AUDIT OF MORTGAGE ENDS CONFUSION OF RECORDS AT CAPITAL

Bureau of Public Accounts Institutes New System Following Completion of Check of State's Books

(By The Associated Press)

BOISE, Dec. 16.—There had been no further confusion over the state's state farm mortgage fund under a new system of recording under direction of the bureau of public accounts, B. E. Hyatt, director of the bureau, announced today.

The announcement was made upon completion of an audit of the fund by John Store, assistant director, to cover the entire period of the existence of the fund. The fund was created by the 1922 legislature and has been a hub of contention at every legislature. Since its creation, more than $400,000 have been taken into the fund from legislative appropriations and from revenue from transactions in connection with operation of the state endowment funds.

This audit is entirely separate from the one now under way of all the endowment funds from territorial days, for which an appropriation of $10,000 was made by the last legislature. This audit will take several years to complete.

Fund Protects State

The fund was created as a revolving fund to protect the state's interest in mortgage deals, such as paying taxes on foreclosed land, meeting water assessments and other expenses. Exclusive of about $20,000 appropriated for these expenses prior to creation of the fund, a total of $270,000 has been appropriated by the legislature.

In addition to this, $109,000 has poured into the fund from the following sources, all authorized by legislative enactment:

From land sale certificates (optional)	$30,885.23
From land sale certificates (mandatory)	16,059.95
From lease rentals	17,101.82
State of land	50.20
State of crops	7,961.92
State of improvements	1,047.50

SALE OF WATER—15.00
In addition to these were advances from taxes and water assessments which were later repaid into the fund to the extent of $49,852.23 with interest on this of $1,415.72.

This brought the total received in the fund to $428,351.84.

$41,164 Now in Fund

Disbursements from the fund totaled $33,167.15, leaving $41,162.11 now in the fund.

The principal item in the disbursements was $24,127.33 for delinquent taxes while $120,318.36 went into water and drainage assessments, $17,773.89 went into foreclosure expense and $190.46 refund of lease rentals.

Of these items $46,652.28 was returned by borrowers or on their accounts, leaving the net disbursements $33,514.87 on 714 foreclosed farms.

Of the appropriations for taxes it was pointed out in connection with the audit that these could not be considered in any way lost as they found their way back into the county treasurers from which the money was originally derived.

Item Causes Stir

It was the disposition of the $109,000 item on receipts from land taken in on foreclosure that caused considerable of a stir among school officials at the time of the last legislature when a concerted drive was made to have all these funds returned directly to the endowment funds. It was contended that the state was charged with keeping the endowment funds intact by appropriations from the general fund if necessary. To allow any revenue to creep into the farm mortgage fund from this source, it was contended, was not in keeping with the agreement entered into by the state with the federal government when the latter were originally turned over to the state's educational, penal and charitable institutions.

Under the new system being installed by the bureau, Mr. Hyatt pointed out that the exact status of all money in the fund and their relation to the various endowments could be readily determined without the necessity of such an audit as has just been completed.

Bourbon Lender of Idaho Urges Unity

Just after defeat until it has become difficult to even fill all of the places on the state ticket, and impossible to include all of the state candidates to make an active campaign.

After pointing out that the party in the past "has had issues which aroused its adherents to the highest pitch of enthusiasm," the chairman urged that "if anywhere in the state of Idaho, there is a Democrat who has worked out such an issue, or who can do so, now is the time for him to speak."

area under General Tang Yun-Sien's. North of Fukien the Nationalist forces in the collapse of the insurgents of that claimed also to have the rebels in a precarious condition.

As a result of these changes, the swiftness of which frequently is characteristic of Chinese political and military developments, the Nationalist government again seems capable of maintaining at least normal control over defecting areas.

However, although the Nationalist government's fortunes had improved greatly in recent days, many factors remained decidedly unsettled. The majority of the Nationalist's foreign population remained in Shanghai but two American missionaries returned to Nanking tonight to investigate the possibility of the entire group returning. Nanking reports, however, indicated that apprehensions still prevailed. Therefore, it was considered unlikely that foreigners would re-enter Nanking for the present.

Additional foreign men of war have arrived at Nanking, while the British and Japanese consular authorities have completed plans for defending their respective coastal properties in case of untoward events. The plans include the erection of sand bag defenses and the laying in of large supplies of food stuffs.

Should there be trouble, forces from the British and Japanese war ships are expected to man their respective coastal defenses.

The American authorities stated that the United States, on the other hand, did not plan to attempt defense of the Nanking American consulate in event of disaster, but would evacuate its nationals to ships in the Yangtze river.

Looting continued in various areas, especially in the Yangtze valley. Activities of alleged Communists proceeded in many provinces on a wide scale, while bandit depredations continued to constitute probably the gravest menace to peace and order in China.

COUNCIL TO CONSIDER POSSIBLE ALTERATION IN WATER ORDINANCE

Douglas Suggests Greater Spread in Distribution of Cost to Consumers in Proportion to Use

Alteration in the pending ordinance which proposes to increase cost of city water in order to raise $12,000 more annually for pipe purchase and installation, so as to place part of the increase on water used and part on service, was suggested to the Twin Falls city council at its regular weekly session last night by T. J. Douglas, member of the council. Mr. Douglas indicated that he might make a motion to that effect at the next meeting when the matter comes up for final disposition. The ordinance received its second reading.

Mr. Douglas suggested that to raise the minimum alone and equally on all would mean that the person who uses only the minimum or less would pay as much of the increase as the person using an enormous amount. Thomas Sanderson, the member of the council who introduced the ordinance providing for the increase, indicated without endorsing the suggestion of Mr. Douglas, that he believed it should be given consideration. Various aspects of the whole subject were discussed by all the members.

Should the ordinance pass as drafted and introduced the minimum charge inside the city limits would be $2.23 and outside the city would be $3.65. With reduction for prompt payment this would mean $2 inside the city and $2.75 outside.

The matter of decorating the city streets for Christmas came up for consideration. Harley B. Ryburn, street commissioner, was instructed to ascertain what decorations would cost. No formal action was taken relative to the subject.

An agreement made orally with seven residents of the city outside the city limits last April with reference to delivery of water to their property and thereafter drafted, was reported signed by the contractor as of April 15.

Water has been delivered since April under conditions agreed on them. It appeared that due to a misunderstanding of orders from Superintendent Ryburn, drivers failed to deliver water regularly on four half blocks on Sidney street in the South Park addition to be water to them. If the matter is a Twin Falls during last summer. As a result of investigation showing the correctness of this complaint by residents, charges amounting to $19.12 were ordered cancelled.

School Board Considers Refunding of Bond Issue

The Twin Falls school board met last evening in special session to consider an offer from a brokerage firm in Denver to refund $5000 in outstanding bonds. After discussion it was determined to send a query asking further information relative to some points in the offer that did not seem quite clear. VETERANS MUST ACT NOW TO GET BONUS

American Legion Aids in Campaign to Bring Terms of Law to Eligible Men

The American Legion is cooperating in a campaign to bring to the attention of World War veterans the fact that the time for making application for adjustment compensation certificates, commonly known as the soldiers' bonus, will expire next January 2.

Within the next few days, a dozen former service men in and about Twin Falls have filed their applications for adjusted compensation, according to Terry Fetter, chairman of Twin Falls American Legion post membership committee, who, with J. E. Roup, post adjutant, has been detailed to the local organization to assist applicants in filing their claims.

There are in Idaho approximately 3000 veterans who have not yet filed their claims and are in danger of losing an average of $1000 each if immediate action is not taken by them, according to C. Hudson, Boise, manager of the United States Veterans' bureau.

Mr. Hudson explained that under an act of congress, all applicants must be on file by January 1, 1930. He stated that any veteran who saw service between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918, is eligible to file application at the event that he had more than 90 days' service. This also applies according to Mr. Hudson, to widows and children of ex-servicemen who died either in or out of service, as well as dependent parents of deceased veterans. If, however, the men are under 65 years of age, it will be necessary for them to show that they were dependent upon the deceased veteran before payment can be made to them. If the mother is a widow and 60 years of age she is presumed to be dependent and payment will be made to her in equal quarterly installments. This also applies to the father if the mother is dead.

Loan Privilege
If the loan term is less than $50 it will be paid in cash but if more than $50 the veteran, if living, will receive a certificate in the nature of a cash advance upon his bonus.

These certificates are two years old they have a loan value approximating 80 per cent of the face value of the certificate. This loan feature increases each year enabling the veteran to realize a cash benefit prior to the date of maturity. Mr. Hudson stated that a large percentage of the veterans have availed themselves of the loan privileges, many of the veterans using money obtained thereby to pay off notes due as a result of their farming activities. These loans are made directly to the veterans by the Boise office of the bureau.

Application blanks can be secured from the office of the bureau at Boise or from any local chapter of the American Red Cross, or the American Legion or Veterans of Foreign Wars in the event that it is not practicable to secure an application blank the veteran should make an informal application by letter to either the war department, supply department, or marine corps, depending upon the branch of service in which he served.

THREE OF STATE'S WITNESSES TESTIFY IN FORGERY TRIAL

First Day Proceedings in District Court Marked By Rapid Completion of Jury to Decide Case

Testimony of three witnesses was introduced by the prosecution after selection of the jury was completed at the opening of trial in district court here yesterday in the case of Miss Viola Lowe, former clerk in the office of Twin Falls county superintendent of public instruction, on a felony charge of forgery of a rural school district order for $490 warrant.

The first witnesses were P. C. Hills, chairman and Mrs. J. M. Pierre, clerk of the Benzer school district, who examined the asserted forged order on which the forgery charge is based, and pronounced it spurious.

Mrs. Rose J. Wilson, county superintendent of schools testified that she is familiar with Miss Lowe's handwriting, and identified a number of exemplars for purpose of comparison with Miss Lowe's handwriting. Exemplars, which were received from the various districts in the county, had been endorsed on the prosecutor's information as a possible witness in the case. No objection was raised and Harrison was permitted to continue as a juror. Two alternate jurors also were chosen.

Three claim disqualification. Only three persons called into the jury box disqualified themselves for service as jurors through admission of prejudice or other disqualifying circumstances. These prospective jurors were dismissed on peremptory challenge of the prosecution and five by the defense.

The jury as finally selected is composed of Andrew Glenn, A. M. Scott, O. A. Kington, Amos Z. Bliss, A. C. Burkholder, Kimberly, Wilmer Harrison, Wilson, Decatur, William Baker, Henry N. Champlin, Twin Falls; H. L. Conrad, Castleford; H. Murphy, Filer; Charles C. Noble, Rock Creek.

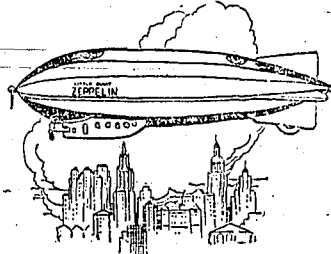

Alternate jurors are H. H. Zink, Filer, and George Fisher, Murtaugh. Charges on which Miss Lowe is being tried were filed following disclosure of mortgages aggregating $100,000 for warrants aggregating several thousand dollars and affecting a number of rural school districts.

United States Scientists Develop New Standard of Light

LABORATORY EXPERTS PRODUCE SYSTEMS TO RATE ELECTRIC LAMP

Dreams of Two Men Become Reality at Federal Bureau After Years of Work

Method Fulfills Promise of Proposal Made by Chief of Division 21 Years Ago

By OSCAR LEIBING
Special Editor
WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 — A dream of two scientists for a fundamental and reproducible standard of light has been realized at the bureau of standards. After a year's work, Dr. H. T. Wensel, chief of the high-temperature laboratories, and three co-workers, W. F. Roeser, F. R. Caldwell and L. E. Barbrow, have made available a satisfactory method by which artificial illuminants such as electric lamps can be rated.

The method fulfills the promise of a proposal made 21 years ago by the late Dr. C. W. Waidner, formerly chief of the heat division, and Dr. George K. Burgess, now director of the bureau.

Recognized As Ideal
They proposed as a standard the brightness of the freezing point of platinum of a vessel immersed in a molten bath of the precious metal. The plan was recognized as ideal but offering seemingly insurmountable experimental difficulties.

Not only was pure platinum necessary for the method, but special crucibles were needed to withstand the temperature at which the metal melts, 3200 degrees Fahrenheit. The tube, also, had to be of a substance that would not combine with the molten metal.

A year ago, when the project was turned over to Dr. Wensel, he took advantage of the development by the bureau of platinum of extreme purity and a special refractory fused thorium oxide, which could be fused into crucibles and tubes.

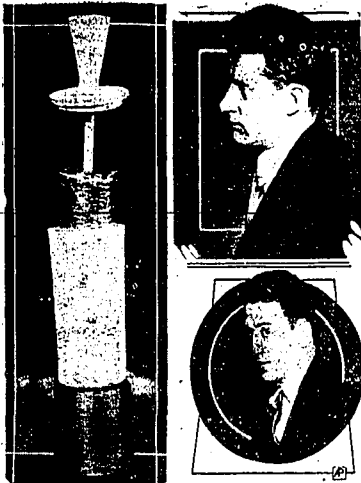

He immersed a tube of fused thorium oxide in a bath of platinum which impurity was less than four parts in 1,000,000. The metal, in a crucible of fused thorium, was melted by a high frequency induction furnace, the so-called "heating by radio."

The light emitted from the tube, filtered through a lens and reflected to a photometer, was compared with the light from the incandescent lamps used as the national standard.

Great Advantage
The advantage of the new standard is that it is based upon a constant of nature, the same brightness resulting whenever a tube of fused thorium is immersed in platinum at its freezing point.

It is believed that the new method may become an adopted international standard, to replace the "international candle" now in use in the majority of countries.

The latter standard is maintained through groups of incandescent lamps which may change in time, a change that cannot be detected and results in different ratings for artificial illuminants in separate countries.

The "heart" of a new standard of light is a thorium oxide crucible (left). Dr. H. T. Wensel (above) was in charge of the work. One of his co-workers was W. F. Roeser (below).

Water Users Demand Prevention of Readjustment of Minidoka Power Profits

BURLEY, Dec. 16 (Special to The News)—Suits have been filed by the Burley Irrigation district at Washington, against the secretary of the Interior, with a view of preventing the secretary from acting on the report of his commission which recommended a readjustment of distribution of power profits from the Minidoka dam power plant.

The commissioners, after a recent examination here, recommended that the power profits be distributed at the rate of 72.7 to the Burley Irrigation district and 27.3 to the Minidoka Irrigation district. The present ratio of distribution is 56.6 to the Burley district and 43.4 to the Minidoka district. The Burley district represents the pumping system and

REPORT SHOWS DAIRY INDUSTRY OF CASSIA COUNTY PROGRESSIVE

Formation of Burley-Deelo Holstein Bull Association Valuable in Strengthening Position of Growers

BURLEY, Dec. 16 (Special to The News)—An extensive program having in view the improvement of dairy stock in Cassia county, is one of the principal features of the annual report of County Agent W. W. Palmer. Of marked value in advancing and increasing the position of the dairy stock industry in the county has been the organization of the Burley-Deelo Holstein Bull association.

This association has 72 members, comprising 238 cows, and has one bull all with production records of their dams in excess of 600 pounds of butterfat. This is the second bull to be shown in Cassia county, one already being in operation in the county with five Holstein bulls.

Four dairy shows were held in Cassia county last year, and are participated in by dairymen of both Cassia and Minidoka counties. The spring dairy show and the Cassia county fair were held in Burley, and black and white, or Holstein, shows were put on at Malta, Oakley and Rupert. The latter show was the annual Black and White day, held in rotation at Deelo, Rupert and Burley. At the Cassia county fair, the new modern dairy show barns were used for the first time.

4-H Clubs Active
Three 4-H clubs were formed for dairy calf projects, one at Malta, one at Deelo and one in the Cassia valley. Of 22 boys who enrolled, 27 have completed their records to date. These youngsters were given special attention at all the shows, and the youngsters were particularly good in showing and fitting, not only locally but at the district shows.

A herd improvement association has been kept in operation, with members in both Cassia and Minidoka counties. There were 28 herds tested during the year, with 338 cows, although only 12 herds completed the test. The average pounds butterfat per cow was 328.6. The average cow produced $180.49 worth of products at a feed cost of $60.76. The feed cost for 100 pounds of milk was 71 cents, and for one pound of butterfat, 71 cents. There were $2.61 returns for each dollar spent for feed.

Dairy School Aids
A dairy school was held at Burley during year, occupying five afternoons. Feeding and management was also discussed at the latter Day Saint's leadership week held here. Four recent demonstrations have been carried on with farmers willing to improve their feeding methods. Beet pulp, stomp potatoes and grains were used, with alfalfa hay, in these demonstrations.

Purebred dairy stock was purchased by the county agent, for local farmers, including seven purchased Holsteins and one Guernsey bull; in addition to eight bulls bought for the two bull associations. Local dairy stock gave good account at the outside shows. At the eastern Idaho district fair, the Cassia county Holstein industry herd was first place of Idaho herds shown, being second to the Weber county herd from Utah. Seven county herds competed in the Holstein showing.

LOVE SHY" by Barbara Webb

change her own house dress for her best one of black crepe de chine. Janet started down the stairs humming to herself and paused half way down the door opened. There was a light at the head of the stairs that threw her hair into soft relief, while another light in the lower hallway lit her face and outlined her slim figure. To the young man entering the doorway she seemed a lovely vision. Janet, because she was so truly really of the picture she made, only a moment's pause, then she was coming quickly down to him, her hand outstretched. "It's awfully nice of you to come, Mr. Warren," she said, letting her hand rest in his. "The date fixed? Busy day?" This for her father, who stood a little embarrassed behind the young man. "Perfectly fine, Janet. Where's your mother? I'll just go and find her and let you young people get acquainted," and he brushed past her up the hallway. Janet looked at James with a very much surprised expression. "What's the matter with you?" she asked. "The young man entering the doorway she seemed a lovely vision. Janet, because she was so truly really of the picture she made, only a moment's pause, then she was coming quickly down to him, her hand outstretched. "It's awfully nice of you to come, Mr. Warren," she said, letting her hand rest in his. "The date fixed? Busy day?" This for her father, who stood a little embarrassed behind the young man. "Perfectly fine, Janet. Where's your mother? I'll just go and find her and let you young people get acquainted," and he brushed past her up the hallway. Janet looked at James with a very much surprised expression. "What's the matter with you?" she asked.

And presently she heard her father and mother leave, talking amiably, of some happening in the house that day.

"Suppose we start playing Darts and Joan and get this job over quickly," James said to her, starting toward the kitchen with a pile of plates. "All right, I'll wash them and you do them. Then I'll put them away so I know just where everything belongs," Janet answered.

A Joyous Evening She lit one of her mother's aprons over her dress, rolled her sleeves to the elbows and went to work with a will. Soon the task, begun in embarrassment on Janet's part, grew into a pleasure. The ice was thoroughly broken by the time the last plate was dried, and Janet found she was really having a good time. They left the kitchen in spotless order and wandered back to the living room. "What shall we do here and talk, go for a walk, or go to the movies ourselves?" she asked. "Which would you rather do?" "I'd like to go to the movies, but I'd like to stay and talk with you," he told her. "I don't mind a bit if you'll see me tomorrow evening."

"I'm pretty tired, Marie," he protested, mildly astonished at this unusual request from his wife who ordinarily would not let him step into her clean kitchen. "I'm tired, too," she said sharply, "and you ought to know enough now to bother Janet when she is alone." "I thought we were the ones that had the company," he said, still in a tone of protest. "Why don't you let the dishes sit a while?" "I'll do as much thing," she began and would have gone on with her reasoning, but James put in a suggestion. "I'm sure you are both tired," he said. "Why don't you either rest or go out for a walk or something, and Mrs. Lane and I will do the dishes?" This promise not to drop anything—there's a very good movie at the neighborhood house tonight, that is if you don't mind leaving Mrs. Lane here with me." Janet, too miserable over her mother's and father's quarrel to say anything, waited for her mother's answer. Mrs. Lane looked from one to the other, then her face relaxed into a smile. "I don't mind if we do, Joan. Thomas," she said. "You'll be careful with the china, won't you, Janet?" "Very careful, mother," Janet said, relieved that peace had been restored.
