BABY SPILLED DURING TURMOIL—Police routed a faction of New York garment workers when they attempted to stage an unauthorized demonstration. In the scramble, a baby was thrown from his carriage and the mother knocked over. She is shown getting to her feet as the excitement subsided. (International Newsreel)

VALENTINO'S EFFECTS AUCTIONED—Persons from all walks of life gathered at the Los Angeles home of the late Rudolph Valentino, movie star, when his possessions were auctioned. This shows the actor's auto, which went to a big oil and gas man from Oklahoma for $7,000. (International Newsreel)

"PERFECT" PROFILE—European artists have declared that Joan Zockton, of London, possesses the most nearly perfect profile in England.

CO-ED ARRANGED AS BANDIT—Rebecca Bradley Rogers (arrow), twenty-two, was arraigned in court at Austin, Texas, as the girl who held up and robbed a bank at Buda, Texas, of $1,000. She was secretary to Governor-Elect Dan Moody and a student at the University of Texas. (International Newsreel)

MODERNIST MOVE—"Oh, doughnut tell me these are do nuts!" exclaimed the cameraman as he took a picture of Ylne Gillespie, of Los Angeles, holding the bakers' newest conception of sinkers. (International Newsreel)

MINISTER—Rev. Charles H. Urban (in white shirt), a student at the University of Pennsylvania, was a candidate for the wrestling team. He is shown in practice with the coach.

CAMBRIDGE SECOND TEAM BEATS FIRST IN PRACTICE—This shows the finish of a race between the first and second teams of Cambridge, part of the training for the annual contest with Oxford in the Thames. Note the man in the nearest boat keeling over with exhaustion. (International Newsreel)

RUNNER—ONCE!—Miss Nellie Lake, once a participant in running events in San Francisco, sailed for a trip to Manila. (International Newsreel)

"I cross with risk that my boy, if Mary wants me," said Claude. "I'll stand on the landing steps and watched them move away. Mary had agreed to meet Claude at the Academy at three the next afternoon. As Claude turned to direct the gondolier, he heard a whispering voice.

"Come twenty minutes earlier," he said. "I'll be waiting for you." "But as the gondolier floated away, he wasn't sure that Mary had heard him. When she had said good night, at the doorway of the Royal Danubian, Mary found it was later than she thought and with a little apprehension feeling went directly to her own room. There was a light still burning in Polly's room, and reluctantly Mary opened the door between their rooms and looked in.

"Come in, Mary," called her mother, or pretending to read, and before she could reach her for reading after a headache, Polly began. "To save trouble, Mary, and to avoid unnecessary conversation you were not with the Farleys tonight, and looked in. "Come in, Mary," called her mother, or pretending to read, and before she could reach her for reading after a headache, Polly began.

"I went to Father's hotel, and dined with him and Mr. Carter." The whole truth seemed what the situation called for. Polly Johnson gasped and leaned forward. She had gotten more than she bargained for. "Your father," said Claude. "Yes," said Mary demurely. "I like him, tremendously, Mother."

"I like him, tremendously, Mother." "How long have you known him—how long?" "Since the day before we left New York—a fact him in the district and went to see him there; the London."

CHAPTER XIII
In the morning, having breakfasted in their respective rooms, as was their custom, Mary, dressed for the street, came to her mother's door.

"At the night of Mary's pale face, Polly's heart misgave her. She knew that her own face was pale, but she was able to say, in the chilliest of tones: "If you have made any plan to meet your father this morning, I'll be waiting for you."

"No," Mary answered in a tone equally lifeless. "We do not meet until three o'clock at the Academy." "At this time, suppose you go to the clubhouse of San Francisco this morning. I want to see the Gellish Madonna there, and we can walk."

"It had all the appearance of a phrase being recurring. Although Polly held her head high, she was suffering. The Polly Johnson, who smiled faintly at any remark and stared unadvisedly into the recesses of the hallway, was a woman fighting desperately against a terrified realization of what loneliness might mean to a middle-aged woman who had not looked ahead or contemplated it. A hundred times she caught her breath and ran to her quarters, ready for any compromise that Claude would force her to make.

"Claude Davis might have guessed something of Polly's plight and how she felt. He had caught her in a field, and come through it while, like the sturdy soul he was, had Polly but known it, here, in Venice, was a woman fighting desperately against a terrified realization of what loneliness might mean to a middle-aged woman who had not looked ahead or contemplated it.

"I thought he was a real and very friendly desire to help, and also to share Mary. But Polly, shuddering at the thought of lonely years without Mary's companionship, turned away with equal dislike from the thought of sharing Mary and the grocery shop, with Claude."

"How could Mary conceive that her mother, so long distrustful and resentful of any emotion save the maternal, could turn with relief to the thought of cold, circumspiced Loren Rangely, who carried with him the same air as remembered Claude represented to Polly all the primitive emotions, with the disagreeable background of a shop."

Price-Upturns Feature Day's Trading in Chicago Pit; All Grains Close Steady.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6 (AP)—Price of grain formed the rule today in grain markets with corn the leader. Reports that the corn harvest was discovered in Illinois were largely responsible and wheat exports are doing business notwithstanding that domestic values are above world parity.

Chicago trading also showed increased activity, with big speculators among the chief buyers. Word that the American corn harvest was already in the hands of the Illinois corn belt, furnished a new incentive to wheat and soon gave a decided lift to the market.

On the floor, however, much selling to realize profits developed and local prices were not isolated. Active trading in the western wheat of the year—bushels—was reported on the market on the basis of a comparison with any other commodity.

There have been many expectations and predictions are renewed that Chicago arrivals of corn this season would be the best in years.

Wheat prices were helped upward by export business in red winter wheat. There was a hard winter at the Gulf of Mexico. Advances in freight rates from the southern hemisphere and higher exchange rates from Argentina, also contributed to the rise.

There was also talk that little wheat was apparent of which accounts for the rise. It is reported that a shipping boat was over other domestic markets.

There were quiet but inclined to sympathy with corn. Rye showed a somewhat strength, ascribed to approved export demand.

There was a firmer out on account of national banks.
