot to close the door after her, and Swift, allowing time for her to get well away upon her journey, sent another servant post-haste to bring her back. In fear and trembling the poor girl presented herself before the dean, asking him what was wanted of her. "Only to shut the door," was the reply, "which you can resume your journey."

"I believe in a little praise," you know."

"I know you do, Your Honor," said Fairy Wondrous Secrets. "I will take along your messages."

"Tell them I send them one of my best laughs and chuckles," said Judge Fun. "You know my really intimate friends—by that I mean the ones who really know me—very well—all the friends—Judge."

"But they will like to have one of my best laughs, I'm sure. It will come in very usefully at one time or another."

"They will notice after they've used them and they will be surprised at their own sudden, big laugh. It will be the one from me."

"You can tell them I have red and white painted marks which go from my mouth to my ears so that people who are at either side of me know just how the Fairy Judge with the many laughs for myself and to spare."

"Yes," said Fairy Wondrous Secrets. "And I'll have to let them hear of the Court of Honor and the Court of Fun and have a Jury of twelve Joking Men decide who can be admitted to the Court."

Then the Fairy Wondrous Secrets met the Sunset Fairies and they were playing with great brooms.

Their brooms were of different colors and they were sweeping the sky and dipping their brooms into great jars of red and pink and red and blue and orange and lavender.

"We're making a sky-sweeping sunset tonight," they said. "You can tell them from the way it looks."

"But don't forget that we sent them our love to the children!"

Fairy Wondrous Secrets promised she wouldn't forget.

Then she met Polly, the parrot. Polly had almost lost her life in a storm at sea when an accident had happened to the boat.

In the excitement she had almost been forgotten, but when she cried for help they rushed to her, and Polly was saved along with every one else.

Polly was safe now in her zoo home. "Send them my love," Polly said, "and tell them never to forget how to talk. It is apt to be very useful."

And Fairy Wondrous Secrets hurried to the Dreamland King with all her messages for the children.

MESSAGES

"I'm taking all messages," said Fairy Wondrous Secrets.

"I want to give these messages to the Dreamland King," said the children.

"But I am taking them all now, I am acting as a Captain and then he will give them around for me."

Fairy Wondrous Secrets had just left Trembling Mountain where the Mountain Fairies all sent their love to all the children everywhere in the world.

"We want to send our heartiest and best wishes," said the members of the Storm Family. There were Madame Snow and Mrs. Wind and Prince Sleet and the Icicle King, King Snow, the Slush cousins and many others.

They were all feeling their very best for they had been having a long rest. "We want to send our nicest, dearest wishes," said the Tide Twins.

And the Foam Brothers sent their greetings to their best and heartiest wishes, too.

"Tell them," they said, "that we have made ourselves strong through so much exercising."

Mr. Wind and Mr. Sky sent their love and kisses; some of them were very beautiful kisses which just brushed the cheeks of children as they walked along in the beautiful cool air.

Judge Just Praise sent his very kindest regards.

"Tell them," said the Judge, "that I think they're a splendid lot."

"In fact, I think they're fine. They are so square and honest and I can't help saying so."

"I believe in a little praise," you know."

TREND DOWNWARD IN MARKET PRICE OF WHEAT

CHICAGO, Dec. 20 (AP)—Notwithstanding that almost at the outset to day wheat jumped to new high price records for the season the subsequent trend was downward. Profit taking sales of liberal volume acted as a weight on the market and so, too, did apparent absence of any considerable fresh export business. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish (1 3/4c lower, May $1.75 3/4 to 1.75 7/8, and July $1.40 3/4 to 1.40 7/8, with corn 1 5/8 to 2c down; oats 1 3/4 to 7/8 off, and provisions varying from unchanged to 5 cents decline.

Much of the decline which lifted the wheat market during the initial trading was evidently due to reports from Buenos Aires that heavy crop damage had been suffered in southwestern Argentina, so much so that a large amount of acreage would be harvested enough for seed. As soon, however, as prices had surpassed former top levels the efforts to realize profits became too great burden and despite numerous rallies no sharp upward trend was affected.

In addition to the disappointment about the size of today's export demand, another handicap to friends of higher prices was that wheat was weak on feed grain values. The wheat market was disturbed by spreading operations between July wheat and May wheat and between July wheat and May rice. Most of the spreads in volving selling of the July delivery of wheat. Taken as a whole the character of trading was a good deal more mixed than has been the rule of late.

Increasing sales of corn, together with selling on the part of several big houses that recently have been buyers, kept corn and oats acting heavy throughout the day.

Provisions were easy owing to the decline in the corn market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Stocks were in brisk demand during today's brief session at the market, despite the continued enthusiasm of wire service to western cities, and prices moved irregularly higher in the face of a large volume of week-end profit taking. The general industrial average was lifted to the highest level since 1919 with about a score of issues breaking through their previous high prices for the year.

Bullish enthusiasm was created by the continued ease of money rates and the reports of expanding industrial merchandising activities. With few exceptions, selling orders were well absorbed, net losses in most of the popular issues being held to fractions.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—The price of raw sugar was unchanged today at 4.77, duty paid. Sales of 5000 bags of Cuban for December shipment to an operator were reported.

In raw sugar futures trading was light, but the market was firm. The close was one to seven points net higher. December closed 3.65, March 3.88, May 3.90, July 3.98.

Refined sugar prices were unchanged at 7.15 to 7.30 for fine granulated.

TAXPAYERS ON HAND WITH CASH TO MEET BILLS

Collections at End of Period for Payment of First Half of Taxes Amount to Nearly 50 Per Cent of Total.

Out of a total tax bill of approximately $2,070,000 for the current year, one-half of which is required to be paid before Monday to escape penalty charge, Twin Falls county taxpayers had paid approximately $412,000, according to records of current tax receipts at the office of the county treasurer and tax collector at the close of business Saturday evening. In addition to the total of receipts thus accounted for tax payments made by mail bearing postmark of Saturday or today are to escape the penalty charge, and it is believed that remittances received by this means will amount to several thousand dollars.

There was actually collected between Friday noon and Saturday noon a total of $81,462.33, on account of current taxes. There was received during this period also between $10,000 and $12,000 on account of delinquent taxes.

Records Similar.

With a total tax bill approximately the same as last year at this time the record collections at the close of the period for payment without penalty last year was within a few thousand dollars of the total recorded this year, the larger amount being paid this year.

Numbers of taxpayers at the collector's office Saturday and during the

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PROGRAM IS PLANNED; CANTATA TO BE GIVEN

A. G. Pearson. The program, which marks the Presbyterian church observance of Christmas, will begin promptly at 7:15 o'clock.

Mrs. H. C. Reynolds will have charge of the cantata, which will have a cast of 10, and James E. Hall will have charge of the music program. Those in the cast include Miss Dorothy Barger and Alice Taylor; Clifford Evans, Lawrence Hall, Wallace Caldwell, Kenneth Douglas, Ted Williams, Robert Dawson, Robert McClure and Frank Peavey. Offering taken will be given to aid local charity work.

preceding several days was not as great in former years. Recent severe weather is believed to have been a factor in making for fewer taxpayers appearing in person last week to square accounts with the state, county and municipal governments. Many who were kept away by reason of cold and stormy weather are expected to make remittances by mail within the time limit for payment without penalty.

ADVISES COMMISSIONERS TO STAND BY TAX LEVY

Valuation placed by the Idaho Power company on its holdings at Upper Salmon Falls in a report made August 27, last, to the state public utilities commission was incorporated by Prosecuting Attorney J. W. Taylor in an opinion given Saturday to the board of Twin Falls county commissioners wherein the commissioners were advised that a disputed tax assessment against this property should stand.

Valuation of $92,500 was placed by S. Clad Stewart, Twin Falls county assessor, upon the property in question which was listed as "hydraulic power works and miscellaneous equipment." The company denied that the property had a value for purposes of tax assessment, and applied for refund of the entire amount assessed against it. The attorney referred in his opinion to the company's report to the utilities commission setting forth that its hydraulic works at Upper Salmon Falls was valued at $75,500 and miscellaneous equipment valued at $8000. The opinion was concluded with the attorney's statement that "the situation is such that the nature of the rights involved ought to be determined in some way, by court action if necessary."
