At Shoshone, where teams of Jerome, Hagerman and Shoshone high schools were to vie for track and field honors yesterday, it was found necessary to plan on holding the event early next week.

The Burley-Albion normal meet, Burley school officials announced last night, will be held at the Cascia county fairgrounds Monday at 2 P. M., providing the field is in good condition.

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES PHOENIX, WING AND PHOENIX, NEW YORK, CHICAGO, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE.

SOUND PRINCIPLE Addressing a meeting of Grangers in Idaho Falls the other day, Joe P. Marshall, one of the Twin Falls country's first settlers and a successful potato grower for many years, gave expression to a sound principle of business policy as applied to his particular field.

"One acre of potatoes properly planted will make you; ten acres badly planted will break you," he declared.

"There can be no question but that a concentration of intelligence and effort upon a single enterprise is likely to lead to success, whereas haphazard, scattered activity dealing with one large enterprise or a number of enterprises almost inevitably spells ruin.

"Don't put all your eggs in one basket, was an old saying, but it wasn't sound advice. Much better was the suggestion of one of America's outstanding industrialists and financiers, who said, 'Put all of your eggs in one basket—and then watch that basket.'

Something of that idea has been applied by Mr. Marshall to the business of potato growing.

It might well be applied to many other activities.

A LOSS The world can ill afford to lose young men of the calibre of the late Parker E. Brannin whose tragic death has occasioned a distinct sense of personal loss among Twin Falls people who have been privileged to know him since he came here last September.

A newspaper man by heredity, training and environment, Parker Brannin was an exemplification of the best that character implies. His work conscientiously was marked by a high order of capability and conscientious devotion to the high standards of his calling, while his personality was one of engaging modesty and cheerfulness.

The newspaper business and the world at large can ill spare such men.

BITTER OIL BREW The Teapot Dome conspiracy, at last ends in a legal punishment. The tea has brewed long in that pot. A bitter drink now is poured for Harry Sinclair.

It happens that, in as many another case of tardy justice in these latter years, this punishment is indirect. Sinclair goes to jail not for corrupting an officer of the United States government, but for denying the authority of the United States Senate by refusing testimony. The end is the same.

Without any special degree granted, Sinclair, the American public now feels a little better about the whole mess. Possibly other conspirators, too, will yet draw some share of punishment for seeking to steal the public domain.

The Senate also feels better. It is established by the highest court that Congress has the power of impeachment. Witnesses summoned before either house to testify in a public matter must testify. It is well to have that fact perfectly understood.

STAINED GLASS A churchman criticizes Dr. Einstein's relativity theories as "hogged speculation producing universal doubt about God and his creation, and cloaking the ghastly apparition of atheism," which is very severe language.

Dr. Einstein, urged to reply, says that he is altogether disinclined to enter into a controversy on the subject. That is just as well. Religious-scientific controversies get nowhere. And possibly for a very curious reason. Possibly because both sides are right—according to their light, and as far as they go. Shelley wrote: "The One remains, and the One changes and passes. Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly. Life, like a dome of many-colored glass, Stains the white radiance of Eternity Until Death tramples it to fragments." There are many views, many angles, but perhaps one truth. We see differ-ently according to our training and capacity. We are all looking through our own little pig-saw pieces of the stained-glass window of life.

A New Yorker at Large

G. D. SEYMOUR NEW YORK, April 19 (AP)—When Father Murphy, director of a Fifth avenue merchant, sailed for London to become the bride of John Stoney, nephew of the "Evis" and the author, he found among such usual good-bow gifts as books, fruits and flowers a pair of live armadillos.

Not quite certain what one would do with such a pair of live armadillos, he gave them away, just before sailing time, to two of the friends who had come down with him to the pier.

Subsequent reports upon their welfare are that both are thriving in New York apartments as domestic pets. There is no reason why they shouldn't. If their present custodians follow the full directions for their care and feeding posted upon the box in which they were delivered.

A company which manufactures armadillos has done away with the animals alive sometimes, at $25 apiece, to wags who enjoy the joke of giving one to somebody else.

Imperial Survival The custodians of New York's general postoffice have decided not to try to keep the ceiling decorations historically accurate.

It was reported in this column a few days ago that the ceiling was to be done over in order to bring up to date the national emblems of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia, placed there before the war.

But postal officials have determined that they will not temporarily replace them with the emblems in their original state, and after 11 years the painted canvas coverings which were placed over the ceiling decorations in 1917 are to be removed.

Present Shell Sawdust Boys are selling a thousand bags of peanuts a night up and down the aisles of the old People's theatre in the Bowery, where the old-fashioned American "chess and check" game is being revived in the 1920s.

And what the crowd has gone home the shells are gathered up and sold to sawdust manufacturers, who use the ground shells as adulterants in some sort of sawdust, as is also used to spread over butcher shop and barroom floors.

Thus the Bowery revivists have discovered a source of profit unthought of by the sponsors of the Hoboken scene revival, who won't let the customers eat anything during the performance, except the crackers of shells down on the floor.

Broadways and its sidewalks are overrun this spring with shaggy salesmen selling socks and stockings at six pairs for a dollar. They demonstrate the quality of their wares by pulling the fingerless flies through the silk, or twisting the sock into a ball and holding a light paper upon it.

The industry isn't born because it is rolled too thin to be squeezed by so pink a flannel. And it is resistant to the pink flannel of the "Fingerless Fly" advertiser not that it is well made, but rather that it is very loosely woven.

A Washington Bystander

By Kyrke L. Simpson

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP)—It was not particularly surprising that Postmaster General Walter Folger Brown should be depicted as the new broom of the Hoover cabinet.

His chief claim to fame arises from the elaborate plan for reorganization of government departments, which he evolved under the sponsorship of President Harding, who called him to Washington for the task in 1921.

There was much indignation among house Democrats at the time that the administration had gone out of Congress to find a man for that job.

Plan Failures The Brown reorganization plan, eight years later, shows not much accomplishment in the way of consolidation and inter-departmental transfers of functions.

Congress proved a stumbling block to its further successful execution. The chief difficulty was Mr. Brown's idea of welding the army, navy and air forces together under a single defense department.

In 1922 Brown told White House press representatives he would be "hanged" if this was not done. By March, 1923, however, he was announcing that work on the reorganization scheme was being postponed indefinitely.

No doubt his amazement at failure of the defense industry scheme has had time to abate in the six years since his departure. In 1922 Brown told White House press representatives he would be "hanged" if this was not done.

More often, however, because the methods used at home are quite different from those at school, the child is confused which, instead of facilitating the child's learning, places obstacles in his path.

But there are other equally important reasons why the pre-school child should not be started on his formal education, progress of which is more and more likely to come to recognize that far too much emphasis has been laid on the academic side of education.

They maintain that this is especially harmful during the early years. Indeed, many feel that children, particularly gifted ones, should not be taught to read until they are eight years old.

Recent investigations have shown that when the process of learning to read is delayed until the eighth year, children master in two months what it takes them two years to learn in the usual school.

Not only is learning to read a positive waste of time for the child under six, but it actually is harmful. It diverts his energies from the proper outlet, his first hand experience, to a second hand one of performing an arbitrary, meaningless task which fills no real need.

The best possible preparation for any sort of education is a happy childhood of rich and vigorous play experiences, and a mind innocent of a B C.

It still is common to measure a child's mental ability entirely in terms of his precocity in such matters as reading and number work.

Parents expect to have their children shine when they reach school, often begin to teach them their A B Cs and their numbers at home. Sometimes this gives the child a false sense of achievement, and when the child seems bright and giving him a lead during the first months of school.

THE GUMPS - A PICTURE NO ARTIST CAN PAINT

COUNT LUCKNER - THE Sea Devil

Copyright by Doubleday, Doran & Co.

"Well," I said to my boys, "I will pick out some nice deserted island where there will be no hand raised against us and no wireless to call the crew, and we will get water and some kind of vegetables and maybe shoot some game and have a fine shore leave. Then, after we have rested up, what do you boys, and away for more adventure."

Buccaneering in the Pacific, with only three ships sunk in five months, seemed much too unprofitable. I planned that, after a brief sojourn on some peaceful South Sea island, we would sail for the Antipodes. There we would destroy the English whaling stations and all larks at South Georgia, sink a few ships, capture one on which to slip our prisoners, and if we got away safely, continue our cruise in the prosperous waters of the Atlantic.

Our first plan was to sail direct to one of the larger Cook Islands. But we gave that up for fear of finding a wireless station there that might give us away. We did not want to move east of our present longitude, for that would have taken us through the trade winds and compelled us to use our motor. It was necessary to save the engine as much as possible and not have it wear out on us. We hoped we would need it for further captures and escapes.

Mopelia, one of the Society Islands, some geographers include it in the Sandwiches, rests on a volcanic cone for our purpose. It was a French possession, not so far as we knew, uninhabited. It had those benefits of the South Seas so fantastically beautiful and so unward for the sailor to approach. Only seldom does he find one with a decent harbor, and in this world of wind and currents more treacherous.

On the morning of July 29, we sighted Mopelia and steamed toward it. Wonderful when I try to describe its beauties. From the blue ocean rise a masses of white sand, the sunlight glows in the green. It somehow even seems to turn the sunlight green. Against the dark blue of the sea and the light blue of the sky, the sunlight seems to be drawing the green island out of the water, and the soft south wind carries the scent of flowers far to sea. It is the resting of the island and we inhale it deeply.

Here was a typical coral atoll—the kind of dream about a circular reef, studded with waving palms and within the reef a lovely placid lagoon. The coral shore was snow white, and within the terraces of sand, the coral shone like a sparkling jewel set in an alabaster rind, like emeralds set in ivory. The waves were breaking on the water. The shallower ones were white or pale green, and as you peered deeper into the water you saw every conceivable tint of green and blue, sea green, emerald green, blue green, azure blue, sapphire blue, blue, violet.

As sailing passed and nearer that alluring coral shore we saw—flowers among the palms, flowers of all colors and immense numbers of orchids. The hues of the flowers were reflected in the water over the white coral that depended and turned green. Within the circular reef the lagoon seemed fully as deep as the sea outside, only at perfect peace and smooth like a mirror. It would have made a perfect anchorage for us, save that it had one entrance so narrow that only a small boat could pass through it.

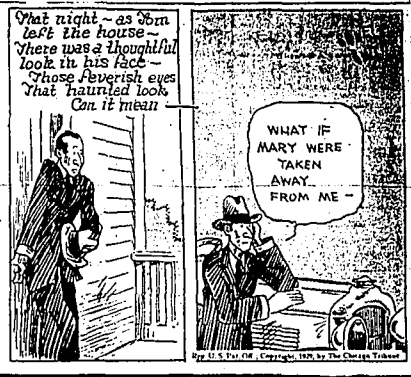

A strong current ran through the opening. We cast our anchor on the coral and tethered our ship to it with a long cable. The pull of the current kept her far enough offshore. I was afraid, for a while, that a shift of the wind might blow her on the reef, but we saw, after a while, that she had dragged anchor. If the current were strong enough to keep her from blowing ashore, leaving several men aboard as a watch, we went on land for a glorious shore leave. Sailors, officers, prisoners, and all were appointed as the time and place for proving the Will of Paul Charles E. Knall deceased, and for hearing the application of Clyde E. Knall for the guardianship of Hugh E. Holloway of letters testamentary, when and where any person interested may appear and contest the same.

Dated April 11th, 1929. (SEAL) C. A. BAILEY, Clerk of the Probate Court. Sweeney and Sweeney, Attorneys for Applicant.

OKLAHOMA MAN MAY DIRECT TWIN FALLS COUNTY HEALTH UNIT

County Commissioners Have Recommendation for Appointment of Dr. D. M. Cowgill For Position

Dr. David M. Cowgill, Oklahoma City, has been recommended for appointment as health officer in charge of Twin Falls county's full time health unit, which is to be organized under the state public health service and which will be the first health unit in the state.

Appointment of Dr. Cowgill has been recommended to the county commissioners by Dr. P. W. Cuvington, Salt Lake City, representative of the Rockefeller Foundation, which, with the United States public health service, will operate the department of public welfare, and cooperate with the county in the establishment and maintenance of the health unit.

Make Appropriations
Appropriations totaling $10,000 annually have been made available for maintenance of the health unit. This unit will be composed of the health officer, two nurses and one sanitary inspector.

Dr. Cowgill was employed for three years as health officer of Kay county, Oklahoma, health unit, and now is associated with the Oklahoma public health department. He was graduated from the Washington university school of medicine, St. Louis, after receiving his bachelor of science degree from Washburn university, Topeka, Kansas. Upon completion of his internship at a leading Topeka hospital, he was selected to assume charge of the cooperative health unit for Kay county. Prior to assuming his duties in that county, he was sent to Alabama where he spent several months assisting and observing the work of several well conducted health units.

Mrs. Cowgill, prior to her marriage, was an efficient public health nurse on the staff of the Kansas state health department. Dr. Cowgill is a brother of Paul E. Cowgill, Twin Falls News advertising manager.

WELCH MAKES OFFER ON PLACE OF TRIAL

State Commissioner of Agriculture Takes New Step in Lawsuit for Damages

Tending toward decision of the place for trial of a suit for $50,000 damages instituted by Carl L. DeLong, Twin Falls potato dealer, for alleged conspiracy to injure his business and reputation, John S. Welch, Idaho commissioner of agriculture, and George Tucker, employe of state department of agriculture, two of the defendants have in a district court here a proposed agreement to stipulate.

They offer to agree to stipulate with DeLong's attorneys that the suit shall be tried in Ada county and not elsewhere provided the Idaho Falls Potato Growers' association and Fred Oustation, Idaho Falls, co-defendants also agree; but that they will agree to trial in Bonneville county if Idaho Falls growers and Gustafson demand trial there. In no event, they declare, will they agree to trial except in Ada or Bonneville counties.

DeLong's attorneys have stated they will not enter into the proposed agreement. In event of no agreement within 10 days, the place for trial will be designated by Judge W. A. Babcock in district court here who recently granted the motions of Welch and other defendants for change of venue.

Fourth District Post Officers Approve Program for Memorial Dedication

Myron Scholer, Rupert, district commander, at Tom's cafe here last evening.

The district meetings, according to the tentative program, will open the day's events beginning at 2:30 P. M. Dedication of the memorial building at 4:30 P. M. At 6:30 there is to be a banquet for members of the Legion and Auxiliary. Later a 24-round boxing card is to afford entertainment, and a dance in Efford's hall is to wind up the day.
