Discovery Indicates Evidence That Evolution Can Be Reduced From Matter Of Centuries to Weeks

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Writer) BERKELEY, Cal., June 30—Evidence of evolution is reduced from a matter of centuries to a few weeks in the laboratory of Dr. T. H. Goodspeed at the University of California. Changes in plants, which in nature might require from 100 to 10,000 years, are made here in not more than a few days. This is not even a radium cause them, and open to man's view a chest of unopened papers over nature that promise much.

PROF. T. H. GOODSPEED

Only a beginning has been made in Dr. Goodspeed's botanical laboratory. There is not even a radium cause them, and open to man's view a chest of unopened papers over nature that promise much.

With this tool Dr. Goodspeed proposed to learn more exactly how nature produces new plants. It is hoped the discovery may point the way of producing better plants and animals.

In the laboratory there is a beautilizing variety of plants. The all from young corn plants. This seed, or this sex cells which produce it, are not even a radium cause them, and open to man's view a chest of unopened papers over nature that promise much.

Explaining what happens, Dr. Goodspeed says the rays less than a millionth of an inch long, penetrate into the center, or nucleus of sex cells, and body cells. These rays carry all the characteristics of the plant—also of animals and men—which are inherited.

The rays strike this nucleus with the effect of a shell explosion. Electrons are sent flying out of atoms. The result is a rearrangement of the nuclear material, and with this change in pattern go the sometimes startling differences in the nature of the plants.

POPULATION INCREASES
SANTA FE, June 30 (AP)—New Mexico gained 2,877 inhabitants during the last 10 years, according to the state's population completed today. The present population is 418,221, an increase of 162 per cent.

OHIO SOCIETY HOLDS GATHERING IN FILER

Speakers Tell of Buoyed State's Place in History And Tradition of Past

FILER, June 30 (Special to The News)—One hundred and sixty former residents of Ohio attended the annual picnic of the Ohio Society in Filer today. The picnic at the fairgrounds here yesterday, E. L. Ashton, Twin Falls, was elected to succeed himself as president. Other officers elected were: O. Walters, Filer, vice president; Mrs. T. C. Querry, Filer, secretary; Mrs. W. A. Robinson, Twin Falls, treasurer.

Mrs. Walters presided on account of the absence of President Ashton, who is confined to the Twin Falls county general hospital with a fracture of the knee cap of his right leg. J. A. Vandenberg, Twin Falls, presided at the picnic. Mrs. C. W. Ivon, Filer, Twin Falls, read from an old McGuffey reader, the lesson, "The Old Town Pump."

Judge James W. Shields, Filer, junior vice commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave an inspiring talk on the early history of the Buckeye state, and spoke on early American history and symbols interpretation of the flag. Ohio, he said had given eight presidents and seven judges of the supreme court to the nation.

Other officers elected were: O. Walters, Filer, vice president; Mrs. T. C. Querry, Filer, secretary; Mrs. W. A. Robinson, Twin Falls, treasurer.

Specialty Companies Make Most Profits in Paper Manufacturing Industry of Nation, Says Babson

By DOGER W. BABSON (Associated Press Staff Writer) BOSTON, June 30—The backbone of the paper industry of the United States is made up of newspaper paper. The rapidly growing size and number of our daily newspapers requires constantly increasing amounts of this product. This end of the business, however, has not been profitable for several years, owing to over-buidge of productive capacity.

Comparative Profits
We need only examine the earnings records of the leading paper companies to see what branches of the business are going ahead and which branches are standing still or falling back. Out of 12 leading paper producers in 1929, seven showed profits and five reported deficits. Out of the seven profitable companies five were manufacturers of specialty paper; two were newspaper producers, but derived a large part of their income from the sale of hydro-electric power.

High-grade tissues both for toilet and other purposes have a constantly increasing market. Moreover, national governments in educating the public to discriminate between various grades of tissues and educating private homes, the consumption of paper towels is increasing very rapidly, and still has a large potential market.

Securities Well Defined
Paper stocks as a group have not been popular for several years. To be sure, they advanced some in the bull market last summer, but nothing approaching the wild inflation of prices in other stocks. They have, nevertheless, suffered in the general market decline since last fall, and are now selling at 33 per cent below their 1929-high point, and 11 per cent below the high point for the current year.

Specialty Companies
In time the consumption of these papers should meet nearly equalize capacity for production and that the price will go up and profits increase. At present, however, the companies in the paper business that are showing definite progress are those in specialty lines such as paper towels, fire tissues, containers, etc. The companies manufacturing specialties where markets are rapidly exand where competition, though it is not as intense as in the case of newsprint, are making good earnings and have an excellent outlook.

At present, however, the best investment opportunities appear in sound companies manufacturing paper specialties. The use of paper towels is rapidly increasing. The paper towel is recognized as an indispensable, efficient, and thoroughly sanitary toilet article. It finds wide use in hotels, public buildings, offices, stores, and in some extent in private homes. The consumption of paper towels is increasing very rapidly, and still has a large potential market.

low paper prices continues to hinder recovery. Ultimately, a better relation between supply and demand will be brought about and paper stocks will again be popular. Some of the new products being produced, especially those with important water power potential, should some day sell at much higher levels. In fact, the hydro-electric properties of certain companies have a great potential value and this public utility phase of the business may in time eclipse the paper manufacturing operations as a source of revenue.

WOMAN LECTURER SPEAKS ON EUROPE

Miss Lutie Stearns Favors Better Understanding of International Relations

Declaring that she desires to transplant Christian principles into the law of the land, Miss Lutie E. Stearns, Milwaukee, lecturer of the National Business and Professional club in an address at the First Methodist Episcopal church before 300 persons Sunday night discussed conditions as she saw them during her visit in Europe in 1928 and as she sees them today in America. The address covered a wide field.

The speaker declared herself in favor of the World Court and the League of Nations, praised the present and recent attitude of Germany and deprecated that of France two years ago favored better understanding on the tariff, criticized our attitude on immigration laws and spoke in favor of maintenance of production, the conditions under which she said were still unsatisfactory, but better than that of European nations.

Her description of many economic conditions in Europe were striking. Miss Stearns spoke favorably of President Hoover and Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes and gave warm praise to Woodrow Wilson, she accepted enthusiastically by a delegation in the paper industry. She has much more to say than those of the newspaper, kraft or paperboard manufacturer.

There is no hurry about buying stocks under present conditions of the general market. However, the paper industry will not remain idle in a state of depression. There is now a definite let-up in the building of new paper mills, which, if continued, will enable the normal 6 per cent annual increase in consumption to catch up with the present capacity. Moreover, available supplies of timber are steadily being diminished and the frontier of raw materials is being pushed further and further back.

An intelligent policy of conservation of pulp wood is extremely necessary. These companies which operate more efficiently and conserve their resources in every possible way will in the long run prove the best investments. Prices of timber are sure to rise as it becomes scarce.

While, while the long-pull outlook for the business as a whole is for improvement it would seem that the specialty manufacturers, are in a preferred position with respect to the rest of the industry and that stocks of well integrated, efficiently managed specialty producers with adequate raw material and water supplies, should prove the most profitable.

Business in the paper industry now registers 10 per cent below normal compared with 7 per cent above normal at this time a year ago. (Copyright, 1930, Publishers of National Bureau.)

FILER BOURBOONS BACK WILSON FOR GOVERNOR

FILER, June 30 (Special to The News)—Astor B. Wilson, Twin Falls, was unanimously endorsed as Democratic candidate for governor of Idaho by a meeting of 23 Democrats of Filer precinct held in the city hall here last night. T. Dan Conner was elected chairman and O. E. Chastain secretary. Stens were taken to secure filing of 10 delegates for nomination to the Democratic county convention to be held on at the primaries August 5. The list was not completed but will be filled and filed tomorrow with the county auditor.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT: In the nature of things a protective tariff constitutes a human interference with the natural order of things and events.

Through conservation and storage of surplus men have been removed far beyond the fear of famine and warehouses and refrigeration constitute an interference with natural processes.

The protective tariff policy has been fundamental in the development of the United States. It has made possible the building of great industries that could not otherwise have obtained foothold in this country.

It is because of this interference with natural processes, effective and beneficial operation of the tariff depends upon maintenance of proper balance—balance as between this country and foreign countries, and as between industries within this nation's borders.

It is because of a lack of balance as between agriculture and the other industries has been discerned that the tariff schedule has lately been overhauled.

It alone will determine definitely how effective and beneficial the new schedule will be.

Since the tariff was altered the position of the United States in relation to the rest of the world has altered considerably.

It brought the nations closer together, and even more significantly, the United States has now to deal with nations most of which are its debtors.

Naturally, because of these facts the new tariff is greeted abroad with greater outcry than has been the portion of its predecessors.

And, because the principal is an openly asserted purpose of the measure is to increase the income of consumers, a measure of dissatisfaction is to be expected on the part of those who are only consumers and who are not disposed to look beyond the price they have to pay for bread and butter—regardless of their own ability or lack of ability to pay that price.

Congress has labored for nearly a year and a half to produce the new tariff law. That is a longer time than has ever before been spent in drafting of a tariff bill. It indicates a good deal of care and study given to the work.

There is no evident anywhere a disposition to regard the new law as one that is wholly and altogether perfect. It does, however, promise an opportunity for trial of the theory that the tariff can be of assistance to the agricultural industry.

That is the "flexible" clause under which the President may make such alterations as may be recommended by the Tariff Commission, and the Commission is to be organized.

And reports are being made that equality in the tariff schedule on application of any person or interest that seeks a change.

The operation of the "flexible" clause will be one of the most interesting features of the new law.

For Governor

Dean Raymond Waller of Swarthmore is quoted as saying nearly half the small colleges had actual decreases in enrollment in the last two years.

His hope of raising standards was gone (glittering); these colleges are now actually in competition for students. Naturally their scholarship funds are not always going to students of any great ability.

Mr. Roy Hilday of Balliol College, Oxford University, England, says that American methods of administering scholarship funds waste an enormous amount of brains.

That we waste brains is not a new idea to Mr. Hilday who thinks about education. We know we do that from the kindergarten through the university.

Mr. Hilday's specific complaint, however, is that in almost every case a scholarship in an American college is limited by the donor to students showing evidence of need.

It is fine to give opportunity to needy students. But why not offer a few prizes for power and accomplishment regardless of means?

"Poverty," says Mr. Hilday in explaining the English method, "is no qualification, but equally it is no qualification." It is merely irrelevant.

This is the case when benefactors are announced and when presidents are suggesting what they would like next.

Perhaps it is the man of wealth, impatient, perhaps, of mediocrity in his own ownership, who will start something by offering scholarship funds to his favorite class, requiring only evidence of need.

It Pays to Advertise: Lord Hilday, publisher, and member of the general committee which planned the conversion of the British Advertising Club now going on in Hastings, England, asked Howard Heinz, president of the H. J. Heinz Company, what his company does to stimulate business.

"We advertise," replied Heinz to the convention. "In times of depression we increase our advertising and our business for this year is ahead of last."

Making a really good thing, keeping it good, knowing how good it is and not being afraid to tell the world about it always were sound foundations for doing good business.

But it takes all the corners of the world to make a square success foundation to make a square success foundation.

PACKERS RENEW PLANS TO EXTEND ACTIVITIES

WASHINGTON, June 30—The 10-year-old controversy over whether Armour, Swift and other packers should limit their activities exclusively to meat packing passed through another phase Saturday when the District of Columbia supreme court overruled a petition asking dismissal of an attempt by these groups to obtain modification of the 1920 congressional decree.

The decree was consented to after the government had instituted antitrust proceedings against packers, but was not put into effect until the supreme court sustained the decree.

Then the packers agreed to limit their business, and later asked modification of the decree.

Justice Baileys' decision held that the packers' petition should not be acted upon until after a full hearing on the merits of questions involved, and added that the "final determination" of the decree shall depend upon whether or not the government shall consent to or oppose the proposed modification.

The government, although not questioning the right of the court to grant modification, has challenged the packers to produce proof that their claims are justified.

The all-important principle in making jelly is the same in roasting HILLS BROS. COFFEE. Add the warm sugar to the hot fruit syrup a little at a time to be sure of perfect jelly. Hills Bros., by their patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—merely roasted, full flavored coffee because they roast only a few pounds at a time. No other coffee roasts like Hills Bros. because none is roasted the same way.
