Disease, Famine and Death Gallop Over Chinese Area Menaced by Rising Waters

Swirling Yangtze Threatens Modern Hankow and Leaves 30,000,000 Orientals Homeless and Hungering

(By The Associated Press) HANKOW, Aug. 21.—Death, starvation and pestilence stalked through ever-widening areas of China today as flood waters that have swept thousands to death and made upward of 30,000,000 homeless swirled on in what may be the greatest calamity of modern times.

Destruction of this great inland city of modern China was threatened by the rising Yangtze river and a general crisis in its population of close to a million was in progress. Several hundred miles to the north, the Hwai Ho river was spreading out over thousands of square miles of fertile land. Another river, the Yellow, was spreading out over thousands of square miles of fertile land.

The Hankow area, including the cities of Wuhan and Hanyang, was engulfed and the thousands of the situation was augmented by the constant pouring in of refugees pouring in from other inundated sections. On roads made impassable by the flood, thousands of refugees were being taken to the city. The city was being taken to the city.

Great Dykes Break. Dykes along the Hankow and Wuhan that had held back the rising Yangtze from the low-lying valley, burst and the unleashed rivers swept additional hundreds to their deaths. There was no reliable estimate of the death here.

Unprecedented rains that overtook the river system caused the calamity. The Yangtze flows through a valley hundreds of miles long that is densely populated because of the fertile soil. The country is a vast plain, with a fall of only an inch or two to the sea, and the flood waters thus spread out over a wide region.

Heart-rending scenes were witnessed by an Associated Press correspondent as he went about the Hankow area in a sampan. Natives committed suicide because of the consequences of the flood, despite their response of this act. One point the correspondent noted was to an aged couple standing in the water to their arm piers. Refusing to leave their sampan, they were struck down. Death was waiting for them, despite their refusal to leave their ancestral religion that the "water dragons" wrath would be upon them.

The inundation in northern China has turned the countryside into a lake that stretched to the horizon. Hundreds of thousands of acres of crops were under water. The tops of tall trees or the thatch roofs of native villages thrusting above the water were the only signs of life. Several months, engineers said, before the water would recede and there was no hope of planting a winter crop.

A typical flood scene was that at Kweilin, an important center in eastern China province. The flood surrounded the town and The Associated Press correspondent there reported that the hospital had been crowded with thousands of the destitute. The hospital and mission and other buildings were crowded with refugees.

President Hoover Reports Extensive Cooperation In Effort to Aid Unemployed

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—A widespread "revolution" to meet the unemployment situation was seen by President Hoover today in the quick acceptance of 50 out of 60 prominent persons asked to serve on the national unemployment council.

"We are receiving a large number of communications from public officials and voluntary organizations, the chief executive continued, especially those active over last winter. There is a very large amount of reorganization and planning now in progress in preparation for fall and winter. There is a very evident widespread resolution to meet the situation again."

Mr. Hoover said that he could not "look too lightly" of the actual results obtained by various organizations and committees. He said that the public health figures showed the work had been successful.

"I have had some of the problems of distress and relief, as some of you know," he said. "I have had the experience of the crisis of relief by the public health. I therefore made inquiry of Surgeon General Clegg as to the state of the public health over the last winter."

Cumulative reply, he said, showed that the death rate and sickness were lower last winter than in the winter of 1929-30. The number probably will be the same.

BUILD, Aug. 21 (Special to The News)—"Man cannot get away from his problems," said Rev. Norman V. Peale, pastor of the University Methodist church, in his address at the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal conference here.

BEAN GROWERS SEE SEED SELECTION'S ADVANTAGE PROVEN

Demonstrations on Twin Falls County Farms Furnish Evidence Disease Resistant Strains Make Best Yields

Two more Twin Falls county bean demonstrations yesterday brought home to groups of growers and interested persons the advantages of using selected seed strains to secure maximum bean yields.

Yesterday's demonstrations were held in the forenoon at the Nell Jensen farm, Miller, and in the afternoon at the W. A. McDonald farm, north of Curry. Earlier in the week similar demonstrations were held at University of Idaho strains and plots on the Wall farm, west of Twin Falls, on Wednesday, and at the J. S. Potholuen farm, Kimberly, on Thursday.

It was estimated that 350 persons attended the demonstrations. Except in the University experimental plots, beans of Arrete, Leaky and University of Idaho strains and certified and common Green Northern were seen growing side by side under ordinary farm conditions. Demonstrations which were conducted by H. B. Hale, Twin Falls county agent, and J. S. Potholuen, University of Idaho strains and certified and common Green Northern were seen growing side by side under ordinary farm conditions.

Competitive maturity stages Harvesting of the bean fields was begun yesterday. It was stated. It was observed that the University of Idaho strains are maturing first, and that the Leaky strain will ripen about 10 days later, with certified and common beans maturing during the 10-day interval.

On the Jensen farm it was observed that less than 2 per cent of the Arrete and Leaky strains were affected by mosaic disease, while in common beans it was 4 per cent infected, and those grown from common beans were 10 per cent infected.

On the McDonald farm a similar condition was observed, with even higher rate of mosaic infection in certified and common beans. Infection in certified beans amounted to 30 per cent, and in common beans to 40 per cent.

Infection in certified beans, it was pointed out, was secondary infection, developing after the plants began to grow. Such infection, it was estimated, would reduce yields as much as 50 per cent, while primary infection, contracted in the seed, would cut yields to 80 per cent of that of a normal crop.

Seed of the University of Idaho strains, developed during four years experimental work, will be made available to common bean crop growers for the first time next year.

Seed crops of this strain are better from this year by Edgar McGowan, Murtaugh, and Charles Kretz, Pella. The seed, which is to be sold at a premium of not to exceed two cents over other seed, is to be handled through the county agent's office.

Pield demonstrations, similar to those held this week, are to be held

LOS ANGELES MEN VOICE CONFIDENCE IN BRUNEAU PLAN

Mason Case and C. H. Cheney Express Pleasure at Proposal After Trip Across Project With I. B. Perrine

Confidence in the success of the plan recently announced by I. B. Perrine for the reclamation of the 3 million acres on the Brunneau project was voiced last evening by Charles H. Cheney, Los Angeles, development adviser of the project, and by Mason Case, former president of the Los Angeles Realty board and member of the board of directors of the sub-divided section of the National Real Estate board, who is the guest of Mr. Cheney at the Potholuen hotel.

Mr. Case and Mr. Cheney spent yesterday, driving over the project with Mr. Perrine and his son, Eugene. Mr. Cheney said last evening that the plan would go ahead as a definite and the sub-divided section of the project has been organized. "It will be one more great step forward in the reclamation of the lands of the country," he declared. Representative of the construction company, which will have charge of the work, and an engineering crew are expected to arrive today or tomorrow to begin preliminary surveys next week.

Mr. Case said that having viewed the fine farming section around Twin Falls it was quite understandable why it was one of the three white areas of the country, the western section of the country, his expressed confidence that land on the Brunneau aggregate can be successfully watered and that it can be sold readily with the object lesson of the Twin Falls project before the eyes of buyers. "Water is a sure key to successful farming," he said.

NOVEL ANGLES IN FORECLOSURE SUIT

District Court Considers Moot Questions Raised at Trial of Claim for $2500

Some novel angles in foreclosure proceedings were developed at trial before Judge Adam B. Hargrave yesterday in a suit brought by D. Patrick to foreclose a mortgage on Twin Falls residence property owned by Edgar J. Pinesh in June, 1925, as security for payment of a $500 fire insurance policy to the Idaho State Life Insurance company. Mr. Pinesh waived his interest in the transaction, and Harry Williams, who contracted to purchase the property, appeared in court as the active defendant.

The record showed Mr. Patrick secured the note and mortgage in November, 1920, from the Occidental Life Insurance company to whom it had been assigned in June, 1925, by officials of the Idaho company. As soon as the purchase was completed by Williams, question as to the time when the Idaho company's charter was forfeited being raised.

Defense counsel also attacked appointment of a receiver in this action, arguing that possession of property could not be claimed under foreclosure proceedings until after expiration of a one-year redemption period.

Argument in the case took another tack also in dealing with Williams' contention that Mr. Patrick, who holds the note and mortgage, had never made a written agreement with Williams' former wife, Mrs. Cora E. Volt, to rule Williams' business and credit. Mrs. Volt also was named as one of the defendants in the foreclosure suit. Turner K. Hagaman, Twin Falls, is Mr. Patrick's attorney in this action.

BOARD SECURES RIGHT OF WAY

Agreement Will Result in Oiling of Road West From Hansen Bridge Soon

Agreement was reached yesterday between the Twin Falls highway district board and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Manzoni, Los Angeles, former residents here, whereby the district becomes owner of a strip of land 10 feet long through a field owned by Mr. and Mrs. Manzoni near the Hansen bridge, which will enable the district to comply with conditions agreed upon with the state department of public works and will result in completing the grading and oiling of the highway from the city limits of Twin Falls to the bridge. The district will pay Mr. and Mrs. Manzoni $500 and withdraw condemnation suit recently instituted. Mr. and Mrs. Manzoni will build the fence on each side of highway where it passes through their field. From the point of view of public safety the new route will be much better than the old, it was stated yesterday by J. D. Sienema, engineer for the highway district. The old route had one 50 degree curve and another 15 degree curve, both of which involve danger. The greatest curve on the new route, which is 400 feet shorter than the old, will be eight degrees, he said. Mr. Sienema pointed out that on the present road, the bridge is not fully visible to a driver until he is within a short distance of the structure, while with the new and shorter route it is visible for a considerable distance.

As soon as the crop of beans now growing on the new route will begin, Mr. Sienema said. Gravel from the road now in use will be utilized on the new route. When the district is notified in part of the agreement, the state department will let the entire route from the bridge, a distance of five and a half miles to connect with the old extension of Addition avenue.

GOVERNOR PROPOSES AUDITORS' SESSION

Administration of a new county budget law and a new primary election law enacted at the last session of the Idaho legislature depends largely upon county auditors. Governor C. Ben Hoss said in a letter addressed yesterday to Twin Falls county commissioners, suggesting that Twin Falls county auditor be permitted to attend a conference of county auditors opening at Boise September 10 to bring about essential uniformity of procedure in the administration of these laws. The governor expressed opinion that such uniformity of administration of the new laws in all the counties can best be secured by a conference of the county auditors.

He advised that the conference should continue "until such time as they have transacted such necessary business as may properly come before them."
