Suspicions of Murder

DENVER, Dec. 3 (UPI)—Testifying in the trial of his wife, Pearl charged with the murder of her husband, Leo O'Loughlin, a Denver detective, today, he said he was tipped off by a woman companion at the party which preceded the killing.

He said he suspected of her the entire two days before the finding of the body of his deceased wife.

None of his daughter's friends were kept from O'Loughlin for five days after she disappeared from home for a week, he asserted.

"Go to Berkley lake. That's a Italy spot. When you hear Pearl, you'll know her," he told a fellow detective.

He gave today, the fifth in the long court battle through which the state hopes to send the woman to the chair or to the penitentiary for life.

The child's body was found in Berkeley lake two days before
a member of the Denver detective force. Clarence Jones, to search the lake. The whereabouts of his daughter, missing since October 16, was unknown. O'Loughlin said October 19. Newspapers had been prevented from the ward in which he was a patient. No visitors were allowed to call him except his wife and they were sworn to hold their alliance.

Yet the father felt his daughter had been killed.

"Why did you suggest Detective Jones search Berkeley lake?" John Mealing, chief of defense counsel, asked him.

"I don't know. I just thought there might be a secret in the house."

Turn in a whisper:
"That was the first time I had ever suspected her."

Cardinal Manager Tells of Trouble

Branch Rickey Declares
Minors Can Not Survive
Without Majors' Help

By HERBERT W. BARBER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 3— Branch Rickey, president and business manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, told the National Association of Professional Football that the first class minor league baseball or at least a part of it could not survive without help from major baseball.

He said the association, the first of the national associations to discuss relations between the major and minor leagues, had called the so-called "one star" players.

The Cardinals represent the largest chain of "farm clubs" in the game, with 12 minor league franchises, the earliest being 1912.

He said the association, which is one of the earliest franchises men in the baseball world, told the association that 12 minor league teams were in financial difficulties from which only the majors could extract them.

The others, he said, were in trouble because they had to require guarantees that players on minor league clubs, which are owned by the major clubs, would not be signed by the players on clubs owned by independent interests.

Rickey said it would be a hardship to make it hard for a player on a minor league club to be signed by another club owned by the same owner.

The rule provides that if a major team keeps a player on a minor league club, which may keep the same player on option for no more than two years.

General Discussion:
General discussion of the proposed merger was precipitated when L. J. Wyllie, president of the Three-Eye League, proposed to the National Football Conference for today's draft that the conference, the national board of arbitration should interpret the rules of the draft.

"Subsequently," he said, "the meeting was withdrawn and when the general hospital tonight, suffering from diphtheria, after a week return to the hospital with paraplegia. Physicians said Drury's illness was the result of a severe cold.

He was against the rule for a major league club to be signed by another club owned by an independent interest.

Alabama And Cougars Crash In Rose Bowl Game

ON THE SIDELINES by BRIAN BELL

THEY take their football seriously in the Territory of Hawaii.

Coach Otto Klum of the University of Hawaii, who has been on the island for eight years as a professor in gridiron geometry, invented the game here and the natives took to it as their take to the game.

"It probably is the greatest place in the world for club football," Coach Klum pointed out. "All the schools have their teams, hundred of them. The boys graduate to the club teams and play there indefinitely unless they come to the university."

THREE traditional barefoot Hawaiian football players have shoes on now. That is, most of them have. A lot of the smaller club aggregations still play barefoot.

These barefoot kickers, boot the pigskin exactly like the United States players do, catching the ball on their instep.

Clem Judd, quarterback on the Roaring Rainbow, as the Hawaiian university pleases to call itself, said that it always stings a little when you first start kicking that way but you soon get used to it.

On the Kickoff, the kicker doubles his toe kick when barefooted, and strikes the oval with the heel of his foot.

It sounds complicated. The Hawaiians admit that it is.

COACH KLUM is another of the gridiron mentors who have blazed a trail of glory on the field of action. He was an Oregon state reserve and saw little play. He attended Knute Rockne's coaching school and the Hawaiians use the Notre Dame shift.

Coach Klum says he gets many letters from athletes on the mainland, giving athletic credentials and asking for scholarships, jobs, and what have you.

"I never answer these because we want to develop football in Hawaii," he said.

Many former college stars who go to the island to the take up occupations play on the club teams, Coach Klum said.

He ordinarily has about 40 men out for practice every season.

On his squad this year, a team he rates as the best Hawaii ever had had there are 17 Hawaiians, four Caucasians, or Indians, as they call them on the islands, two Chinese, one Korean, one Japanese and one Portuguese.

VANDALISTS BRING MUSICAL PROGRAM

Mixed Chorus From University of Idaho Plans Concert In Twin Falls

One of the real musical treats of the season for residents of Twin Falls was the presentation of a mixed chorus by the students of the Vandals, the mixed chorus of 17 from the University of Idaho, on December 8, believes C. L. Nick, advisor for local chapters of the Farmers of America who has handled the "Vandals" for the past two years. The Vandals will give their program at the high school auditorium, beginning at 8 o'clock. Representatives of the Twin Falls in letters from students at the university telling of the success of the Vandals' musical program are awaiting Mr. Nick's arrival. The Vandals are more than a club now. J. T. Bainbridge, high school director of music says, "Primarily they are stages for the talents of individuals, both boys and girls. They sing individually, in smaller groups; play instruments; present features; do all kinds of things that can be imagined along entertainment lines."

Three changes of costume are used for the concert during the hour and a half concert. Each soloist wears a costume which identifies his or her feature number. Their program is full of living melody and without vocal parts. It flows along without any break. There is time for a short intermission, time for any group change of costume.

The Vandals were organized and directed by Professor Carlton Cummins, head of the music department. He believes that a mixed chorus enables the best talent to be included, and makes a more varied organization.

Can you imagine a similar organization at Chicago? That would be famous throughout the Middle West.

Talents in the Vandals, he says, is better right now than anything he has ever seen. The students have a range of leading exercises in added conservatories in the East and Midwest.

The law provides that foreign goods may be imported into the country for reprocessing or manufacture, and that the government, but not the importer, must pay the tariff, but the importer is required to make arrangements to insure the payment of the tariff in the event the goods are not reshipped to another country of origin or to another foreign country.

In this connection, please see our Bill Tariff Act of 1930, copy of which is being sent you under separate cover.
