MORROW HOPES TO SUPPORT HOOVER IN CAMPAIGN OF 1932

New Jersey Candidate For Senate Reiterates Views On Prohibition and Eliminates Name From List

(By The Associated Press)

NJORK, N. J., Oct. 13.—Dwight W. Morrow, opening his campaign for election to the United States Senate on the Republican ticket, reiterated tonight his advocacy of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and eliminated himself as a candidate for the presidency in 1932.

Speaking from the same platform five months ago he first expressed himself in favor of repeal and in a speech before a large audience, he reported that view, commanded warmly President Hoover and the national administration.

"I look forward with pleasure and confidence to the opportunity of voting two years from now for the re-nomination and re-election of Herbert Hoover."

The same novices said: "it was safe for any Republican to contend in the United States was not pre-arranged through the efforts of a public who were instrumental in unemployment estates."

"Merely because I am a candidate for public office," he said, "was not sufficient to mitigate the suffering that hard times bring to many people whose margin of saving has been small."

Recognizes Situation

"Rather I want to recognize frankly the situation of the nation and I can go to each state and private and public agencies which are trying to remedy the difficulties."

Mr. Morrow is a candidate both for the Senate and for the Presidency and for the unexpired term of Walter E. Edge who resigned to become ambassador to France. His Democratic opponent is Rep. William T. Cragin, the one-term and remains a participant for the short term. The Republican nominee has been mentioned after the primary by most political experts as a strong possibility, whether almost $100,000 worth, as a presidential possibility, partly because of his unspoken declaration for prohibition alone.

Patriotic Factor

In his tribute to President Hoover, Mr. Morrow said: "President Hoover stands today a patient and positive factor for peace and good will throughout the world. His action in his uncompromising stand on the issue of capital in bringing the leaders of business and labor together in a spirit of frankness and good will in a great degree to an avoidance of these conflicts between capital and labor which so often in the past have caused periods of depression and delayed our industrial recovery."

"At a time of strife when so many parts of the world are in disorder, our foreign and domestic policy and our foreign policy and wisdom, President Hoover's initiative and driving force created the London disarmament conference, which stands as the first step in the history of the world's competition in all classes of naval armament among the leading nations of the world."

Two Americans Die In Moroccan Plane Crash

—TANZIER, Morocco, Oct. 13 (AP)—David Dix, 36, New Jersey, a writer, and Mrs. Dix, a painter, were killed yesterday morning as the plane in which they were flying turned a somersault in landing.

The pilot, M. Laguerre, and another passenger, M. Denzeli, also died.

A fog, compelling the ship to make a forced landing, was the cause of the accident. When the plane was set down it struck a sandstone and overturned.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Dix were taken to Paris where they were taken in charge by an American consul.

Boise Masons Plan To Find Missing Member

—YELLOW PINE, Idaho, Oct. 13 (AP)—Fifteen Masons will take the field today to search for R. H. Robertson, a member of the order, who has been lost for more than a week in the forest-covered mountains near Boise.

The Masons were recruited from the Lodge in Boise, of which Fred H. Johnson, master mason, will be prepared to stay in the forest five days working with forest rangers to cover all the territory in which the missing Idaho woodman was believed to be.

Texas Pilot Loses Life

—MCALLEN, Texas, Oct. 13 (AP)—Catey W. (Mike) Taylor, 28, licensed Texas pilot, was injured here today when a new open cockpit biplane they were testing fell in a tall tumbleweed. They were testing in a tall

INVADER OF JAIL AT BOISE PAYS $5 FINE IN KANGAROO COURT

BOISE, Oct. 13 (AP)—John Hipp, a fellow serving a sentence in a kangaroo court, paid $5 fine in jail while under the influence of kangaroo liquor. His mother, employer's teacher, roomed at the school and told him to pay his fine in jail even though he gave his instruction so that the fine spent in the jail might not be be worth it.

The first time the tutor made his appearance and the defendant had claimed that being him he did not feel he deserved a kangaroo court.

"You are guilty of breaking the law," said the judge, "but the ADA county attorney, 'no fine will be $5.'

The prisoners now have an 80-cent worth of smoking tobacco.

FLOODS IN TEXAS THREATEN CITIES

Rain Causes $350,000-Dam-age In Brady and Makes 200 Residents Homeless

DALLAS, Oct. 13 (AP)—Fed by recent rains, swollen, fast-moving water-soaked lands, Texas streams, from which many ranches are still under water, have raised their water levels over their banks and caused flooding.

Over a town of 8,000 population in McLennan County, again bore the mark of the disastrous flood of 1929 when the stream turned its course again overthrew, flooding 15 buildings houses and coming with two or three feet of land. Sixty-four persons were killed.

No Street Car Fatalities

Of note was the death of a man who was struck by a streetcar while walking along the tracks.

The rain, which has caused damage to stocks of goods in 200 houses was done and 200 persons were made homeless.

Arrived from Dallas, a woman, who had driven across the stream from Eden, with a torrential rain came.

The river on another side of town, again overthrew, flooding 15 businesses and homes and causing one of the first six deaths in the accident.

In a street car accident, which killed one death in 1929, no other car fatalities.

DEATHS FROM ALL CAUSES DECLINE IN IDAHO DURING 1929

Grim Reaper Claims 4177 Persons' Lives in 1928 and Only 4075 in 1929, Report to Department Reveals

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGON, Oct. 13—An increase in deaths in Idaho from 4,177 in 1928 to 4,075 in 1929, was reported today by the department of commerce.

The comparatively few causes of death which showed noticeable increases in 1929 as compared with 1928 were non-venereal mentalities which caused more than twice as many deaths as the next cause—the heart, cerebral hemorrhage and softening.

The principal decrease in death rates, however, occurred which taken more than 800 lives, the decrease from all causes—other diseases which caused fewer deaths in 1929 than in 1928, and nephritis, Bright's disease.

Deaths from non-venereal mentalities decreased considerably in 1929, and among dental causes, there was a fair decline in deaths from automobile accidents.

Friend of "Buffalo Bill" Finds Times Hard for Aging Musicians

BONNIE, Oct. 13 (AP)—Chris Lupp, aged minstrel who toured with "Buffalo Bill" in his heyday as a circus man, and who now is training actors in the old time minstrel art of singing and dancing, says the old-time minstrel sequitur, he has at least one friend who would like to see him.

Lupp, 80, is living limply in a home he built himself in a little town in central Idaho, framed, came into Bonne several weeks ago, seeking assistance of state authorities. He was "broken" and unable to work. He is an old man, but is still young, but is "weak as an old man," he said.

He is now here, a tramp and a leader of a band of vagabonds, having lost all his possessions.

"I am encroaching here with a chapter of this date," wrote Mr. Wells on September 29, "that just turned 100, I have a story. Mr. Lupp, also a Minnesotan, who at one time worked for me in Ogden in 1903, has always known him as a musician until age and the hardness of the times for musical organizations hit him, and left him stranded.

I have always known him as a honest man, and his story of army.

ARIZONA SCORES IN LAWSUIT INVOLVING DAM CONSTRUCTION

Supreme Court of Land Affairs Commonwealth to Institute Suit On Validity of Congressional Action

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—The Arizona State legislature, acting upon a bill introduced by Senator George W. Rauch, has filed a suit in the Supreme Court against the federal government on a congressional act authorizing construction of the Hoover dam.

Under the bill, the states will be entitled to a share of the hydro-electric power from the dam.

The state's case is that the bill violates the constitutionality of the act.

The court will hear the case on November 18. It is the second time the state has appealed the validity of the bill.

The court's decision will determine the validity of the bill.

BRAZILIAN CAPITAL WITNESSES SCENES INDICATIVE OF WAR

Thousands of Reservists Answer Call to Colors Amid Fanfare of Patriotic Fanfare at Seat of Government

(By The Associated Press)

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Scenes reminiscent of war were enacted in the Brazilian revolution. Thousands of reservists are answering the call to the colors amid a fanfare of patriotism. They are being promised that their jobs will be open to them again at the end of the fighting.

One man, dressed in military uniform, was hit by the loss of employes. Many of them are giving the men two salary in addition to offering to hold them their jobs again at the end of the fighting. Since Brazilian and Portuguese companies have made blank promises to their reservist employees back to the colors.

With reservists rapidly becoming active service, the government continues to march men toward the fighting scenes.

Men of the action centers in the country have been brought together to march in the streets of Rio de Janeiro.

HANDS OFF

As a result of the decision of the United States government to keep its hands off, it is about to hold the first free, popular election in its history."

So great a novelty is this that the natives seem rather nervous and uncertain, not knowing quite what to make of the situation. It will be something in the plight of Mexico when it begins to hold constitutional elections after the end of the Diaz regime.

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES
PRESIDENT: MARY G. RICHARDSON
NEW YORK CITY, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE

C. DEN ROSS

The whole effect of an otherwise quite commendable speech mentioning the opening of C. Den Ross's campaign for Governor of Idaho as the candidate of the Democratic party, is well nigh destroyed by frequent-voiced derogatory allusions and a markedly tendentious toot-tail.

It is not enough apparently for the candidate to denounce Idaho's primary election laws. In that there probably is a pretty general agreement among Idaho citizens. He might have gone further and advanced a definite proposition for bettering an admittedly bad job. But he didn't. Instead he seems to have contented himself with charging the whole account up to the Republican machine, and then launches out in a quothole attack on himself with a scolding asseveration that "the machine nominated the present Republican ticket and wrote the platform in the face of strong opposition of other candidates who in my judgment would have been nominated under the old primary law."

The catch comes in that there is no way of knowing whether the results would have been different—or more satisfactory—under the old primary law. Of course Mr. Ross or anyone else is entitled to his opinion, but the opinion he expresses is hardly to be raised as a convincing argument.

Two possible deleterious at-attractions of both parties this year suggested candidates of favorable aims and witnessed proceedings from underneath.

Whether the tiles drive at St. Anthony is to be preferred to the steam roller at Idaho Falls, time delects might better judge than a beneficiary of the operations.

More serious is Mr. Ross' mind assertion that "large sums of money belonging to the school children have been dissipated through the method of the state land board in making loans (of state school funds) to their friends and political co-workers."

Following Mr. Ross' introductory statement that "so far as any private citizen knows there never has been an accounting of this (state school) fund," that is bad enough. But without any evidence of basis in fact or warrant-in reason the candidate winds up with a swelling charge that "no doubt the principal of a large proportion of those loans will never be repaid to the state."

There is very serious question whether Idaho citizens want for their Governor so evidently disposed as Mr. Ross to pay fast and loose with serious affairs.

DEAD-END STREETS

The best contribution to solving city and suburban traffic problems, so a New York engineer told the road congress at Washington, would be to make more dead-end streets.

It is time to think seriously about that, and the subject is as interesting in Twin Falls as in larger towns. Dead-end streets have never been popular. Streets were lower, residents wanted to be able to drive through.

That is no longer true. There has been too much driving through. People are getting tired of the everlasting traffic, throughfares, and years for quiet berths. Business places find they do not benefit much from through traffic. The property on dead-end streets grows more desirable.

And thus the time is ripe for big traffic improvement.

The new idea, instead of having many cross streets intersecting through main thoroughfares, traffic lines and railroads, to dead-end about three-fourths of such streets against the hour-glasses or tracks. Thus a great source of danger could be removed. Three-fourths of the grade crossings would be eliminated, and the present speed of traffic there would still be plenty of

"WHAT A WIDOW" NOW FEATURES AT ORPHEUM

A KID'S CARE
What President Hoover will probably remember longest of his recent journey is a bank's conversion, is now a cake baked for him. The cake was made by an eleven-year-old boy, the son of his host. True all around. The president was so impressed that he called the young baker into conference, and presented him with a $50.00 check.

The incident may require a lot of kids to turn into the kitchen and other boys by insisting on learning how to cook. And it would be a fine thing for them. It would keep them out of mischief. It would be a good use of our resources for their own future.

If you ask how this particular kid happened to break into the culinary game, the answer's easy and also illuminating. Two weeks ago, when he was nine, an electric mining machine had been installed in the kitchen. Immediately he wanted to mix things.

The key to a boy's heart these days is mechanics. Give him any kind of mechanical contraption, and work becomes play.

SESSION HERE INCLUDES GOODING SCHOOL EVENT

GOODING, Oct. 12 (Special to The News)—One of the many group gatherings scheduled for the teachers' international convention next week comes October 17 and 18, to the Gooding college banquet. This will be held at the Methodist church on Saturday evening. Refreshments will be made for 100 senior students and graduates at that time. Local arrangements are in charge of Harold Robert, 25, student at the Gooding faculty. Superintendent Hirata Fyr, '38, Bruceau, president of the Alumni association, will preside.

Only one foot specialist in Twin Falls, Idaho, Dr. Foster, Adt., will be the under direction of Mrs. Helen Pipe.

Golfing Lady From Missouri
Gives Practical Demonstration That Average Length Shots Win Game

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—While the gallantry of golf bowed to the defending titleholder and other stars, Mrs. Opal S. Hill, hardly noticed, not spectacular, but decidedly steady, slipped it today to post 79, two under, and closed with honors in the qualifying round of the 1930 women's national amateur golf championship.

The golfing lady from Missouri, who took up the game six years ago, with all health benefits, gave a practical demonstration that averages length shots win games.

She did not play a single hole in the rough and that old adage, "I'm never in trouble," is correct in application.

After finishing her round, she went out in 40, one over par, but topped three strokes off of slapping fingers, and added a stretch. That shot of sub-par went good enough to show the way to Miss Glenna Collett, New York City, seeking the amateur golf title in the all-line, gloves and others when names are considerably better known in the annals of the royal and ancient game.

New York Girl Wins

One sleek girl beat the leading teams. Helen Kruis, from the country club from Inwood, Long Island, New York, did for third place with par 80. Mrs. Iris Collett, wife of the New York City golfing man, won the all-line, gloves and others, which names are considerably better known in the annals of the royal and ancient game.

As a player, Mrs. Leon Pessler, former State champion, was in this event last year, well up among the leaders.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Philadelphia, 1930, was second with 80.

Miss Mae McNeir, Cincinnati, 1929.

Miss Ruth, then Dorothy Campbell, Miss Ruth, then Dorothy Campbell, won her first title in 1929. Miss Hollings were the crown in 1921.

Jim Thorpe Quits
Competitive Ball

PONCA CITY, Okla., Oct. 13 (AP)— Jim Thorpe, Indian gridiron, is through with competitive football. The 38-year-old, once-veteran Carlisle backfield performer, abjured the Kansas City semi-pros at Lawrence Stadium and signed with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I was rotten," he stated frankly. "I'm through. Getting off and stiff, you know, I can't play competitive ball."

Thorpe visited his two children, who are attending Chilocco Institute.

the university of the nation, and the movement of the people in their support of many of the changes in point of view from older conceptions both of religion and government.

He said that these historical events are reflected in our national life and institutions, in religious thought and practices and even of adherents to Protestant faith and in governments through the principles of separation of church and state.

He said that, we must not forget the cause of the people, for whom we must stand.

Thorpe's statement, which was sent to newspapers from the office of the national Catholic welfare commission, came as follows:

"It is almost in order for President Hoover to send a message of congratulation on the heroic work done by Americans of all faiths in the fight for the adoption of the constitutional amendment, which President Hoover sent to him, for the celebration of Reformation Sunday, the predecessor of the day in which he received the letter of his death as president of the United States.

"It may suffice here that the mass of the family to many millions of American citizens. It may matter little that the statement is historical and recordable, but it is not a claim of the separation of church and state, but a most arbitrary defense of state absolutism.

Thorpe said that when the whole institutional structure of our country and its institutions, that the preachers of all the people, who is a vast variety of beliefs, accept the religious rights of all, communitate one particular religious body on the changes it makes to the older conception of the church and state.

The secretary said that every person who is protected from foreign competition which has saved the American people, will be the more likely to succeed in our country and its institutions, that we as a nation should commend the Protestant personal and the events from which these might have originated.

Booth Looms As Backfield Ace

Formidable Fullback of Yale,
Vanquisher of "Red" Cagle
and Army Team Last Year,
Makes Bid For Spotlight

(This is the first of a series dealing with backfield men, who are prime examples of the most outstanding performers in this season's gridiron plays.)

By LOREN BRUNTON

(Associated Press Sports Writer)—NEW YORK, Oct. 13—With another back crack his way into the ranks of the superstars this season, and if he does, will he capture the nation's imagination as Red Orange and the Cagle did?

Only the world games later in the season are yet to determine what performers, if any, will scale the heights of superlativeness.

And indeed there is little able Booth of Yale, who looks perhaps most formidable as an act of accumulation.

Though he had to give up the Yale job after the Army game, curiously enough it was Red Cagle, playing the momentum of his own success, who made him a super star.

THE ROSE IN THE DARK

Lester hesitated.
"Who it is—was—doesn't matter now. The whole idea is impossible," he said at length.

"It is impossible for the same reason that it is impossible for me to meet the lady who is coming here to you."

"What reason?"

"Mrs. Ellerman."

"I'm afraid I didn't get you. All that you were talking about was Mrs. Ellerman."

"You met that girl in the hall last night. Find her head when you scratch her hatchet."

"Please so."

"Mrs. Ellerman was on duty, of course, you invited her into the drawing room I gathered from her tone that she stayed there until after the service."

"I was asleep by the time she left but I guess Lyman's arrested. You want me to make a statement to him. It's my reputation. I've even taken away her means of getting a living."

"I don't think so," Grancock's voice was harsh with distress. "She's done for as a nurse. I want out, that's about it. She had her job of nursing—she took care of the patients while we all lay down. And she played safe—not because she reckoned in the time in the drawing room will you."

Lester sweetly abandoned that line of argument.

"Yes, I see. You're right here, of course. Anyways, I have informed Mrs. Ellerman. There are no two ways about that."

"Is she a respectable girl?"

"Absolutely. And she's like—"

"Rather lovely. Dark eyes and hair and dark eyebrows. And she's got a little bit of a smile."

"Is she any kind of a character? Is she—she's—"

"My guardian. I live there alone with my husband. But I'm sorry, he's not here."

"The police don't seem to know anything much about her. But my partner, who was brought up by a relative who was way out—what's the matter?"

"Would he be any use to you?"

"Go on." Lester took a deep breath. His heart-like mind, driving in and out, was not able to get enough air from those two who had so suddenly floundered.

"She's sensible and hard-headed. And she's got everything. I'm not. She has only one weakness and that's—well, she's terribly kind about me. Books. Well, from what I can see, she's got a good knowledge of books."

"It's not a rare quality, though."

"What is your feeling for her?"

"I'm sure the enough of her to make her happy."

"Do you consider you owe it to her to ask her to marry her?"

"No. I do. Only, I want your opinion."

"You're only personal person who can judge," Grancock looked embarrassed.

"I suppose I am. But I don't want to marry without your consent," Lester said.

"If you feel it's the right thing to do in the circumstances," said Grancock with unconvincing irony.

"I'm not only personal person who can judge," Grancock looked embarrassed.

"I suppose I am. But I don't want to marry without your consent," Lester said.

"Thank a lot, Sock," I knew you'd help me make up my mind. I'll go in town tomorrow, then, and see if I can get some advice."

"She has felt Southward?"

"I understand I can't stay up to play it or two but as soon as I am up to play it, I'm settled to let you know."

Chapter II

ROSE IS EXAMINED

"Sally!" said Mr. Perle, "Bully and the same time draw a sharp line between us."

"Put me the taxon," commanded his young companion.

"E'en in sun," said Mr. Perle, "Percy, you're the same as ever but the pollen of your mother's day has deteriorated into such an elegant little affectation but your generation can eat know."

"I had to hear a just a job which was all interrupted by your mother's day. I'm not good enough to fit into your life," she said, paper into the bacon dish and sat up in her chair. "Are you being so free with information of a woman's mind as making her a good companion? Can you tell me what it is?"

"Yes, Mrs. Bartholomew," said Hale, "I wanted to tell you the truth but my aunt and uncle were watching me. They couldn't be told to look after a girl just out of school."

Mr. Perle looked hurt.

"The resources of my simple establishment are at your disposal," he said coolly. "I want to give you a place to live in your home if you need you immediately."

"I didn't say I didn't get enough to live on," said Mr. Perle. "And I never cut out anything. And I always have a few good friends or any fun I suppose my clothes are good enough. Come on."

"Not 'enough,'" chided Mr. Perle, still more gently, "Not 'only.' Never will be in place of this fine old establishment."

"Oh, I know Rose," said Mrs. Bartholomew. She dashed down her napkin and fled from the room.

Through the long hours she slumped up to her own quarters. A servant was moving about in the bedroom but the little sitting-room was empty and lit into the darkness. Her eyes glistened with a glamp of terror as she sat.

She stopped, as someone entered the room.

"Thank you, mrs. Mrs. Bartholomew. I'm fine," said the housekeeper. "I thought you were still at home."

"I've brought up some fresh flowers," she said.

"Thank you, Mrs. Denning."

There was a mirror hanging to her left and, by turning her head,
