Representatives Against Unified Service, But Would Draft Bill Providing Harmonious Organization

DRY LAW GETS HOUSE ACTION

Building Program Considered

—The program, as endorsed by Secretary Dwight Davis, contemplates a increased expenditure of $20,000,000 annually for the air service and at the end of five years would provide 2,000 new airplanes. The house naval committee recently approved a five-year program for the naval air service which involved a total expenditure of $75,000,000 and was designed to provide 1,000 new planes at the end of the period.

Against Unified Service
The military committee voted eleven to ten against a bill to establish a department of national defense.

which land, sea and air armaments would be given equal status, was 16 to 5 against a unified air service. The vote against a separate air corps in the army, which was endorsed by Major General Mason M. Patrick, arm air chief, was 15 to 6.

A bill sponsored by the war department, to carry out recommendations of the president's air board, also was rejected. 10. Chairman Mason of the committee, explained this plan was rejected on the ground that it did not go far enough in providing changes that a majority of members considered necessary for an adequate service.

Expansion in Personnel

Under the war department plan announced today the army air service will be increased to 100,000 men.

ing 2,200 planes would possess personnel of 1,030 regular army officers on active duty and 15,000 lited men, including 300 flying cadets. The expansion would not be effected through reductions in other branches of the army.

Mr. Davis, in announcing this program, said it had been supplied to the department by Chairman Morin, and that he was drafted with the recommen-

NOT PROHIBITED SAYS ATTORNEY

Baseball May Be Played on Sabbath Day Under Twin Falls Ordinance, Is Opinion Handed Down by Stephan.

Sunday baseball is not prohibited by any provision of Idaho statute or Twin Falls city ordinance, according to an opinion given Wednesday evening by Frank L. Stephan, city attorney, in response to an inquiry on the part of citizens who are taking an active part in an effort to obtain for Twin Falls a berth in the proposed Utah-Ideaho class C baseball.

The city attorney's opinion is based on settling questions as to the status of Sunday baseball under Idaho law, which, although it prohibits the carrying on of certain amusements on the Sabbath, does not prohibit the playing of baseball on that day.

Before completing his examination of the statute and ordinance, Stephan explained, Mr. Stephan stated that there was no apparent prohibition against Sunday baseball in the ordinance, which was passed by the city council in 1935.

He stated that the ordinance was passed in 1935, and that it was not amended since that time.

MANY ENTRIES IN STOCK SHOW

Annual Exhibition of Pure-Bred
Livestock at Salt Lake Now
Assured Variety of Display.

SALT LAKE, March 3. (AP)—Entries in all departments of the ninth annual international livestock show at Salt Lake March 27 to 31, with the exception of purebred beef cattle, are far ahead of entries of the same time last year. J. H. Munterfield, general manager of the show told members of the livestock committee of the Twin Falls chamber of commerce today. Thus far, cattle entries average the sixth on the list, a good display of which, he said, the manager said.

The committee held today a consultation from C. S. Potter, of Salt Lake, president of the Utah State Holstein-Friesian Breeders' association and owner of Sarah Ann Highland, Utah, all American Holstein cow, in which he assured the show management of the full support of breeders in the Utah valley and northern Utah.

With about half of the needed funds raised to finance the show, the livestock committee found it desirable to suspend activities until the Hughesham disaster relief fund had been obtained. The livestock committee is today resumed this week.

Sampson Trail Is Subject of Story

Article in Current Sunset Magazine Gives Interesting Account of Work of Idaho Man.

"He says it with orange paint," is the headline of the article in the current number of Sunset Magazine, which details the various steps by which C. B. Sampson, of the Sampson Truck Company, found himself listed as a trailmaker as well as a hundred merchandise man.

Mr. Sampson has been a resident of Idaho for many years, with business interests in a number of towns. Last fall he opened a store in Boise, Idaho.

He arrived here yesterday for a brief business visit, leaving in the evening for Portland.

The article dealing with the "Orange Trail," better known in these parts as the Sampson trail, follows the trail, both literally and figuratively in the history of Charles B. Sampson of Boise, Idaho, who has suffered tons of brilliant orange paint along the highways of the Northwest to guide aright the thousands of tourists who annually visit the state's wooded lands. Sampson has spent a fortune and a generous portion of his time in marking more than five thousand miles of highway for the convenience of the public.

And all because Sampson, while on his fourteen-month tour of central Idaho in 1920, lost his bearings and missed his destination by several miles. He immediately thought that if he, who was familiar with the region, should be confused by lack of road-makers, the plight of tourists must be overwhelming.

The first trail, painted in the summer of 1920, was a miniature experiment. Orange paint, which is the distinguishing mark of the "Orange Trail," is the system of trails has been christened.

From the "Orange Trail," Sampson has traveled to the "Purple Trail," Idaho's summer playground. Four years later this embryonic path had developed into a network of distinct highways, clearly marked, that form a network throughout the Northwest, traversing the states of Montana, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada and even reaching far north into Canada. One cannot tour the Northwest without traveling the Orange Trail.

The expansion and upkeep of the trail now require the services of a crew of three men who travel in a specially equipped truck. The trail is inspected regularly by the public, who can find the orange marked highways in the territory covered by the Orange route, and tourists' enthusiastic appreciation of the service, has led Sampson into the actual business of trail-making, demanding expert attention. The venture undertaken in fun has developed into a serious hobby, as well as an expensive one, Sampson explains that it is nothing more than a hobby, as it has never been used for advertising purposes and no mention of his business is ever made in connection with it.

"It's just my contribution to public service," he declares. He receives "fun" letters from every part of the continent expressing appreciation of the trail with the orange freckles. Travelers from points as widely separated as New York and Los Angeles, Wisconsin and Old Mexico, write him.

Sampson owns and operates the largest retail music firm in the Idaho mountain country. He came to Boise in 1906, starting a store in the wall music store. Previous to that year he had been a roving newspaper man in the east and middle west. The first newspaper man by training, a music merchant and troubadour by accident and a sportsman by avocation and inclination.
