JANETTE A. HILL, 8:
At least six other children and the bus driver, J. D. Kregger are in critical condition tonight. Two hospital patients in the city as a result of the accident and several of the seriously injured were being cared for at their homes.

The children, all pupils of the John G. Fremont school, were being taken home in the afternoon when the accident occurred. Investigation disclosed that the bus which witnessed saw the bus blow up above and what then proceeded across the grade crossing directly in front of the slow-moving freight train. The bus was traveling in the intersection of the main highway and the Santa Fe tracks.

15 Children on Bus:

The chassis of the bus, which were 23 children in the bus, almost all of them being injured, but some only slightly.

In addition to following the accident the two hospitals were besieged by anxious parents and friends of the children.

But before the last conclusion Kregger, the bus driver, had tried to stop his bus at the crossing and thought he was putting the gears in neutral. Instead of putting the bus into neutral, however, he must have put them in mesh. The car leaped ahead into the path of the train.

Other witnesses said Kregger got out and said:

"I never saw the train at all."

Confusion Reigns:

Confusion reigned at the scene of the wreck and at hospitals where parents struggled to find their injured children. Some mothers claimed the bodies of their dead. American physicians and specialists were summoned from San Francisco.

The only eye-witnesses of the accident were the two drivers, who were in a automobile dispute behind the bus. Wickham said the barge would remain.

HEART OF ANIMAL "LIVES" WEEK IN BODY OF ANOTHER

Dr. Wallace M. Yater Finds Transplanted Organs Can Remain Normal For Short Period in Tests

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON. May 7.—Heart of one animal has been transplanted into the body of another and made to "live" temporarily in its experiments at George Washington University.
Dr. Wallace M. Yater, professor of medicine, is making the experiments in an effort to discover why organs from one individual can not be transplanted into the body of another individual.

He has taken the heart from one animal and "grafted" it into the circulatory system of another so that it will beat normally.

Dr. Yater has not replaced the heart of one animal with the heart of another.

It is known that the heart of one animal—born or derived from the same individual and will function permanently there as efficiently as in its former location.

This can not be done with organs from two different individuals, even when the transfer is from one twin to another. Dr. Yater says.

The transplanting of hearts from one animal to the other, however, seems to be done when the blood stream of the second animal flows through it.

Delicate Surgery

All but one each of the arteries and veins leading to and from the transplanted heart were found to be in the body of the second animal, usually in the neck, and connected with the animal's circulatory system through the single artery which had been transplanted.

Blood passed through the transplanted heart once more, and it functioned just as if it were still in the body of the first animal.

Both the heart and the veins leading to and from the transplanted heart were found to be in the body of the second animal, usually in the neck, and connected with the animal's circulatory system through the single artery which had been transplanted.

If the reason for this "heartily" successful experiment is known, there is a possibility, in the opinion of Dr. Yater, that some organs can be transplanted successfully from one animal to another.

CARL R. GRAY FINDS FUTURE OPTIMISTIC

President of Union Pacific System Predicts Return of Railroad Prosperity

CHICAGO, May 7 (Special to The News)—Taking issue with those who have voiced a pessimistic outlook for American railroads and declaring his belief that there is no question what railroad transportation will do in the future, Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific system, was one of the principal speakers here last night at the dinner of the Associated Traffic Clubs of America. Addressing the 1,500 members of the association, Mr. Gray said he intended to deal in any statistics and certainly in no promises nor to mention the question of competition in transportation, fair or unfair migration, or anything else, but that he believed the general public today is entertaining a better realization of the necessity for the maintaining of an efficient system of transportation.

"The railroads are now sharing the disposition from which all businesses that the railroads have had back-to-entertain-an-audience—out-that American business will recover and this no one for a minute be- lieved," he said. "When business is dependent upon business conditions, when business conditions break, they will come back—it is im- possible in the final analysis for the railroads to be kept from partici- pating in the nation's prosperity as it is dependent upon the nation's prosperity in its fluctuations. The railroads are not a part of any man-made or man-invented scheme, but are a natural product of the great majority of traffic they are carrying—present and even more so in the future."

He said that they have in themselves elements of strength which the ordinary industry does not have. In despite of present reports will substantiate,

he said, their earnings reach the

a high level which industry sometimes attains, but throughout it all they have presented a picture which is dim and hazy, but which has been more or less present," said Mr. Gray, "that the steam railways which have been the fundamental transportation in America for a century are not to be expected to change in any way, and to do so I take exception.

FORMER WARDEN TELLS WOMAN'S MOVE TO ESCAPE

Prison Administration Constantly On Guard Against Lyda Southard's Break-

Over Walls to Liberty

Lyda Southard's intention to escape from the Idaho state Penitentiary at Boise was evident long before she succeeded in carrying out her purpose into execution last Monday night, within a month after Mr. Wheeler turned the prison administration over to his successor.

The hundred women who were sent to the 10-year-old term for life had reached safety, and it was apparent to communicate with the outside world, the former warden said.

"On one occasion," he said, "we had reason to believe that Mrs.
Southard had signed David C. Minger's papers, which will be held in escrow until she has been able to have aid in her escape." And other time he had written to the prison from the prison farm he engaged in conversation with Mrs. Southard about the wall under the window in her quarters in the women's dormitory.

That Mrs. Southard was plotting and planning to get away, and naturally, we were on guard against that possibility. Of course, nothing had happened, and what might be expected in future

No Floral Tributes
The former warden expressed unwillingness to believe that the two sections of the metal together to make a ladder with which to scale the 14-foot prison wall, had been constructed inside the prison walls.

A small service room, which had been used by the guard who, it is believed, was the author of the plot, was never used by any prison employee. The guard who, they say, made it, of course, is dead."

Flowers never were grown in the ladies' dormitory, and the ladder had been constructed inside the prison, the former warden said.

Mrs. Southard never manifested any interest in growing of flowers while at the prison during her stay there, he said.

She wrote many letters and communicated with her mother or other relatives. "One," stated Mr.
Wheeler, "came to the warden to say that her son once a year had a letter from his wife, Mrs. Wheeler, and if it was actually made inside the walls the work must have been done quite secretly, and the ladder must have been taken out by the warden who was never detected," he said.

The former warden expressed disappointment with his successor in a difficult situation following the recent woman's escape, the first escape over the prison wall in several years.

During a severe windstorm that was injured in a collision between one of the parked

Rajah's Fury at Teammates' Early Minor League Tendencies Proves Boof; As Club Loses Listlessness

By PAUL H. MICKELSON

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, May 7.—Outward disgust with the early minor league tendencies and habits of his mates has caused Rogers Hornsby so thoroughly that he promptly pinned his cap to his shirt collar as the receiver of the first batted hit after baseball's big tops.

The Rajah is angry, and his fury has sent him off with a great start in his comeback fight. His big war cry is louder than ever before in the early stages of the baseball campaign.

It was in the Cub open at Pittsburgh that the Rajah lost his temper and began taking it out on his teammates.

At the end of the first two innings of that game the Club booted baseball and played like rancid

6 to 6 in mid-inning. Hornsby reddened.

He glared at his players and then picked up his bat.

Says New York:

"Crash, crash, crash — in three straight games at Pittsburgh he derided the ball and out of the field. He broke his arm, and the team had to leave the league record for runs batted in by drivers in eight games beat the P's."

Drivers single handed.

Then Hornsby bashed out four hits in five attempts and then continued taking vengeance at other baseball parks.

It is difficult to track the fancy of this Rajah. Once, while in three straight games, he hit his comeback average from .260 to .425, his mate began to hit. A new spirit pervaded the Club.

Once Mayes, '70, for '14 years, was a player and fan, who has been out of the game for eight years, but who is planning a comeback this year with his city club.

Another Mayes, '14, for '14 years, is the first year of the National League in 1876 when A. C. Spalding was in his prime as a pitcher. Mayes started playing about the same time.

The Rajah was limited in length to 1920. The same year he became active as a player and in 1922.

He received a trial with the Pittsburgh club of the National in 1870 as a little boy. A broken hand ended his career, but he became a professional ball-for-20 years around Brooklyn, Pennsylvania.

Such stars as Rube Waddell and Shreck, famous Athletic battery men, and such pitchers as Jim Wallace and Wallace of the Browns, Rhyne of Pittsburgh, Rhodes of Cincinnati and Single, Chicago outfielder, play Holmes were the heroes of the club.

It is fielding even better than he did in 1920 before the injury jinx.

Now he is going after all the ball, hot and amiable, and even pop ups back on the grass. He looks faster, although he cannot be expected to cover the ground he did a year ago.

One remarkable feature of Hornsby's apparent comeback is his fast start. Even in his best years when he was a star, he could not get to .400. At 40, however, he was hotly touted a weak blit in both attack and a composure.

A veteran ball player who has been tracking Rajah for several years remarked:

"Don't take that guy into the ranks of the has-beens yet. He still has plenty of fight left in him, and in his case this will be like one of his best years. He likes to hit and he can hit. But most of all he likes to win and the best way to win is to think that."

Boxing Problem Turns Into War

NEW YORK, May 7 (AP)—A boxing problem that may have turned into a war between the two strongest men in the world of sports has been settled in federal court here tomorrow morning.

Rusting the most severe penalties that could be inflicted, Rajah for several years remained.

"Don't take that guy into the ranks of the has-beens yet. He still has plenty of fight left in him, and in his case this will be like one of his best years. He likes to hit and he can hit. But most of all he likes to win and the best way to win is to think that."

That year, Mr. Justice Whittier was more amenable than Rajah.

NEW YORK: May 7.—A vigorous improvement in stocks was reflected in the reduction of the New York federal reserve discount rate to 1½ per cent and reflects previously taken steps in the broad, easy money financial market.

Bonds have been helped at present time by the fact that they have tended to weaken confidence and rally in the stock market.

The stock market has been rather shorted, but it is still strong.

Commercial banks are beginning to strengthen, and are seeking to force commercial banks into bonds, thereby strengthening the investment market and helping the market to rally.

Thus, it appears that a sustained rise in bond price must precede any durable improvement in stocks; such a development may experience in the coming days.

Share trading was dull, and erratic.

The market worked upward

during the first half week, was undermined during the second half,

and future market positions are uncertain.

SYNOPSIS: A plot to murder pretty Marjorie Lauderdale is foreshadowed by Dr. Charles' words: "I'm afraid we'll have to give an alibi for Mrs. Waye." When she was given an alibi, Dr. Charles' wife had been given an alibi, too. "She's been given an alibi," Dr. Charles said. "That's because she's been given an alibi." Mrs. Lauderdale, the past friend of Charles, Dr. MacAdoo, "Mr. James and others on the staff" of the hospital made the plot by revealing his knowledge of the secret of Marjorie, but the doctor is informed to keep that Charles is to receive 10,000 pounds for the case. When James learns how MacAdoo has been paid off, he makes a promise of $5,500 "real" to his ex-wife Charles of "double-crossing." Charles admits that the girl's aunt had connived with him to do this through Dr. MacAdoo. An infant who would be her should Marjorie die before her first birthday. But he declares that the scheme is off because of Marjorie's knowledge of it.

Chapter 22 AMBITION JAMES

"But," objected Mr. James, "the girl goes back to Maid Lauderdale until she's married off the same, and we lose the race-off. I don't want that Maul to scoop half-million dollars!"

"It's all right," said Mr. James, with a quiet and sinister determination.

"How?"

"The girl's husband scoops the pool," he said and jerked aside the phone receiver. "I'll get all the cash." "Only too glad to, by-and-by," and Mr. James leaped almost shocked. Dr. Charles' eyes were wide.

"Cut it right out," he said and brought his fist down heavily upon the telephone.

"What? Wouldn't I make a horrid husband? I wouldn't treat her rough—unless she needs it."

"Cut it out! Like blazes you wouldn't treat her rough!"

"Your 'Mr. Unbreakable' himself," confirmed the Doctor earnestly, "for a million, I want come to me, her old friend and partner with a new name of her own and offers to pay me off. I'm going to do it, or let somebody else double-cross her, you've got another think coming."

"No, Jimmie," the Doctor went on, "you're the little old man to you. You're not the kind of man to do that. I'm going to do it, or let somebody else double-cross her, you've got another think coming."

"Without reply, Mr. James departed.

"Oh," she observed to himself. "And the girl won't marry me won't she? I'm not good enough for her. She says that I'm not good enough."

There is a side in the affairs of crooks that takes the right time and in the right way, leads to easy money.

One hundred thousand pounds... Half a million men—fit for the taking.

Since he, or she, should not take the master out of his own hands and strike up a bit of his own? "

"Since the boy was getting chick-en-hearted and allowing this Waye guy to pull any buck he liked along the Doctor, he added:

"And if he does what's going to happen to the bad mothering of the little girl to the bad mothering of the boy? Kill two birds with one stone..."

bird—and marry the other bird?

No man had ever yet secured off Marjorie Lauderdale, but he had seen her (in this Waye) and done and lived to brag about it. Suppose he were to bump Waye off, run away with the Lauderdale skirt, "marry and make good on the romance of her on her twenty-first birthday?

Once married to her she'd soon come across with the dough, too, all of it. He had a way with women, and he'd treat them rough and treat 'em often.

"And the girl would be glad enough to marry him—or anybody else to get away from The Moon.

And jump at the chance.

What girl, in her right senses would refuse an honorable offer of marriage—from "Mr. James"—part from the fact that he was an incurable "lunatic"? Shoddy certainly him at the chance if he was only to shorten her stay in that bedroom by a single month.

Yes—and what would the Doctor do?

What could he do? Mr. James knew quite as much about "Hull-hung Simon" as Marjorie himself. He knew about Mr. James—though to him he was a "nothing." And he knew about the "white-necked" Marjorie. James would be independent for life.

And the money became the girl's exclusively—on condition she'd be a good sport.
