HOOVER'S SPECIAL TRAIN ROARS WEST TOWARD CLEVELAND

After Witnessing First Contest of World's Series Chief Executive Enrains For Bankers' Convention

(By the Associated Press)
HOOVER SPECIAL TRAIN EN ROUTE TO CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—President Hoover, after witnessing the first game of the world's series at Philadelphia, tonight was en route to Cleveland to address the bankers' association.

Coming direct from the capital and facing a crowd of about 10,000, the chief executive, while the game lasted, was only Herbert Hoover, one of thousands of other "humble" stirred Americans.

Although he adopted the traditional neutral attitude of presidents at world's series games after handing the ball to the umpire, he enjoyed the spectacular struggle to the full.

It did not applaud, but smiles repeatedly wreathed his face and he enjoyed the dramatic conclusion he puffed upon a cigar.

Wobblers Game Cleverly

An ardent devotee of the national pastime for years, he missed few of the scientific points of the game and apparently got as much fun as the spectators. He came from the ashes of the late Washington baseball team comedians, Al Schacht and Nick Allcock, who began the game presented their own unique brand of amateurish baseball charming scene.

Later, the president laughed heartily at the difficulties of George Miller, the Wobblies' pitcher, whose breast protector commenced leaking. The umpires had hardly called for a new one when one of the speedsters of Bob Feller's Red Sox dashed upon the field, fumbled off the bat and caught Moriarity squarely in the partly drafted fastball.

Arriving at the station, Mr. Hoover was greeted by Mayor Harry A. Mackey and a group of personal friends.

The president's departure激发了 the presidential party to the field through lanes of policemen and others, and as he entered to take his seat in the box above the Philadelphia club, the stands in the already packed stadium stood rose and applauded.

As cameras clicked before the president, K. M. Landis, high official of the American League, proceeded to greet Mr. Hoover and they were photographed together.

"Around the Horn," said director of his cabinet office, and placed upon their partially bare grouped five of his cabinet officers, in addition to other notables, who had come to see him from the capital or joined him in the train.

A half hour later the special train departed for Cleveland with the guest list much depleted. Each of the cabinet officers, Secretaries Hoover, Lyde, Weeks, Secretary of War General Brown, along with Walter E. Strop, assistant secretary of the treasury, planned to return to the capital.

He will be joined at Bedford, Ohio, by Mrs. Hoover, who has been attending in Indianapolis the new

ANGER COSTS FARMER LIFE IN NORTH IDAHO

PHILLY RIVER, Idaho, Oct. 1 (AP)— Farmer John G. Smith, 57, reportedly killed himself because he lost his temper.

The physician who attended Smith, Dr. J. L. Turner, said his wife, having heard the bullet of a shotgun on the floor in rage and the gun was discharged into his head.

An artery was severed. He died late yesterday in a Newport hospital.

COURT DELAYS HEARING OF IDAHO POTATO CASE

BOISE, Oct. 1 (AP)— Hearing on the case brought by Twin Falls potato processors against the state over Idaho potato grading and branding law, will be held before Judge O. C. Gavitt in federal district court Friday.

At a preliminary action today the state moved to dismiss the case, which was brought by the growers against the state, on constitutional grounds.

The grading regulations, which have been in effect since 1927, have held constitutional recently in state district court. The suit for an injunction from the fed-

BIOLOGIST CLASSIFIES THREE TOADS THOUGHT ENTOMBED 300 YEARS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 1 (AP)—Three small toads identified as members of the "burying toad" family by Dr. Frank G. Brooks, biological surveyor of the U. S. Fish Commission, were found by experts to have been their first meet in 800 years.

Dr. Brooks, the Oklahoma state herpetological society curator, near Okla. City, while examining in an Indian mound, to determine its age, found the toads. He said they belonged to the proboscidean family and the genus Sphaerothecum. Dr. Spencer J. Baird, a colleague of Dr. Brooks, said the toads in this genus are among the most ancient animals living but one

FOOTLIGHTS LOSE DONAHUE, DANCER

Slogan of Good Troupers, "Show Must Go On," Gets Blame for Untimely Death

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP)—John Donahue, comedian whose agile and nimble Irish tongue carried him to the center of Broadway's stage, died Saturday morning at 53.

That slogan of the good trouper, "The show must go on," was the blithe motto of the death of the all too brilliant Donahue, who had made the most gifted dancer on the stage. He was only 33.

He had been engaged in amateur nights in his early manhood in the stages of the all-time vaudeville theaters of the country and had won the musical comedy crown on Broadway.

He had packed them in on Broadway season with his partner, the equally comical Jimmy Guinn. He was touring a show until last Wednesday when, in Cincinnati, he collapsed of overexertion, causing a severe stroke and nearly had to be hospitalized.

An artery was severed. He died late yesterday in a Newport hospital.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS ACT TO PROBE OIL COMPANIES' DEALS

Department of Justice Gets Orders to Investigate Charge of Attempt to Obtain Control of Land

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—

Department of justice officials today launched an extensive investigation into charges that large oil companies were attempting to obtain illegally from the government Colorado oil shale land worth billions of dollars.

Assistant Attorney General Seth V. Bullock, who is investigating the charges, told Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Claude Wickard, he could make full inquiry into the case and let the oil companies know what he found out.

The charges directed against the inter-company agreement were brought by Ralph Kelly, for six years head of the department's general land office.

After he had submitted his request, Mr. Bullock, who is investigating the charges, told the department's general land office, he could make full inquiry into the case and let the oil companies know what he found out.

An interesting talk on Africa, with a four years' service in the American mission field, Miss Shoemaker, in teller of the work and customs of the natives, was given at the First Christian church at a meeting attended by 75 persons in an annex to the church. Tuesday evening.

Her talk was illustrated in part by exhibits of work done by her students, and the teacher's work in the educational field.

Her leave of absence from Africa has been extended from the time she leaves the West until her return.

On leaving here she will go to the Christian Church school in Hartford, Connecticut, where she will continue her studies.

Her trip will start on the long journey to Africa via Belgium and 1,000 miles up the Congo river to her station.

BODY OF BABY IN PAUL GOES TO LAST REPOSE

PAUL, Oct. 1 (Special to The News)—Barbara Louise Clark, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Clark, died Saturday morning and was succumbed to an intestinal illness by the "Official Hospital" in Rupert Monday evening, and was laid to rest in the cemetery there at 10:30 a.m. yesterday.

Services at the graveside were held at the home of Ray E. Clark, the child's uncle.

The death occurred just one month from its birth, August 29.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Vicent Phillips, pastor of the Episcopal Church. Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Eason and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hardin with Mr. Jim Cauley accompanying.

The baby was a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tomas E. Clark.

"Charges of misfeasance," asserted Attorney General Richard A. Connelley, yesterday, when he informed department officials, they had all received records concerning the oil companies.

He said he would confer with Kelley as soon as he returned to Washington, inviting him to make a full statement.

Connelley added the conference would be "adroit" and "friendly."

The "times have passed," he said.

He added no difficulty in conducting the investigation. If Kelley fails to appear, he can call state just what he is objecting to.

ASSESSOR AT RUPERT REPORTS ON MEETING

RUPERT, Oct. 1 (Special to The News)—W. H. Dumas, county assessor, returned Saturday from an assessor's meeting held Monday in Post Falls, when 13 counties in southeastern Idaho were represented.

The meeting was for the purpose of checking over assessments on mineral properties—and was probably the "spur" for the appearance of Assessor Hayes Tuesday evening.

"DRY" LAW AGENTS RAID DESERT STILL

Federal Officers Report Discovery...and Destrution of Extensive Plant

Federal enforcement agents put out of business big moonshine stills which had been set up in a wild and unpopulated region by bootleggers near Twin Falls. Agents, Ed Paris and Ed Martin, federal agents, reported on their return last evening from five days' expedition the country where the stills which still was found and destroyed.

One man, George Keho, Mountain Home apparently in charge of the plant, was captured. Several cases of moonshine whisky were seized. The officers used axes and the torch to destroy the still house, a 100-gallon tank, a 50-gallon tank, and 33 barrels of mash. The plant was reported to have been in continuous operation for several weeks.

The officers traveled many miles over a desert region, searching wherever they were overtaken by lightning. They did not find any men in that region, they said, except the man at the still house.

MOTORIST SIDE-SWIPES CAR STANDING ON ROAD

Traveling southward toward Twin Falls on Blue Lakes boulevard at about 6 P.M. last evening A. L. Holbrook, 301 Fifth avenue, east, was standing in the middle of the road without a tail light. The whole left side of Holbrook's car was dented and crumpled, and glass broken out of doors on plain side, he reported at police headquarters. No one was injured. Holbrook was driving from his home to Bay Harmacy route 2, Kimberly. Holbrook said, quit the scene without regarding an understanding as to settlement of the damage.

Wings Of Love

By Vera Brown

"I'd rather take it right on the nose than jump in this lake and drown her throat."

The sky was almost as dark as night with lowering clouds. Jane was scared. She didn't know if she could stand it if she did not see her mother again.

The mosquitoes buzzed about her head. The last drop of water had been drunk from her lips.

Now of the first or the second time, Jane did not know. Time meant nothing. There was only one thing in her world, Pain.

When the sun had lighted the sky, her face still turned toward the sky, she had a golden glow about her.

"Make a normal landing, get down, lose speed quickly, so terrible things happen," she said.

"I repeated those words over and over again.

"Nothing as terrible can happen. Nothing as terrible can happen!"

She was flying with motor thundered ahead now, circling at a thousand feet above the ground. In which was the setting safety?

"I've got to make it! I've got to!"

The storm, as though laughing, veered about and the wind swept from the north in great directions. Then came a break in the clouds. The first bits of ice were visible at the wings and Jane could see holes here and there bits of fabric whipping about by the wind.

"The ice cut her cheeks and brought tears to her eyes.

"Five hundred feet above, she must make this inevitable. The height increased in volume. The rattle of the ice sounded querky, her teeth chattered and in the metal covering of the machine.

There were storms in the field below her. It was hardly a clearing at all, but the tall trees had been cut.

She checked for a last time the condition of the field wind, she banked and turned "in." throttled back her motor and stopped. Down!

"I'll panic if I don't."

Jane shut off the ignition. If she did not catch fire she could then start it again.

She had welcomed the thought of death a while back, but now she was fighting for her life, like any primitive creature. Her heart beat hard and strong and she allowed herself to live.

She pulled the pilot's seat back to hisaching head. He must find her today. If he did not find her, it would not matter. Nothing would matter.

It would be too late.

The pilot was gone. Jane had run across him, the sharp surprise of his disappearance. A girl in a ship was certainly conspicuous enough she must have landed. She had come to the first day if they were down on an isolated field, there had been ample time for word of her arrival to spread.

She had been flying high at the time and still had winged ship. Then slipped she had been flying high at the time and still had winged ship and south and west.

Nights were a horror to that man. He had a white shirt and white undershirt. It might be a better idea to let the lovely creature die in such a way.

He walked about the airship, like a man who had just come from a long journey. The deep underwash turned over and over.

Aftermath.

The storm relented supreme on the horizon. The sun was rising, bringing its victory. It howled loudly for a while and then died away into a quiet summer day. The hallmarks of the storm were gone.

The Leila became a mass of twisted struts and red wings. was silent forever, its days in the sky were over.

Under the wreckage, her face turned toward the sky, her hair a tangled mess. She lay, the girl piled up. The rain pattered on her face and her lovely hair, as though regretful of the whole episode. But she did not move. She did not seem to have a pulse.

The pilot had closed the safety belt, fastened to take some of the impact. It had held him to the ship-to-the-end.

He was long gone, after the sun had come out and the world was again, again, Jane struggled to sit up.

She however, meaning no agony, begged for help. She knew the person would stop. The Leila had come to the end.

Suddenly there was an excruciating pain. Her eyes fluttered open. She knew that it was herself who had caused the pain. She lay, her face and her lovely hair, as though regretful of the whole episode. But she did not move. She did not seem to have a pulse.

He walked about the airship, like a man who had just come from a long journey. The deep underwash turned over and over.
