(By the Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, May 29.—Farm relief, foremost in the House since defeat of the Haugen-rice stabilization bill, became active again today in the House agricultural committee, when Representative McLaughlin, republican, Nebraska, requested early consideration in a modified form of the Haugen measure.

The McLaughlin proposal would retain the equalization fund on the basis of agricultural commodities as a means of financing disposition of the surplus. The fee would be assessed immediately on all products, including cotton, which the Haugen bill would have exempted for two years.

McLaughlin told the committee that his bill had been endorsed by delegates of the farm organizations that support of the Haugen measure, most of them from the corn belt. Farm relief received only brief mention in the senate today, but during the discussion, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, asserting that "nothing was no longer a virtue," informed his colleagues that if the migratory bird bill now occupying attention, was not the product of nearly next week, he would fall up his agricultural measure and insist that it be made the order of business.

(By the Associated Press.) SALT LAKE CITY, May 29.—When the antelope isle herd of buffalo will be killed, the largest herd that has been killed in the United States since the days when Colonel Bill Cody had the contract to furnish beef for the United States army.

The herd was captured some months ago by Leonard whose original plan was to ship the animals to his ranch at Fort Pierre, however, William Powell, a full blooded Sioux Indian, long employed by Leonard, has reported after some shrewd study of the herd that they are "too wild to be caught and shipped."

It would be necessary to ship the animals by land from the island to insulate them by ear to their proposed home, where they would be added to the country's buffalo herd. "South Dakota," said W. K. Kirkpatrick and W. L. Lingens, representing Leonard, have been here for several days arranging details of the hunt with officials of the antelope island livestock company, who sold the animals because the herd had become too numerous and interfered with their livestock activities.

Several weeks ago Governor H. Derr endeavored to have purchased at least a portion of the herd, which figured several years ago in the filming of a motion picture story of the early west. It was stated that 50 head will be spared.

RELIEF LIKELY FOR STOCK MEN

Idaho Wool Growers Find Comfort in Statement of Secretary's Representative.

Dan C. Casement, personal representative of Secretary Jardine, does not believe that grazing permits in national forests are worth as much as private leases of similar character outside the forests, he told a meeting of Idaho stockmen at Hailley last week.

Mr. Casement had been commissioned by Secretary Jardine to learn the sentiment of stockmen in regard to the Reelford report which, if adopted, would fix grazing charges in national forests on a higher basis than those obtaining.

Mr. Casement at the Hailley meeting quoted Senator Kendrick's statement that the forest grazing permits are worth about as much as much as private leases.

Idaho wool growers found encouragement in Mr. Casement's attitude as indicated by his statements. In regard to the Hailley meeting the Weekly Bulletin of the Idaho Wool Growers' association says:

Dan Casement Visits Idaho

On May 19 a number of the members of the advisory board of the Idaho Wool Growers' association met at Hailley in the offices of the chairman of the advisory board, Mr. J. C. W. Walker, to discuss the much discussed Reelford report.

M. R. Bennett, forest supervisor of the Reelford national forest, introduced Dan C. Casement, who explained that he was there at the request of Secretary Jardine to get the opinion of the stockmen on the ground and to make a detailed constructive criticism of the report to the Secretary by July 1.

Mr. Casement explained in detail his qualifications for this work and mentioned several matters which he had already made up his mind. He did this to let the growers know in a fair manner what his position was before starting the discussion.

The forest service, Mr. Casement stated, had always been a good thing and his feelings in this regard had only been strengthened by his trips around the country. He also stated that he believed that the forest service had performed a big service and would always be necessary to administer the forest lands and water sheds of the United States. The forests on a whole had been pretty well administered and the administration was improving.

The Reelford report Mr. Casement considered a wonderful piece of work in its thoroughness and detail, but that it was not feasible and that there were possibly some phases that had been overlooked and without doubt some just criticism could be made of it. He asked the growers to be frank with him regarding what they thought of the effect on the industry in Idaho.

Many of the audience spoke on the

Mr. Casement concluded by saying definitely that he did not believe that permits within the forest were worth as much as private leases of similar character without the forest. He said that he had asked Senator Kendrick what he considered the relative value of the leases within and without the forests to be, and he had said that he believed the forest permits to be worth about so much as much as

Hymns Form Links

The Old and the New worlds have been linked by hymns. Doctor Reeves tells how American history opened with the singing of a Christian hymn.

On the evening of September 25, 1492, one of the companions of Columbus saw what he thought to be land lying dimly in the west. . . . From all three of the ships, as Columbus himself gives the account in his diary, there rose the sound of the old "Gloria in Excelsis Deo." We learn that later in the history of Christian America "The May Psalm Book" was printed in the modest dwelling of the first president of Harvard, President Dwight of Yale, who was a chaplain in the Revolutionary army, edited and hardly wrote what was for years the leading hymn and psalm book in the country. In 1821, at Charleston, S. C., John Wesley, an Anglican missionary, published the first hymn book of the Church of England.—W. M. Letts in Late Review.
