SPANISH AVIATORS
QUARTER HURTLING TOWARD AZORES ON FIRST LEG OF FLIGHT TO NEW YORK CITY

CARTAGENA, Spain, June 21 (AP)—Four Spanish aviators tonight were over the sea, en route to the Azores, expected to bring them fresh news. Their leader, Major Ramon Franco, in 1920, had crossed the South Atlantic in a similar twin-motored seaplane, the NC Plus Ultra.

Major Franco distinguished himself and was wounded in the action during the Moroccan campaign. He was the first to land on the island of the Azores, and he was the first to fly to South America. Commandant Gallarza was the hero of a flight from Spain to the Philippines. Sergeant Madrigal replaced another expert mechanic, replaced another a short time before the takeoff.

Ruth Returns To Give 66,145 Fans Brilliant Exhibition

Swat Sultan Poles Out Two Clouts For Circuit And Single

Philadelphia Team Victor in Opening Tray in New York by Score of 11 to 1 But Loser in Final, 8-3

By BRIAN BELL (Associated Press Sports Writer) NEW YORK, June 21.—Babe Ruth was just a ball player, in the opinion of the series of dramatic leaders between the Yankees and the Athletics and the As won, 11 to 1. In the second he was Babe Ruth in person, not a conventional invalid and the Yankees squared the day's play, 8 to 3. With two home runs and a single the big fellow accounted for seven of the Yankees' eight runs.

The big battle between the bat and the ball was reached first but thereafter he was very much in evidence. He singled to drive in a run in his seventh appearance, and in his eighth and ninth chances he drove the ball into the right-field bleachers. Of the three Athletic pitchers he shut out during the afternoon, Bill Shores was his favorite, the two circuit clouts coming from the delivery of George Earnshaw's relief.

No Luck Against Moses Against Robert Moses Grove in the first game, which he pitched out the league leaders, who retained a seven-and-one-half-game advantage over the Athletics through the week break, made one home run to win the first game, Simmons cracking out two and Hoas one.

The first of two double-headers and a single between the two leading clubs stopped—great—pitching performances and some others, not so good. Grove and Hoyt, who were credited with the win, did their work well. Grove held the Yankees to seven hits and the As could get no more from the relief of Hoyt. Bill Shores was ninth triumph with three on the debit side.

Herb Penneck, another conscientious who led the two leading clubs pitched well enough in the first to win a lot of games but suffered from soggy support and was finally converted from a pitcher to make way for a better pinch hitter. Sherid and Moore served to add another to the scenery when they took charge of the pitching assignment.

GRAINS AND SPODS GIVE WAY TO BEANS AND SUGAR BEETS

Canal Company's Annual Crop and Livestock Re- port Reflects Trend of Agriculture in County

With approximately the same acreage under cultivation in Twin Falls county this year as last, acreage of potatoes and wheat and other grains has been reduced this year to permit increased plantings of beans and sugar beets, according to Twin Falls Canal company's annual report, which has just been made public.

Outstanding features of the report are the increase in beet acreage from 217 acres last year to 653 acres this season; increase in bean plantings from 47,516 to 53,307 acres; decline in wheat acreage from 37,976 to 27,935 acres; and drop in potato plantings from 8,102 to 618 acres.

Total area under cultivation is 167,813 acres, as compared with 167,710 acres last year. Waste lands this year are listed as 1,000,000 acres. Acreage not reported includes railroad right-of-way, banyanas, highways, canals, coulees and interspersed timber.

Diminishing number of horses and mules is indicated by the report, while increase is shown in the number of calves, calves and pigs, reflecting growing importance of the dairy industry.

The Fortunate Wayfarer

By Phillips Oppenheim Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

"I know nothing of that," Martin replied. "I am simply his ambassador. He has sent me down to take you back with me, or to make an appointment for any time you prefer during the day."

"This is a matter," Victor Porie announced, "which requires consideration."

"Why should I?" Martin demanded. "Only you and two ago you and me a hundred pounds for my pass. You can't pretend that you are staying down here for any other reason than to pay a visit to Ardington Hall. Well, here is your chance."

Solomon Graunt lifted a tumbler of brandy and water to his lips and drank of the greater portion of its contents.

"Your cards, Victor," he said, commencing to deal.

"Why not postpone your game until after the party?" Martin suggested a little impatiently.

"Until we get back from where?" Victor Porie inquired, picking up his cards one by one.

"From your interview with Lord Ardington," Solomon Graunt finished dealing.

"I am not meeting the cards, however," he turned to Martin. His mouth had taken a peculiar twist, his eyes had narrowed.

"You're a young friend," he said, "you mean well, but you're a nuisance. Ambassadors do not come and see me."

"Come along and renew your acquaintance, then," Martin enjoined, patiently. "I have a key in my hand, and I can take you straight to Lord Ardington's study."

"Victor Porie sorted his cards and leaned back in his chair.

"Come along," he said, "I used to call him—I beg your pardon—was pleased to make sport of us on one occasion which you, sir, know all about."

"I am not a humorist, my dear friend," he said, "I am a humorist, no doubt—but shall I call it a little one-sidedly humorous? Rightly or wrongly, we are engaged. We have in fact, taken office. Our position now is that we shall wait upon Lord Ardington when he suits us. I am right, Solomon Graunt is right."

"The Fine Art of Torture" "I am not a humorist," Martin protested. "I am only waiting time staying down at this wretched little hotel. Your opportunity has come, and it is now or never."

"Oh, no," Solomon Graunt objected. "We could not do that. Victor Porie murmured.

"Well, you know your own business and that of course," Martin declared. "You may not get another chance. This morning, Lord Ardington happens to be in a very reasonable frame of mind."

"He has the strongest aversion of seeing either of you, but he realizes that this waiting behind locked doors is rather absurd."

"Lordship recalled that," Solomon Graunt chuckled. "To tell you the truth, Mr. Barnes, I had been so anxious to see him—in fact we have found it most laughable."

"You may have found it laughable, but you haven't been able to get to him."

"Victor Porie crossed his long legs produced a morose case and hid it, then, under his coat. He was in fact, eliminated. In some quaint way it seemed to remind him of the man."

"I shall explain to you why we have met here," he said, "we are men of business. Mr. Graunt and I, and my neighbor Lord Ardington, you may perhaps have passed many years in a country a long way from here, with him, Bandy Fosborne, they would call him."

head-like, his jet-black hair, slightly disturbed by the breeze, like the plume of some bird of prey. His very presence in this dimly lit room, his eyes, his sweet-smelling, waxy flowers, his air of peace, seemed like a defilement.

"Perhaps give-way too much to my imagination," he continued presently. "I am not a humorist, my dear friend. I am a humorist, no doubt—but shall I call it a little one-sidedly humorous? Rightly or wrongly, we are engaged. We have in fact, taken office. Our position now is that we shall wait upon Lord Ardington when he suits us. I am right, Solomon Graunt is right."

"I am not a humorist," Martin protested. "I am only waiting time staying down at this wretched little hotel. Your opportunity has come, and it is now or never."

"Oh, no," Solomon Graunt objected. "We could not do that. Victor Porie murmured. 'Well, you know your own business and that of course,' Martin declared. 'You may not get another chance. This morning, Lord Ardington happens to be in a very reasonable frame of mind.'"

"He has the strongest aversion of seeing either of you, but he realizes that this waiting behind locked doors is rather absurd."

"Lordship recalled that," Solomon Graunt chuckled. "To tell you the truth, Mr. Barnes, I had been so anxious to see him—in fact we have found it most laughable."

SHERIFF PICKS UP MISSING CLARKSTON GIRL AND BROTHER

Jerry Howe, Alleged Abductor, Faces Prosecution; Children Tell of Experiences On Road

Jerry Kenneth Howe, 25, who claims to have been a cheap camp employe and carnival worker, arrested here Friday afternoon will be prosecuted at Asotin, Washington, on a charge of abducting a boy and a girl from Clarkston, Washington, last Saturday; officers here were advised last evening.

Howe and the two children, May Cameron, 12, and her brother, Charlie, 9, were picked up by E. F. Prater, Twin Falls county sheriff, on the highway 12 miles east of here Friday afternoon.

Prater's destination indefinite.

They said they had left Clarkston last Saturday without definite destination, and abandoned their car near Sater, Oregon, when they were overtaken and their machine was seized. They had walked 25 miles, they said.

A telegram from the sheriff at Asotin last evening said that he would leave Sunday evening here for Howe.

The boy children are P. C. and Charles, Clarkston, and according to press dispatches last Monday morning to terminate Howe's stay in Portland at the home of his children had been taken here by Howe.

Known Only as "Jerry"

Howe was said to be known to Candice, one of the children. He had passed through Clarkston recently with a carnival company, and had been paying attention to the car near Sater.

Sheriff Prater stated last evening that he had no idea of the identity of the three hitch-hikers when he picked them up on the highway, but that after questioning them, he decided to hold them for further investigation.

BOYS SAVE LIFE OF FIVE-YEAR-OLD GIRL

One Youth Takes Drowning Child From Canal While Second Gives First Aid

The life of Laverne Layton, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Layton was saved yesterday at 3:30 P. M. by prompt action on the part of Robert Greenlate, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Greenlate, 249 Sixth avenue east, and Philip Heinrich, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Heinrich, Maurice avenue, when the Greenlate boy saved the courageous little girl out of the lateral on Eighth avenue east, and Heinrich applied first aid for drowning, while Greenlate was calling for medical aid. The attending physician stated later that had first aid not been applied the child would have been dead before he arrived.

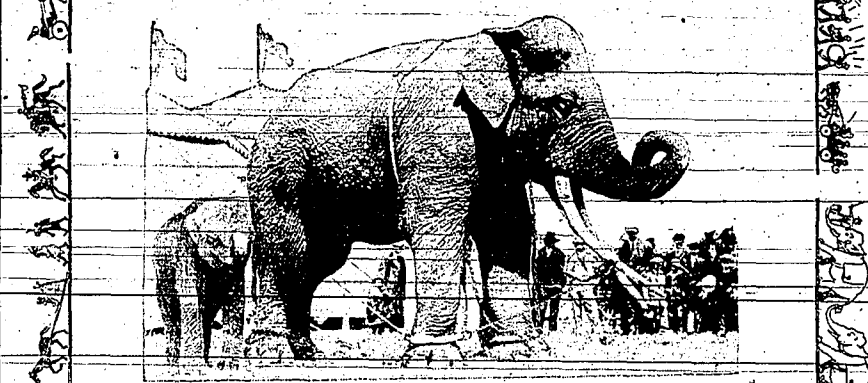

Young Greenlate saw the child floating in the canal near the sewage gate above the bridge which crosses it just before it enters the city limits, pulled her out and then went to Heinrich for medical aid. The attention of young Heinrich was attracted and he at once began to apply first aid, which he had received two lessons as a member of troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, of which C. E. Allen is scoutmaster. He continued to work on the child until the arrival of the physician, who complimented him on saving the life of the child. The rescue was brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Hall, 1140 Eighth avenue east, where the child remained until 8:30 last evening when she was taken home by her parents, apparently showing quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. Layton came to Twin Falls only a short time ago and were camping about a quarter of a mile above the point where the child was found in the lateral. Mr. Layton is employed in a beet field.

The child was seen by her mother about 3 P. M. It is stated that Mrs. Layton is said to believe the child got over to the house of a neighbor, as she sometimes did, and went into the child. Not finding her there search was instituted. The searchers were attracted by a crowd near the bridge and went to investigate when they found the child receiving first aid treatment.
