Pipelines Carry Natural Gas From Texas Over Middle West

55,000-MILE SYSTEM REPRESENTS VALUE OVER $300,000,000

Construction—in Panhandle fields Proves Mainstay of Steel Industry

PROJECTS GIVE WORK TO THOUSANDS OF MEN

Engineers Fix Total of Resources Near 111 Million Cubic Feet

From a huge reservoir of natural gas in the Texas Panhandle, nine major pipelines radiate in a 5500-mile network. A tenth line 1000 miles long is under contract, and others are proposed.

A MARILLO, Texas, Feb. 21—Natural gas from the Panhandle of Texas is being piped to furnaces in many industrial plants and to millions of homes in the Midwest.

Pipelines that tap this huge reservoir of potential power, underlying millions of acres in the Panhandle, reach out to the industrial centers of a dozen states, from Colorado to Indiana and Kentucky.

Nine major pipelines representing a 5500-mile network (not including tributaries) and a tenth line of at least 1000 miles have been built out of the Panhandle field in the last five years.

Most of them are in service, while a few await final connections to the fields. The tenth, already approximately 1000 miles, is under contract, and still others are proposed.

Automobiles were halted during the journey, Mrs. Schroeder and Dague were asked if they desired to see the Panhandle of Texas. The man answered in the affirmative and a soft drink. Dague asked for two sandwiches. Mrs. Schroeder in better spirits, laughed and joked almost constantly, she said, Dague, while not wearing the same light hearted attitude as the woman who has come to be termed the "blonde bandit," did not appear at all depressed.

Later a number of the crowd looked on another show and showed little demand for something to eat. The frightened proprietor gave out food until the strong became loquacious and he called for military aid. The crowd again was scattered. Governor De la Huerta issued an ultimatum requiring all ranches, bars, gambling halls, mills and other businesses to close their doors by midnight and replace them with Mexican hotels. Numerous Americans were "thrown out" of Mexico and American consuls of businesses in the city were stopped at the border and released only after a long stay in the United States.

STRIKE PICKETS LOSE BECAUSE OF MEMORIES

BREIDENBACH, Australia, Feb. 19 (AP)—Passenger planes were used in a widespread strike. A plane's strike threatened to cripple the sheep-raising industry in the state of New South Wales. Strike pickets guarded all border roads and railroads. But strikers were routed in a neighboring state by plane, and before the strikers realized they had been outwitted the hearing was well under way.

PROGRESS

COMMUNITY STRENGTH

Forward thinkers of this community are responsible for the initial steps in the construction of this new hotel. The completion of this great project depends not upon individual enterprise, but the ability of many of us, as a community, to realize the benefits resulting from it and to lend our support after giving it careful study and thought.

If the progress of a few short weeks is a criterion of the possible success of this community project, then we all may look forward to one of the greatest successes in the history of this tract.

The plan has met with wide approval. People are realizing more and more what an attraction such an enterprise, backed by Twin Falls people, will mean to outside interests.

Consequently, through the spirit manifested, Twin Falls will soon be the recipient of a brand new hotel ... not only great in structure, but great in the spirit that builds it. Community spirit is community strength. Twin Falls will profit further by the added activity in merchandising, building and travel. The reception so heartily given by the Twin Falls tract to this plan assures us of the building which means Twin Falls has taken a great step forward.

ARCHITECTS DRAWING OF THE PARAMOUNT HOTEL

If you have not already given this plan careful thought do so. Picture the benefits accruing from such an enterprise ... to you and to this community.

Molecular Metal Mists Make Modern Moldable Mirrors

NEW PROCESS GIVES DURABLE REFLECTOR
UPON ANY SURFACE

C. Hawley Cartwright Develops New Apparatus at Institute in California

VACUUM PROVIDES FOR METALIC EVAPORATION

Thin Coat of Quartz-Molecules Makes Base Material Resistant to Chemicals

(By The Associated Press)
PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 21
—Metal mists make mirrors by a new process at California Institute of Technology.

These mirrors can be laid upon metal, cloth, paper, rubber, or nitro-cellulose membranes. Their surfaces are a mixture of gold, copper or chromium; in fact, in different metals and also such non-metals as quartz, diamond and silver chloride have been used.

These mirrors are so durable that they seem immune from the "fretting" that has been a trouble with the old "luc" type.

The process was developed by C. Hawley Cartwright, a young physicist, assisted by John Strong, and color photography expert, spectroscopy and laboratory workers requiring particularly sensitive and true mirrors are especially interested in the new work.

The mirror making is done in a vacuum. The process is similar to that of breaking up the gold, silver or other metal into molecules by electrical means.

These molecules then bombard the plate or material to be used as the base of the mirror. Other lines of research are being carried on, especially in connection with the physical cause of reflection, propagation, dispersion and absorption, and especially that they cannot be destroyed even by the chemical reactions which destroy other mirrors.

Quartz Process
A second process, called "quartz life," particularly in connection with chemicals. This is merely a repetition of the first process, but instead of metals, quartz is used.

An array of quartz molecules chases through the vacuum and lines up on top of the metal. But this deposit is ever so thin, just a wavelength, Cartwright explains.

By this means Cartwright solved
the trouble Dr. Albert A. Michelson had with mirrors for testing the speed of light at Santa Ana, near here.

Every six months the great telescope mirrors at Mount Wilson were to be refigured, and every two years the reflecting telescope at Lick was altered, and every two years by Cartwright's method the mirrors could be renewed in a few days.

His says: "Without other care than dusting."

Experiments will follow on the smaller quartz mirrors, to make certain that they will not be injured by subjecting them to the vacuum.

FEATURE FLASHES FROM FAR-FLUNG FOREIGN FIELDS ::::

ITALY'S WAGE CUTS AND TURNOVER TAX HIT MIDDLE CLASS

Mussolini's Order to Lower Salaries Falls to Aid "White Collar" Workers In Trade Balance Move

(By The Associated Press) ROME, Feb. 21.—Mussolini's order of last fall, cutting wages and living costs, have proved no boon to the "white collar" men of Italy.

Economists calculate that the measure have transformed government officials into exploiters and opened up possibilities for added Italian exports that may elude the American adverse balance of trade.

The experts also have figured that reductions in living costs have reduced the cost of living to the level of the masses; but those who subsist on salaries have had no such compensating for the decreased income.

Living Costs Lowered
The dues made a cut in public payrolls that averaged 10 per cent, that measure was adopted by the government as a required reduction in rent, bread, macaroni, cheap clothing and other necessities.

The government could enforce this because of the close government control of business under fascism. Merchants who balked at the enforced bargain sales had their goods seized and were periods and their market prohibited.

The cut in government payrolls was necessitated by a deficit of around $500,000 in the first half of the fiscal year. The savings from this on the second half of the year amount to only about three-fourths of that sum, so other cuts were needed.

Very quickly, therefore, Mussolini raised the business turnover tax from a half of the per cent to 10 per cent. This was figured to produce $400,000 but not more than 10 per cent will bring in around $25,000,000 and result in a year-end surplus.

SHIRERS Get Rid of Taxes
Right here is where the "white collar" men find the source of their woes. They pay a better class of taxes than the masses and must still pay last autumn's taxes in full.

Moreover, that tax is cumulative. Sometimes it is imposed eight or ten times on an article which passes through many intermediate hands before reaching the user.

BALLOT LOOMS IN FREE STATE SOON

Eucharistic Congress of Roman Catholic Church Prompts Early Election

CORK, Ireland, Feb. 21 (AP)—A general election in the Irish Free State is forecast for next May, and the government may make haste to make a making ready for it.

The voting would have come in regular course next year, but the Eucharistic congress of the Roman Catholic church will be held in Dublin in 1932 and the government wishes to have all political activities out of the way before that.

It is expected, therefore, that the government will resign as soon as the budget has been passed.

Some political observers are beginning to feel that Eamon de Valera's nationalists have a good chance of defeating the forces of President Cosgrave at the polls. Others, however, point out that the nationalists are no longer at the peak of the popularity which Valera factor has not made any appreciable gains either.

These experts look, therefore, for an increase in Labor and independent members of Dail.

All parties have appealed for campaign funds but this far there has been no marked response. The party war chests are not, however, in depleted state and all hands look for some lively campaigning.

Argentina Arranges For Elaborate Entertainment Of Royal Visitors

Nation Outlines Brilliant But Strenuous Program For "Britain's Salesmen"

(By The Associated Press) BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 21.—A brilliant but strenuous three weeks have been outlined for the visit in Argentina of the Prince of Wales and Princess George, the British royal salesmen.

A brief playtime in the late afternoon of the Argentine and will be followed by a sojourn at the swanky resort of Mar del Plata, the capital and climaxed by the formal opening of the British trade exhibition.

It is this event which brought the royal brothers to South America and which is being met according to the best British tradition.

While in Buenos Aires and at the seashore, the two princes will be housed guests of Sir Ronald Maclean, the British ambassador, and Lady Maclean. In most other respects, however, they will be official guests of the Argentine government.

The royal party is to cross into Argentina from Chile late in February. They will halt a few days at Montevideo, Uruguay, and be quartered on the 25,000 acre estate of the Orizuela family.

The prince and princess will be housed in a "palace" on a hill, which is being built on a hillside. The prince and princess will be housed in a "palace" on a hill, which is being built on a hillside.

From San Antonio on March 4 the royal pair will take the air for a quick trip to Mar del Plata, center of Argentine social life in the southern summer season. The steaming train will take the prince and princess to the Argentine capital, Buenos Aires.

When the heir to the British throne was here in 1925 he went about informally, carrying an umbrella, wearing a hat, and being greeted by a crowd of admirers. This time he will be greeted by a crowd of admirers.

The next day and again on March 6 both princes are to fly to Buenos Aires for social programs arranged as preliminaries to the expedition.

MOSCOW DIVORCES RESULT IN VEXING HOUSING PROBLEM

Getting Separations Proves Easy But Crowded Conditions Force Divorcees to Remain in Same Homes

(By The Associated Press) MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—Where to live after divorce is one of the new vexing questions of Moscow.

It is an offshoot of the housing problem, which has grown more acute as thousands of workers have been drawn to the cities by the government's industrial program.

Getting the divorce is easy; it is no children either the husband or the wife signs a register, pays a small fee and the thing is done.

But with rooms at a premium, they must, at present, continue to live in the same quarters or sleep in the streets.

By law each person is entitled to a living space of 35 square feet. A married couple, therefore, may have twice that area in which to move and have their children, but at things are a husband and wife who have a room to themselves are considered lucky.

Crowded Rooms—In many cases, the husband and wife are crowded in the one room.

A woman who got a divorce after seven years of wedded life, related that she searched in vain for new living quarters. So she and her ex-husband continued to live in the single room, although they did not speak to each other for seven months.

The only escape from the impasse would be for each to discover a new mate simultaneously. There would be a general exchange of quarters that would solve the problem.

This idea in Russia is just like that in every country, but in one of these days, when the theories of Lenin become facts, there will be room for everybody and divorce will have happy endings.

Father of English Probation Law Retires After 23 Years on Bench

LONDON, Feb. 21 (AP)—After 23 years on the bench, Sir Robert Walker, father of English probation law, has retired from the bench of the London Sessions.

At 80 the strain of judicial work, with its attendant pains and ailing, in England, has left the venerable jurist remarkably free from signs of the ordeal.

Sir Robert became interested in probation work years ago when he found that, under the then existing laws, he could not impose a long prison sentence on an aged woman from the south of England who had a pair of shoes to replace the "rags" in which her feet were clad.

As the result of his campaigning the Probation Act of 1907 was passed, and the robes of Session 23 years ago.

Not a little of the credit for long-pending work has been his.

A survey revealed that there are about 200,000 inmates in the country, most of the victims of the World War and dependent on the state for maintenance. The survey also showed about 1,700,000 as capable of some form of work.

A central institute of mental health has been established to study the capabilities of these persons, especially for farm work. One of the first steps was to study the degree of fatigue to which they may be subjected.
