Percy Williams Equals World's Record for 100-yard Dash

Canadian Sprinter Proves Greatness On Soft Dirt Path

Olympic Champion Breaks Tape One Yard Ahead of Frank Wykoff; Crowd of 10,000 Person at Event

By FRANK G. GORRIE (Associated Press Staff Writer) VANCOUVER, British Columbia, July 12.—Running on a soft, ordinary dirt-horse-race-track, Percy Williams, Olympic champion and idol of Canada, equaled the world's 100-yard dash record of 9.3 seconds today in the British Columbia midsummer athletic carnival to prove that he is still one of the greatest of sprinters.

Although the slightly built Canadian youth has been without competition for several months, he broke the tape one yard ahead of Frank Wykoff, Glendale, California, flash, in the first heat of the sprint events. John Fitzpatrick, Hampton, Ontario, was the runner-up to qualify for the final race tomorrow.

Approximately 10,000 persons witnessed the opening of the two-day athletic carnival, which brought the greatest band of sprinters to ever compete on the Pacific coast.

Roger W. Babson Declares Aviation Will Continue Spectacular Growth

Business Expert Points to Rapid Development of Industry in Brief Period; Sees Many Possibilities

By ROGER W. BABSON
 (Special Columnist)
 The aviation industry in the United States is spectacular. Air transport operations this year will fly about 21,000,000 miles, or more than three years ago. We now have 30,000 miles of regular airways, whereas in 1920 we had but 8,000 miles. Forty thousand passengers were carried in the first six months of this year against five thousand in the first six months of 1920. There are now 1,050 aircraft manufacturers compared with 800 three years ago. We now have 575 aviation schools and are producing planes at the rate of 800 a year. In 1920, only 100 planes were produced. Unquestionably aviation is here to stay and destined for enormous growth. Not all of this growth is due to the rule if it does not go through a reorganization stage before it reaches a stable basis of progress. In the aviation industry it will emerge as a strong basic industry with untold possibilities. Moreover, in watching the aviation industry, we can see the future of many other industries. In studying aviation watch not only its actions, but its reactions.

Affects Railroads

I do not believe the railroads are going to make any mistake in dealing with aviation that they made in connection with the auto-bus motor truck and automobile. Some of the railroads are going to fight it, but it will be equally dangerous. Rather the roads must adopt the airplane as an adjunct to their regular business. Some progressive railroad leaders have already taken steps to do this. Action of the Pennsylvania, Santa Fe and the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal and a few others in establishing combined air and rail transportation services is but a step to a wider utilization of the airplane by the railroads.

It has often been said that railroad officials do not care much about passenger traffic anyway, because it has not been profitable. This may be true for some roads, but for others it is not. I have in mind one important Eastern carrier which has been making a profit from passenger traffic. Such a road must consider how it can incorporate air transportation with rail transportation. It must view the development of aeronautics with indifference. Sooner or later, except for submarine mail, the railroads are going to lose much of their day-time passenger business and nearly all of their first-class mail and light express business. When mail business should be in a position to control aeronautical facilities rather than to allow these facilities to fall into the hands of competitive enterprises.

The airplane can be a great help to the railroads, or a great hindrance, depending upon how the roads themselves accept it. Some of the shorter lines can use the airplane to increase their transportation distances. In the case of their Pullman over to competitive lines at the end of the run, they can transfer passengers to their own planes and carry them to their destination. In the longer, the transportation radius of some of the less fortunately situated lines can be greatly increased in this manner. This, with resulting economies in rentals, trackage, rights, leases, etc.

Influence Real Estate Values

Another reaction of the airplane will be felt in real estate. Beautiful real estate now inaccessible may become thriving communities 15 years hence. Land values will be made where none existed before. On the other hand, there is the problem of noise as affecting residential districts. This will undoubtedly be a serious time for the manufacturers of the airplane motors, but just as railroad yards and terminals change the character of the area immediately surrounding them, so will the airplane industry change values in its immediate vicinity. Nevertheless, every progressive community should study a proper zoning plan if it desires to grow. Good transportation is the key note to good real estate values, and while the airport may change a residential section to a business section, the whole community is sure to benefit and residential as well as business property in the town as a whole will grow in value.

Oil Fields Appear In "The Shakedown"

As yet the consumption of gasoline and oil by the airplane is a very small part of our total consumption. We use in this country 1,680,000,000 gallons of gasoline each year, mostly for automobiles. Authorities estimate that the airplane this year will fly about 21,000,000 miles. According to the size of the ship motor of 1000 horsepower, the burning of miles flown per gallon varies, from three miles to fifteen or twenty miles if these planes get an average of 30 miles per gallon. Total consumption of gasoline this year will be only 3,500,000 gallons, which is only 0.10 to 0.1 per cent of our total gasoline consumption. It is not fair to judge the future by the present. When in the future we have hundreds of thousands of individuals flying airplanes, then the demand for gasoline will be greatly increased. Moreover, present airplane engines can use only high quality gasoline which is obtained from the best refinery where it is produced. Such crude oil is distinctly limited. From the long-pull standard oil and gas industry, it is going to be greatly benefited by the aviation industry.

Airlines Learn

The recent merger of the Curtiss-Kelley and Wright groups of aviation companies undoubtedly is a step in the consolidation of the aviation industry. In the past few years, there were many small independent companies, some successfully producing, and others being in the process of being merged and consolidated. The aviation industry is now being organized and the industry is being organized and the industry is being organized.

has put on a strong and powerful basis which enabled it to produce far more efficiently and give far more in automobile value to purchasers. Thus the conditions and progress in the automobile field have not only benefited the automobile business, but have stimulated competition and benefited the consumer.

The public utility industry has passed through much the same course. Many small independent power plants were being abandoned as impractical. Mergers and consolidations were brought about. Large producing plants of steam and water power were concentrated in large installations and electricity is now produced on a scale and at a low price which would have been absolutely impossible for the small independent producer.

It is interesting to note that the industries which have had the greatest consolidations in recent years, namely, the automobile and power companies, have constantly been lowering their prices to the consumer until a dollar today buys far more in the automobile or power line than the pre-war dollar.

The aviation industry apparently is learning a lesson from both the automobile and power industries. We may expect many more mergers and consolidations controlled by powerful interests which will result in a more compact and be of great benefit to all. This means that many companies will be sifted out in the consolidation process, but to which effects on other industries.

The potentialities of aircraft for revolutionizing our whole industry and social life challenge the imagination. No one can tell just what all its effects may be. The automobile for example, proved the blessing of some industries and the doom of others. It virtually put the street railway companies out of business, but it put the oil industry on the map. It created a great accessory industry, opened up new opportunities in real estate, in retail trade, in manufacturing, and in a hundred other fields. Now we have in the airplane an even faster and more powerful means of transportation. Limitations as to where it can be extended. Very likely it will do all the things the automobile has done and more. It will revolutionize our industry and most visualize it in its entire economic setting and study carefully its effects upon the industries it touches.

Desert Song's Operette Dwarfs Stage Venues

Screen operetta is now a fact. Through the magic of the talking picture, "The Desert Song" is being shown in most and most popular music halls everywhere. It has been brought to the screen, and has been produced in the most beautiful manner possible in their Pullman over to competitive lines at the end of the run, they can transfer passengers to their own planes and carry them to their destination.

The remarkable production entitled "The Desert Song" has been hailed by the unusual excellence of the all-time best produced by Warner Brothers. The scenes throughout the picture are especially beautiful, ranging from an extensive French military post in the desert to a charming Parisian cafe. Shadow and his band of native Rifles rifle passes of the mountains and far-flung scenes of the vast and fertile African deserts, with the thrilling singing as they go, riding their magnificent horses at breakneck speed into the night.

The all-star cast of "The Desert Song" includes John Boles, Louise Fazenda, Curtis Kibbee, Johnnie Walker, Arthur Mitchell, Marie Webber, Frank Edward Martindale, Otto Hoffman, and Henry C. Ouzman. Myrna Loy and Robert Cook, California's most beautiful voices, Ray Del Ruth directed, and the operetta was adapted for the screen by Harvey H. Busch.

"The Desert Song" will be the attraction at the Idaho theatre 5 days beginning tomorrow.
